Hallie Flanagan addressed an Equity 'discussion meeting' last Friday (3) asking that the members of the association and other union people interested in the relief theatre project give the WPA a period of grace, until the 20 units in New York start operating. Head of the federal theatre project admitted that mistakes have been made and, since it is a new venture, other errors might crop up but in time the many problems would be solved, she felt.

Questions were asked Mrs. Flanagan from the floor. One answer was to the effect that should actors leave the WPA shows for commercial engagements and, should the latter flop, such players would receive preferential treatment upon return to the relief project. Her answer to another query as to union wage scales in the project was that such a question is beyond her jurisdiction.

Suggested that a committee of WPA actors confer with Mrs. Flanagan and Equity from time to time as questions arise.

Committee representing nine unions, called Affiliated AFL Theatrical Unions Council for the Federal Theatre Project, called upon Victor Ridder last week, voicing a protest against alleged mistreatment of actors and others working in relief show projects. It was claimed that those on relief were subjected to indignities when seeking paychecks. Abuses allegedly included long waits, abusive language and changing the place where the pay-off is made.

Syracuse WPA Project Still Waiting Sanction

Syracuse, N. Y., Jan. 7.

Fate of Syracuse's WPA theatre project, a stock company, is again up in the air, although 56 jobless troupers, stage hands, etc., plus 108 others who are not on relief rolls, have signed up at the local district headquarters.

While approval presumably had been given the project, it now develops that official sanction is yet to be secured. As a further complication, there is the non-availability of a theatre. WPA had counted upon the Empire, but Morris Fitzer declares that the house, former home of K. and E. touring attractions, will continue on a grind film policy.

Parallel WPA music project, however, seems to have successfully solved its own problems, and Prof. Andre Polah of Syracuse University, district director, will organize a symphony orchestra of at least 50, inaugurate a musical education course, and start the training of musicians. Prof. Polah will conduct the symphony.

While the theatre project is restricted to Onondaga county, the music project embraces Broome, Oneida, Cortland, Cayuga, Tompkins and Chemung as well as Onondaga. Accordingly the orchestra will give 18 concerts on tour and 10 in Syracuse. All will be on a subscription basis.

WPA PLANNING TWO PLAYS FOR CHICAGO

Chicago, Jan.

WPA lacks theatres here for its 'cultural projects,' but has two plays in the works. Respective titles are 'Model Tenement,' leftist piece by Meyer Levin, and '49 Dogs in a Meathouse,' by E. R. Conkie, who says it is about hillbillies.

Supervisors, advisers, revisers, producers and directors, with filled rolls of stagehands, musicians, doormen, and even publicists, are drawing pay, although the project is as yet shy of actors. Rehearsals are in the Naval Reserve Armory, on the lake front.

Wage checks per month run from $55 for routine office-workers, to $200 for directors, busiest of whom is Robert Breen, who has managed to stick close to Harry Hopkins' pay-wagon ever since the latter took over.

Curran East to Snipe Legits for Hollywood

Hollywood, Jan. 7.

Homer Curran is en route east to line up legit productions for the Coast. If successful, he will lease the Vine Street theatre here to compete against Henry Duffy's El Capitan.

He is abandoning the downtown Belasco due to its poor biz possibilities.

Mary Boland Ill

Mary Boland was unable to appear in 'Jubilee,' Imperial, N. Y., Monday (6) night. She suffered severe abdominal pains and was removed from the theatre to her hotel shortly before curtain time.

Olive Reeves-Smith, understudy for the star, went on and was applauded at the finale. Miss Boland was slated back into the show last night.

'JUMBO' ACCIDENTS

Several minor accidents occurred in the ring at the Hippodrome, N. Y., during Saturday's (4) matinee of 'Jumbo.' Margaret Brooks, who is shot from a cannon, grazed a tall chorus boy known as 'Jumbo,' while in flight. He was knocked down but uninjured.

Minnie La Pell, top mounter in a perch act, fell, striking another girl, but both were back in the show the next day.

Babette returned to the cast after being out several days with an injured foot.

K. C. Starts

Kansas City, Jan. 7.

Kansas City's legitimate season opened this week at the Orpheum, which is now operated by Martin Beck and Marcus Heiman, of New York, with R. Victor Leighton resident manager.

Walter Huston, in 'Dodsworth' is the opening attraction and was greeted by a capacity audience.

Local papers are giving the house unstinted support, with both readers and editorials, to make it a financial success.

'Three Men on a Horse' is the next attraction, with 'Tobacco Road' to follow.

L.A. Fed. Theatre Project Garners $1,200, 2 Shows

Coin went into an operating fund to pay rent, royalties and advertising.

Organization has two vaude units touring camps of the Citizens Conservation Corps, but no admish is levied by these. Vaude acts also are being sent into hospitals and charitable institutions.

Next show for the public will be Jan. 23, 24 and 25 when 'Knight of the Burning Pestle,' a dramatic play, will be presented at the University of Southern California auditorium.

Hilda Spong also leaves 'Year,' replacement player being Ruth Gates.

Reinhardt Nabs Beatty

Chicago, Jan. 7.

Max Reinhardt, readying for a Jan. 14 premiere of 'The Eternal Road' in New York has taken Harry W. Beatty to handle the technical end.

Beatty has been an institution in Chicago since Cleofonte Campanini took him from the staff of [illegible] Henry W. Savage and placed him in charge back-stage of the Auditorium.

'Correspondent Unknown' will be the initial production by a newly formed managerial firm headed by Jo Mielziner, scenic designer and his brother, Kenneth McKenna, actor. Play written by Mildred Harris and Harold Goldman.

'Living Newspaper' to Start WPA Parade on B'way Jan. 22; Managers Tryouts in Rehearsal for Feb. 1

George Hood Heads WPA Project in Washington

Seattle, Jan. 7.

George Hood, for years Klaw-Erlanger rep and mgr. of the Metropolitan theatre here when the road was in its heyday, is now state director for the WPA theatre projects program.

State plan includes operation of a large downtown theatre for variety shows, free to the public; minstrel show employing 30 whites and negroes to tour the government camps and give a local show once a month; staging of negro-life plays at the Repertory Playhouse with a cast of 60 negroes and 8 to 10 whites.

Variety shows will run the gamut from acrobats to grand opera. Once monthly shows are planned.

Bids will soon be called for a large downtown theatre.

M. GORDON USES RADIO TO BOOST PHILLY B.O.

Philadelphia, Jan. 7.

Max Gordon used a spot announcement campaign on local radio to plug ticket sale for his 'Ethan Frome,' which opened here last night. Taking a series of five spots at 11:15 on successive evenings last week over WCAU, the producer pushed cheaper seats.

Immediate success of the plan at the b.o. resulted in 'Ziegfeld Follies' using similar tactics for its opening here next Monday (13). Legit shows have had plenty of free plugs from radio, in so-called 'reviews' in past, but this is first sponsored campaign locally.

Spanish, French Legit Troupes in Rehearsal

Spanish and French dramatic companies, now rehearsing, will open at the Hecksher theatre, 104th st. and Fifth ave., Jan. 26 and Feb. 2, respectively. Joseph Lawren is presenting. Troupes will play Sundays only and will alternate at the theatre, until, if successful, Lawren migrates to regular theatre lanes, when he plans to increase showings.

French troupe opens Jan. 26 with 'Bluebeard's Eighth Wife.' Hispanos offer 'When the Sons of Eve Are Not the Sons of Adam' on Feb. 2. Lawren, manager of the Venice theatre (nee Joison) is using this house to rehearse his foreign thespians. House is occupied by an Italian company on Sundays, but latter is not part of the Lawren enterprises.

WPA Talent

St. Louis, Jan. 7.

A former Ziegfeld toe dancer, an Indian fire eater, a female impersonator, a juggler and an Australian whip cracker were among those who went through their routines last week in auditions at the Little Theatre to organize a WPA theatre project for St. Louis.

H. B. Stone, supervisor of WPA professional and service projects said that only 17 of 30 called for the audition reported. Stone said most of them were old-time vaudeville actors and only a few were under 40 years of age.

Columbus Gives Up

Columbus, Jan.

Plans for the combined civic theatre and auditorium for which a federal grant of $1,569,000 was approved by President Roosevelt on Dec. 12, have been abandoned, according to the WPA and the local Chamber of Commerce, sponsoring the project.

Grant was contingent upon $300,000 additional being contributed locally; but it now develops that nearer $600,000 will be necessary, and this amount cannot be raised through popular subscription here.

Managers Try-Out Theatre, one of the divisions of the Works Progress Administration, is dated to start Feb. 1, but there is no assurance of a fixed date because of new delays, such as countermanding of regulations in the purchasing of props and materials.

First of the Federal Theatre Project's attractions charging admission due to open in New York will be the 'Living Newspaper' at the Biltmore, Jan. 22. Popular price theatre to be quartered at the Manhattan figures to get started at about the same time as the managerial project, both being about one month later than si liar relief shows on the Coast.

First of the managers' -outs, which are under the auspices of the Theatre League with Otto Metzger as supervisor, will be 'Woman of Destiny' by Samuel Warshawsky, in which the Shuberts are interested. Alexandra Carlisle will be starred. She is not on relief but will be paid by the Shuberts under arrangement with regional director Elmer Rice whereby the managers can engage 10% of their casts outside of relief. Idea is that better line on the merit of the try-outs can thus be secured. Miss Carlisle accepted the part because of her interest in the relief show movement.

Other Tryouts

'Woman' will be shown at the Willis, Bronx and later at the Shubert Teller, Brooklyn. While four plays are in rehearsal, it is unlikely that a third neighborhood house will be leased. Other managerial shows in rehearsal are 'In Heaven and Earth' by Edward Pezet and Arthur Goodman, under the direction of J. J. White which is slated for the Shubert Teller early in February, sponsored by Louis B. Cline; 'Top Dog' by Georgette Carneal and Burnet Hershey under the direction of Walter Brooks with James Ullman sponsoring; 'The Mourning Angel' by I. Ramsdell with Felix Basch staging and S. M. Chartock the sponsor.

Admission scale to the managers relief try-outs will be 25c. to $1.

While the shows will open approximately two months later than anticipated by Rice it is pointed out that all those on relief payrolls are being paid, same wage going for rehearsals as for appearances. One of the project divisions known as the municipal theatre also gets Feb. 1 for nine openings. Group consists of Yiddish, German, Negro and children's units. Whole group is under Stephen Karnot as supervisor.

Whether the relief shows which will operate in the Broadway zone will do any advertising is yet to be decided. Understood that space in the dailies could be bought out of a percentage of theatre receipts. Should advertising be inserted, indications are that the attraction would be regarded as competition with regularly presented shows—both legit and pictures.

A resident unit has been formed for the CCC drama project with the idea of having revels in the camps write and enact plays of their own. There have been 10 coaches assigned to camps in the state of New York and 65 more are being sought. Requirement calls for directors or coaches to reside in the camps.

Added to the municipal theatre is a dance group. Classical forms of the dance will be specialized in, with Chas. Sandor supervisor and Don Oscar Boeque assistant, over 35 instructors.

Experimental theatre to be spotted at Daly's 63rd Street under the supervision of Virgil Geddes has four plays in rehearsal: 'Chalk Dust' by Harold Clurke and Maxwell Nurnberg; 'Cinder Kids' by Ruth Welty and Gene Ronout; 'John Brown,' by Michael Gold an Michael Blankfort and 'Native Ground,' by Geddes.

Pop price theatre's first show at the Manhattan will be 'American Holiday' by Albert and Edwin Barker. 'Walk Together Children' by Frank Wilson is slated as the initial attraction at the Lafayette theatre, Harlem.

Also readying is a vaude-revue with an all colored cast. It is called 'From Dixie to Harlem' and is rehearsing under Charles Moscon supervision.

Plays Out of Town

1936 Ziegfeld Follies

Boston, Dec.

Revue in two acts presented by the Shuberts under the name of Mrs. Florenz Ziegfeld (Billie Burke); staged by John Murray Anderson; lyrics, Ira Gershwin; score, Vernon Duke; comedy scenes, David Freedman, Moss Hart; scenery and costumes, Vincente Minnelli; ballets, George Balanchine; modern dances, Robert Alton; comedy scenes directed by Edward Clarke Lilley; first performance, Dec. 30, at the Boston Opera House; $3.50 top.

Cast: Fannie Brice, Bob Hope, Hugh O'Connell, Judy Canova, Nicholas Brothers, Josephine Baker, Helen McLellan, Harriet Hoctor, Gertrude Niesen, Eve Arden, John Hoysradt, Cherry and Juna Preisser, Dubs McHale, California Varsity Eight.

It is going to take a lot of work to make a good show out of the new 'Ziegfeld Follies.'

Production is as lavish as in the past, but the vital spark is missing. It gives the impression of having been staged by tired producers with material furnished by tired brains.

John Murray Anderson found himself behind the eight-ball through being forced into a premature opening, the Monday night premiere being sold out solid, Wednesday (New Year's Eve) also a sellout at a scale that grossed around $10,000. Wednesday was a two-performance holiday.

Costuming, scenery and ensembles, even under the handicaps of opening performances, are really glorious. One Boston critic (Elliot Norton of the Post) called Vincente Minnelli the star of the show. Period costuming is featured, very little flesh is displayed, and the entire atmosphere is lavish without a vestige of tinsel tawdriness.

To the eye it is already a good show. To the ear, however, it is safe to rate it at the present time as 24th out of the 24 Ziegfeld Follies which have been staged since the first production in 1907. There has no sparkle, but the real problem is lack of material.

Cohesion and speeding up will be a simple problem during Boston's two weeks of public dress rehearsals, but the problem of imaginative material, particularly keen comedy, can be met only by drastic steps.

Fannie Brice is doing wonders with the little she has been given. Her most effective number is based on 'My Man' and its flock of companion ballads and is entitled 'He Hasn't a Thing—Except Me.' She is doing another 'Baby Snooks,' this time as a Hollywood wonder child, a burlesque on Ruby Keeler, a dance travesty, and a number called 'Modernistic Moe,' written by Billy Rose and Ira Gershwin.

Harriet Hoctor is turning in a specialty billed as 'Night Flight,' which may develop into the best ballet she has ever done. It is a dimly lighted symbolistic dance, almost ethereal in its daintiness, against the grim wreckage of a crashed airplane on a mountainside at dawn.

Josephine Baker has two exotic numbers, one a platform hotcha and the other a weird living room dream in which a half dozen masked men rush out on a ghostly routine that, fortunately, doesn't go adagio. Her singing is completely lost, especially in the huge Boston Opera House.

Bob Hope has been loaded with most of the routine of sketches and fill-in patter, some of his material being hopeless and the balance being stretched so thin that it goes flat.

Gertrude Niesen carries most of the song load, and while this VARIETY mug is no dressmaker, he still believes that somebody didn't give Miss Niesen a break in costuming. One gown makes her look as if she is walking on her knees.

Show has two sock spots, one the Nicholas Brothers, two young colored dancers, and the Duke McHale and the Preisser Sisters in a similar acrobatic dancing routine. Both acts are spotted directly following each other. It was that kind of an opening night—and it is that kind of a show.

Sketches are the outstanding weakness of the new Follies. One real hoop is a scene satirically travesty on announcements of feature films. This trailer, possibly reminiscent of 'Boy Meets Girl,' goaled the audience, announcing that the picture was 'more private than 'Private Lives,' more public than 'Public Enemy,' littler than 'Little Women' and bigger than 'The Big Broadcast.' Laborious stage comedy that sneaked along after the screen trailer falls flat, however.

Another sketch that has possibilities is a satire on Major Bowes, which unfortunately is based on Bowes being a newsreel. Judging from the lobby chatter, it is O.K. these days to harpoon Hoover, razz Roosevelt and crucify Congress, but belittling the Major is a calamity. Laying off Bowes and building up the amateur commercialization comedy should make this sketch the backbone of the entire show, especially if some new talent is spotted in the routine.

'Tobacco Road' as a travesty is built around its failure to win the Pulitzer prize and, while the best bit of the show as regards true travesty, it is a dud here because Boston has not seen the original. A satire on 'Believe It or Not Ripley,' with Bob Hope delivering a lecture on the scenes in a movie travelogue, probably is the dullest sketch of the lot. One gag in it is based on a picture of three native girls with Hope saying 'Only God can make a tree, but my camera man made this trio.' Just as a sample of the radio-type humor throughout.

John Murray Anderson is said to have enough scenery, costumes and sketches in reserve to run 70 minutes longer, but if the comedy routines are no better than the ones used to date, this prematurely-born edition of the 'Follies' may suffer from box-office malnutrition, despite its fine satins and cellophanes.

DEAR OLD DARLING

Pittsburgh, Dec. 30.

George M. Cohan presents a new comedy by and starring himself; in two acts (five scenes); staged by Sam Forrest; settings by Oden Waller; at Nixon, Pitts., week Dec. 30, '35, under ATS auspices.

Calvin Miller.....George M. Cohan
Gertrude Collins.....Ruth Shapley
Acton.....Reynolds Denniston
Jane Mayo.....Marian Shockley
Joseph Mayo.....Charles D. Brown
Mrs. Mayo.....Theresa Maxwell Conover
Clarence Wheeler.....Ben Lackland
Cesso.....Jack Roseleigh
Julia Taylor.....Edna Holland
B. B. Stewart.....Joseph Sweeney
Captain Cramer.....Walter Gilbert
McDevitt.....Joseph R. Garry
John Mayo.....Forrest Orr

George M. Cohan returns to his own literary backyard after a couple of years in O'Neill's 'Wilderness' and outfits himself in 'Dear Old Darling,' a modest little comedy which, should have little or no trouble achieving moderate success. The Cohan name alone would see to that but the actor-manager-author fortifies himself additionally with a helpful script.

Won't go another 'Ah, Wilderness,' but it's a better piece of property than Cohan's last, 'Pigeons and People.' His chief task is getting about half an hour sheared out of it, but that can be done. The opening night curtain didn't ring down until around 11:30 and only a Cohan could have kept 'em from getting restless at a straight play that long. Lags principally in the second scene of the first act, with the second stanza by far the best and not a letup until a few minutes before the end. Finish could be hopped up a bit, for it is draggy, also, as there's too much explanation and counter-explanation and the denouement doesn't warrant such an extensive preamble, particularly since the whole is in on everything by that time.

Play, to borrow a phrase from Cohan himself, is about a wealthy, middle-aged bachelor with the heart and soul of a romantic and dreamer. Engaged to a widow, he goes off to Europe and there is pursued by an impetuous pretty three times his junior. Action opens upon his return, with the politic fiancee and the kiddie is still on his trail. He tries to explain that he never touched the gal, that she and not he is the pursuer, and that he'd like to wring the young squirt's neck, but the wife-to-be won't listen and walks out on him. Even his best friend isn't up to believing in his complete innocence.

Gal's mother asks him to stay away; he tries to make her believe in his innocence, too, but she rakes him over the coals and insists that her husband is on his way back from Arizona to take care of him. He calls in police for protection but, instead of giving him that, they lecture him and infer that he should stay away from youngsters. Surprise comes when police, when it's revealed that the gal, her supposed ma, fiance and all the rest of 'em are a shakedown gang priming Cohan for a $100,000 take. They ring in Cohan's own son to take part in the business and a few others and are all set for the clip when police walk in.

Tempo of the piece spurts at the beginning of the last act and both laughs and excitement flash up.

Basically flimsy, 'Dear Old Darling' has been shrewdly written and constructed, and Cohan plays it so well that the shaky plot idea never becomes important. Nobody can write for Cohan like Cohan. He brings out the best in himself and that crooked smile, cocked head and bantam walk do the rest. He has a dream scene in the beginning that's a gem and later an argumentative bit with the widow he's to marry (Ruth Shepley) that got a solid round of applause from first-nighters. Only thing missing is a song-and-dance but Cohan's apparently dropped that. Doesn't need it, actually, but then it wouldn't hurt. Never does for George M.

Joseph Sweeney, who was cheered for his Broadway chore not so long ago in 'Slight Case of Murder,' plays the shakedown sleuth well but, whether it's in the writing or acting, the role doesn't come off as Cohan no doubt intended. It's confused. Femme lead is played by Marian Shockley, Wampas Baby Star in 1933 and an appealing ingenue, with Theresa Maxwell Conover doing a swell bit as the 'mother' who heads the ring. Walter Gilbert turns in a good' str ight job as the detective captain and there are a couple of diverting minor performances by Joseph Garry, as the dumb flatfoot, and Forrest Orr, as candidate for the father's role. M. Hirano, protean-and, but with only a couple of words, is in private life Cohan's valet.

'Dear Old Darling' has three more weeks out, and by that time should be Cohan something with which he can easily run out the remainder of the season on Broadway.

ETHAN FROME

Jan.

Dramatization of Edith Wharton's novel, 'Ethan Frome;' by Owen Davis and Donald Davis; suggested by dramatization of Lowell Barrington; staged by Guthrie McClintic; scenery and costumes by Jo Mielziner. Produced by Max Gordon at the Garrick theatre, Philadelphia, Jan. 6, '36.

Harmon Gow.....John Winthrop
A. Young Man.....Oliver Barbor
Ethan Frome.....Raymond Massey
Zenobia Frome.....Pauline Lord
Dennis Eady.....Tom Ewell
Mattie Silver.....Virginia Farmer
Jotham.....Francis Pierlot
Ed Varnum.....Charles Henderson
Ned Hale.....W. Thos. Barclay
Ruth Varnum.....Sylvia Wald
Mrs. Hale.....Marie Falls

'Ethan Frome,' in its dramatic form, is stark tragedy; it is also capital theatre. It is also further proof that Max Gordon is one of the keenest and most observant of legit producers. He jumps from Jane Austen to Edith Wharton, neither of whom might ordinarily have been considered as top-notch footlight material and appears to have done as well with the latter as with former.

'Pride and Prejudice' is an old-fashioned, artificial English comedy; 'Ethan Frome' is forthright back-to-the-soil realism with tragic undertones. Neither type is supposed to be box-office; yet 'Pride and Prejudice' swept all its handicaps before it and they were, by and large, greater than those presented by 'Ethan Frome.'

New play shapes up as the best folk (or rural, as they used to call it) drama of its kind since Owen Davis (one of the adaptors here) wrote 'Icebound.' Since then Eugene O'Neill was represented by 'Beyond the Horizon.' It makes no concessions to hoke; it cleaves to its intrinsically tragic purpose and, most important, manages all the while to maintain a high standard of dramatic power.

Work must be done, both in shortening and sharpening and it must be done very delicately. 'Ethan Frome' is not the usual kind of theatrical fare. A certain number of minutes out, or a change of a certain scene to achieve dramatic balance—these are remedies often advanced but they don't apply here. 'Ethan Frome' isn't any kind of a sure bet as a Broadway smash (although it can be one) but it deserves to stand on its own as a play with guts, insight and conviction.

Plot? There isn't much, than Frome, married for years to a hypochondriac wife and living on a lonesome farm in northern New England, falls desperately for the young girl, cousin to his wife, who visits and brings there as maid of all work. Growth of the infatuation is shown, but there is no indication or even suggestion of an affair. Wife believes so, however, and orders the girl away. On that night, the girl and husband, desperate, admit their love and then decide on what they believe will be a double-suicide. Their course is a bob-sled ride down a hillside with a black elm at the bottom.

End of the show is an epilog, 20 years later, showing the husband and the gal, both cripples (from the sled crash) and the wife, now a real the hypochondriac wife. It's a bitter finale, but quite just and legitimate.

Owen Davis and his son have done a grand job on the dramatic version. McClintic has done a remarkable one on the staging. There are twelve scenes, including prolog and epilog, and several of them may not be considered as advancing the action or maintaining the dramatic sequence, yet many of those otherwise irrevelant scenes (especially in the first act) help very positively in building up the stark and uncompromising atmosphere of the play. For pace and timing and for effective arrangement of the few set scenes, McClintic deserves the biggest kind of a hand. Jo Mielziner's sets are also at the top. They're not elaborate but they're unusually authentic.

With the heaviness of the production and the number of scenes, many people expected a lengthy cast. Instead it proved to be a short one, with just three people sharing the spotlight.

Ruth Gordon gives the best highly dramatic performance she's ever shown in Philly as the young girl; Pauline Lord touches the heights of really great tragedy as the wife, and Raymond Massey, divested of all his Mayfair English, is an incredibly fine Ethan.

MID-WEST

Boston, Jan. 3.

Tragedy in three acts. Presented at the Shubert theatre, Boston, Jan. 2-'36. Written by James Hagan; staged by Melville Burke; setting by Watson Barratt. Jean Adair featured. $2.20 top.

Beulah Zanhiser.....Jean Adair
Hilda Zanhiser.....ornadine Hayes
Tootsboy Zanhi .....Van Heflin
Rev. Carr.....Frank Wilcox
C. D. Akers.....Cliff Heckinger
Jim Meed.....Edgar Nelson
Luke Zanhiser.....Eric Cooksey
Ezra Zanhiser.....Ben Dillon
Bigwash Rowell.....John Alexander
Pinewood Hershey.....Walter Baldwin
Roy Meeker.....David Byrne
Ed Hendee.....Eugene Keith
Doc Peterson.....Duncan Mitchell
Lee Bragg.....Richard Taber

James Hagan, author of 'Sunday Afternoon,' comes back with another carefully pieced of Americana, inspired, perhaps, by the famous painting, 'American Gothic,' whose characters his people closely resemble, and the dust storms and drought which ravaged the mid-west last summer.

Tried out in Stony Brook, Conn., during the summer season, it is now in smooth, highly commendable professional running form. It is deftly written and directed, and the casting is almost perfect. If pop appeal here is a criterion of Broadway's possible enthusiasms, then 'Mid-West' will enjoy a moderate run, but no more.

Theme is tragic, laughs are very scarce because the author has done a thorough, consistent job; but there is an undercurrent of religion. Suspense and action are well maintained, though, and for those who seek a serious, slightly sobby evening with a play that has plenty to chew on, it is made to order.

It could be compared and contrasted with 'Tobacco Road,' in that it smacks of authenticity and presents a fine portrait of a typical segment of American rural life, although the respective characters are clean in one play and foul in the other.

Jean Adair, mother of a sizeable mid-west farm family, is the stanchion of the Zanhisers, and around her rages the succession of disastrous circumstances. The drought roasts the farm, its crops and cattle until the final curtain. Tooteboy, one of the sons, has graduated from the university as an atheist with very red ideas, flamed by two agitators from San Francisco. Fred, the other son, is married and lives on the farm with his wife, Hilda, a gal born in town, who can't quite blend with the static farm existence. This supplies a secondary plot, finally solved by Hilda and her husband leaving together for a new start in Detroit.

As if the drought were not trouble enough, the Zanhisers are faced with a hellish problem in their red-minded son's agitation among farmhands of the district. Not only does he incite field workers to strike against 'capitalistic' farmers (including his own father), but he rouses the townspeople into a necktie party featuring himself and his two cronies from out of town. Capitalistic-communistic theme is handled cleverly and plausibly all the way.

Religious faith of the Zanhisers and neighbors is highlighted by a hymn-singing prayer meeting wherein they sing praises to God for sending what looks like a rain cloud. Proves to be a dud, followed closely by news of the son's lynching. The mother's faith in heaven and the farm remains solid through it all, and she takes her mate under her wing in the closing scene of the piece, symbolic of their renewed faith as inspired by the direly-needed rain.

Miss Adair plays her role naturally and beautifully. Miss Hayes as Hilda handles her character intelligently. Cooksey as the father is almost always master of his role, except in one or two overacted bits. Edgar Nelson as the town undertaker and furniture dealer adds a slight touch of comedy; but Richard Taber as a simple, clumsy neighbor actually steals all comedy honors. Two sons are well cast and very able.

The Mourning Angel

Milwaukee, Dec. 23.

Play by Irving Ramsdell at the Pabst theatre; pr ced ed by Civic Players. Cast: Edouard Franz, Florence Newcomb, Herbert Hidden, Russell Brice, Lenis Fredericks, Owen Stuart, Arthur Larsen, John Steiner, Robert Zimmerman, John McEl

Although tending a little toward the morbid, play was met with hearty response here. Credit is the work of Irving Ramsdell, Sunday editor of the Milwaukee Sentinel. Staging by local group was also commended.

Plot centers around the private life of Michaelangelo. Pictures the famous dauber as a super-egotist and lady killer, totally impervious to female lures. The infallible falls when he becomes enamoured of one Donda (Florence Newcomb) while her body reposes on a slab in morgue. Girl succeeds in melting the heart of the painter and, when he has finally capitulated, she really dies.

A little far fetched and gruesome to some, but it seemed palatable here.

Revue in two acts (30 scenes), written and staged by Barney Gerard. Dances and ensembles, Max Scheck; music and lyrics, Albert Von Tilzer, Harry MacPherson, Ben Ryan, Solly Violinsky. At Hollywood Playhouse. $1.50 top.

Cast: Walter Johnson, James Peck, Jane Whitney, Leonard Sues, Edwin Hale, Claire Adams, Frank Gallagher, Red Knight, Lucille Collier, Dorothy Roberts, Joseph Wilson, Bozo Snyder, Billy Pitzer, Joan Andrews, Zoe Rae, Don Julian and Marjort, Rita and Rubins, Sally Fields.

Barney Gerard tries to repeat the success of the Minsky show at the Hollywood Playhouse, but gets away to a bad start due to lack of preparation which summed up the opening night.

After the first few scenes, everything fouled, effects did not work and the whole thing was out of kilter. No comedy, antiquated bits and scenes and comics who have failed to go forward with the parade.

Tough break for Gerard, who has his own money in the show. Best thing would be to close and reopen for a new try. Musical number production and dance routines are the only redeeming feature of this entertainment, but hokey laughs are necessary. Neither burlesque nor good revue technique has been used. Gerard should make up his mind.

'Piano Movers,' 'Barber Shop' and 'Taxi, Taxi,' all standbys of Bozo Snyder, fell flat. Don't get a snicker. With the dumb comic on three times in the first act, the whole act is killed. Something, but Gerard brought Snyder out as the star so probably figured he should be seen.

Abe Reynolds, working with Joseph K. Watson, makes a better impression. Watson slows things up with a long drawn out monolog which means nothing. None of the comics have the speed or technique of the present day wise-crackers.

Best bets in the show are Frank Gallagher, juve with a good voice; Dorothy Roberts, the soubrette, with a good swing delivery and loads of personality, and Don Julian and Marjory, class ballroom team, and Rita and Rubin, adagioists.

Max Scheck made a nice job of the dances, staging two that should get him absolute attention. Pair are a tango and a tap routine. Rest of his work is above average.

Top tunes are 'Out of My Mind,' 'Rhythm Dancing,' 'The Sun Is Out' and 'Hollywood Likes It' by Ryan and Violinsky. Albert Von Tilzer and Harry McPherson have one good tune in 'I Never Get Tired of Love.'

Call.

SOUR MOUNTAIN

Hollywood, Dec. 27.

Drama in three acts, (four scenes and epilog) by Georgs Bricker. Produced by Charley Foy. Directed by Joseph Spurr. At the Wilshire Ebell, Los Angeles, for two nights only, $2 top.

Cast: Robert Emmett Keane, Joseph W. Girard, William Crowell, Frank Bruno, Allen Mathews, Dink Freeman, Edward Thompson, Hugh Ripple, Marc Lawrence, Joe Cunningham, Sheila Manors, Sam Glasser, Herbison McMullen.

In 'Sour Mountain,' George Bricker, onetime New York reporter, has written the skeleton of a good play, but it is killed for the want of the experienced hand of a playwright to get it in shape for New York production. This done, play has a chance.

Bricker was one of the reporters who covered Tennessee's monkey trial and later the Scottsboro case. His play is based on both. As with all first plays, the author is prone to try to cram too much in mind.

In this case, due to repetition of one speech, the purpose becomes propaganda and propaganda never is good entertainment. However, the theme of the New World, which is well written that the play like 'Tobacco Road,' could be rewritten into a character study. As propaganda, play would suffer the same fate as 'Tobacco Road,' which was also inspired by the Scottsboro incident.

Entire play takes place in the admitting yard of the Sour Mountain prison farm, somewhere in the South. Novelty is that aisles are used as the trails to the farm, with the prisoners and visitors making their entrances and exists from the back of the house.

Robert Grant arrives at the camp with a five year stretch in view for inciting riots in an attempt to organize mill workers. Farm is ruled by a dictatorial warden, Hillbilly, Captain Bligh. On his arrival, Grant, whose name doesn't help him with the warden, a Lee admirer, gets the hull whip after interfering with the floggings of a negro.

From that time on Grant plans his escape. His girl visits the camp and is raped by the warden. This incites a riot in which Grant escapes and a fellow prisoner is killed. In New York, the governor refuses to allow the extradition of Grant, so he marries the girl. Warden is tried and acquitted.

Epilog has the warden back at the farm. Unable to read or write, the prison doctor is reading to him. Final curtain has the warden discussing the Italo-Ethiopian situation, praising the Italians for their attempt at extermination of negroes.

As the negro-hating sex braggart whose fondest recollection is an

'NIGHT' $15,000, S. F.

Woods' Courtroomeller Gets Flying Start on Coast

San Francisco, Jan. 8.

Only house in town open is the Geary with 'Night of Jan. 16' (A. H. Woods) and doing good business. Opened to a flying start with half the big-tims judges in the city acting as "jurors" and two shows New Year's Eve. Sagged a bit in midweek and then built again for a nice approximate $15,000.

'Dodsworth' is due here at the Curran Jan. 16, to be followed by 'Old Maid.' Nothing else in sight, although new tieup of the Curran here with the Biltmore in L. A. under the banner of Homer Curran may improve this situation a little later.

'TOBACCO' FINE $23,000 TWO WEEKS IN CINCY

Cincinnati, Jan. 7.

The Cox chalked up one of its most profitable engagements since becoming a legit house with an approximate $23,000 take on 'Tobacco Road' during a 12-day engagement which closed Sunday (5). There were 17 performances. Final day was added, filling in a scheduled layoff prior to Monday (6) opening in Pittsburgh.

Show was given a warm hand by Cincy critks and escaped any protests. It's the troupe headed by Henry Hull.

Dark this week, the Cox reopens Sunday (12) for a week of 'Boy Meets Girl' at $2.75 top.

'Vanities' Oke $15,000, Detroit, Holds Over

Detroit, Jan. 7.

After a bang-up $15,000 on its first session last week, Earl Carroll's 'Vanities' were held for another six days at the Cass. Last week's gross, upped considerably by a sellout show New Year's Eve, tops everything so far this season here, including Tobacco Road,' which enjoyed four big sessions added by threat of police censorship.

For the past few years a profitable New Year's week attraction here, 'Vanities' was given good exploitation and is the sort of light stuff liked in these parts. Show moves on Saturday (11), with the Cass housing Nick Londos' concert featuring Stavros Chiapis, Greek-American tenor, on Sunday (12), and George M. Cohan's 'Dear Old Darling' coming in for the week of Jan. 13. 'Personal Appearance' is dus to follow on Jan. 20.

Besides this duo, nothing is in sight for the rest of the month at either the Cass or Wilson, Detroit's other legit house. Faintly on the horizon are 'Anything Goes,' which comes here when and if Chicago wearies of it; 'Three Men on a Horse,' some time in February; and 'Porgy and Bess' in the spring.

Estimate for Last Week

'Vanities' (Cass; 1,400; $2.75) Traditional New Year's week, attraction here, Earl Carroll's show overdid itself last week and brought in around $15,000, swell, aided by New Year's Eve sellout performance. Held over show started out good this week and should hit another neat clip, behind continued good exploitation. 'Dear Old Darling' due Monday (13).

'HORSE' $34,000, 2 WKS.

Comedy Has Fine Fortnight In St. Louis; Town Now Bark

St. Louis, Jan. 7.

'Three Men on a Horse' concluded a two-week stand at the American theatre Saturday night (4) and approximated slightly better than $34,000 for ths run.

House is dark until next week.

Next attraction has not been determined, although several are considered for the house. American has enjoyed eight weeks of good business since the winter season began.

HUB BIZ FINE; $36,000 FOR 'FOLLIES'

Boston, Jan. 7.

Legit biz here was hefty last week, with four shows in town and holiday prices posted at the b.o.'s for New Year's performances. 'Follies' at the Opera House opened bullish and scales were juggled up to $6.50 top for ths holiday eve, swelling the take.

"Three Men on a Horse,' hypped by holiday trade, romped nicely through a ninth week and into its tenth. 'Horse' is now beginning to break run records in this town. Show has stood up best here since 'Little Accident' (1929-30), with a run of 17 weeks. 'Rose Marie' did a marathon of 29 weeks (1926) and 'Under Cover,' in 1914, seems to hold the local record of 34 weeks. Show grabbed off $4.40 on the holiday eve.

Night before ths holiday 'Mid-West' opened at the Shubert, and although this new piece is hardly attractive as celsbration fodder, that night was by far the best of ths week, at $3.30. Left town Saturday for a Broadway opening tonight (7) at the Booth.

'Ceiling Zero' is okay at the Copley and goes into its third week.

Near-future bookings include one week of Cornelia Otis Skinner' at the Shubert, starting Jan. 20, followed by Walter Hampden in 'Cyrano.'

Colonial lights up after several dark weeks with Hunt and Fontanne in 'Taming of the Shrew,' Jan. 20.

Estimates Last Week

'Ziegfeld Follies' (Opera House, $4.40, 1st week). Got good opening momentum, but adverse local reviews. Well-known that show was far from ready when it hit the Hub, but continued re-write cuts have improved it noticeably. Will remain one more frame. Opsner, boosted by high scales, garnered a counting for a good take of $14,600, advertising of pop price seats, at $3.30 top.

'Three Men on Horse' (Plymouth, $2.75, 9th week). Very sultable for holiday crowd, which jammed in Tuesday and Wednesday nights, accounting for a good take of $13,000. Hard-working publicity crew keeping the show alive.

'Mid-West' (Shubert, $2.20). Opened Tuesday night (31) for a short, quiet stay; $6,000 gross was mild for the one-week stand, but play impressed.

Philly's Holiday Biz Very Poor; 'Policeman' Oke $9,200; 'Star' $8,500

Philadelphia, Jan. 7.

Legit bookings are no longer coming in bunches as they were during the first two or three months of Philly's season, but they are still steadily being announced.

It is not unlikely that the local records during the holiday season will have some effect on halting the steady flow of new shows. Business around Xmas and new year's was undeniably way under expectations. One reason advanced by the managers is that the weather conditions for nearly a fortnight in this city were unusually bad. Then, too, the absence of any good li ht musical fare was keenly felt.

Of the five shows in town last week, only one, 'My Maryland' at the Forrest, gave an extra matinee. It was figured that this operetta revival would get its best biz at afternoon performances but the management was disappointed. Neither the Wednesday nor Thursday matinees brought much trade. Then, out of a clear sky, the final, Saturday matinee, proved to be sensational, with standees and tur aways.

In fact, Saturday was good all around town. That and the strong new year's eve attendance helped hold up some otherwise pretty sad grosses.

The Broad and Garrick sold out solidly new year's eve and the Chestnut and Forrest weren't far behind. The Erlanger, which had 'Black Pit,' propaganda play offered by the New Theatre local leftist group, tried the experiment of a midnight show new year's but couldn't competa with the film houses.

One show that was highly satisfied with the week's record was 'I Want a Policeman,' comedy-thriller tryout at the Broad. This one, produced by Philadelphians, had done well the last three days of the preceding week and kept up nicely with $9,200 for its eight performances last week. Showing was so good that 'Policeman' was held in this week.

'Personal Appearance' completed a six week's stay at the Garrick Saturday; a fair record for a regular New York show has had here in some time, although grosses were never sensational. Last week, with the new year's eve sellout, figure was $8,000.

'O Evening Star,' which like T Want a Policeman' received generally good notices, disappointed in its week-and-a-half stay at the Chestnut. Final matinee and New Year's Eve were best, but week's biz was only $8,500.

'My Maryland,' unlike some of the other shows in for revivals, couldn't make the grade and a week and a half was enough for it at the Forrest. Equally sad was ' lack Pit' at the Erlanger, which also had a $1.50 scale.

This week's newcomer is 'Ethan Frome,' Max Gordon's latest tryout, announced for a single week at the Garrick, but understood set for two. It too, has only a $3 top. Next Monday, the 'Follies' come to the Forrest for two weeks at a $3 top, third show of the year to try that high a scale. On Jan. 20, William Gillette's revival of 'Three Wise Fools' is to open at the Chestnut. On that date, a local light opera group will give Herbert's 'The Fortune Teller' at the Garrick. Guild's 'Porgy and Bess' is announced for Feb. 3 and will probably come to the Forrest. Hampden's 'Cyrano' will be along in a few weeks.

'I Want a Policeman' (Broad, 2d week). Got $9,200 with strong theatre party trade. Held over.

'My Maryland' (Forrest, 2d week). Opened in middle of Xmas week. Weak and scrammed Saturday night, probably in red, 'Follies' next week.

'Personal Appearance' (Garrick, 6th week). Nice long run, but no sensational trade at any time; $8,000 last week at $2 top with no extra matinees. Max Gordon's 'Ethan Frome' this week.

'Black Pit' (Erlanger). Local leftist group's offering fairly well treated by crix. Special midnight New Year's Eve show. Not much coin at $1.50 top; $5,000. Hold over.

'O Evening Star' (Chestnut, 2d week).—Another Xmas night opener that didn't gain in second week as expected, and as indicated by good notices. Fell off except New Year's Eve and Saturday mat; $8,500 at $2.50 top.

'Road' $8,000, Mpls.

Minneapolis, Jan. 7.

Held over for a second week at the eleventh hour, when the federal court refused to issue a restraining order to prevent St. Paul officials from barring the attraction there, 'Tobacco Road,' at the Metropolitan, breezed through to a very profitable approximate $8,000 for 11 performances, including two Sunday nights, a midnight New Year's eve show and a pair of matinees.

For the fortnight's run the play's gross was estimated at $17,000, fine, the initial week's takings being close to $9,000, great for the pre-Christmas period.

Two nights of the second week were very light because of the last minute decision to hold the show over, which gave little opportunity to advertise.

ETH BARRYMORE PLAY FLABBY $5,500, BALTO

Baltimore, Jan. 7.

Ethel Barrymore in 'Constant Wife' played to spotty biz at the Auditorium hers last week, getting slightly under $5,500 at $2.75 top. Press notices weren't warm, and biz waned as the engagement lengthened. New Year's Eve performance was best, take being about $1,200. Management eut the Sat. matinee top to $1 and move motivated attention for ths performance.

'Continental Varieties,' starring Lucienne Boyer, was cancelled Saturday, the day before it would have played two performances at the Maryland. Meager advanee sale is announced as the reason for the withdrawal.

The only bright beacon in legit during the holiday week was the single performanes of the Princeton Triangle club's 'What a Relief' last Thursday (2) at the Maryland. These annual one-bit'rs always do excellently here, where many Tiger alumni reside. Newspaper ads are never taken; no need for 'em. 'Relief' snagged a sparkling estimated $2,200 in its single performance.

Burg is blank currently, and nothing is listed until the week of Jan. 20 when Ford's, the UBO house, which has been shuttered through December, relights with the premiere of 'The Light Behind the Shadow,' starring Mady Christians. This play will be first production under the guidance of Ed Wynn, which is not a musical as well as the first presentation fostered by the comic in which he will not be cast.

Leonard B. McLaughlin, general manager and booker of the Indies, Auditorium and Maryland, is going to N. Y. late this week to scout around for shows.

Estimates For Last Week

'Constant Wife,' Auditorium (1,-500; $2.75)—The Ethel Barrymore starrer folded here to a rather weak $5,500, pretty poor figure for a holiday week.

'What a Relief,' Maryland (1,700; $2.75)—Single performance of the Princeton U annual musical made a merry go of it, scooping in a swell $2,200 with overflowing house.

6 Loop Houses Gross $100,000; Waltz' $40,000; 'Goes' Big $23,000

Chicago, Jan. 7.

Biggest week Chicago has since in the past six years greased through the loop during this last session to pour approximately $100,-000 into the box offices of the six theatres open. It was a really powerful take for a town which everybody had given up as washed up only six months ago.

Of that 100G take just $40,000 was garnered by 'Great Waltz' which is smashing to a steady near-capacity play at the 4,000-seat Auditorium. Show is now selling three weeks in advance under the smart guidance of Fred Evans. It looks like the cinch big money-maker of the season here.

Next in line was 'Anything Goes' only musical comedy in the loop, with its happy $23,000 at the Grand. Running close to full-up every performance and turned in a wallopping take on New Year's Eve, when every house in town was a sell-out.

'Old Maid' and 'Personal Appearance' account for another $25,000 between them for last week, with 'Appearance' on a steady build via fine word-of-mouth. 'Maid' will make it three good weeks on its American Theatre Society subscription play, though not particularly hot from the run-of-the-mill public viewpoint.

And finally there were the Ruth Draper character sketches and 'Squaring the Circle' for another $12,000 between them.

Estimates for Last Week

'Anything Goes,' Grand (1,200; $3.30) (3d week). Only musical comedy in town and getting the mobs steadily; bang-up $23,000 last week. Can stick for plenty of additional weeks at current pace.

'Great Waltz,' Auditorium (3,700; $2.75) (2nd week). Biz winner of the past decade in this town on gross figures. Seating capacity giving show a chance for zooming marks. Hit $40,000 for the nine performances ending Saturday (4); practically capacity.

'Old Maid,' Erlanger (1,200; $2.75) (3d week). Doing fine biz. On ATS subscriptions, but selling beyond that. Fine $13,000 again last week. Same as first.

'Personal Appearance,' Harris (1,000; $2.75) (3d week). Perking sharply following its pre-Xmas start and, with the holiday spurt, snagged itself a fine $12,000 last week. On a rapid build.

'Squaring the Circle,' Blackstone (1,000; $2.20) (2nd week). Doing s splendid balcony business, but needs more orchestra seat sale before getting into real money. However, on the right side with $6,000.

Ruth Draper, Selwyn (1,000; $2.20) (2nd week). Will make it two weeks for this protean actress, her first visit here in six years. Snatched a beautiful $6,000 last week and should do as well currently. Drew rave notices from all the dailies and on tongue comment.

HELL FREEZES OVER

Melodrama in three acts presented at the Ritz, N. Y., Dec. 20, '35, by George Kondolf; written by John Patrick; staged by Joshua Logan; $3.30 top.

Swede....Frank Tweddell
Allan....Louis Calhern
Tommy....Richard Abert
Ace....George Tobias
Sparks....John Litel
John....Lee Baker
Clork.... yron McCormick

One of the grimmest dramas in seasons. Tragedy in the Antarctic probaby would have landed had it received a better premiere break. Limited engagement likely.

First act is best from an audience standpoint, because there is laughter. Even though this is wrung from the least intelligent of the seven survivors within a wrecked dirigible near the South Pole, and even though coming through vulgarities, it provides change of pace. That is what the remainder of the show lacks.

Because of the story idea, which has death inevitable to all, it is necessary to pick off the men as the play progresses. Ace, who provides the giggles, and Swede, the cook, start for the edge of an ice barrier 600 miles away to direct succor from an expected rescue ship. They are found frozen to death later, having fallen into a crevice.

While they are facing their doom in 'Hell Freezes Over,' the men continue to attempt radio contact with the outside world on a sending set with steadily weakening batteries. The expedition's scientific men were apparently killed when the ship collapsed and the survivors are an average lot of adventurers.

Last act has only three of the party left, with rations nearly consumed.

John, the only right thinking man of the group, has been handcuffed at pistol point to an iron ladder with arms above his head, while Allan, the braggart, and Sparks, the radio operator, shoot it out. Latter believes the former had violated his young wife, who had suicided a year or so previous. The combatants kill each other, leaving John shackled, while a rescue plane passes overhead, failing to detect the snow-covered dirigible hulk. Before he passes out Allan reiterates that it wasn't Sparks' wife but another girl with whom he had the affair, but this hardly softens the story.

Two other deaths follow the crushing of the youngest member's ankle and amputation by the doctor, who takes to morphine. There is none of the drug left when gangrene sets in, so the medico gives the kid poison and kills himself the same way. While these occurances may seem too melodramatic the possibilities of what might happen to such a wrecked expedition do not seem impossible. Another Antarctic drama, 'The World Waits,' also with an all-male cast, was tried two seasons ago. It was far less tragic but failed to click.

Louis Calhern as Allan, John Litel as Sparks and Lee Baker as John are the well selected leads. Others, too, are good selections, with George Tobias as the laugh-getting Ace.

Play was among the summer tryouts and attracted attention at White Plains. Ibee.

There probably is room somewhere for this type of tripe. It goes on and on in Yiddish theatricals, so, conceivably, there must be a call for it. But it is rapidly disappearing, and, today, this play is the only example of it on Second avenue, so maybe a better day is around the corner.

It is a very wordy, disjointed melodrama about how there is very little difference between holy persons and sinners. Starts in a house of ill-repute and moves between that and the home of the rabbi. The rabbi, it seems, in his youth started the star boarder of the bordello on her road to sin. When first produced, the author had borrowed a chapter out of 'Rain,' with the rabbi suiciding and the gal ditching. That wasn't a good enough finish. It has been changed now.

There's a reconciliation and a happy ending, the rabbi blessing the gal and absolving her of all sin, then taking her into his arms. What happens to his wife, the author and producer doesn't bother explaining. Maybe it's just as well; it takes almost four hours to tell the story that far and any further explanation would carry on into the night.

The acting and direction are all in the old-fashioned ten-twent-thirt manner, in accordance with the subject matter. It is difficult for a time to figure out whether Miss Goldstein and her troupe are playing what they think is drama or whether they are doing satire. With just a mite more accent, it could be turned into a very funny satire.

Miss Goldstein, one of the Yiddish stage's luminaries for some years, hasn't bothered keeping pace with the parade. She still plays the parts she played 20 years ago, when she looked them. And in the manner which, 20 years ago, was good. She has surrounded herself with an above average cast this time, but it doesn't help.

Joseph Shoengold as the rabbi is miscast; he is generally a capable actor. Rosetta Bisles was once a good soubret; now she seems to be a character woman; it will take a more positive part to allow of any judgment of her work; here she is completely negative. Celia Budkin does a fine bit as a blind old mother. Charles Cohan over-emphasizes a comedy assignment. Muni Serebroff doesn't get a chance. Moses Feder is fine as a character man. Anna Appel, as fine an actress as Second avenue has, struggles hopelessly with her unbelievable lines. Reuben Wendorf is fine in a bit. Kauf.

Guests, Porters, Passengers, etc.—George Vigouraux, Loren Gage, Pauline Haddon, Dolores Brown, Frances Thress, Julia Walsh.

A lot of good talent went into the production of this misfit comedy, but it isn't likely to help. It's a typical Viennese farce, unoriginal, unfunny and pachydermic in pace from the viewpoint of American audiences.

Joseph Schildkraut liked it and bought it for production. His enthusiasm is logical. There's a good, typical Schildkraut role in it. George S. Kaufman (albeit anonymously) staged for John Golden. Producers have done their best by the script. It has a neatly elaborate production, an adequate (and largeish) cast and a few lure names. But the play itself isn't there and that is what will hurt in the long run.

It's one of those incredible European play ideas about a clerk who has borrowed $8,000 of the firm's money. A checkup is due in the morning and he must raise the coin pronto. No one has it and the next day is a holiday, with the banks closed. But he must get the bankroll. After a number of the usual red herrings, his least probable money source, an impecunious baron, wins the needed sum in a poker game and all is well.

This is played boisterously and rather pompously through six scenes in which all the stock Grand Hotel characters are introduced. Only one really funny scene in the play, the poker game, and it is here that Kaufman's comedy hand is best seen.

Curt Bois, one of central Europe's best actors, makes his American and English-language debut in the central role. He's Hitler's gift to U. S. drama, a fine actor, a splendid comedian, but—there is always that but in this play. All the way through. In this case it tells of the sad fact that Mr. Bois is working in English, a language he doesn't yet know and, using which, he is not for more than an occasional word or two, understood. Audience, the night caught, would have understood him at least equally well had he stuck to German. Kauf.

Artef is a semi-pro organization that is now in its second year on Broadway at the little Artef Theatre (formerly the Totten, the President, the Hindenburg, the Caruso, etc.) on W. 48th street. Plays in Yiddish is very serious and has ambitions as an art center. Terms itself, on its programs, 'The only Jewish Workers Art Theatre in America.'

No matter what the Artef hopes, or tries, it is still semi-pro. It's ambitions may be (and generally are) noteworthy. Its work is certainly serious and, as such, more important than that of the average Yiddish legit troupe. But the Artef Theatre isn't professional.

Current production is taken from a best-seller novel of years ago and much care has been taken in transplanting it to the Yiddish stage. Story is perfect for a group of this kind, telling, as it does, the rise to fame of a young Jewish lawyer by way of corruption and graft. If only the Artef players were more experienced or capable; if only they had just the tinniest bit of sense of humor (as, for instance, like the Theatre Union), if only they didn't take themselves so very seriously—well, then, it might have been a fine play and a fine performance.

As is, the show is limited to either hearty partisans or to that peculiar tribe of Broadwayites who fawn on everything in a foreign language and think it automatically good because not understandable. Kauf.

'Follies', a nondescript musical, neither burlesque nor musical comedy, on the finish went co-op. Bad start held down any chance of getting money and the troupe found itself doing benefits for the musicians and stage hands, so folded.

Even George M. Cohan Couldn't Wake Up Pitt

Pittsburgh, Jan. 7.

New Year's week in legit was not up to snuff around here this year, with even a star of George M. Cohan's magnitude unable to attract more than ordinary $9,000 to the Nixon. 'Dear Old Darling' played here under the subscription auspices of ATS, so only about two-thirds of that figure represents window sale.

Burg apparently still likes musicals during the holiday sessions and is only mildly interested in the straight stuff. 'Darling' was well liked both by press and public and business here is no tip-off on the show's chances. Couple of seasons ago, Cohan opened here in 'Ah, Wilderness,' also a subscription play, to an only slightly better gross.

Nixon is dark again this week. 'Vanities' had been booked in but was cancelled out a week ago because holding over in Detroit. House relights Monday (13) with 'Tobacco Road,' certain to stick two weeks and possibly more, with an outside chance that the 'Follies' may head here after Philadelphia and before its New York premiere.

Estimates For Last Week

'Dear Old Darling' (Nixon; 2,100; $2.85). George M. Cohan's new one well liked but gross a disappointment; only around $9,000, just fair. About a third of that, too, represents advance subscription sale.

Chicago Tuning Up

By Frederick Donaghey

Concerts in memory of Theodore Thomas were given Jan. 2-3 by the Chicago Symphony, whose founder and first conductor he was. Frederick Stock, who has been conductor since Thomas' death, 1905, was placed in the post by trustees 'temporarily,' they said at the time, and only until they could satisfy themselves as to a new conductor 'worthy' of such a succession. The promotion was given to Stock mainly because he had been of value to Thomas in making fresh arrangements, in occasional activities as deputy-conductor, and because it was felt that he, knowing the men, would make out better than a stranger until such time, etc.

Edith Lorand, with the little Hungarian orchestra, whose hit here in the Autumn was big enough to warrant expectation of a sell-out on return, was to have been back Dec. 29 for a program in the Studebaker, but was cancelled on brief notice because of cost of railroading 19 persons from New York and return for a single date.

Josef Hofmann will give one of his rare Chicago recitals Jan. 26 in the Studebaker. Hofmann keeps on playing in public because he loves to play, though he is known to be immensely wealthy, with no small potion of his affluence due directly to income from mechanical gadgets of his invention, and is, for this and other reasons, something more th n a little bit independent.

Trudi choop and comic dancers are to make their Chicago bow afternoon and night of Jan. 19 in the Studebaker, with the afternoon show taken over by the Women's Trade-Union League.

Hamilton Harty, popular in this town when he comes to conduct, will do that with the Chicago Symphony Jan. 23-24-28. He caught Chicago's liking even before he had 'Sir' prefixed to his name.

Claire Dux emerged from her Gold Coast home and its social routine long enough to sing some old, old Christmas music for the Twelfth-Night service at the University of Chicago.

Robeson in Pix Houses?

Paul Robeson in from the Coast after completing work on 'Show Boat' (U) sails this week for London to sing at Albert Hall on Jan. 26. Following that will be a short continental tour.

On his return to the U. S. he may play picture houses in conjunction with the release of the Universal production. Columbi Concerts negotiating.

BIG YEAR FOR TOURING SYMPHS

Spring months may find both the Philadelphia Symphony under Leopold Stokowski, and the N. Y. Philharmonic under Arturo Toscanini touring in more or less direct competition to each other. First tour is set under RCA sponsorship. Second deal is warm. Marshall Field reported dickering for two Chicago performances.

Minneapolis Symphony under Eugene Ormandy goes on tour Jan. 20 and will visit the following: 20, Ames, Ia.; 21, Rockford, Ill.; 22, Chicago; 23, Indianapolis; 25, Jackson, Miss.; 26-27-28, New Orleans; 29, Tallahassee; 31, Jacksonville; Feb. 1, Daytona Beach; 2, Gainesville; 4, Winston-Salem; 4, Greensboro; 5, Chapel Hill; 7, Pittsburgh; 8, Columbus, O.; 10-11, Toledo; 12, Grand Rapids, and 13, Winona, Minn.

RCA sponsored tour now completed follows: April 13, Hartford; 14, Boston; 16, Toronto; 17, Chicago; 18, Urbana; 21, Atlanta; 23, New Orleans; 24, Houston; 25, Dallas; 27-28, Los Angeles; 29, Santa Barbara; 30, San Jose; May 1-2-3, San Francisco; 5, Salt Lake City; 6, Denver; 8, Omaha; 9, St. Louis; 10, Chicago; 11, Indianapolis; 12, Toledo; 13-14-15-16, Ann Harbor and 17, New York. A few of these dates are tentative at the moment.

Contingent will number over 100 musicians under Stokowski, with assistant conductors to include Saul Caston and Charles O'Connell. Special train will house the group while enroute.

Mountain Opera in Work

Martin, Ky., Jan.

Harrison Elliott, composer of 'Call of the Cumberlands,' folk opera, is at work on a full-sized opus labeled 'Boy from Beaver Creek,' which he plans to produce in Garrett, Ky., late this spring. All talent will be drafted from the hill country.

There's to be a chorus of 60 voices, a string band of 15 instruments and 12 leads. He's been teaching public school music in Garrett Consolidated school at Garrett, Floyd county, Ky.

'Beaver Creek' will be the most ambitious music event ever staged in the locale, it's said. NBC aired his other work last August as a native creation.

COSSACKS HOME

Berlin, Dec. 30.

Serge Jaroff and his Don Cossacks returned from the U. S. to Berlin, where most family members of the Chorus reside.

Opened its German tour at Philharmonic Hall.

Hungarian Festival Feb. 9

Headed by Dr. Julius Horvath, Hungarian composer and pianist, a Hungarian Music Festival will be given at the Central Opera House, New York City, on Feb. 9.

Show will consist of a 50-piece gypsy band, a concert orchestra and a jazz band.

Irlam Winslow dancers (5) have the following dates under Willmore & Powers banner this season: Jan. 20-21, Montreal; 23, Waterbury; 27, Albany; 29, Kutztown, Pa.; 31, Bloomsburg; Feb. 1, Chambersburg, and 4, Mansfield.

Frances Hawkins' next is Tina Flade, dancer, who'll appear under Mills College banner on Jan. 12 at the Guild, N. Y.

St. Louis Symphony orchestra will appear in Hill Auditorium, Ann Arbor, Jan. 14, under direction of Vladi ir Golschmann.

Stokowski to Share Philly Baton

Eugene Ormandy Will Direct Two-Thirds of Concerts—Stokowski's 'Research' Plans

Philadelphia, Jan.

Leopold Stokowski, for the last 23 years conductor of the Philadelphia Orchestra, will share that post next year with Eugene Ormandy, it was announced last week. He will conduct 20 concerts instead of the 26 he batoned this season and will devote the rest of his time to 'research.' Ormandy comes to the local podium from the Minneapolis Symphony rchestra.

According to last week's announcement, the two men will be known as 'co-conductors,' but it is pointed out that Stokowski will remain in an 'advisory capacity' with the orchestra. Ormandy will conduct about two-thirds of the seasons concerts and the two conductors jointly will have complete power to hire and fire members of the orchestra. While nothing is said about final authority in case of possible disagreement between two men on matters of policy, it is expected that Ormandy will adjust himself to the situation in view of Stokowski's tremendous prestige here.

Stokowski has refused to explain what form his contemplated 'research' will take, but he is known to be keenly interested in films, radio and wired transmission. He has never denied reports that he has considered the idea of becoming a screen star. During his vacation last summer at his estate at Santa Barbara, the maestro was seen repeatedly in the M-G-M studios and was believed to be trying to persuade producers to make film based on life of Richard Wagner, with him as the star.

Ormandy, native of Budapest, was violin prodigy at age of four and was formerly conductor of Capitol Theatre orchestra in New York.

Londos' first venture in the concert field after years as Detroit's No. 1 wrestling promoter, was Oct. 4, with Tito Schipa. Behind tons of free newspaper copy, concert received good patronage.

REVIEWS

Ponselle as 'Carmen'

Rosa Ponselle, Hilda Burke, Thelma Votipka, Helen Oelheim, Charles Kullman, Ezio Pinza, Angelo Bada, Marek Windheim, Louis D'Angelo, George Cehanovsky. Louis Hasselmans conducting. At the Metropolitan Opera House.

Rosa Ponselle in 'Carmen' has been the big dish at the Metropolitan Opera so far this season. Association of star and role caught favor, and management set two repeat performances to handle the demand. Another is likely. Press was not particularly warm, claiming that the diva overplayed the role but for the average fan her efforts to make the part glamorous with a modern tang is good opera.

Ponselle depends on her own style of exotic coloring for the portrayal. Her costumes are smart almost to the point of current fashion. Entrance in last act had the house on its feet, due mostly to the attire worn, being something of a military suit, trim and snappy. This fresh detail contrasts the rather faded sets and the hefty divas in the ensemble.

Besides Ponselle, there was Charles Kullman as Don Jose. He's the 'ingen' who made the first week brought down a flock of native New Havenites for the occasion, and had the press yelping about a paid claque the next day. Management sent out de alibis, and then flat denials. Helen Oelheim who also airs regularly on the radio, shared in the final spotlight as Mercedes. This is her first season with the Met.

Some attention has been centered on the American Ballet's part at Met. Group's youthfulness very noticeable next to the mature types threaded through the singing ensemble. Clowning Facsodo with Anatole Vilzak leading resulted in good response. George Balanchine's direction of the opera ballet is being accepted slowly.

Most everyone at the Met. is quiet on the subject of b.o. in take, but it is understood gate receipts so far are up 51 percent over last year's at the same time. Bral.

Trudi Schoop Ballet

Trudi Schoop Comic Ballet is the second dance attraction to appear currently under the S. Hurok banner on this site, the other being the Monte Carlo Ballet Russe. Newest importation is in direct contrast to the De Basil company, going in for heavy pantonime, mi tory and all minus any elaborate sets or atmospheric flourishes. Most of the dancing is performed in a comic vein. Ten day engagement opened at the Majestic, New York; with a tour of the key cities following. The hinterland will probably take to it. Has a 'natural' tie-up for intelligentsia.

Only two numbers were given at the opening, first 'Want Ads' a Grand Hotel cross-section of the classified ad section with the various notices danced out in comic and tragic mood. Miss Schoop herself made her first appearance as a torch singer in a cabaret sequence, though only half of the house was aware of until curtain calls.

Her big flash is a creation labeled 'Fridolin On the Road,' being a whimsical fellow who meets all kinds of experiences before breaking from his smug family circle. It's a simple-straight-forward saga, which takes quite a bit of time to present, and requires many of the dancers to enact four to five different characters. Two scenes are stand-outs in the lengthy run, the bowling session and the meeting of the club ladies.

Ensembles are few and far between in the accepted dance pattern idea, but when group does move in unison, it's purely in a comical way and never anything grandiose. Black drapes and a line of stools are the sole effects used, with overhead lighting proving bad at this viewing.

Miss Schoop herself dominates the proceedings. Style is shorn of ballet mannerisms, though the groundwork is evident. Much of the 'Fridolin' character appears borrowed from early Chaplin films. She's decked out in a black and white costume, which is so familiar by this time due to advance photos, that she doesn't look at ease in anything else. Girls of the company are of the wholesome Teutonic type. Two pianos used for accompaniment, the music being a faint replica of early jazz concoctions. Main novelty is that offering garners laughs instead of high-brow approval. Bral.

Melinda Alexander

Roof garden of the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, New York, is the scene of a new series of forums conducted by Melinda Alexander on Sunday evenings at 8:45. Miss Alexander, who looks like a Broadway leading lady and dresses like the kind of somebody ship's photographers rate a 'must,' is a lady intellectual. But not the scary kind. The soothing sort.

Free Trade vs. Protectionism was the subject Sunday (5), with the wing-collared and mink-coated audience getting quite excited as the twinkling stars in the arbored ceiling continued serenely on schedule.

Conducted with smooth elegance, the forum is tops on the ultra front. Clark Getts is manager. Land.

('No One Knows How')

Rome, Dec.

Irandello; at Argentina 13, 1935.
........Ruggero Ruggeri
........Andreina Pagnani
........Piero Carnabuci
........Signora Marchio

This Pirandello lay deals with the problem of and would seem pretty much like a lecture or a treatise but for the fact that the author has giv his characters great vitality and their gropings great emotional vehemence and theatrical force.

Romeo Daddi and the wife of his best friend, Giorgio, commit adultery one fine summer day, when they suddenly find themselves alone together, and are both suddenly aware of a momentary complete lapse of conscience and consciousness. They commit the act as if they were both in a dream, feeling perfectly innocent. And afterwards they neither of them feel any remorse, or sense of guilt.

How is it possible that Romeo should so deceive his best friend; how is it possible that Ginevra, devoted wife, should so deceive her husband? The answer is the title of the play: 'No One Knows How.'

But Romeo starts brooding about the sin he has committed: not because he feels remorse or has pangs of conscience, but because it troubles him no end that such a thing can have happened in a moment of absolute forgetfulness, with no sense of shame or of right. And his brooding over this leads him to remember another crime that he had committed 30 years ago when he was just an adolescent, and when he murdered a child—killing it with a sharp stone after some trivial quarrel.

That early crime had been committed in the same sort of trance, and had since become completely forgotten; tucked away in some out-of-the-way corner of his mind. Now the second crime makes him recall it, and he suddenly finds himself thinking.

The idea then strikes Romeo that just anyone may have these trances and lapses of conscience; he begins suspecting his own perfectly innocent wife; making veiled remarks about crimes committed in all innocence; making pointed remarks toward Ginevra, and being generally just a bit morose and not too good company. His wife, who has the proper share of feminine intuition, guesses what the matter is, and Ginevra, who has the feminine urge to believe in something, has convinced herself firmly that the sin doesn't count as a sin, because she and Romeo didn't think of it as such when doing it. The two women decide that, at all costs, the matter must be kept from the deceived husband, Giorgio.

But Romeo has an urge to figure it all out, how this thing that has happened 'no one knows how' could come about. So he brightly breaks the news to Giorgio, and Giorgio, who is not one of your theorists, but looks at facts, takes his pistol, fires on his friend Romeo and kills him.

Moral: after all the talk, it's the fact that a crime is committed, and not the intention that matters.

Sounds pretty ponderous, but is actually thrilling and intensely dramatic.

Very well acted. Play has been in search of an Italian company which could handle it for over two years, having already been translated and put on outside of Italy. Moisse was to have been the Romeo in the first Italian performance, but that was upset by his death. Now Ruggero Ruggeri has made a great success of the part. Elen.

OUR OWN LIVES

London, Dec. 12.

Three-act comedy by Gertrude Jennings. Presented by Sydney W. Carroll at the Ambassadors theatre. Produced by Owen Nares.

Rosemary Everar..............Rosalyn Boulter
Mrs. Bunting..............Laura Cowie

Not quite enough motivation in this new comedy to sustain interest for a full evening's performance. Man and wife, separated for 10 years, have an 18-year-old daughter who spends alternate six months with each parent. She loves them both and determines to effect a reunion.

Husband is a bibliophile, more interested in first editions than in earning a living for his family. This necessitates the wife going on her own in order to provide an education for their daughter. By this time mother has begun to take notice of a charming, practical, middle-aged man, who wants to marry her. When daughter pleads for family restoration, saying it means so much to her, mother decides to go back to poppa.

He is shown as a completely obsessed bookworm, and before long it is evident to all that the reconciliation will not be permanent. At last it dawns upon the daughter, who is courted by an attractive young man. At this juncture the mother's middle-aged suitor intervenes, with the presumption the print maniac will return to his books, daughter will step out with the young admirer, and mother will fall into the arms of the patient, kindly man who w ted so many years for her.

Not enough there to make one want to stick around for the better part of three hours and find out what the finish will be. In fact, if it were not so smoothly played by a generally competent cast, even alcoholic refreshment between each act wouldn't suffice to hold the boys. Jolo.

TI SZEGENY LANYOK

('You Poor irls')

Budapest, Dec.

Play in three acts by Elemer Boros, at the National theatre, Budapest.
Cast: Anna Tokes, Margit Makay, Paul Javor, Gabriel Rajnay, Zoltan Maklary.

Probably no greater flop than this has been seen here in years. The author, Elemer Boros, displayed real talent in previous plays, notably 'Blind Window' (produced by David Belasco in America as 'The Whirlwind'). This time, however, he has committed a play in which even the most lenient critics find no redeeming point.

His heroine is employed in a travel bureau and doles out information about the Riviera, where she longs to go to escape from her sordid, humdrum existence. She gets this chance through an exceedingly improbable coincidence, but the zest is gone when the boy she loves marries a rich girl, and the Italian Duke, who also makes love to her, shows a preference for Mammon. Girl returns to her desk at the travel bureau and humdrum domesticity at the side of a humble but devoted fellow clerk.

Dull dialog and cliche situations do not relieve this played-out musical comedy plot.

However, the flop would have been less sensational had not the National Theatre started its season under new management with a great blowing of trumpets, since which one failure has followed another. New manager, Antal Nemeth, promised a new era, modern trends and new atmosphere to revive the mouldy classical traditions. He dismissed a number of first-rate oldtimers, engaging highlights of other stages instead. Almost the entire cast of this piece, for instance, had been wangled away from the Vigszinhaz theatre.

This is the fourth straight disappointment in the much-advertised new era, with only one good performance, that of Shakespeare's 'Timon of Athens' to redeem it. Jacobi.

Egy Szavaba Herul

('A Word From You Would Be Enough')

Budapest, Dec.

Comedy in three acts (four scenes) by Elisabeth Land, presented at the Royal Theatre.
Cast: Maria Sulyok, Gizy Lengyel, Mary Szilagy, George Denes, Aladar Sarkadi, Gustav Partos, Laszlo Keleti.

Royal Theatre presents this unpretentious and amateurish play, the authoress's first attempt at playwriting, with sloppy direction and cheap, shabby scenes, for the purpose of saving time for the preparation of the next show. Consequently, this anaemic and very uninteresting career story, treated naively, without humor, and without those little touches that make even a meagre story average entertainment, has no chance whatever.

Actors do their best, and it's no fault of theirs if they fail to impress.

Story is about a struggling but brilliant young lawyer who is too modest to make good, but fortunately the charming daughter of the Prime Minister takes him under her wing by spreading the rumor that he and her father are staunch friends. She does this out of love, of course, and he marries her in the end, with his prospective Prime Minister father-in-law happily giving them his blessing. Jacobi.

L'Homme dans L'Ombre

in the Dark')

Paris, Dec. 21.

Three act detective play by Maurice Leblanc and Pierre Palau. Featuring Palau. Presented by Marcel Nancey at Deux Masques, Paris.

Maurice Leblanc is the man who invented Arsene Lupin. He hasn't signed a play for years, and this effort represents his return to the theatre. Piece is really an adaptation by Pierre Palau of Leblanc's book: 'The Red Rosary.'

It's a beautiful whodunit. Play is perfectly classical in form, with the crime at the end of act one and the rest of the play devoted to investigation in front of the audience.

All the unraveling is clear, with no fake mystifications. Comedy comes in just when it should, and only for a few seconds at a time. No terrific shocks—just a good evening's entertainment. It may not seem like anything extraordinary, but there are few mystery purveyors who can write 'em like that.

Deux Masques is one of two theatres specializing in mystery plays in Paris, and doing well. This type of thing seems to be just right for the current local legit situation. Stcr

Volt Egyszer Egy Asszony

('There Was Once a Woman')

Budapest, Dec. 18.

Play in three acts by Ferenc Fendrik, at the Vigszinhaz, Budapest.
Cast: Maria Lazar, Irene Agay, George Kovacs, Oscar Beregi, Lajos Gardonyi.

Why the original title of this play, the much more poignant 'I'd Make a Good Wife,' should have been changed to this sentimentally narrative one is as much a mystery as the problem of why a first-rate stage should have presented this unambitious first effort of a very young and entirely unknown author at all.

There is nothing to raise it beyond the average production of scores of young would-be playwrights, except, perhaps, a gift for glib and natural dialog.

Play is about an ideal-minded youth who falls in love with a beautiful lady without realizing the very obvious fact that she is a cocotte. When he is made to grasp it at last he sees no way out but a suicide attempt. Bullet goes astray, wounding him severely enough to make him want to live; lady-love renounces him, but smoothes his way to the musical career he covets; and the honest, hard-working, modern girl, sister of the fascinating kept lady, takes what is left of the boy's shattered heart.

Fine cast doesn't find much to do. George Kovacs, new, does not succeed in making the improbable character of the young idealist very convincing. Jacobi.

NOIX DE COCO

('Cocoanut')

Paris, Dec. 18.

Three-act farce-comedy by Marcel Achard; presented by Leon Volterra at the Theatre de Paris.
Loulou..............Raimu
Josserand..............Alerme
Colleville..............Julien Bertheau
Salvadore..............Gallet
Caroline..............Lucien Brule
Angele..............Huguette Duflos
Fernande..............Madeleine Suffel
Natalie..............Lucienne Le Marchand
..............Ginette Leclerc

Clever and very Gallic extraction of laughs from a thin theme: the discovery by a man that his prudish wife used to be a singer in a cheap cabaret in Indo-China and that years ago he had spent a night with her. Marcel Achard makes this go for three good acts, getting plenty of fun out of teasing the subject here and adding kicks there.

Local effect is augmented by the popularity of the cast. Jules Raimu here makes his stage comeback after years in the films, and he gets great support from Alerme and Huguette Duflos.

For adaptation, it's another one of those fielder's choices. No question that the situations are good, and that with an effort they could be fixed up so that American audiences would swallow them. But it'll be a tough job for anybody who undertakes it. Stern.

MARY TUDOR

London, Dec. 22.

If there were more action in this play it would be an ideal starring vehicle for Flora Robson. As it is, there is a series of more or less authentic historical cameos spread over a number of years which are not dramatic enou h to occupy the time allotted.

Flora Robson gives a sincere and intelligent performance, if not quite in the history book character of 'Bloody Mary.' Most of her unpleasant qualities have been glossed over, the only one conceded being her mulishness, which she is proud to inherit from Papa Henry VIII.

Middle-aged Queen, wedded to the youthful Spanish Prince Philip; his petulant plea to be granted full monarchial rights; the bitterness and despair following her untruthful 'pregnancy', and the poignancy of thwarted motherhood, form the nucleus of this panorama.

Star's best scene is with her young consort, following her serious illness, which had been istaken for conception. Her parting with hi , and realization that her love is unwanted, is moving to a degree.

Role of the young sister, Elizabeth, is cruelly depicted by Joyce Bland. Here again, historical facts may have been distorted, but the cold, calculating hypocrisy of this young girl, one day to become The Elizabeth, are disturbing to one's preconceived ideas.

Interesting to students of history, but as a box o ce draw hopeless.

3 OPERETTAS DUE IN PARIS

Paris, Dec.

Despite tough luck of music shows here so far this season, the local legit stage is getting ready for holiday business with three new operettas opening in the next few days: a spectacle, 'Sun of Mexico' at the Chatelet; 'Violet of Montmartre,' at the Porte Saint Martin, and a musical comedy by Georges Delance, with Jeanne Aubert, at the Empire.

Dramatic stage has already had two new hits with which to carry through: the Henry Bernstein play, 'Heart,' and 'Flowering Woman' at the St. Georges, by Denys Amiel. Edouard Bourdet's historical piece, 'Margot,' will carry through until 1936 at the Marigny, and Armand Salacrou's 'Unknown Woman of Arras,' modernistic psychological play, is getting enough biz also to keep going.

Added to Marcel Achard's laugh hit, 'Coconut,' at the Theatre de Paris'; the Guitry show 'End of the World' at the Madeline; Louis Verneuil's 'Lighted Fountains' at the Varieties, and four or five successful little theatre productions, this makes a fair stock of shows.

London, Jan. 7.

A new and important legit production company will be formed soon. Behind the venture are Harry Tennent and Hugh Beaumont.

Tennent and Beaumont were originally bookers for Moss Empires. Fiction and Films

By EPES W. Roaliti

There is vigor and authority to I.R.A. Wylie's 'Furious Young Man' (Little Brown; $2.50), which is not helped much by its title. It is a realistic study of the Soviets, in which the writer does not hold her hand, but draws a graphic, at times rather horrible, picture of an infatuated people obsessed by a false idea. It is in a sense propaganda, yet the author never takes time out to harrangue. It is all brought out through the gripping story. It is one of the more important books of '35.

Her hero is Tor Wyatt, who turns Socialist when the factory in which he has been employed closes down. He leads his band of hungry workmen to London, where he contacts the Soviet agents and for a supposed murder is compelled to flee to Russia, where he learns the real facts of the workers' party.

The book lies almost in the horror class, yet it proves good literary entertainment and suggests picture possibilities if the matter is handled delicately.

Number Three

Marguerite Mooers Marshall repeats herself in 'The Golden Height' (Doubleday, Doran; $2), which has the same basic pattern as her 'Salt of the Earth' and 'None but the Brave,' both capital books in spite of their similarity.

In all three a city dweller goes to Belltown, N. H., to find peace in the great outdoors. This time it is Iris Irving, settlement worker, who has a horror of marriage because her mother's affairs have turned out so badly. She flees from Ted Vance, her newspaperman sweetheart, and when the settlement people dismiss her, she remains in Belltown as hired hand to a superannuated farmer. She finds the answer to her problem in Dick Wheaton, a neighboring farmer.

The story is well constructed, though its plotting does not quite equal its predecessors, but it is to be hoped, for her own sake as well as her readers, that the author moves out of Belltown for her next locale. It's picture material.

Duals

Phoenix releases its books in pairs, one of which is always markedly inferior to the other, though each is held at the $2 price. The company sells mostly to lending libraries.

The better of the present brace is 'Rainbow's End,' by Vivian Radcliffe, the story of a girl who goes on a world cruise because someone slips a steamer ticket, passport and cash into her hand. Laboriously constructed complications ensue, none of which is either very interesting or plausible.

The sub-stratum is 'She Made Her Bed,' by Sally Chayes. It has nothing whatever to commend it, lacking style, pattern and invention.

Just a

Apparently someone told Faith Baldwin they would like a book about a temperamental picture star, if it were crazy enough, and the author started the pot to boiling, determined to be frothy and cock-eyed. The result is 'The Moon's Our Home' (Farrar Rinehart; $2), which is about what pot boilers usually turn out to be. It's obviously written to order and determinedly crazy.

Picture star is, almost of course, a socialite who has made good in spite of her society affiliation. She falls in love with an equally wealthy explorer, who goes Hollywood for her sake. For the rest it is reminiscent of 'Twentieth Century,' while not as entertaining, and with a dash of Velez-Welsmuller. Uninventive and undistinguished.

Philadelphia, for some reason, does not figure as frequently or importantly in fiction as New York, Boston, Chicago or San Francisco, so the locale gives some novelty to Freeman Lincoln's 'Rebound' (Coward-McCann; $2).

It's a four-square problem in which two sisters, almost exact opposites, marry the men who represent their own opposites. This provides a neat problem which the author has worked out satisfactorily. It should make a good picture, for it has real interest.

CHI 'BARBARY COAST' FADES

Due-Bills Now Used So Extensively They're Practically New Style Wampum

Reciprocal agreements between users and issuers of due bills, in which the bills are used as skrip in lieu of cash, and the misuse of same in branches of show and regular business, has so altered the or inal purpose of sheets as to require the new name of currency. Once a li ited privilege, due bills are indiscriminately and promiscuously distributed in payment for outstanding bills of every character. Some are even paying salaries ith the newly recognized wampum.

The papers assume multiform characters because of the various enterprises making use of them. The principle, however, remains. Hotels, theatres, resorts, apartments, restaurants, garages, radio stations, pools, merchants, nite clubs, bus lines, mercantile houses, advertisers, steam ships, planes and wholesalers all avail themselves of this easy payment plan whereby no green is passed. Organizations, aware of the trend, have not entirely overlooked its possibilities.

Method employed by nite clubs, hotels and restaurants is to issue the due bills in payment for blicker advertising and foodstuffs tabs. Same group also purchase clothes, jewelry and sundry other articles by approaching wholesalers with a wallet full of due bills which are shelled for purchases. Tab in niteries, etc., represent a 50% profit, hence issuance of due bill for stipulated sum nets owners a profit anyway, although coming through the long way. In this manner both get what they want without cash remittances. Merchants are usually just as anxious to partake of this 'arrangement' to impress their buyers, friends and families, and all without unbuttoning the purse.

On the Rebound

Second visit of bill profferer ups 'wholesale' price and results in a profit for holder as well. Fix works both ways, helps dealer keep up a selling front.

Theatres have been known to pay off help in passes and tickets which they sell for what they can get. This constitutes a 'salary.' With some it's a prearranged gag, but many are stuck, having not been previously informed. Sometimes only resorted to when short.

Radio stations are not guiltless. Stations have been known to give announcements for bus tickets, railroads, autos or anything offered. Classic due bill payoff by radio station was revealed by a small station informing its technical staff and engineers that no dough was on hand and instead station would 'give' two hours daily to staff which they must sell to obtain their salaries. Some mid-west stations allegedly take accounts that offer only exchange of vegetables, produce, livestock or lumber for time used on the air.

Wholesale acquisition of due bills is also prevalent. After paper has been bought, buyer rents out his right nightly for a price, depending on amount market off.

Not exactly in the same category as foregoing, 'discount services' are now appearing on the scene. On a yearly subscription basis, card cnities holder to discounts ranging from 5% to 25% in any one of a list of stores, niteries, restaurants, etc. Gag is a due bill in principle, but is more or less legit and eliminates the down payment. Method of some is for card presentation after purchases, some of others work the old gimmick of telephoning office before making buy. Latter is old 'wholesale' saw that was famous before due bills were heard of, and which in reality is legal piracy. Tip off enables wholesaler to boost his prices. Discount brings it to original price.

CLIP STUFF HURTS NO. CLARK STREET

Post-Repeal Phenomena Dims as Chumps Get Smart—Even Legit Spots Affected

MOVING DAY

Chicago, Jan. 7.

Something has happend to Chicago's 'Barbary Coast.' After repeal it became the hot alley of the midwest; but in the past few weeks it has become limp.

For three years it was the focal point of all the little ladies with bump specialties; the birth place of off-color gags, the home of the back-room, the haven of the wandering hostess, the knock-out drop and the clip. Cheap beer and sloppy table singers who were satisfied with a two-bit touch, customers who wanted a floor show for a glass of beer.

For three years it has been a great racket. Slumming has been a novelty of the smart [illegible] reasonably cheap amusement for the tollers and the turnover was large enough to afford a good source of revenue for the operators. But the boys started getting greedy. They weren't satisfied any longer with a two-buck take from a customer; they wanted his roll. And when they started rolling the street started on the toboggan. The few spots still running on the level are suffering due to the general refusal of the public to visit North Clark street any longer.

Deserting the Shi

In order to save themselves several of the joints have moved away from the Clark street sector and have shifted over closer to the lake, where the air is cleaner. Those left on the street are putting up a desperate struggle for existence. It's only a matter of weeks before Clark street is completely washed up as the hot spot of the midwest. Jammed 10 and 12 to a block, side by side for some dozen blocks, the hankies are fading rapidly.

Performers are getting it in the neck as the joints cut down. For merly the scale for talent ranged from $20 to $35 weekly, besides what they could pick up on the pitch or table singing. Now the best spots have sliced the salary to $10 flat while the cheaper joints are forcing singers, dancers and m.c.'s to work strictly for tips. And the tips are getting smaller.

Faith, hope and charity were combined in neat triple threat by John Hay (Jock) Whitney at Santa Anita last week when Pioneer producer copped on his nag Savernake. Whitney not only played his entry for heavy dough himself, but, unknown to them, placed $5 bets on the nose for 10 stenogs and secretaries in his office.

Horse paid off $27 for each of the employees, purely on the boss' tisk.

GARDEN CARD SUFFERS FROM POOR SPOTTING

By JACK PULASKI

Madison Square Garden was somewhat better as to attendance Friday (3), but the boxing was not greatly improved over that of the previous week. Main error of the time was in failing to recognize a super bout of three 10-rounders and spotting it first with the poorest going on last.

Bill of lightweights was supposed to be staged with the expectation of finding an opponent to fight Tony Canzoneri for the title. Fact that Lou Ambers of Herkimer, N. Y., outpointed Frankie Klick of the Coast didn't mean much. Neither can hit hard enough and both are among Canzy's scalps.

Real match of the evening was between Bobby Pacho and Leonard Del Genio, which had the little Mexican fireball on the long end by a unanimous vote. Both can sock and as a warmer-upper of the evening they were there, yet it is still to be shown that they are good enough for title honors. Certainly looked more eligible than either Ambers or Klick.

Pacho is better known on the Coast, but he was unabashed by the Garden. Del Genio tore into Bobby as though the brown boy was made to his order.

Ambers danced around Klick and stabbed him in the mouth with a left, badly cutting the kid's lips, but when he leaned on the rights nothing happened until late in the match. A left toppled Frankie to his knees but it looked like he tripped or something and decided to take a nine count. Lou simply doesn't knock 'em out.

Final bout, and when the customers took the air, had Aldo Spaldi, the Italian champ, and one of the Zivics—Eddie this time. Latter is a fellow with long arms and slim body. For a time he kept off the runt, but later he was somewhat battered, so they said. It was a bad match and the fans couldn't take it.

Pacho looked the best contender. He smacked Canzy off his pins in Chicago last summer when Tony claimed he was off his feed, but the champ arose and won the fight.

Garden Ups Net

Income from fights early last 'all showed up in big pickup in net profit for Madison Square Garden for the quarter ended Nov. 30. Net was $62,554, after charges and taxes, as compared with only $29,609 for the same quarter in 1934.

The net loss for the previous six months rose compared with the same half year in 1934. It was $83,050, against $50,987 for corresponding period of preceding year.

Los Angeles, Jan.

stabilshing an advertising precedent which may lead the Coca-Cola company's bottling outfit into angeling various sports events, Barbee brothers, owners of the local franchise, laid $5,000 on the line as prizes in the Los Angeles Open golf tourney Jan. 10, 11 and 12.

Refreshment outfit has 110 24-sheets out in Southern California heralding the biggest event of the professional golfer's Sunshine Circuit. Numerous other forms of advertising being used. In addition, company is grabbing plenty of free space in the dailies.

Home boys and the visiting firemen take their golf seriously in these parts and the gold that flows as prizes attracts most of the professionals. About 20 tourneys are skedded this season, with as many as two playing the country club circuit the same week.

Quickly sensing the possibilities of a campaign to sponsor the big event, the Barbees, three of them, C. R., Stanley and A. K., grasped the financial handles when it was learned that the L. A. Junior Chamber of Commerce, daddy of the fairway shindig, was having difficulty rounding up the prize coin. Sports writers whooped it up for the Barbees for coming through with the money to perpetuate the circuit's biggest date.

Success of the venture is being watched closely by the company's h.o. with a view to the possibility of hundreds of other branches going in as sponsors for baseball, polo, soccer and football. Any place to spot a Coca-Cola sign.

Golf is a money proposition in Southern California, as was demonstrated last week when the second day's play in the $4,000 Pasadena open was postponed because of rain. Some of the greens were under water. Quite different from the open tourneys held in the east and mid-west. When it rains there the pros go right on—as well as the gallerytics. But in California they won't go out in the rain.

Mutuel Benefits

Columbus, O., Jan. 7.

Breakage system of figuring the payoff at race tracks, returned the operators of Ohio ovals a neat profit during 1935.

Under the Buckeye breakage law the track operators take all the odd pennies, the payoff being made on the next lowest multiple of 10. That means if a winning ticket figures to pay $8.96 the bettor gets but $8.90 while the track retains six cents.

During the 1935 racing season the state received $98,981.05 as its share of the pari-mutuel betting from 273 days of racing. The breakage which goes to the track operators totaled $105,422.48 for the season.

Thus the breakage was sufficient to pay the state tax and leave almost $10,000 in addition to the regular cut on the wagers, for the operators.

OBITUARIES

ANNIE MYERS

Annie Myers, 78, one of the last survivors of that little group who in the last 20 years of the past century made opera comique a thing to be remembered, died in New York last week.

Her stage career started in Baltimore and she then joined the McCaull company, which listed among its stars such names as DeWolf Hopper, Laura Joyce and Digby Bell. Mathilde Cotrelly, Helen Bertram, Josephin Knapp, Jefferson DeAngelis, Chauncey Olcott.

A vivacious brunette of small stature, she was often selected to work opposite Hopper, who was still remote from stardom, and their joint success was quite probably his reason for selecting Della Fox, Jessie Mackaye, Edna Wallace and similar di inutive soubrets to work opposite him.

She went to England with Lillian Russell and scored a success only second to that of the star, but most of her fame centers around the McCaull company and later Harry Askin, who produced 'The Tar and Tartar,' which gave her one of her favorite roles. It is believed that of the old group only Jack Raphael survives. Charles W. Meyrs (who purposely spelled his name differently), was also a member of the McCaull forces. In private life she was Mrs. Charles Pickler.

She is survived by one brother, R. Fuller Jarboe, a musical director; three nephews, Fuller E. and Harry O. Jarbeau and Marry Myers, and a niece, Mrs. Edith Murphy.

Mrs. Smith and her brother, Wilmer Bentley, were at his bedside when he passed away at 6:30 in the morning.

Smith was one of the most prolific librettists of his day, providing the book or the lyrics for about 300 stage productions, including 14 of Victor Herbert's light operas.

One of the most enduring songs for which he wrote the words were 'Oh, Promise Me,' first sung in Reginald De Koven's 'Robin Hood' in 1890. Another widely sung lyric of his was 'The Sheik of Araby.'

Smith, a native of Buffalo, N. Y., started writing as a columnist on the Chicago Daily News. It was there that he met De Koven who was working for a dry goods firm and they collaborated on more than a dozen operettas which brought them both fame.

His first wife was the former Lena Reed of Chicago, now residing in Pittsfield, Mass. He married Irene Bentley, of Baltimore, a musical comedy actress, several years ago.

Irene Bentley, a niece, is a picture actress in Hollywood. Spencer Bentley, a nephew, is an announcer on WNEW.

affair he had with a 13-year-old negro girl, Robert Emmett Keane gives a good characterization, though a bit too virile. Hugh Ripple is a little too Boy-Scoutish as Grant. Sheila Manors is good as the girl but in the rewrite love interest should be lengthened. As is, she has but one scene. Marc Lawrence is excellent as Chicago Joe. Joseph Girard does a nice characterization as the doctor, another part which should be built up to contrast with the warden. Joe Cunningham as the preacher is okay. Others are bits.

Play is filled with profanity of the type that will embarrass audiences. After establishing the warden's character, it can be eliminated, which means shortly after the start of the first act. Understood that Frank Craven is interested in the rewrite. He should know what to do with the play.

Direction by Joseph Sawyer is excellent throughout. Charley Fox has given the show good production. all.

MOSS APPEALING ON MINSKY CASE

Decision of the Appellate Divic of New York Supreme Court granting Minsky's Republic on West 42d street a temporary injunction to restrain Commissioner Paul Moss from depriving the theatre of its license, was carried by Moss this week to the Court of Appeals in Albany. Final decision on the censorship powers of the License Department is important to every phase of theatricals in the city.

Three of the five Supreme Court justices, in the opinion written by Justice Irwin Untermyer, stated that Moss has no right to revoke a license unless a producer has first been convicted in a cri inal action of putting on an indecent show. Two dissenting justices contended that an amendment to the city ordinances gave the commissioner the right to revoke licenses.

Justice Untermyer, however, opined that the amendment cited was not intended to give the License Commissioner such powers. A Court of Appeals decision of 1922, Untermyer added, held that no such right of censorship was vested in the commissioner.

Moss, at the hearing, claimed that when the license was issued to the theatre the operators agreed to conform to certain regulations of the License Department. This agreement, he claimed, was violated and he took steps to revoke the license. The Holly Holding Corp. obtained a temporary stay till the matter could be brought before the Supreme Court.

Since appointed Commissioner by Mayor LaGuardia, Moss has frequently exercised censorship powers. One such instance was his banning a unit composed of female impersonators from playing in Greater New York after he had seen it at the Circle theatre. He frequents legit openings and especially studies the dialog.

INDOOR CIRCUSES' BIG BIZ

SAWDUST SHOWS IN STADIA ZOOM

Auditorium Circuses Now Have 4-Month Winter Route—$25,000 Average Cost of Shows as Bought by Shrine, Legion, Policemen-Firemen's Organizations—Surefire Sales Plus Program Ad Profits

STILL GROWING

Indoor circuses have built in the past few years into a million dollar industry with enough playing time to keep the bulk of the circus acts working right through the heart of the winter, up to the time they go into rehearsal for their regular summer outdoor season.

Backed by huge moneyed organizations which have enough wires out to certify sell-outs and disposal of ducats, the performers and agents are finding a source of large revenue from the indoor dates. And for the performers it's milk and honey with its full week and two-week stands, it's train transportation and hotel accommodations, besides working well-lighted, well-equipped auditoriums instead of windblown tents.

Shrine Temples (of which there about 150) lead the nation in the amount and number of these indoor circuses with some of the big ones, such as Detroit and Cleveland, running through two capacity weeks each and paying spot cash for a show that costs $25,000 and more. Route as now tentatively laid out for the Shrine and Grotto indoor shows, as booked through Stinson-Davenport in Detroit runs from January into April on long stands.

4-Mo. Route

Circus opens the last week in January in Grand Rapids and then into the Coliseum at the Fair Grounds in Detroit for two weeks with the show augmented to cost around $23,000 for the first two weeks in February. Last two weeks in February show jumps to Cleveland at the Municipal Auditorium for the Grotto. Into Canton for the first week in March, then cross country to Omaha and Denver, according to present bookings.

Policemen's Benefit Fund backs the two-week indoor circus at St. Louis, going the third and fourth weeks in April. This circus, booked through the Sidney Belmont office, will range up to $35,000 in cost. Other indoor circuses, backed by the Shrine, American Legion, Fire and Police Departments, and other organizations are planned for Baltimore at the Fifth Regiment Armory where Fred Bradna has been giving the circus for the Shrine, Boston, Buffalo, Pittsburgh, Minneapolis-St. Paul where Denny Curtis is arranging the show for the Shrine, Dallas, New Orleans and Kansas City. Bob Morton is handling a good many of these indoors circuses through the cast and in Texas on a strict promotion basis, giving the sponsoring organization a percentage of the take, approximately 25%. Most of the organizations are unwilling to go into the percentage deals, figuring that they can make a success of the shows themselves and, therefore, can afford to buy the circus outright.

Ringling Rental

Indoor festivals are paying plenty of coin to the Ringling offices for the use of the circus organization's supply of horses, animals and costumes.

With these membership organizations behind the circuses they have turned out to be terrific box-office wallops with capacity audiences a cinch for each of the twice-daily performances, which are scaled from 50c to $1.65, price for reserved seats.

These organizations can pay the cost of the show out of the coin garnered only from the sale of programs and program advertising space with some of the programs in such towns as St. Louis, Detroit and Cleveland reaping returns running from $20,000 to $35,000.

THIS MODERN CULTURE

Vet Flea Trainer Bemoans Coming of Soap and Brush

Berlin, Dec. 30.

Modern culture and that silly habit of overcleanliness are called responsible for the insufficient material required to put up a flea circus, according to Carl Schmidt, veteran trainer of fleas. Schmidt is supplying all flea circuses in Central Europe with those little animals.

It's quite impossible, insists Schmidt, to deliver the stuff wanted by his customers these days, because of lack of the necessary raw material. Training requires several months, and not all fleas are willing to learn. His present stock is all female.

Schmidt remembers those good old times 40 and 50 years ago when there was an abundance of material, but nowadays people are using too much soap, he wails, and this kills his biz.

Speaking on crime, Condon is no amusement medium for children, even if they'd listen. The only reason for a Saturday afternoon show seemed a desire to grab those dimes, with the house jammed in its seats and its aisles by children. There were at least 10 children for every adult on the lower floor.

Jafsie probably didn't use his regular routine at the performance caught, partly because he couldn't get going over the noise and partly because the juve attendance called for a switch. He addressed them as members of his school classes, which many of them, he said, probably were. When he wanted silence he gave them his school sign, which is holding up three fingers and saying, 'The signal is THREE.' As far as this bunch was concerned, he might as well have taken a number from one to 10.

The talk as given did not dwell much upon the Lindbergh case. Jafsie spoke about his lengthy campaign against crime, dating back before the kidnapping. He advised the kids to organize against crime also. Then he said he'd answer questions. The few adults in attendance probably held down the number of queries, and the three or four that were asked were all cagily answered by Jafsie, who knows his verbal flag-waving. It looked suspiciously like a plant when a balcony voice in heavy German dialect, asked a pertinent question and Jafsie imitated the questioner (in dialect) before giving his answer.

The questions-and-answers look like the meat of the act and they're only possible with grown-ups in attendance. In spite of all the racket up here Jafsie didn't get rattled, and the little he showed was enough to indicate he has a professional sense of showmanship.

Hideaway engagements, such as this one may or may not be what Jafsie wants. The New Forum certainly didn't try to keep it a secret, for it advertised the booking in the dailies.

A gentleman who introduced Jafsie to the audience stated that Jafsie isn't receiving any money for his lectures, but he didn't say who the money goes to. That sounded inconsistent, particularly the fact that Jafsie has an agent and is being routed and played as any other stage attraction. And even if true, nobody will believe it, so it's something that shouldn't be mentioned one way or the other.

As a newspaper name Jafsie Condon is internationally known, and it's likely that he could convert that rep into box office. But there's the question of the public's moral reaction to Jafsie on a stage because of the Lindbergh case.

He's reported booked on percentage.

Hagenbeck-Wallace Show Shelved, Ringling to Split Outfit Between Barnum and Barnes Layouts

At a recent meeting of those interested in the American Circus Corporation at the offices in New York of the Ringlings who control the holding company, it was decided not to tour the Hagenbeck-Wallace show next season. From present indications there will be but two outfits under Ringling control on tour, the Ringling-Barnum and Bailey show and the Al G Barnes circus.

When John Ringling arranged the deal whereby he and associates took over five circuses in 1929 the basic idea was to eliminate competition. The American group was controlled by the Muggavan-Bowers group and included the H-B show, Sells-Floto, Barnes, Sparks and John Robinson. All were actively showing and in addition the titles also acquired were 'Buffalo Bill' which was hooked onto the Floto label, Gollmar Bros. and 'Yankee Robinson.' One by one the active shows were yanked, the deal being unlucky because coming at the start of the depression.

Competition a Factor

Competition also appears to be one factor that resulted in the plan to shelve the H-B outfit. Likely the Cole Brothers & Clyde Beatty circus is the answer. This combination was formed after Beatty left the Ringling show and last season a circus booking war between Beatty and the H-B was carried on. Beatty beat the larger show into many important stands. Out of 156 bookings 64 were opposition stands between the Cole-Beatty outfit and H-B with the new show coming out winner. Beatty had been the star of the H-B show for years, appearing at Madison Square Garden however with the Ringling outfit for the New York date. Ringling office stated the withdrawal of the H-B show has been contemplated for several years, denying that the Cole-Beatty outfit was the answer.

It was hoped by performers that the Cole-Beatty combo was the forerunner of more shows out under canvas but just the reverse appears true with the scrapping of the H-B show, long rated the top wild animal outfit. Much of the equipment, some animals and stock are slated to be shipped from the winter quarters at Peru, Ind., to Sarasota the Ringling quarters. Indications there will be three circuses touring in trains next season as against a dozen or more some years ago.

H-B Showed Red

While it was claimed that the Ringling show had its best season since 1926 when it closed at Miami during the fall there were current reports that the H-B show ended in the red. Understood that the Al. G. Barnes outfit will have added the Sells Floto title when it takes to the lot in the spring.

Jess Adkins and Zack Terrell who were execs of the American corporation head the Cole-Beatty tops. Terrell was let out with the Floto show stopped. Adkins left the H-B show last season to join with him in forming the Cole-Beatty outfit.

'Round 'n' Round's' Earnings in Sheets And By-products Topping 'Bananas'

'The Music Goes Round and Round,' likened by many as another 'Yes We Have No Bananas,' is destined for greater commercial revenue that 'Bananas.' Besides its phenomenal sales of 330,000 copies to date, in about two weeks' time, the song has been setting records for a single day's business that has the entire music business gasping.

On Jan. 2 it sold 42,174; Jan. 3 (a Friday), Select Music (Santly-Joy) filled orders for 57,667, and the following Monday (6), since there is no shipping on Saturdays, the publishers filled orders for 102,176. This excludes a telephonic print order to Canada for 50,000 copies to be published in the Dominion for the Canadian trade, rather than shipping from New York.

Song's commercial by-products are staggering. Tommy Rockwell of Rockwell-O'Keefe which, with George Joy, Lester Santly and Bing Crosby, controls the Santly-Joy and Select music publishing enterprises, has deals on with round-and-round Dobbs hats, special cloths for femme apparel, bracelets, cigar stores, books and other merchandise.

In addition three film deals were pending at one and the same time

REHEARSE FILM LIKE PLAY, IN A THEATRE

Paris, Jan. 5.

Sacha Guitry and his troupe are following a new method of readying film 'New Testament,' based on last season's Guitry click of the same title. They're rehearsing the play at the Madeleine theatre just as if they were going to put it on as a legit. Only when they're ready they'll start shooting in a studio.

Play will be filmed almost exactly in its legit version, except for a few cuts. Guitry, who hated films for years but is now going into them in a big way, is thus carrying out his idea of making pictures as much like legit as possible.

Producer of 'New Testament' is Louis Aubert, local picture pioneer, who has been out of the business for a year.

REINHARDT'S PITLESS MUSICAL SCORE IDEA

Max Reinhardt is experimenting with sound recording as a possible replacement of the orchestra for his Broadway legit production 'The Eternal Road,' now in rehearsal.

Music is being partially recorded on film now, to be reproduced through loud speakers. If successful, entire score may be put on film that way, figuring to give a better general effect, according to Reinhardt's new notions, as well as save considerably on running expenses. Show is expected to open next month at the Manhattan opera house, N. Y.

Ethiop Fronters Back For Personals, Spiels

With interest in Ethiopian affairs simmering down, and press and newsreels concentrating on other events, field staffs for the film companies, which were assigned to the war job, are headed back after several months on the other side. Laurence Stallings, chief of the 20th-Fox Movietone contingent, which numbered seven, the largest of any film company representation, is bringing back a series of private news-shots which he plans to piece together in 'documentaire' form for general issuance. He'll probably have some deal for personaling such a release if completed. Fox is leaving a single photographer over there to cover.

Others returning from similar chores include John Dored, Paramount; Ariel Varges, Hearst Metrotone, and Howard Winner, Universal. Josef Israels, II, who represented Pathe, returned last week. He's embarking on a lecture tour shortly, and will include first-hand films of the Italian drive as a major part of his platform dates.

'Jumbo' Road Tour Under Ringling Proposed, to Replace H-W Circus

When 'Jumbo' leaves the Hippodrome, N. Y., for the hinterland it may be presented in regular circus manner, possibly through a tie-up with the Ringling interests. Understood that contracts between Billy Rose and the circus people have been made several times recently, with that end in view.

If a deal is consummated, 'Jumbo' would replace the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus, which the Ringlings have withdrawn. Advantages of using the H-B equipment are being considered on both sides. Rose states that 'Jumbo' can be played under canvas intact, production including the revolving stages to be used as is.

Should 'Jumbo' really be circused out of town it would virtually be a two-ring show because of the production end which is additional to the ring in which the performance is enacted.

Under Ringling tie-up more animals would be used. Believed that 'Jumbo' could tour at least two seasons that way.

You Can't Win

Anything that is said on the radio, no matter how innocent or innocuous it may seem, is certain to offend somebody. This is Eddie Cantor's theory:

'For example,' says Cantor, 'if I say over the air, 'Gee, I like apple pie,' this might seem a safe statement. But out in California, some prune merchant may say, 'What a bum that Cantor is, I'm trying to make a living selling prunes an' he goes around praising apple pie.'

PIX FEARS AAA REPEAL MAY DENT B.O.'S

Unless some workable substitute plan for farm production is devised to take the place of the AAA, declared unconstitutional by the U. S. Supreme Court, film industry leaders think the passing of the Agricultural Adjustment Act will make deep inroads into box office grosses within the next 10 months. Trade organization experts in touch with key cities in the farm belt believe that only a new measure incorporating some form of federal payments, given to those cutting down planted acreage, will leave the farmer income undisturbed.

Importance of this situation for the picture industry is apparent when it is realized that farmer population represents 25-30% of nation's populace.

SCREEN BOMB MUFFLES REAL BOMB NEXT DOOR

Detroit, Jan. 14.

Explosion of the closing rocket in 'Bonton Parade' (Col) saved the lives of many patrons in the neighborhood Amsterdam theatre last week when a real bomb was set off in a neon sign store next door. Although the store was shattered no damage was done to the theatre, in which were packed more than 500 persons.

Prevention of a panic was attributed by police to fact blast occurred just as the rocket in pic was exploding. The cartoon ended an instant later with blare of music and noise, and all the patrons except three standing in rea (who got pass-out checks to go outside to see what happened) did not learn of explosion until they left the show.

MAYOR LA GUARDIA AS SONG 'LEGGER CHASER

Georgie Joy of Santly-Joy and Select Music Corp., unwittingly achieved for the music biz what the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers has been unable to do with the song-sheet peddlers after much expense, intricate legal proceedings, etc.

Joy wrote a letter Friday night (10) to New York's Mayor LaGuardia telling of his current hit, 'The Music Goes 'Round and Around,' which he claimed will be dissipated in value if the bootleg lyric-sheet salesmen peddle it at from 2c. to 10c., and that the authors (Riley-Farley-Hodgson) have a chance for some fancy coin, if the mayor would chase the bootleggers off the sidewalks of New York.

Joy didn't expect the quick action he got. The following morning (Saturday) he had had two phone calls from the mayor before he (Joy) got in around noon (song exploiters stay up late nights, per business custom), and that same afternoon the dailies heralded the mayor's cleanup campaign against the songsheet men.

AVIATION CAUTION

No Two Loew-Metro Execs Can Travel on Same Plane Together

As a precautionary measure, the Loew-Metro organization is reported to have decreed that no two top executives of the company shall ride in the same airplane together.

Similar arrangement is understood to exist between John and Barney Balaban, on railroads as well as planes.

To Raze Astor, Gaiety, Fulton, Bijou And Morosco on B'way for Deluxer

Another large picture house for the downtown New York (Times Square) section is contemplated as part of the development of a block front on Broadway from 45th to 46th streets which will mean the demolition of five old legit houses. Those that will be torn down to make way for the building of a new theatre and commercial stores are the Astor, Gaiety, Fulton, Bijou and Morosco. Quintet includes two facing Broadway (Astor and Gaiety), the Fulton on West 46th street and the Bijou-Morosco theatres on West 45th.

Plan for development of the large plot, 200 by 341 feet, follows a deal just negotiated for certain releases under mortgages by two different groups and an arrangement between these two calling for development of the plot. The City Investing Co. holds a $2,000,000 mortgage on part of the property, taking in the Astor, Bijou and Morosco houses. Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. holds a $2,000,000 mortgage on the rest of the block front site which takes in the Gaiety and Fulton.

The City Investing Co., following certain releases from Walter Reade in consideration of an unnamed amount, stated not to be big, has worked out development plans with the Metropolitan for destruction of present buildings and their replacement by a modern store type building and picture theatre.

Old Office Bldgs.

Five theatres other buildings involved, including Gaiety and Astor office buildings, are all very old. Present plans for site call for development similar to that which is well under way on big block front across the street (44th to 45th) where Loew's New York and Criterion were located.

Expectation is that it will take close to a year complete cancellations and other plans before razing of buildings can be started. Proposed new theatre and buildings should be up before the end of 1937.

Reade formerly had the Astor, Bijou and Morosco theatres, while the Gaiety and Fulton were part of the Erlanger-Dillingham string. At present the Astor is under a year's lease to Joe Plunkett as a first run picture house. Gaiety is playing burlesque, while the other three houses have been used for legit attractions on an irregular basis. An all-shorts policy was in the Bijou for a time last year.

Hollywood, Jan.

Hollywood picture employes and producers will pay $1,000,000 annually to the State of California under the new Unemployment Insurance Fund law. This figure was derived from a report of the U. S. Department of Commerce stating that studios have a weekly payroll of $1,384,000.

Employes are nicked for 45/100% of their earnings, with studios remitting $1 for each $100 paid workers.

Lupe Velez Affair Newest French Nat'l Headache

Paris, Jan. 5.

The Lupe Velez Affair—just like the Dreyfus Case and the Stravinsky Case—is turning into a regular national scandal. Fact that the Mexican star came over here to make a film for a gent who didn't have the coin is being aired as an indication of rottenness introduced into the French film biz by the foreign element, of which Miss Velez's would-be producer is one. Certain newspapers are even calling for his expulsion from France.

Meanwhile Miss Velez, after a holiday in Monte Carlo, sailed quietly back to America after, it is understood, Harry Foster agent of the deal, made good her salary.

French newspaperman who acted as press agent for the proposed Velez picture is being used as a scapegoat by some of his fellow-writers, who want him tried before the press association for having let them print stories about a picture which, they say, he must have known would never be made.

Affair is being taken as an additional indication that the French film industry needs a housecleaning.

Mayer Louis Marcus Of Salt Lake City Back as Pvt. Citizen

Salt Lake City, Jan. 14.

After four years of being Hizzoner, Louis Marcus became a private citizen. Defeated for reelection, Marcus has repeatedly, in the last several months, announced that he "is through forever with politics." Making the rounds several days before his term ended was a rumor to the effect that Marcus may be a candidate for governor at the next election in November. He won't comment on that.

Marcus, prior to his election as mayor, was one of the largest theatre operators in the inter-mountain country. At one time he controlled all the Marcus-Publix houses in Utah and Idaho. He sold out his interests to Publix-Salt Lake Theatres, Inc., present owners and operators. Harry David, general manager of the present company, served in a similar post when Marcus owned the chain.

Marcus plans to devote his time looking after his real estate here and on the Coast. His only connection with amusements is that he owns the Capitol, largest house of the Publix-Salt Lake Theater, Inc., group Marcus' only son, Howard, 18, is learning the biz under David.

Marcus is the first Jewish mayor in Salt Lake, home of the L. D. S. (Mormon) religion, where more than 60% of the population is of the L. D. S. faith.

SCRIB GROUPS WILL ADJUST DUES SETUP

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Conferences during past week between Marc Connolly, president of Authors League of America; Sidney Howard, president of the Dramatists' Guild, and Ernest Pascal, head of Screen Writers Guild, were for purpose of readjusting dues setup for those writers who covered the three fields so that one scale could be worked out for benefit of those members.

Luise Silloox, secretary of Authors league, came on from New York for the meeting.

Present conditions require that a writer who works as novelist, dramatist and screen writer to be member of each of the three organizations, with annual dues running as high as $400.

Heads of the three groups are trying to devise equitable scale, and recommendations will be submitted to executive boards of the organizations for approval within the next two months.

Walgreen Angeling Chi Reel of Markham Reading His 'Lincoln' Ode

Chicago, Jan. 14.

One-reeler on the life of Abraham Lincoln is to be produced here at the old Essanay Studios by the Wilding Pictures Co., bankrolled by Charles R. Walgreen, chain drug-store magnate. Walgreen states he is backing the flicker primarily for his friend, Edwin Markham, the poet, so that his 'Lincoln, the Man of the People' ode may be preserved in celluloid voice for the future.

One-reeler will contain the reading of the poem by Markham, and the elocution will be accompanied by scenes for 'Lincoln memorabilia,' such as shots of the famous Lincoln statues. Also scenes will be clipped from many Lincoln films. Particularly Markham has selected a clip from 'Man of Aran' for some sea and mountain shots.

Cullen Landis is slated to do the directorial job with Paul Strayer on the continuity layout.

Besides preserving Markham's dramatic elocution of the poem the film is figured to provide a trust fund for the 84-year-old poet from the rentals of the single-reeler. Distribution set up now being arranged by John Kneebone of the Wilding office. Picture is scheduled for release on Lincoln's Birthday, Feb. 12.

Multiplicity of collaborators divided best screen play awards, announced by Screen Writers Guild, with Talbot Jennings, Jules Furthman and Carey Wilson receiving tops for 'Mutiny.' NO DECISION ON ANDRE SENNWALD'S SUCCESSOR

No decision had been made up to ate yesterday afternoon as to Andre Sennwald's successor as motion picture critic of the New York Times. Possibility that Frank S. Nugent, second-stringer, will be upped, in the usual Times fashion, is balanced by the thought of bringing Douglas Churchill, Times' Hollywood rep, in to take over. Also some mention of bringing in a name outsider.

Sennwald died suddenly, aged 28, Sunday morning (12), with police theory being that he committed suicide. He had been the Times critic for a bit under two years, having moved up from second string when Mordaunt Hall left the paper. Nugent is in temporary charge.

Paper's hesitancy in appointing a new critic is partially due to office despondency as a result of two important staff deaths. Frank Leslie Baker, paper's society editor for many years, died Jan. 13, one day after Sennwald.

COAST PASSES UP SHORTS

U. S. May Penalize Film Companies Failing to File Salary Details

Washington, Jan. 14.

Several film corporations are in danger of severe penalties for failure to submit detailed salary statistics for Congressional once-over, Federal officials hinted today.

With only Paramount submitting a precise account, Government execs were pondering the question of what to do about several major producers, as well as other film companies, which did not come through with itemized lists of individuals receiving $15,000 or more during 1934. Hints were given by the Treasury that a wholesale round-up impends, with responsible corporation officials being charged with violation of revenue laws.

Salary survey was made in response to a Congressional mandate, which directed the Treasury to provide a complete account of every person paid more than $15,000. Data was wanted for consideration in connection with possible legislation to limit salaries, bonuses, and commissions.

The bulky Treasury report contained no data of any kind concerning Fox Film, Loew's, Columbia, or Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer payrolls, while RKO Radio submitted only limited data. Paramount gave an accounting for 163 employees in the production end, as well as the compensation of employees of various subsidiaries and affiliates, being the only film outfit to make a comprehensive report. Several smaller corporations were missing entirely.

An excuse for the incompleteness of the report was suggested by Treasury officials wrestling with the problem of rounding up the laggards. Government execs remarked that in some cases the omissions might be due to the fact that fiscal years used by certain corporations did not coincide with the calendar year, but even so, it was hinted, there is no reason why, with several months to compile the necessary data, these companies should have remained entirely silent.

EAST COMPETISH MUCH-TOO TOUGH

Briefie Talent Plentiful in N. Y. to Hold Down Budget—Only Three in H'wood Making Midgies—Roach Dropping Out

DUALS' OPPOSISH

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Production of two-reel comedies is down to its lowest ebb here with most of the makers of short subjects preferring New York production where talent is more plentiful. Charles Christie, (Educational) currently visiting Hollywood, claims that his company can produce better and cheaper variety two-reelers in New York where availability of vaude, cafe and specialty acts is more or less unlimited. These players, essential for this type of film, are at a premium in Hollywood.

Major studios producing two-reel comedies here are Radio, Columbia and Warners. In the case of the latter, studio is working out its Technicolor contract in the production of two and three-reel novelties, using contract names. For out and out variety comedies, company produces them in its Brooklyn studio.

Radio makes the Edgar Kennedy two-reelers and a series of novelty comedies here. Columbia has several name comedians, including Harry Langdon, Leon Errol and the Three Stooges (Howard, Fine and Howard). Independents do nothing along this line. Universal tried to make a series of variety shorts but found after making three that they could not get the talent. With but few name bands on the Coast, problem of a musical combo for each picture is a big headache.

Not so in New York. Warners has no trouble getting a band for each of its variety shorts. Same for Educational. Latter company has such names as Ernest Truex, Joe Cook, Bert Lahr, Buster West, Tom Patricola, Tom Howard and other legit and vaude names who can be had for a day or two without interfering with any stage engagements. On the Coast it's impossible to get this name value and established two-reel comics have become almost extinct.

Hal Roach, who has been the chief holder-upper of two reel entertainment for years, is gradually switching to feature production, and may within a year discard shorts entirely in favor of making 'B' features for Metro. Roach, however, does not go off his lot for players, having his established contract list of two-reel names.

Companies still producing short entertainment claim that dual features have almost killed their business and turning out two reel comedies is chiefly rewarded by lots of grief. On the Coast here they say that eastern opposition is tough, for few, if any, of the New York short producers go over $15,000 per picture. On the Coast, major studios can't make them for much less than $20,000 and yearly there are a number in which the budget runs as high as $50,000. Lacking much selling attraction, the difference between the short and long production budgets means little at the boxoffice.

NEW BRISSON DEAL AT PAR

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Francis A. Mangan is reported bringing Laurel and Hardy to Paris for personal appearances at Jacques Haik's Olympia. Haik, operator of the house, also would like to get Marlene Dietrich for a personal.

Mangan, Haik's stager, was lately reported leaving the house due to an economy yen on Haik's part but that seems now to be off. Mangan has also been huddling with Clifford C. Fischer here of late leading to reports that he will be connected with Fischer's local nitery-restaurant, Les Ambassadeurs, when it reopens in the spring.

Richman's Filmusical Goes 'Round and Round'

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Columbia is retitling the Harry Richman filmusical, 'Rolling Along,' to 'Music Goes Round and Round,' and is adding a sequence to include the song hit's authors, 'Red' Hodgson, Mike Riley and Eddie Farley and rest of the act current at the New York Paramount.

Riley and Farley plane west after the N. Y. engagement, with Hodgson coming here from Chicago.

'Sophie Lang' Encore

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Paramount will do 'Return of Sophie Lang' as sequel to 'Notorious Sophie Lang,' both stories by Frederick Irving Anderson, with Patterson McNutt preparing script on former.

Gertrude Michael will be starred.

Slight Delay

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Another month will be required to complete 'The Great Ziegfeld' at Metro. Picture had been skedded for washup this week.

Drawback is staging of 'A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody.' First cut, minus the number, is 15,000 feet.

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Paramount has until Jan. 29 to exercise its option on Mae West. Studio officials and Miss West have held numerous conferences on the renewal, with John E. Otterson participating in the recent ones. The studio insists that if the option is taken up Miss West does not interefere or have a say in the casting of her future pictures. She claims that since she provides the script she knows best who can play the parts.

Studio insists, however, that it will not tolerate any interference from her after production starts, and that the producer on the picture and the front office will have the last say. In the meantime, it's understood RKO is ready to grab her on a terimer.

Two important studio problems were tossed into the lap of the Paramount prexy on his arrival at the studio for a three-week stay. One is a group headache, that of production for the immediate future, in addition to the Mae West matter.

Par execs were all but ready to call it quits with La West after 'Klondike Annie' but decided to mull the matter with Otterson. Latest reports are that 'Annie' is one of the star's best.

With this in mind it's likely that Miss West will make at least one more for Paramount. Studio advanced her around $100,000 in excess of her salary for 'Klondike' and this amount has been charged against her next picture. Which also may have something to do with the executive decision in the matter of whether or not there is another West picture for the Paramount trademark.

Production matters will be gone over with Ernst Lubitsch and Henry Herzbrun. Likely that Otterson may take a flier to St. Louis for the Government trial. If he makes the trip he will return here before proceeding east.

St. L. Civil Action in 2d Week Of Trial; Court States Gov't So Far Hasn't Proved Any Conspiracy

St. Louis, Jan. 14.

Second week of the civil (equity) suit by the Government against Warner Bros., Paramount and RKO on alleged conspiracy and anti-trust charges follows much along the lines of the first (criminal) trial which resulted in a jury verdict for the defendant companies and their officers. Judge Molyneaux, sitting in the equity trial, seems intent on disposing of the matter with despatch, refusing to mince words in time—wasteful legal niceties and arguments. He denied a Saturday adjournment to former U. S. Senator Jim Reed, of defense counsel, for the same reason.

The proceedings are going a more or less uneventful course save for occasional badinage among respective counsel, which highlighted the previous trial, and a disposition by the Court to give the edge to the defense.

At one point (Monday's session) Judge Molyneaux observed that the Government has yet not proved a conspiracy in restraint of trade on allegations that film product had been refused the Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres.

Spyros P. Skouras, describing himself as v.-p. and gen. mgr. of National Theatre Corp., owning 357 theatres west of Mississippi, and president of Skouras Theatre Co., operating 50 houses in metropolitan New York district, was the first witness today (14). Skouras, who started his theatrical career in 1914 here, testified that in May, 1934, he went to New York to see Harry M. Warner. Skouras testified on Warners' intentions concerning the bonds, to the face value of $350,000.

In describing a meeting with Herman Starr in Chicago, September, 1934, Skouras said Starr, a WB v.p., started an argument when he discovered that Skouras had not obtained the theatres in reorganization plans, and that Allen Snyder, called a 'straw man' for Harry Koplar, was the successful bidder for the theatres. Skouras said he had a third interest in the properties, and, as guarantor of bonds, felt very badly over deal, as he did not want to go through bankruptcy. He said Starr kidded him, etc. Skouras testified Starr declared everybody but WB had been taken care of in St. Louis; that a nasty fight was going to develop, and WB intended to protect itself in St. Louis. Meeting, which lasted about 25 minutes, was interrupted by Grad Sears, WB sales exec, who brought several men who had an engagement to take Starr and Sears to dinner.

Cross-examination of Skouras occupied rest of the day.

Judge Molyneaux expressed opinion several times Monday (13), as the trial swung into its second week, that the government has not yet proved a conspiracy in restraint of trade against defendant corporations. These assertions were made when court ruled on objections of Par and RKO counsel to testimony of several witnesses relative to statements alleged to have been made by Herman Starr, v.p. of WB.

JOHN GILBERT'S WILL

Miss Bruce Receives Bulk—Strickling and Hylands Remembered

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

John Gilbert's will, filed for probate yesterday (Monday), reveals an estate of around $250,000, bulk going to his divorced (fourth) wife, Virginia Bruce, and their two-year-old daughter. A bequest of $10,000 was made to the daughter by the marriage to Leatrice Joy, the second Mrs. Gilbert.

Among the group of beneficiaries for $5,000 each is Howard Strickling, Metro studio publicity head. Gratuities from $1,000 to $2,500 were left to household help.

A trust fund of $25,000 was created for the daughter of Dick Hyland and Adela Rogers St. John (Mrs. Hyland), latter both writers. Six life annuities of $26,000 each were ordered purchased to assure Miss Bruce a life income.

Will was drawn up while he was still married to Miss Bruce.

LLOYD'S FATHER WINS $101,964 TAX SQUABBLE

Washington, Jan. 14.

J. Darsie Lloyd, father of Harold Lloyd, film comedian, on Monday (13) won a $101,964 tax squabble with the Internal Revenue Bureau when the Board of Tax Appeals held he was not deficient in his income tax for 1930.

Tiff revolved around the valuation and accounting methods which should have been followed in determining the profit on transfer of 2,499 shares of stock in Harold Lloyd Corp. Government held that the comedian's father had netted $813,824, while Lloyd countered that he received nothing of value in exchange for the stock except a promise by his son to support him for life.

The transaction did not bring the elder Lloyd any consideration with 'fair market value,' the Board decided, noting that the payments should be taxed each year as income rather than lumped and included in one year's income.

The annuity was valued by the Government at $850,434, based on life expectancy tables minus the original worth of the stock, but the Board ruled that a new element entered the computation because of uncertainty about the comedian's ability to pay the annual sums. Harold agreed to pay his father $100,000 per year, with a proviso that in case of his death the estate would pay $50,000 annually.

No Backout on U Buy, States Laemmle; Rogers-Cowdin Want Modifications

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Eastern report that Charles R. Rogers and J. Cheever Cowdin (Standard Capital Corp.) were not going to take advantage of their option to buy Universal Feb. 1 was discredited by Carl Laemmle Friday (10). Deal is in status quo, he said, and that he had had not received any word from the east for several days. Rogers and his son, John, are not expected back from New York until Feb. 1.

It was reported here that the Cowdin-Rogers group recently attempted to get the deal modified. Instead of giving Laemmle $1,500,000 in cash on the lift and the balance in a period of years, they attempted to have Laemmle accept a part of the coin in stock, which the U prez balked. Since then, it is understood, the R-C group has been hunting coin for the take-over, with two banking houses being approached to handle a new stock underwriting of around $10,000,000.

Rogers got in from New York yesterday (Monday), and conferred with Laemmle today (Tuesday) regarding picking up the option on Universal. Rogers and associate want Laemmle, out of the $1,500,000 first installment for the purchase, to loan to Universal approximately $500,000 to carry through production on 'Sutter's Gold,' 'Showboat' and 'Love Before Breakfast.'

At the time the $750,000 loan was made by the Rogers group to Universal, it was to cover the entire cost of these productions, with this budget approved by Rogers. Since that time the budget has been exceeded and will run another $500,000. If the Rogers group's proposal that Laemmle loan this money is accomplished, Rogers will return to N. Y., as will also Laemmle, to close the deal.

Rogers on arrival here issued the statement: 'My return to Los Angeles at this time is to settle with Laemmle various details involved in taking up the option Standard Capital and I hold on Universal stock and to arrange for an uninterrupted and enlarged carrying on of the production operations of the company after the transfer of ownership. The necessary investigation of the world-wide affairs of the company is proceeding rapidly and will soon be completed. Meanwhile Mr. Cowdin and I have the financial arrangements for the purchase in hand.'

It is quite likely that when the option is lifted Adolph Ramish will be interested in the deal through further supplying some of the finances for the new company.

The Cowdin-Rogers option on Universal need not be exercised until Feb. 1, and there appears strong possibilities of it being exercised when due. There is some possibility that some modifications in the situation may be engineered which would be favorable to the prospective purchasers of Universal, but all this is a matter for negotiation.

The option situation appears to be not quite as difficult as some believe. The group holding the option has a certain amount of assured capital, and efforts by the option holders to interest possible other

THAYER'S THESPIS YEN

Swaps Quill for Grease Paint in L. A. Pic House Tab

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

The typewriter is silent at the home of Tiffany Thayer, for the novelist has forsaken scrivening for the time being to take another stab at acting.

Thayer will be starred in the condensed version of 'Whistling in the Dark,' which Fox-West Coast will use as the third of its tabloid stage plays at the Belmont theatre here.

Thayer, among the top coin writers, both for the printed page and the screen, has never lost his yen to troupe. As a kid he was part and parcel of a tab show that rarely made theatres, a canvas opera. Envious glances at every actor in Hollywood only fetched laughs at him when he would suggest that the blood of Thespis and not printer's ink was in the majority in his corpuscles.

He has his chance now and will try and show Hollywood that his ambition to see the back of a drop is not a juvenile yen.

Ray McCarey Still Ill

Roxy, Films' No. 1 Exhibitor, Pioneer In Cinema Standards, Dies at 53

By JOE BIGELOW

Samuel Lionel Rothafel (Roxy), the most proficient theatre ballyhoo-ist of his time, personally and for the theatre and entertainment projects he fostered, and acknowledged by many to be the most spectacular and extravagant showman in amusement annals, passed away quietly, in his sleep, Jan. 13 in his apartment at the Hotel Gotham, New York. Although he had been in ill health since 1932, his sudden passing was not expected by his family or intimates. He was 53.

Roxy, who started showing pictures in an improvised backroom of a saloon in Forest City, Pa., became the best known individual exhibitor in the world and the most lavish investor in stage entertainment and theatre niceties of all time. He set the fashion for the showing of motion pictures and created new styles in stage show backgrounds for the pictures. He moved on from one theatre to another, but the next one was always larger, and when he felt a need for more room but couldn't find a theatre, he'd build one.

Unlike the average dreamer, Roxy had the courage to tell others of his dreams, no matter how fantastic they might have seemed. But his forte was in selling his dreams to people who had the capital to make them come true. The Radio City theatre project, through which Roxy attracted the Rockefellers to show business, was called 'Roxy's dream' before it was completed. After it opened it was called 'Roxy's flop.' But this most magnificent theatre edifice in the world stands as a monument to Roxy's imagination, and always will.

Roxy was born at Stillwater, Minn., on July 9, 1882. His father was a shoemaker. The family name of Rothapfel was later simplified by Roxy, who dropped the 'p'. His family brought him to New York when he was 12, and, after holding numerous odd jobs, including one in a 14th street department store at $2 a week, he joined the United States Marine Corps. In seven years of service he saw action in Santo Domingo and in China during the Boxer rebellion. Upon quitting the marines he returned to other jobs, among them playing semi-pro baseball, and as a ball player he picked his nickname—Roxy—later to become better known to the world at large than his family name.

It was while tending bar in the Forest City saloon of his future father-in-law that Roxy turned exhib. He borrowed some chairs from the next-door undertaker, hung up a sheet, rented some film and charged a nickel admission. That sold Roxy on show business, and he went to work for Herman Fehr at a theatre in Milwaukee. From there he went to the Lyric, Minneapolis, thence to New York as manager of the Regent, a picture house at 116th street and Seventh avenue.

His Progress from 116th St.

Roxy's accomplishments at the small Regent got him considerable attention within the trade, and when the late Moe Mark opened the Strand, then the largest picture house in the world, Mark brought Roxy to Broadway to handle it for him. The Paramount company then attracted Roxy to the Rialto, and when Par later built the Rivoli, Roxy transferred to the new house. The Capitol was his next stop, and it was there that Roxy became a national figure, outside the show business as well as in it.

At the Capitol, Roxy had developed a recital group of musicians and singers and called it 'Roxy's Gang.' Among the first, if not the first, showmen to realize the exploitation possibilities of radio, Roxy put his 'Gang' on the air direct from the theatre. At first it was a local broadcast, but when a network was established 'Roxy's Gang' went network and developed into one of the earliest national radio names.

At the Capitol Roxy's authority extended only to the curtain line, with Major Bowes in charge of the front of the house. When friction developed Roxy left the Capitol and went to the Coast on a theatre deal, but returned to the Capitol in a short while. His broadcasts continued to add to his reputation, with Roxy perhaps being the originator of the homey philosophy style of chatter that Bowes now affects on the air, and finally led to realiza-

'VERTICAL' SHOW BIZ?

Expect Final RKO Reorg by June 1, Spitz Back East to Speed It Up

Chances are that final reorganization of RKO will be complete by June 1. The present outlook further is that a plan of reorganization may be presented for the Federal Court's approval in N. Y. early in February.

The new owners of RKO, Lehman Corp. and Atlas Corp., may have considered exercising their option on the balance of the RCA's holdings in RKO, prior to reorganization, but it is fairly certain now that no such action will take place in this manner. The option runs for around a couple of years. RCA's remaining holdings in RKO are under option for $6,000,000 to the new Lehman-Atlas interests.

There has been considerable work done on reorganization of the company's financial setup since the Lehman-Atlas people stepped into the picture.

No definitive reorganization arrangements are to be revealed, however, seemingly until after the courts have had opportunity to go over the disputed allowance of a claim for $9,000,000 to the Rockefeller interests against RKO. This claim arises from leases on the two Radio City theatres in Rockefeller Center.

There is to be a hearing on this matter in Federal Court Jan. 29 according to advices.

Hearing on $2,618,198 in other claims against RKO was held before Federal Judge Bondy on Monday (13). He has taken the matter under consideration. Included among the claims is one by the late S. L. Rothafel (Roxy) for $179,000.

Belief is that RKO reorganization will be speeded now that Leo Spitz, president, has returned from the Coast. There may also be certain theatre properties within RKO's jurisdiction, outside of Keith-Albee-Orpheum, which will need reorganization and which likewise will consume much of Spitz's attention in the ensuing weeks, but KAO is a separate entity and not subject to RKO reorganization in any way.

No Effect on KAO

The RKO reorganization has no effect on the Keith-Albee-Orpheum setup, no more than does the Irving Trust as RKO trustee, have any say-so in KAO. KAO is operated as a separate entity and is not subject to RKO's 77B situation.

Ownership of KAO lies between RKO, on the one hand, and the M. J. Meehan interests on the other. A minority amount of KAO pre-

London, Jan. 14.

Understood that Murray Silverstone will not become the United Artists' president in New York after all, because company is unable to replace him locally. Silverstone is head of UA activities here.

United Artists' recent activities here have continued to be ambitious, including a tieup with the Oscar Deutsch circuit, whereby UA becomes a stockholder in the theatre chain in consideration for supplying pictures. According to the deal, UA also has the power to tell Deutsch where to build more theatres in the future, if it wants to.

Silverstone is also working on a deal with Max Schach similar to the UA-Korda arrangement. Schach is head of Capitol Films, most important of the more recent new companies for production formed here. When, and if going through, Schach's UA deal will not alter his five year contract with C. M. Woolfe, which calls for three pictures annually.

MEANS ONE UNION FOR ALL BRANCHES

IATSE Convention in Florida, Starting Today (Wednesday), to Take Up Industrialization from Top to Bottom

1-WEEK CONFAB

Plans for the ultimate complete unionization of at least the picture industry in all its branches, and maybe all show business, by the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees will be discussed, it is reported, at the semi-annual meeting of the I. A. executive board in Miami this week and next. The board goes into its midwinter session today (Wed.). It will probably last a week.

Steps which the IA is expected to take in a unionization drive, for much greater power than the union has ever had, would not only embrace the entire picture industry but other fields of amusements in which IA members work. This includes all types of places where theatrical or film performances are given, from local city auditoriums up to the Metropolitan Opera House and may also take in at a later date everything in the way of amusements where union jurisdiction could apply such as circuses, fairs, etc. Frequently in the past the IA has had fairs and even local high schools on its 'unfair' list because its members were not employed to handle certain functions.

Browne's Hopes

George E. Browne, president of the IA, is said to be intent on so-called 'vertical unionization' or, in other words, unionization from top to bottom. This means industrialization in line with a strong movement in this direction in American labor led by John Lewis, head of the miners' union. Browne has already received from the executive council of the American Federation of Labor full and complete jurisdiction of theatres from wall to wall, cellar to ceiling. This gives the IA preliminary control of the situation, making it necessary for any branch of unionization in theatres to get its charter from the IA.

It is estimated that the membership of the IA would jump from 30,000 to 60,000 or over on complete unionization of theatres alone to take in ushers, ticket takers, cashiers, porters, stationary engineers, cleaners, repair men and others. Any move toward full unionization in the picture industry would also mean IA cards in studios for similar help now not under any union jurisdiction.

IBEW on Coast

At present the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers which has had a toe into the picture industry for several years is much more powerful in the AFL than the IA. Although its strength in pictures has been seriously decimated by IA's recent victory over the studios, the IBEW nevertheless has a total of 900 votes in the AFL, while the IA has only 230. Moreover, the IBEW is represented on the AFL executive council while the IA isn't. The situation might be reversed or at least balanced, depending on what success any industrialization move by the IA achieved.

Question of the soundmen in the Coast studios and whether they are to remain with IBEW, or move over to the IA for 100% control of studios by latter, is expected to be decided shortly. An arbitrator will probably be appointed by Feb. 1 to hear both sides (IBEW and IA). Arbiter selected, after listening to arguments, will decide the matter himself.

Browne flew on to Miami for today's opening of the IA midwinter conclave from Chicago after stopping off there en route from the Coast.

Browne (IATSE Prez) Tells First Cameramen to Shift for Selves

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

George Browne, international president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, held a series of conferences last week with producer representatives to clarify interpretation of first cameramen and their duties.

In reaching agreement with major companies in New York last month, which returned IATSE studio locals to the basic studio agreement, Browne specifically waived all claim and jurisdiction to first cameramen in California, agreeing to extend fullest co-operation to those men if and when they traveled on locations to any part of the U. S. and Canada in IA territory.

IATSE president, in session last week with executive board of International Photographers, local 659, told the cameramen's leaders that the first cameramen would have to seek other organizations as bargaining agency for the group, as the local could not give them any protection or standing under terms of the basic studio agreement.

He informed the union board that no further first men were to be reinstated in the local, but those who had continued as members or who had secured reinstatement prior to Jan. 2 could remain in, as the IATSE could not summarily toss them off the rolls.

This explanation by Browne brought forth request by first men in the union, for clarification of duties of their group. Argument was advanced that operative firsts should be in the union organization and have benefit of its protection, as they handle cameras and are not entirely classed as directors of photography. Most of the operative firsts are employed in the independent field, and majority in the major plants are in the process and trick departments.

Result was group of meetings between Browne and studio representatives. As waiver of firsts by IATSE is written into the basic studio agreement, matter will likely remain status quo until the return of Browne from the Miami sessions this week, at which time it is expected that Nicholas M. Schenck, chairman of major companies labor committee, will be on the Coast.

No Deal

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Fred Meyer and Gregory La Cava showed up at Universal last Friday (10) with their right hands in slings. They were to sign a contract but act was postponed.

Screen Actors Seek Tie with L.A. Labor Body

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Screen Actors' Guild has taken steps to join L. A. Central Labor council. This is taken as an indication that actors are tightening lines in preparation of demands to producers.

Guild has American Federation of Labor affiliation and privilege of membership in the Labor Council by its tieup with Actors' Equity.

Delegates named by Guild as labor reps include Ken Thomson, Richard Tucker, Pat Somerset and Aubrey Blair.

San Francisco, Jan. 14.

Following re-entry of IATSE into major Hollywood studios and laboratories, San Francisco lensmen, never affected by ASC's regime in the south, predict complete unionization of all 35 mm. factories here.

With about 16 active members of the camera local and five sound technicians members, organization of the dark-room boys is imminent. Seven commercial flicker producers here have laboratories producing industrials and advertising trailers and three other firms do straight commercial shooting.

TOO MANY MUSICALS, 'RHYTHM' RILES TAUROG

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Norman Taurog is balking on the assignment to direct 'Rhythm on the Range' at Paramount. Other than being out of sympathy with the story for Bing Crosby, Taurog doesn't want to direct a musical.

Director has done two musicals in succession, 'Big Broadcast' and 'Strike Me Pink' and feels that he should do a non-tuner for a change.

Amusement Issues Continue Gains To Reach Highest Point in 3 Yrs.

By MIKE WEAR

After considerable irregularity in early trading, firmness in utilities, packing and rail shares aided market yesterday (Tues.). Some amusements joined in feebie rally, but many showed fractional declines. Curb exchange supplied best movers for picture issues, with Columbia Pix pushing up 3 points to 43½ and Universal Pictures common hitting 6, for an advance of 1 point. Technicolor, also on Curb, continued strong, pushing ahead to 21½ for 50c gain. Trans-Lux also was firm, reaching 4, only fractionally away from best 1935-6 price.

Universal pfd., Pathe and American Seating did best on big board. Pathe hit 8¼, only fraction from year's best quotation, while Am. Seat advanced 50c. Universal went up 1¼ to 60¼. Loew's common sold off more than a point in reflection of dip in earnings for quarter ending Nov. 21. Report indicated $1.08 on common, against $1.23 in the 1935 quarter. Columbia Broadcasting issue hovered between 47 and 49, latter being around best price for 1935-6. B. F. Keith bonds registered a new high at 96¾, while Warner Bros. 6s went to 88⅛, only a point from peak.

Whole market turned actively

That 2,000-Ft. Reel Again

The industry's committee handling the new 2,000-foot reel situation for production-distribution companies meets next Friday (17) at Hays office to discuss latest developments. J. S. MacLeod, of Met, called the confab.

Discussion of plans being made by exchange systems of major distribs to alter vault racks and inspection of new 2,000-foot reel samples, and samples of cases, will occupy most of time. It's entirely likely that the committee will agree on specific qualifications or style of bigger spool for whole industry, since this would mean saving for all distributors.

Inside Stuff—Pictures

Whys and wherefores of breaks in Hollywood are many, such as the case of a former chorus boy who found sledding tough in filmdom. When wended his way to Broadway and a nitery job, a Coast producer caught him on N. Y. visit, and arranged to pay his fare back to Hollywood for a test. That was weeks ago. Since the ex-chorus boy's arrival he has been under the supervision of the producer's top dance director, ironing out the roughage so that he'll be tops when going before the test photogs.

It seems certain that Harry M. Warner, in his own behalf, will not consider taking any position in the projected purchase of control of Universal Pictures. There has been talk which concerned Warner personally as a prospective principal in the Cowdin-Rogers group. The Warner Bros. company was not concerned in any such talks. Harry Warner, as a personal matter, seemingly was asked to consider the situation but it looks cold now.

Similarity of 'Invisible Ray' and 'Dracula's Daughter,' at Universal, was the reason studio postponed production on the latter. No associate producer would take 'Daughter' after viewing 'Ray.' Carl Laemmle, Jr., recently passed 'Daughter' over to Eph Asher.

Bela Lugosi has been dropped at U because of the delay on 'Daughter.' But studio has asked for option on his services starting when it is decided to make the flicker.

Italian forces operating against Haile Selassie are paying $10 for every Ethiopian who deserts and joins Italy's military forces, according to official word received by newsreel officials here. Money is paid in newly coined 'thalers,' rated about the equivalent of the American silver dollar. One newsreel this week showed money actually being paid, although details and significance was skimmed over lightly in accompanying dialog.

Plan to have Los Angeles court set time limit for collection on money giveaways is being pushed by M. A. Kurstin, operator of the Boulevard theatre. Kurstin is threatened with suit by a woman patron who showed up 20 minutes after expiration of three minute limit.

Operator says he'll allow complaint to go to courts to establish limit, in order to stave off any similar actions.

Newsreels of the Hauptmann trial at Flemington, N. J., were supplied Governor Hoffman of New Jersey promptly and without cost when the chief executive requested them in connection with convicted defendant's appearance before the N. J. board of pardons. Newsreel executives deny that some 20,000 feet of film cost the state of New Jersey any fee or even a rental.

When Martin Mooney, newspaper reporter, begins serving his 30-day sentence in the east on contempt of court charges, his scenarist salary at Warners' Coast studio will go on uninterrupted. He also will take a typewriter into the hoosegow to do a prison story for the studio.

Mooney recently completed a parole yarn which Warners is doing under the title of 'Back Door.'

Jack McGowan's deal at Metro has a peculiar twist. He's now on loan to that studio, has been there six months and has worked on four screen plays.

McGowan was brought west by Metro to work on 'Broadway Melody.' Following that job he was dropped and picked up by Fox. Immediately thereafter he was loaned back to Metro.

While the newsreels left the Rose Bowl game at Pasadena out in the cold, they gave the Orange Bowl grid battle and parade at Miami full coverage. Newsreelers' action on the Rose Bowl battle was played up with headlines by Florida papers.

Rose Bowl deal gave Reliable Pictures only pictures of game and limited newsreels to 100 feet, so they passed it up entirely.

Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences has a ruling which prohibits a producer from screen crediting himself with the writing of a screen play. When 'Anything Goes' (Par) was previewed no story credits appeared. Screen adaptation was written by Benjamin Glazer, who also produced it.

Well known film star, now playing secondary part in Shakespearean play, for which he was once said to be without an equal, is finding it hard to memorize a dozen words of dialog. Three coaches are with him from time he enters studio until he leaves, but he continually blows his wordage.

During the three years Paramount owned 'The Case of Mrs. Ames,' studio spent around $100,000 on the story. Then Walter Wanger got hold of it, and in eight weeks Gene Towne and Graham Baker had a working script. Yarn now set for early production with many of the directors, who passed it up at Par, willing to make it.

Reorganization committee for General Theatres Equipment, which is headed by Arthur W. Loasby, has extended the time for making deposits under the reorganization plan of Aug. 31 to Feb. 1. Originally such deposits were supposed to have been in this month, but the extension allows about two weeks' additional time.

Paramount is waiting until it can determine b.o. value of 'Collegiate' before picking up option on Joe Penner. Original deal was for two pictures at $100,000 each. Option stipulates an increase.

RKO Tries Lil' Theatre Piece to Break Dual Bill Monotony in White Plains

White Plains, Jan. 14.

Management of the RKO house (3,000 seater) stunted with a dramatic amateur twist at its Friday night show (10), presenting the Wayside Players of Scarsdale in the break between its double-feature film policy. It was the first of a series of such week-end stage presentations, and it may spread. Figured that there are at least 25 little theatre groups flourishing in Westchester district, each giving around six offerings a year, making a total of 150 shows either in parish halls or on community platforms. Theatre wants to bring them on regularly if possible. The idea was conceived by the house manager, Herb Jennings.

Idea tied in to sustain interest is to present some nameless play, or at least a part of one, pass out blanks to patrons entering, and then let them knit their brows for an appropriate label. Prize is a theatre pass for a period of weeks.

Particular Westchester patronage is unique to a certain degree, in that residents are suburbanites, but have daily access to New York, and mostly are above par when it comes to living in comfort. Little theatre movements get much attention through this area, and Friday night's tryout was the first time for a home-made legit offering to rate a more professional frame. Players are assured of a wider turn-out and extra showmanly attention.

First one was a thriller in modern dress. Coupled with 'Show Them No Mercy' (20th-Fox) and 'Navy Wife' (Fox), it made the entire program slightly tinged with blood. However, as show progressed (it ran nearly 50 minutes), house laughed over the murders, sleep-walkers and fitful emoters. Setting on stage was to represent a dinner party in a deserted theatre, so the house itself lent an authentic aura. A trailer was run off first, with cast announced including close-ups and a short synopsis of coming fare. It seemed too long, and if continued as a weekly novelty, should be kept well within the 30 or 40 minute limit.

Customers hissed and cheered at will, as the events piled up on each other. Breathing spell should mean something to those sitting through a dual bill.

Show was repeated on Saturday with two performances. Local papers tied-in on the spread, although the local radio outlet, WFAS, which is housed in the Roger Smith hostelry nearby, was not included in the exploitation campaign. Radio spots seems a natural part of such a program.

Those taking part included Thomas Scofield, Todd Fairbairn, Douglas Vincent, Beatrice Zehder, Mary Lawrence, Patricia Ryan, Blanche Lamb and Hazel Schwarz. Business good at the Friday opener.

Jennings has been an exploitation and theatre man with Keith's, RKO and Loew for years. His lil' theatre idea for commercial purposes stacks up as a refreshing interlude for such spots as can play it, and beyond that it looks like an excellent ballyhoo stunt for the theatre.

N. Y. RIVOLI OWNERS ASK SALE AT $1,500,000

Future of the Rivoli, New York, important first run house for many years and home of the United Artists product for a long time now, is somewhat in doubt beyond expiration of the lease held on the theatre by U.A. Theatre Circuit, Inc. Pending any deal for renewal of the lease by the UA circuit from November, 1937, when it expires, the Barney Estate, owners of the property, are offering it for sale.

Whether or not the action of the Barney Estate in placing the theatre on the market for sale means that the UA Circuit will not renew its present lease, isn't known this far in advance, sources indicating that renewal by UA may be a question of terms. It is also possible that the UA circuit may be interested in gaining ownership control of the Riv.

Barney Estate is asking $1,500,000 for the property. In rent and taxes, the theatre is now costing UA around $87,000 a year but indicated in realty circles that by the time the present UA lease expires the taxes may be substantially increased.

Riv holds a United Artists franchise for this company's picture product through next season (1936-37) or up to near the date on which the UA circuit lease expires. UA as a distributing company and UA circuit are two different organizations, the distributing concern not having control of the circuit bearing its name. Joseph M. Schenck is the largest holder in the UA circuit. Schenck is now chairman of the board of 20th Century-Fox and the UA chain, in turn, has control now of the Fox-Metropolitan theatres.

COAST WATCHES NEW CINEMA IDEA

3-Act Original Play in Santa Monica Picture House to Oust Duals Policy—F-WC's Belmont, L. A., Trying Tabloid Version of 'Bad Man'

PAYROLL PROBLEM

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Two showmen's ventures were launched in this area last week which may have considerable bearing on picture house programs during the coming year in Southern California territory and may prove entertainment sponge to absorb much idle theatre talent.

Wilshire theatre in Santa Monica coupled a three-act play, 'Give Till It Hurts,' with a single picture in effort to horn out one of the usual double feature bills. Play was set in for four days as tryout and if it clicks will be sent out on road for similar legit-picture combo for other neighborhood houses. Players share in percentage of take. Wilshire theatre, management Robert E. Weils, will repeat with weekly legit offering, full length play, if idea clicks. Initial play, farce comedy by Jack Preston, was fairly well received, running a little over two hours. Question is whether setup can bring in sufficient money to provide cakes for actors. 'Give Till It Hurts' had 18 in cast. House seats 1,300.

Other venture is a Fox-West Coast experiment at the Belmont, Los Angeles, where condensed version of plays will be added to double bills to comprise program about 15 minutes longer than current shows, and with prices boosted from former 35c. to 75c. top for reserved seats, over 40c. for general admish, and 55c. loges.

First compressed play, to run a week, is 'The Bad Man,' featuring Roy D'Arcy, Otis Harlan, Barry Norton and Viva Tattersall. Dim-outs will take place of curtains, play running around 50 minutes. Shorts will be dropped. Adaptation of plays will be in motion picture technique, under supervision of Harry Garson, manager of the theatre and former silents producer. In this venture also, money for players is the deciding issue. Start last Saturday showed promise that combination may be continued.

Exhibs are closely watching results.

6 Mos. After NRA's Demise, the Pic Biz Looks Back on Anti-Trust And Uniform Contract Provisos

With the code enforcement portion of the NRA now dead for about six months, picture industry's inventory of itself finds that the absence of the Blue Eagle has influenced two principal phases of its (industry) existence. One has to do with uniform contracts and other is concerned with anti-trust laws. The passing of the blue bird is regarded as affecting these two sections the most—one influencing the producing-distributing companies, and the other the exhibitors.

Under the NRA regime, distributors were beginning to feel the pressure of exhibitor demand for a uniform contract. Allied was about to bring the subject before the Code Authority in New York for perusal because leaders of that organization felt that such body was the proper one to give the matter consideration.

Urge for some such uniform agreement on pictures was predicated to a large extent on fact that none had been in existence for a numbers of years. MPTOA also was ready to present its views in behalf of independent exhibs on contracts as the NRA folded. Had the indigo bird survived a bit longer, belief held by some legal lights in the industry is that all major distributors would have had some sort of a uniform contract handed them by the Code Authority.

Oddly enough, though the independents were greatly outnumbered by major companies in any C. A. confab, they still were able to sit in on the parleys and to have a real voice in proceedings. Set-up was that if they were not properly heard, or had some influence in considering this subject, they always had the recourse of shouting to Washington.

Major representatives were cognizant of this situation and had no desire to overlook the indies' angle. Which is why even most rabid major company leaders felt that the C. A. was headed towards some uniform contract.

Exit of the indigo bird also brought about re-vitalization of anti-trust laws. Tendency to give possible Sherman act violations the sly wink under the NRA regime passed shortly after the Supreme Court ruled the NIRA code sections unconstitutional. Talk of one or two mergers in the industry suddenly dwindled to a whisper, and finally stopped altogether.

Trans-Lux Leases B'klyn Houses; Mayer's N.Y. Pool

Trans-Lux has leased one of its Brooklyn, N. Y., houses, is negotiating to lease the other in that borough, and has entered into a pooling operating arrangement with Arthur Mayer to cover its two New York theatres, one at Broadway and 49th street, other at Madison and 60th street. It will continue operating control of its Philadelphia news bandbox.

Under the deal with Mayer, just closed, the two TL houses in New York are pooled with Mayer's Rialto, Mayer as operator in association with Major L. E. Thompson. Mayer will continue to book his own pictures for the Rialto, while Walter Howe will continue to book the two TL programs, subject to supervision of Mayer and Thompson. Latter has been operating all TL houses. Under the pool, the arrangement is for the length of the leases on the two TL theatres, or around 10 years. Mayer has a 20-year lease on the Rialto.

The TL Flatbush (Bklyn) house has been leased to the Jefferson Amusement Corp., a new group of indies. Downtown TL house at Fulton street, which has been on a week-to-week lease to Joseph R. Fliesler, is to be leased on a term to someone else. Jeff group will operate the Flatbush house with features the same as the Fulton street house has been doing under Fliesler.

SEE SETTLEMENT OF FRIEDMAN'S $24,000

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14.

Signs here last week pointed to a less-than-verdict settlement of $24,000 damages awarded Samuel Friedman, former Farrell and Sharon (Pa.) exhibitor against eight distributing corporations for violation of Sherman anti-trust law. Jury awarded Friedman $8,000, which was tripled under terms of law, as well as counsel fees.

Defendants, however, appealed for new trial and judge in federal court, after reviewing case, granted it. Attorneys for both sides then immediately wrote 'closed' across docket, with plaintiff apparently having agreed to take smaller amount if other side agreed to drop plans for new trial.

Neither side would say what sum was settled on, nor would they infer that any out-of-court agreement had been reached.

'Cook'-Bill Robinson Skim L. A. For $18,000; 'Obsession' Strong at $25,000, 'Tale' Good, 'Blood' Oke

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.

(Best Exploitation: Chinese-State)

Nothing unusually outstanding from take standpoint in local first-run establishments current week. Tale of 'Two Cities,' which had been calculated as big box office, not a smash but good at Chinese and State, with indications that subsequent runs, through word of mouth, will be heavy gravy for the pic.

Paramount individual leader on income for week with 'Could Only Cook' and stage show headed by Bill Robinson will hit around $18,000. RKO and Pantages have coin-getter in 'Magnificent Obsession,' which is carded to stay in both houses for two weeks. Joint initial stanza take should hit around the $25,000 mark. 'Captain Blood' continued at good stride for second stanza at Warners Downtown and Hollywood, and will stay for a third week.

Four Star has English musical, 'First a Girl,' which got great notices, with production classed as equal and if not better than most American musicals with trade okay to start.

Chinese and State went strong on radio exploitation campaign for 'Two Cities,' using 15-minute programs over four stations, with scene transcriptions prior to opening and during week. In addition had tie-in with 5-10c store putting out 45,000 paper bag carriers having name of production and theatre printed on both sides, with canvass of schools and libraries made through presentation of study guides to pupils on the Dickens opus. Campaign, though best in town, was not fruitful from b. o. angle.

Estimates for This Week

Chinese (Grauman) (2,028; 30-40-55)—'Two Cities' (MG). Looks to bring good week for house with $11,000. Last week 'Burlesque' (20) in seven and half days, including New Year's eve, did plenty oke, $12,000.

Downtown (WB) (1,800; 30-35-40)—'Capt. Blood' (WB) (2d week). They like it here and will hold third stanza, take will hit around $8,500. Last week, with New Year opening and seven half day week, came through in good style to $14,500.

Four Star (Fox) (900; 30-35)—'First a Girl' (GB). Looks as though will go two or three weeks, initial week around $5,000. Last week 'Mister Hobo' (GB) okay at $3,400, including holiday midnite shows.

Hollywood (WB) (2,756; 30-35-40-55)—'Capt. Blood' (WB) (2d week). Best holdover attraction house has had in long time, looks like cinch $8,000. Holds over. Last week, first with midnite show counted in, went to town aplenty and got $14,700.

Orpheum (Bway) (2,270; 25-30-35-40)—'Man of Iron' (WB) and 'Whispering Smith' (20th) split and vaude-vilius. No dynamic combination for coin, but profit to house at $6,300. Last week 'Without Regret' (Par) and vaude headed by Leo Carrillo big at $9,200.

Pantages (Pan) (2,760; 25-35-40)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U). With two previews thrown in on first three nights, this one, though not needing that aid, is headed for close to $13,000 on first week. Last week 'I Dream' (RKO) ran to expected pace and showed big profit with windup of $10,500.

Paramount (Patmar) (3,595; 30-40-55)—'Could Only Cook' (Col) and stage show. Star always helpful b. o. tonic here, with house headed for good $18,000. Last week 'Collegiate' (Par), stage show and pix of Rose Bowl game and Tournament of Roses, town's exclusive, for eight and half days came little short of the $31,500 mark, which is plenty and a record for a long time here.

RKO (2,950; 25-35-40-55)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U). Though running bit behind Pantages on this one, business is unusually heavy, and it's headed for the $12,000 mark. Last week 'I Dream' (RKO) little shy of what was expected, but no complaints at $9,400.

State (Loew-Fox) (2,024; 30-40-55)—'Two Cities' (MG). Hitting little better than Chinese, with chance of hitting the $12,500 mark. Last week 'Burlesque' (20th) bit short of $12,500.

United Artists (Fox-UA) (2,100; 30-40-55)—'King of Burlesque' (20th). Had a bank night of better than $1,000 to bolster matters, will hit little better than the $5,000 mark. Last week 'Pedal' (20th), kiddies went strong for Shirley Temple and showed house big profit in tuning out with $6,700.

'Riffraff' $4,300, Tacoma

Tacoma, Jan. 14.

Harlow tops Tacoma.

Biz generally fair.

Estimates for This Week

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (745; 16-27)—'Pompeii' (RKO) and 'Missing Man' (Col) dual. Fair for $1,800. Last week, 'Chan's Secret' (20th) and 'Payoff' (FN) dual, $2,500, good.

Music Box (Hamrick) (1,400; 16-27-37)—'Riffraff' (MG) and 'Stars Over Broadway' (WB) dual. Steady pace, nice combo, anticipates $4,300, o.k. Last week, 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) and 'Dudley' (20th) dual, $5,200, big.

Roxy (Hamrick) (1,306; 16-27-37)—'Monte Carlo (20th) and '3 Kids and Queen' (UA) also called 'Old Battleaxe' for local wallop, same as in Seattle recently. Good for $4,000. Last week, 'Night at Opera' (MG) and 'Pacific Fleet' (WB) dual, $5,100, great.

Albee-Fay's, Prov, Hurt Each Other With Vaudeville

Providence, Jan. 14.

(Best Exploitation: RKO Albee)

Coin on the loose again, exhibitors plenty happy, weather ideal and fans taking advantage of swell product in town. Every stand, with one or two exceptions, going to town with grosses well up in the higher brackets.

This week saw Albee once again switching to vaudeville and pictures, thus placing itself in direct competition with Fay's, which has always played combo policy regardless of biz.

The stand-outs this week look like 'Wilderness' at Loew's and 'Bride Comes Home' at the Strand. Former doing nice business and gross should be around $15,000.

Strand's present terrific pace indicates that house should come through with a dandy $10,000. Albee figuring on $8,500 for first week of vaudeville; not terrific, but no red ink. Fay's likely to take it on the chin because of opposish; sister house, Majestic, with 'Show No Mercy,' doing oke and figures on $9,000 gross as it closes.

RKO Victory trying to cash in on publicity of 'Informer' being picked outstanding picture of the year. Going oke.

Past few weeks have been rather inactive ones for the ballyhoo boys, but current stanza brought out some effort to plug shows. Albee's p. a. department takes the nod for campaign on inaugural bill of vaudeville, bally taking in several unusual stunts. Town filled with plugs of all types, window displays, radio plugging, sound truck advertising, telephone merchandising and deluging town and nearby communities with all kinds of paper.

Estimates for This Week

Loew's State (3,200; 15-25-40)—'Wilderness' (MG) and 'Dan Mattews' (Col). Second picture no help; result might have been much better if main film played on solo bill, allowing more unloading of capacity audiences, but as it is $15,000 gross not to be sneezed at. Last week 'Riff Raff' (M) petered out after swell start to $11,000; should have been better.

Strand (Indie) (2,200; 15-25-40)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and 'Forced Landing' (Rep); striking the right spot with the natives, augurs $10,000 at least, plenty nice. Last week 'Collegiate' (Par) zoomed to a high $11,900 for eight days.

RKO Albee (2,500; 15-25-40)—'Two in Dark' (RKO) and 'International Scandals' on stage; flesh entertainment having right effect on box office; house anticipates $8,500 for the week, okay. Last week, 'Dream Too Much' (RKO) and 'Red Salute' (UA) soured after nice start; $9,000 for eight days.

Majestic (Fay) (2,200; 15-25-40)—'No Mercy' (20th) and 'Uncle Dudley' (20th). Plenty strength; if pace continues should have no trouble topping $9,000, excellent. Last week 'Capt. Blood' (WB) soared to $11,000, good money for this stand.

Fay's (2,200; 15-25-40)—'Born to Gamble' (Llb) and vaude. Albee cutting in this week, and probably from now on if it sticks to vaudeville, pace so far indicates house cannot possibly mooch over $6,200, so-so. Last week 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) responsible for bright doings at this variety stand after being moved over from Majestic, oke at $7,000.

RKO Victory (1,600; 25—'Informer' (RKO); biz surprisingly good, despite last minute switch; looks like $2,300 for five days. Last week 'I Dream Too Much' (RKO) brought in from the Albee was a flop for three days at $650.

'OBSESH,' 'CITIES' 2 H.O. IN ST. L. A RECORD

St. Louis, Jan. 14.

(Best Exploitation: Fox)

It's been ages since two St. Louis cinema palaces had celluloid features of sufficient b.o. at same time to hold 'em over for a second week but that is situation here this week. Fox, F&M's big first runner in midtown, is showing 'Obsession' for second week to swell business, and downtown Loew's, with opening hour advanced to 9:30 a.m, is still packing 'em in for 'Tale of Two Cities,' held over.

Other houses are basking in the glitter of b.o. affluence. Ambassador, first house in town to show Maj. Bowes' amateurs, was greeted with jammed houses first three days of week with no signs of crowds diminishing, what with radio plugs and the Major's usual Sunday program which calls attention to whereabouts of various units. Missouri, another F&M house where business has been tragically terrible as it tried to compete with Fox and Shibert-Rialto with second run features, has taken on new lease of life with vaudeville since New Year's Day is gradually overcoming red figures on ledger. Orpheum and Shubert-Rialto theatre have been holding their own against rest of competition which includes extension of matinee prices by three F&M houses and inauguration of Bank Nite in same three houses.

Fox gets best exploitation nod this week for clever newspaper ads and enlistment of those who like better class of screen entertainment.

Estimates for This Week

Fox (F&M) (5,038; 25-35-55)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U) (2d wk). First week was a surprise to town and word of mouth got b.o. $17,600 to count; second week is still going strong and should finish for a nice $11,000.

Ambassador (F&M) (3,018; 25-40-55)—'Could Only Cook' (Col) and Bowes amateurs on stage. Swell start and with help of its own amateur show in conjunction with station KSD Saturday (11) won't do less than $17,000. Last week 'Paddy O'Day' and 'Supkist Revue' on stage, Armetta's popularity here as screen star and newspaper features about him helped to $15,400.

Shubert-Rialto (WB) (1,725; 25-35-55) — 'Dangerous' (WB) and 'Coronado' (Par) dual. Probably won't be so hot, with rest of keen competition, but should do $6,100, fair. Last week 'Bride Comes Home' (Par), Colbert is still one of the town's faves and $9,400 would have been beaten had the house greater seating capacity.

Orpheum (WB) (1,950; 25-35-55)—'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) and 'Dr. Harrigan' (RKO). Set for a $11,000 week and would do better if its turnover could be better. Seating capacity will hold down gross. Last week 'Dream Too Much' (RKO) collected $7,300, good considering stiff opposition from Dickens just around the corner.

Loew's (3,162; 25-35-55)—'Two Cities' (MG) (2d wk). First week a good $19,000 and second should get not less than $11,500.

Missouri (F&M) (3,514; 25-40)—'Monte Carlo' (20th) and vaude. Start very good and all indications point to a good $10,400. Last week 'Thanks a Million' (20th) and vaudeville, best in 8 months with $11,600 in the till.

'Scarlett' with Lukas-Froman Big $20,000, Clev.

Cleveland, Jan. 14.

(Best Exploitation: Stillman)

Managers' pre-holiday frowns being wiped out by a flock of deluxers, the kind they could go to town about and justify all the shouting.

State came to the foreground this week with 'Wilderness,' copping probably $21,500, and topping even the Palace's heavy line-up of talent in 'Sylvia Scarlett' and the Paul Lukas-Jane Froman show, which will romp in with $20,000. Third best is Hipp's 'King of Burlesque,' which promises to run up to a nice $15,500.

Smaller downtown first-runners, too, also cleaning up for the first time in a month. 'Capt. Blood' going strong on second week at Allen, which should be happy if it gets $5,500. Biggest surprise is 'Mary Burns,' a topnotch $7,500 or better being assured the Stillman by fact that one of leading actors, Alan Baxter, is a home-town lad.

Nothing was missed in tricks by Jack Lykes, house manager, and Milt Harris in putting the Baxter boy across. Got mazda honors on marquee, since Paramount ballyhoos him as a 1936 find. His college band put on street parade and four students volunteered to be a walking street poster, each carrying part of a 24-sheet on pix.

Baxter's father, v.p. of biggest Cleveland bank, co-operated in flooding his 52 branch banks with blotters bearing his kid's photo, special theatre notices to employes and depositors, and bulletins hung in banks as well as colleges. Lykes also arranged identification contest with gal posing as fugitive heroine in stores. Papers featured local-boy-makes-good angle to a fare-thee-well. A natural all 'round, considering he clicked in Hollywood within a half year, beating record of other localites.

Estimates for This Week

Palace (RKO) (3,200; 30-40-60—'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) and Paul Lukas and Jane Froman in vaude bill. Two pix stars doing personals are the chief b.o. draws here, Hepburn having fallen off a bit here, and should collect $20,000. Last week Wayne King orchestra and 'Could Cook' (Col) zoomed up to a smacking $26,400, almost cracking the house's records.

State (Loew's) (3,750; 30-35-40)—'Wilderness' (MG). Drama cricks turned out to give it some raves which, plus clever salesmanship, responsible for corking $21,500. Last week, 'Bride Comes Home' (Par), fine $19,000.

Hipp (WB) (3,000; 25-40)—'King of Burlesque' (Fox), Warner Baxter a fave who will build up a satisfactory $15,600. Last week, 'Capt. Blood' (WB) didn't reach expected figure in 10 days, yet $17,500 isn't a sneezing amount.

Stillman (Loew's) (1,372; 25-35)—'Mary Burns' (Par) packing house with followers of local boy in it and will hit an extra-fine $7,500. Last week 'Two Cities' (MG) landed a high $8,500 for second stanza.

Allen (RKO) (3,000; 25-40)—'Capt. Blood' (WB). Second week holding up a good $5,500. Last week 'Littlest Rebel' (WB) on holdover wound up $3,000.

'REBEL' A NATURAL IN B'HAM, BIG $8,000

Birmingham, Jan. 14.

(Best Exploitation: Alabama)

Alabama has a natural for Dixie. Shirley Temple herself enough to cinch the picture but put her in a sympathetic Confederate story and native Southerners are certain to eat it up. Picture in here for nine days.

Tie-ups with department stores, one of which is featuring same style dresses as worn by Shirley in picture for sale. All larger department stores are co-operating.

Estimates for This Week

Alabama (Wilby-Kincey) (2,800; 30-35-40)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th). Through Thursday, for nine days $8,000, good. Last week, 'Collegiate' (Par), $6,000, okay.

Ritz (Wilby-Kincey) (1,600; 25-30)—'In Person' (RKO). At $3,200 for six days, oke. Last week, 'Splendor' (UA) and 'In Person' (RKO), on split, $3,500.

Strand (Wilby-Kincey) (800; 25)—'No Mercy' (20th) and 'Another Face' (RKO), split. Nice $1,600. Last week, 'Beat Band' (RKO), for three days only $600 with 'Keeper of Bees' (Mono), ending a seven-day run consuming balance of week.

Empire (Acme) (1,100; 25)—'Pacific Fleet '(WB). About $2,600, fair. Last week, 'Kids and Queen' (U), $2,200, so-so.

Dangerous'-Bowes Ams $32,000, Det.; 'Cook'-Wing 17G, 'Hobo'-Revue 14G

Detroit, Jan. 14.

(Best Exploitation: Fox)

Bowes Amateurs (Unit No. 3) here again, and that means the Michigan is leading the town this stanza; about $32,000, plus 'Dangerous.' RKO Downtown has stage show, too, this week, along with the Fox and Mich so coin is pretty evenly divided.

B. o. generally is so-so, the only big advances being made by RKO, with 'Hobo' plus 'Broadway's Hollywood Cabaret revue,' and United Artists, playing 'Captain Blood.' Former figures for a neat $14,000, while UA looks good for $13,500.

With help of good exploitation, Fox should gather in a good $17,000 this session on 'Could Only Cook' and Toby Wing headlining vaude. The Adams and State, both with duals, are not so forte; around $3,500 due at Adams, $4,000 at State. Adams still running 'owl shows' Saturdays, and it's aiding grosses considerably.

After making a two-weeks' try at reviving hit pix of past year, the former German film downtown house, the Europa, closed last week but plans to reopen soon under different name and behind extensive exploitation. Revivals policy got encouraging response but film-goers hadn't been educated to fact house was no longer a foreign-pix exhibitor. New name and campaign is to be aimed in that direction.

Tieups with G. E. and most of department and other stores dealing in cooking utensils, etc., gained for Fox theatre exploitation honors again this week. Telegrams and special booklets were sent to prospective buyers, etc., urging them to see 'Could Only Cook.' Dealers' trucks carried ads for pic and plugs were many over radio. Toby Wing, on the stage, also got good share of free publicity and art in daily press. United Artists had a lot of extra ad space in Hearst print on 'Captain Blood,' and nice tieup with downtown department store on 'pirate' dress model.

Estimates for This Week

Michigan (United Detroit) (4,000; 25-35-55)—'Dangerous' (WB) plus Bowes Amateurs Unit 3 on stage. It's Bowes amateur week again this week here, and gross should hit a smash $32,000 in keeping with bang-up grosses rung up by previous units here. Last week gathered in $28,000 on 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) with Paul Lukas heading vaude.

Fox (Indie) (5,000; 25-35-55)—'Could Cook' (Col), with Toby Wing topping stage show. Figures for around $17,000, good, this week on okay combination. Bagged just under $28,000, swell, last week on 'Obsession' (U) plus Weaver Bros. on stage.

Downtown (RKO) (2,500; 25-35-55)—'Mr. Hobo' (GB) plus 'Broadway's Hollywood Cabaret Revue' on stage. Back on combo policy, and back in the good money class; $14,000, nifty, due this stanza. 'Dream Too Much' (RKO) brought in an oke $8,500 last week.

United Artists (United Detroit) (2,000; 25-35-55) — 'Capt. Blood' (WB). Pic getting the usual heavy Hearst backing-up, and should turn in a nice $13,500 this week. Holds over. 'Ibbetson' (Par) struggled in for an okay $5,000 last stanza.

Adams (Balaban) (1,700; 25-40)—'Paddy O'Day' (20th) and 'One-Way Ticket' (Col). Doing the usual steady biz, about $3,500 this session. Had a swell $7,000 gross last week on 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) (3rd week), after pic enjoyed two hotcha sessions at Fox.

State (United Detroit) (3,000; 25-40)—'Confidential' and 'Bar 20 Rides Again' (Par). B. o. figures for good $4,000 this week. Biz good here last stanza, $5,000 on 'Mary Burns' (Par) plus 'Kind Lady' (MG).

Chi $50,000 with V. & Y., Hodgson And 'Bride'; 'Obsesh' Magnif at $27,000, O. & J. $18,000, 'Blood' 16G

Chicago, Jan. 14.

(Best Exploitation: Chicago-UA)

Driving forward in a campaign to load up with profits before running into the Lent slump, all theatres in the Loop have geared themselves to top money sprints with the strongest setup of attractions available. And with these names strung across the marquees the houses are again dusting off the SRO signs and lining them up on the sidewalk.

After having established a high mark of the year with the Burns and Allen unit last week when it ran the gross up to a mighty $50,600, the Balaban & Katz Chicago flagship sprints to $50,000 this week on the momentum of last week, aided and abetted by the Veloz and Yolanda dance team, the Shep Fields orchestra and Red Hodgson, co-writer of 'Music Goes 'Round and Around,' along with 'Bride Comes Home.'

In two other spots the pictures are the heavy money-makers. 'Magnificent Obsession' heads into the high water figures at the Palace and from indications on its opening days, it looks a cinch for at least a two or three weeks' gallop. 'Captain Blood' has been spotted in the United Artists for a straight picture run and on great word-of-mouth will show a zoom on grosses.

Town generally saw its best general spread of exploitation with the Chicago, Palace and United Artists all individually backed with big newspaper and feature breaks.

Estimates for This Week

Apollo (B&K) (1,200; 25-35-55)—'Mutiny' (MG). Still a big grosser. Had four hang-up sessions at the United Artists and is now following up with two more strong weeks here at $3,000, after taking a fine $5,000 last week. 'Mr. Hobo' (GB), replaces Thursday (9).

Chicago (B&K) (3,940; 35-55-75)—'Bride' (Par) and stage show. Two fine box-office magnets on the rostrum, Veloz and Yolanda dance team and the Shep Fields orchestra, who are big local favorites and Red Hodgson, 'Round' writer. Getting strictly an adult play. Adding up to $50,000 on the week, great. Last week, it was strictly Burns and Allen unit on the stage, with 'Whipsaw' (MG), for $50,600, biggest week the house has seen in a year. House had been averaging $25,000.

Garrick (B&K) (900; 25-35-55)—'Frisco Kid' (WB). Second Loop running and will do trade here at indicated $6,000 for the week. Last week, 'Monte Carlo' (20th), finished second session to pleasant $3,900.

Oriental (B&K) (3,200; 25-35-40)—'Personal Maid' (WB), and Olsen and Johnson on stage. Heading for a fair enough week for this line-up, around $18,000. Last week, 'This Is Life' (20th) and Bowes unit on stage climbed to $21,200, excellent.

Palace (RKO) (2,500; 25-35-55-65)—'Obsession' (U), and vaude. Weaver Bros. heading the vaude. Picture is packing 'em, crowding the register to its biggest slice of money in many weeks. Looks like a holdover at $27,000, on almost completely adult draw. Last week, 'Dream Too Much' (RKO), great $37,000 for 10-day run from New Year's Eve.

Roosevelt (B&K) (1,500; 35-45-65)—'Rose of Rancho' (Par) (2d week). Fortnight for this picture and will quit tomorrow (Wednesday) for the Marx Brothers. 'Rancho' will struggle to $6,000 currently after fairish $8,200 first week.

State-Lake (Jones) (2,700; 20-25-35-40)—'$1,000 a Minute' (Rep), and vaude. Ed Lowry unit on stage and doing big share of the business. Heading to $13,000, fine. Last week, 'Last Night' (U), managed oke $11,600.

United Artists (B&K-UA) (1,700; 35-55-65)—'Captain Blood' (WB) (1st week). Comment around okay on the picture, with public reaction highly favorable. Aiming for $16,000 currently, bang-up take. Last week, 'Splendor' (UA), finished satisfactory fortnight to $9,100 for finis session.

B'KLYN QUIET

ride at Par Nice $16,000—Fox's 'Cook,' $9,000

Brooklyn, Jan. 14.

(Best Exploitation: Fox)

Holidays gone, the downtown de-luxers have settled down to routine with best biz of the lot evidenced at Fabian's Paramount and Strand. Former showing Colbert flicker, 'Bride Comes Home' while latter still is snaring populace with 'No Mercy.' Other houses in Boro Hall sector okay.

Fox with 'If You Could Only Cook' and 'Mimi' concentrated on the former picture for exploitation purposes. Larry Cowen, house p.a. tied up with R. H. Macy; daily broadcast plug on WOR; plug in Macy's advertising copy and plugs on General Electric trucks. Also tieup with the Golden Crust Bread, 1,000 streamers for store windows in borough. House advertised fact that 5,000 loaves of Golden Crust bread would be distributed to those who don't like to cook. Three gals furnished by bread company distributed in lobby on opening night.

Estimates for This Week

Strand (2,000; 25-35-50)—'No Mercy' (20th) and $1,000 a Minute' (Rep) (3d week). Splendid, $9,000. Last week $9,000, fine.

'OBSESSION' BIG $12,000 2D WK. BUFFALO

Buffalo, Jan. 14.

(Best Exploitation: Lafayette)

All indications point to good grosses at downtown picture houses this week. Offerings of strong screen features as well as much publicity and exploitation are bringing 'em in.

'Dream' at the Hipp at $1.65 top marks the first break in the Hipp's regular policy in many years. 'Obsession' in its second week at the Lafayette is still going strong, with indications for further holdover. All of the figures for last week were high due to the fact that the special New Year's Eve show is included in each instance.

'Obsession' exploitation was outstanding for thoroughness of coverage rather than originality of ideas. With a 50% increase in newspaper space and a special front for the house being the outstanding notes, theatre went for window display tie-ups at over a dozen leading downtown stores. Teleflash announcements were used daily and special downtown frames were increased to 100. Radio publicity was also used for two weeks in advance, with announcements spotted.

Estimates for This Week

Buffalo (Shea) (3,600; 30-40-50)—'Collegiate' (Par). Light entertainment, but meeting with favorable reception and fair business; about $11,000. 'Bride Comes Home' (Par), about as expected, New Year's Eve show bringing take on 9½ days to $13,600.

Hipp (Shea) (2,400; 55-83-1.10-1.65)—'Midsummer Night's Dream' (WB). Two shows daily for four days only. Opened to ballyhooed society benefit performance. Last week 'Ah, Wilderness' (MG). Was in for 11 days and ran up to neat $15,700.

Great Lakes (Shea) (3,400; 25-40)—'Dream Too Much' (RKO). Meeting with good reception and should go over $10,000. Last week 'Riff Raff' (MG), did about as anticipated and special show helped to get over the $12,000 mark.

Century (Shea) (3,400; 25) — 'Show Them No Mercy' (20th) and 'Coronado' (Par). Back to double bills again and going along at fine clip for possible $8,000. Last week, 'Burlesque' (20th), very nice at over $9,000.

Lafayette (Ind.) (3,400; 25) — 'Obsession' (U) (2d week). Still running close to top speed, with second stanza satisfactory in every way. Around $12,000. Another h.o. maybe. Last week, all attendance records for house broken; high at $17,000.

Newark's Biz Goes Round 'n' Round, but Mostly 'Rebel,' 18G

Newark, Jan. 14.

(Best Exploitation: New Mosque)

It may not last but this year has started out with good business that like the music is going round and round. Proctor's 'Littlest Rebel' and 'Baldpate' should run to $18,000. At the Branford 'Dangerous' and 'Payoff' will take about $19,000 on nine days, which is money. The Paramount will be profitable if nothing more for 'Rose of Rancho' at $13,500 with Fifi Dorsay on stage hurting nothing.

Estimates For This Week

Branford (2,966; 15-65)—'Dangerous' (WB) and 'Payoff' (FN). Doing all right and will take about $19,000 on nine days. Last week, second. Of 'Captain Blood' (FN) a little less than expected, $9,000.

Capitol (WB) (1,200; 15-30-40)—'Captain Blood' (FN) and 'Millions In Air' (Par). Believed 'Blood' brought in too soon after Branford's two weeks, but it is going into all the WB neighborhoods now. $3,700. Last week 'Mutiny' (MG) just over $3,800.

Little (Franklin) (299; 30-50)—'Poil de Carotte' Pathe-Nathan and 'Czarina' (Kinematrade). About $600, which is weak. French picture started alone, but couldn't hold and Russian added with results favorable enough. Last week 'Moscow Laughs' (Amkino) got by with $775.

Loew's State (2,780; 20-30-35-55-75)—'Two Cities' (MG) (2nd week). Okay for a second with nearly $9,000; first week fine, $17,500.

New Mosque (Chesd) (3,281; 15-25-40-55)—'Red Wagon (FD) and vaude and dancing. About $12,000 which is in the red. House feeling rather severely Newark's penchant for doing all its business weekends. Last week over $14,000 on 'Mimi' (FD).

Paramount (Adams-Par) (2,248; 15-20-30-40-55-75)—'Rose of the Rancho' (Par) and vaude. Fifi Dorsay on the stage no small asset, about $13,500 or maybe better. Last week held for nine days 'No Mercy' (20th), fine, $20,000.

Proctor's (RKO) (2,300; 15-55)—and Lyceum (roof) 770; same scale. 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) and 'Baldpate' (RKO). Should take $18,000, which is plenty. Last week on nine days 'Annie Oakley' (RKO) and 'In Person' (RKO) tremendous at $27,000.

Terminal (Skouras) (1,600; 15-25-40)—'Whispering Smith (20th) and 'Old Spanish Custom' (Syn) with 'Big House For Girls' (Thne) and 'Last of Clintons' (Syn) split. Will do well enough at $3,000. Last week went over $3,500 with Drummond' (GB) and 'Fighting Blood' (Syn) with 'Thanks Million' (20th) and 'Navy Wife' (20th) split.

N. H. MUSICALS

Go Round and Round—'Rancho,' $7,200, vs. 'Dream,' $6,600

New Haven, Jan. 14.

(Best Exploitation: Poli)

Battle of music on between Paramount ('Rancho') and Roger Sherman ('Dream'). Both building. Poli special plugging on 'Audioscopicks' short aroused curiosity. Sherman is trying to boost last half by adding reissue of 'Informer' as extra attraction Mon.-Tues.-Wed. nights only. Business in general a slight letdown from last week's swell gross.

Poli topped town's campaign's with half-hour air show; special plugs aimed at Yale, free radio mags with corner envelope; daily air announcements from lobby tied in with Con Mafia playing new pipeless organ; special lobby 40x60 poster; personal endorsement of house manager; menus, circulars, window and bus cards, etc.

Estimates for This Week

Paramount (M&P) (2,348; 35-50)—'Rose of Rancho' (Par) and 'Susan' (U). Good $7,200 in view. Last week 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and 'Millions in Air' (Par) copped a grand $10,200 on nine days.

Poli (Loew's) (3,040; 35-50)—'Wilderness' (MG) and 'Could Cook' (Col). Easily town's aces, near big $11,000. Last week 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) and 'Uncle Dudley' (20th), aided by New Year's Eve advanced prices, a sweet $11,500.

Roger Sherman (WB) (2,200; 35-50)—'Dream Too Much' (RKO) and 'Harrigan' (WB). Fighting it out with 'Rancho' on fairly even terms; okay $6,600. Last week 'Capt. Blood' (WB) and 'B'way Hostess' (WB) reached heavy $9,000, thanks to midnite extra tariff show.

College (Loew's) (1,565; 25-50)—'Rebel' (20th) and 'Uncle Dudley' (20th). Holdover, switched from Poli. Better than fair on second week, around $4,000. Last week 'Two Cities' (MG) holdover was big at $4,400 on second week.

'BLOOD' $23,000, 'OBSESH,' 13G, FRISCO OK

San Francisco, Jan. 14.

Warfield cashes in this week for top money with pirates on screen and final stage show. Orpheum next with heavily billed 'Obsession' and Paramount third with dual of good marquee value.

Warfield, for years ace stage show house, goes sound at close of present week, with new policy of long-run pictures only. House a few months ago dropped price from 65 to 55, and kept standard of show up, but increase in attendance didn't seem enough. House has had to forego holding over good pictures because stage setup would be too expensive for carry-over. Figure that there are at least 12 big-time pictures made per year, and since this F-WC acer has called on Fox, Paramount, Metro and Warner Bros., these four studios should send them three wows a year.

Orpheum gets what scant exploitation credit there may be in extra advertising. Nicely arranged ads with punchy selling talk used.

Estimates for This Week

Clay (Roesner) (400; 25-35—'Crime et Chatiment' (Du World). Should get good play at better than $1,400. Literati will go to compare it with recently shown English version. Last week (2d) 'Dancing Duchess' (Vien) all right at $1,000.

Embassy (Cohen) (1,512; 25-35)—'Dream Too Much' (RKO). Moved over from Golden Gate, ought to click to tune of $5,000, nice going. Last week (3d) 'Mr. Hobo' (GB) and 'Man of Aran' (GB) closed easily at $2,000.

Fox (Leo) (5,000; 25-40)—'Frisco Waterfront' (Rep) and 'Great Life' (Par). Only fair at $4,700. Last week 'Perfect Gentleman' (MG) and 'Devil's Island' (Col) just a little under this week's figure.

Golden Gate (RKO) (2,850; 30-35-40)—'Hitch Hike Lady' (Rep) and stage show. Will find business quiet at $12,000. Last week, 'Dream Too Much' (RKO) swell at $16,000.

Orpheum (F&M) (2,440; 30-35-40) —'Obsession' (U). Looks like a smash week for this house; ought to hit better than $13,000. Last week (2d) 'Could Only Cook' (Col) about $5,000.

Paramount (F-WC) (2,740; 30-35-40)—'Dangerous' (WB) and 'Master's Voice' (Par). Will see regular good business at this emporium; $12,000 should be about right.

St. Francis (F-WC) (1,470; 30-35-40)—'Mutiny' (3d week). Still going strong; better than $5,000 indicated.

United Artists (UA) (1,200; 25-40) —'Wilderness' (MG)) (3d week). About $5,000 for final stanza seems right; last week, $7,000.

Warfield (F-WC) (2,680; 35-40-55-75)—'Captain Blood' (WB) and stage show. Should take in a sweet $23,000. Last week 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and stage show had holiday biz to boost to $24,500. Stage shows how out with present stanza. Straight sound for long runs then.

(Best Exploitation: Paramount)

'Rose of the Rancho,' supported on stage by the Casa Loma orchestra with the Onyx Club Boys ('Round and Round'), and 'Ghost Goes West' are lengths ahead of the other houses this week on Broadway. The street isn't very active. 'Rancho' will take the Paramount to around $41,000, while 'Ghost' looks an easy $40,000 at the Rivoli.

Onyx Club lads came in to the Par on Tuesday night (7) with the 'Rancho' picture and along with the rest of the show are being held a second week. Par changes next Tuesday night (21) and may stay permanently at a Wednesday opening with previews of new shows the prior night.

Disappointments of the week are 'Riffraff,' Capitol, and 'Sylvia Scarlett,' Music Hall. Former will be lucky to top $30,000 and gets only one week, while 'Scarlett' may not get past $60,000.

'Crime of Dr. Crespi' will possibly push the Rialto to $10,000, while 'Invisible Ray' will be close to fan enough $29,000 at Roxy. 'Crime' holds.

'Last of Pagans' ended its first week at the Astor yesterday (Tues.), $7,500, and holds a second week. Both the Strand and Center get new pictures this week after two-week runs with Christmas openers. Center brings in 'King of Burlesque' today (Wed.) and Eddie Cantor's picture, 'Strike Me Pink,' opens at the Music Hall tomorrow (Thursday), the first Cantor film to play this house. Chaplin's 'Modern Times,' set back on its Riv engagement, is expected to be ready for the Riv the end of this month.

Manner in which the Paramount has been selling its new pit show policy in general, and this week's show in particular, puts this house currently out front on campaigning for boxoffice results.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (1,012; 25-35-55)—'Last of Pagans' (MG) (2d week). Well enough to snare $7,500 on first week, ending yesterday (Tues.), and sticks a second.

Capitol (4,620; 25-35-55-85-$1.25) —'Riffraff' (MG). Disappointing and looks to not go over $30,000. Will not hold over. Final nine days of 'Two Cities' (MG), on total run of 16 days, just under $35,000.

Center (3,525; 25-35-55-85-$1.10)—'King of Burlesque' (20th) opens this morning (Wed.) after three nice weeks of 'Ah, Wilderness!' (MG), final seven days of which registered $16,000. Second week ran a bit over $25,000.

Paramount (3,664; 25-35-55-85)—'Rose of Rancho' (Par), Casa Loma orchestra in pit (3d week) and Onyx Club Boys (1st week). Holdover of Loma band, with Onyx Boys booked as added attraction, heavily responsible for pace of around $41,000, big on week ending last night (Tues.). Whole show holds. Onyx Club sextet includes Mike Riley and Ed Farley, composers of 'Round and Round.' Last week, second of Casa Loma band, with 'Bride Comes Home' (Par), was $37,500, good.

Radio City Music Hall (5,989; 40-60-85-99-$1.10-$1.65)—'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) and stage show. Sluggish, and if over $60,000, lucky. Final three days on second week of 'Magnificent Obsession' (U), $21,000.

Rialto (750; 2540-55)—'Crime of Dr. Crespi' (Rep). Horror picture, may take small-seater to $10,000, okay. Second week of 'Fang and okay, and holds. Second week of 'Fang and Claw' (RKO), $9,300.

Roxy (5,836; 25-35-55)—'Invisible Ray' (U) and stage show. Not bad around $29,000. Last week just under $31,000 on 'First a Girl' (GB).

Strand (2,767; 25-55-65-85)—'Capt. Blood' (WB) (4th week). Goes three days on a fourth week starting today (Wed.) and ending Friday night (17). Third week up to and including last night (Tues.), around $20,000. Second week was $33,300, very good. 'Ceiling Zero' (WB) opens Saturday (18).

State (3,450; 35-55-75)—'Splendor' (UA) and vaude. Miriam Hopkins starrer pulling for about $21,000, oke. Last week 'So Red Rose' (Par) and vaude, headed by Harry Ichman, $26,000.

Mpls. Orph Ups 40c to 55c for 'Obsesh' And They Love It, $14,000; 'Cities' 12G

Minneapolis, Jan. 14.

(Best Exploitation: Minn. Orph.)

A pair of sock films, 'Magnificent Obsession' and 'Tale of Two Cities,' is greasing the turnstiles and putting a punch into loop box-office statements currently. These two pictures are copping most of the downtown takings and lifting the theatres housing them, the Orpheum and Minnesota, well above the profit line.

For the first time the Orpheum has upped its top from 40c to 55c for a screen offering sans stage entertainment and the public response to 'Obsession' seems to justify the procedure. The Minnesota, where 'Two Cities' holds forth, has been getting the same 55c admission for all straight films. Lots of praise for both these pictures, especially from the customers.

Either Miriam Hopkins wasn't helped any here by her more recent vehicles or 'Splendor' just isn't what the localites want. At any rate, for a Hopkins picture it isn't doing so forte at the State.

For a second successive week stage shows are conspicuous by their absence in the loop, the single exception being stock burlesque at the Gayety. But plenty of the flesh-and-blood is on the way.

The Orpheum and Minnesota shared exploitation honors. The former put out 50 24-sheets and 5,000 bookmarks in libraries and book stores, distributed 10,000 Irene Dunne photos, sent telegrams to clubs and society leaders and had 20 special window displays and various tieups. The Minnesota had 'Two Cities' plugged in the public schools, special store window displays and a special screening for school teachers and distributed 50,000 heralds.

Estimates for This Week

Minnesota (Publ.) (4,200; 25-35-55) 'Two Cities' (MG).—Excellently sold the public and well-liked, getting heavy play from family trade; should hit good $12,000. Last week 'Littlest Rebel' (20th), $10,000, good.

Orpheum (Singer) (2,890; 25-35-55) 'Magnificent Obsession' (U).—Swell exploitation campaign and picture's own superlative merits bringing 'em in, plenty of feminine patronage for this one and advanced prices not keeping 'em away, en route to fine $14,000. Last week, 'Dream Too Much' (RKO), $6,700, fair.

State (Publix) (2,400; 25-35-40) 'Splendor' (UA). — Difference of opinion on this one, Miriam Hopkins not pulling this time in accustomed fashion. Will do well to top $3,000, poor. Last week, 'Whipsaw' (MG), $7,000, good.

World (Steffes) (350; 25-35-40-55) 'Swedenhielms' (Swedish). In this Scandinavian center Swedish language picture helped by favorable reviews, should be good for big $3,000. Last week, 'La Maternelle' (French), $1,500, fair.

Time (Berger) (290; 15-25) 'Narcotic'—Second loop run for this freak sex picture, climbing toward pretty good $1,000. Last week, 'Scarlet Pimpernel' (GB), second loop run, $700, light.

Lyric (Publix) (1,300; 20-25) 'Millions in Air' (Par).—Lack of cast names hurts, but picture well liked and may do some building. About $1,800 in prospect, light. Last week, 'Pacific Fleet' (WB), $2,400, good.

Uptown (Publix) (1,200; 25-35) 'Monte Carlo' (UA).—Going at $2,500 clip, fair. Last week, 'Old Kentucky' (Fox), $3,500, big.

Century (Publix) (1,600; 15-25) 'Mutiny' (MG).—Third loop run, heading for big $4,000. Last week, 'Live My Life' (MG), $2,500, fair.

Aster (Publix) (900; 15-25) 'Stella Parrish' (FN) and 'Two Fisted' (Par), second loop runs, and 'Little America' (Par), first run, split. Fair $800 indicated. Last week, 'Hands Across Table' (Par) and 'Way Down East' (20th), second loop runs, and 'Personal Maid' (WB), first run, $1,200, good.

'Collegiate' in College Town, Lincoln, Big $3,600

Lincoln, Jan. 14.

(Best Exploitation: Stuart)

'Whipsaw' is the current rave and heading into upper class money at the Lincoln this week. Directly behind is 'Collegiate,' also nipping off a share of the available amusement funds around town. Business is holding up in good shape and the pic trend being what it is, looks to stay with the rosier biz viewpoint for some time.

Best exploitational buzz was created in a series of stunts for 'Collegiate.' Johnny Echols wore out one duck waddling it up and down the main drags with all the trimmings. Also, had an automobile hunt, with 'Finders Keepers' which was supported by the college paper.

Estimates for This Week

Colonial (LTC) (550; 10-15)—'Whispering Smith' (20th) and 'Alias John Law,' (Sup), split. Week looks worth $950, oke. Last week 'Chan's Secret' (20th) and 'Frisco Waterfront' (Rep), split, $1,000 and nice.

Lincoln (LTC) (1,600; 10-20-25)—'Whipsaw' (MG). Everybody out to welcome Myrna Loy, sure of $3,000 or better, neat going. Last week 'In Person' (RKO) held for eight days and was up to $3,600 by that time, very nice play.

Orpheum (LTC) (1,350; 10-15-20-25)—'Millions in Air' (Par) and Ed Gardner's 'Fads and Fancies' girly stage show for 3 days; following is dual bill 'Broadway Hostess' (FN) and '7 Keys' (RKO). For the week, should chalk up $2,400, good enough. Last week 'Great Life' (20th) with Chic Myers and his 'Miami Bound' unit on rostrum for three days, then 'Mary Burns' (Par) in the first single feature of many moons for the stageless half, total takes around $2,300, due very good last half strength of Sylvia Sidney.

Stuart (LTC) (1,900; 10-15-40)—'Collegiate' (Par). Publicity smashes given in stunts around town, as well as a recent New Year's eve preview started it off in good shape. A likely $3,600 in sight which is okay money. Last week 'Two Cities' (MG) held for 8 days and grabbed up slightly more than $4,000, a steady pacer.

Varsity (Westland) (1,100; 10-20-25)—'First a Girl' (GB). Turnout has been a little above average so far on this one indicating a possible $1,600 week. Last week 'Could Only Cook' (Col) went for 9 days and in that time totaled $2,300, good showing in this spot.

'Obsession' $17,500, 'Collegiate' $14,000, King Orc Fair, Cincy

Cincinnati, Jan. 14.

(Best Exploitation: Albee)

Only two fresh releases at the major stands currently, and they're real b.o. 'Magnificent Obsession,' at the Albee, is the acer at a $17,500 tempo. 'Collegiate' is ringing up $14,000 for the Palace.

Four holdovers and their biz is at a favorable stage: 'Two Cities' is $6,000 fetcher at the Capitol; 'Dangerous' in line for $4,500 at Keith's; 'Bride Comes Home' marking $4,500 for Lyric, and Grand is third-weeking 'Littlest Rebel' for $3,500.

It's a good week all-around for the pictures. But the story for the Shubert, burg's only combo emporium, is not so cheerful. Wayne King's band, in for important money at $8,500, is not the trade-tugger expected. Fortified with three vaude acts and linked with the 'We're Only Human' pic, the attraction is tagged for $14,000, average figure for the theatre.

Publicity splurge of the week on 'Obsession,' the campaign including extra ad space.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (3,300; 35-42)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U). Irene Dunne the heavy noise, ticketed for $17,500, fine. Last week 'Two Cities' (MG), nine days, $21,000.

Palace (RKO) (2,600; 35-42)—'Collegiate' (Par). Flaps and rah-rah trade skipping turnstiles for a spiffy $14,000. Last week 'Bride Comes Home' (Par), eight days, $13,000.

Shubert (RKO) (2,150; 35-55)—'We're Only Human' (RKO) and Wayne King ork plus three variety turns. At tops, $14,000, normal figure, yet disappointing for the large layout of sugar on King. Last week 'Another Face' (RKO) and 'Bring on Dames' revue, slipped in last half to $13,000.

Capitol (RKO) (2,000; 35-42)—'Two Cities' (MG). Transferred from Albee for second week, $6,000, big. Last week 'Littlest Rebel' (20th), nine days, moved over from Palace, $9,500; pic got $16,000 in initial week.

Keith's (Libson) (1,500; 30-40)—'Dangerous' (WB) (2d week). Tugging an okay $4,500, following $7,000 on first seven days.

Lyric (RKO) (1,400; 35-42)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par). Second downtown week, $4,500, nice. Last week 'Fang and Claw' (RKO) bagged a nifty $3,500.

Grand (RKO) (1,200; 25-40)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th). Third week in the main division, $3,500, okay. Last week 'Whipsaw' (MG), a returner, $2,700.

Family (RKO) (1,000; 15-25)—'Whispering Smith' (20th) and 'Navy Wife' (20th), split. An all right $2,300. Last week 'Moonlight on Parade' (WB) and 'One Way Ticket' (Col), separate, $2,200.

OMAHA AVERAGE

Like Swarthout but Vote 'Rancho' Poor Vehicle, $5,600 Light

Omaha, Jan. 14.

(Best Exploitation: Brandeis)

Average is the trend of bills and grosses along picture row this week. Nothing outstanding at any house, while entertainment value up to a certain par. It's a week of the lull before the storm as all houses readying huge campaigns on stuff to break soon.

Lead will possibly go to the Orpheum on the strength of 'Whipsaw' and capacity. Other weeks this one might easily take a back seat, but more than holding its own for the present. Omaha with the Gladys Swarthout debut picture in second place, position likewise governed by top price and capacity. Third goes to Brandeis, which is running some over its average total, but is held down by lowest top price along the row and smallest number of seats.

Weather continues its disagreeable pace with the heaviest snow of the season on the tail of last week; makes it sloppy and hard to travel.

Letdown in exploitation this week compared to what has burst forth around some of the big holiday shows. Braindeis slightly in the van with some natural tie-ups on 'Could Only Cook,' but Omaha and Orpheum not far behind with their regular stuff.

Estimates for This Week

Orpheum (Blank-Tri-States) (2,976; 25-40)—'Whipsaw' (MG) and 'Perfect Gentleman' (MG). Myrna Loy has not been seen for some time here; $7,000 average but fair enough in the face of weather. Last week 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and 'Live for Love' (WB) satisfactory for light comedy followers, credit due Colbert-Young-MacMurray combination. $8,000 okay.

Omaha (Blank-Tri-States) (2,100; 25-40)—'Rose of Rancho' (Par) and 'Navy Wife' (20th). Swarthout voted having good screen possibilities but lacking capable vehicle for her introduction to screen fans; lightweight at box office for about $5,600, but no red ink. Last week 'Collegiate' (Par) doubled with 'Bad Boy' (Fox) bullish start New Year's Eve opening and stayed strong till the week was out to register $8,300, not quite expectations but very good.

Brandeis (Singer-RKO) (1,250; 25-35-40)—'Could Only Cook' (Col) and 'One Way Ticket' (Col). Keeps the house on Wednesday openings for another week, fair gait, drawing light comedy hounds, may reach up to $4,500, pleasing. Last week 'Dream Too Much' (RKO) on a single feature booking with a New Year's eve opening gave it seven and a half days to run up its $5,300, some of it due to home town followers of Henry Fonda.

'Wilderness'-'Cook' Dual Socko $10,000 'Obsesh' $8,300, Indpls.

Indianapolis, Jan. 14.

(Best Exploitation: Loew's)

Considerable activity is in evidence at the downtown boxoffices here with competition being particularly keen. Loew's and the Lyric are sharing top honors in gross business with both houses pointing towards the $10,000 mark. The former has a dual bill of 'Ah, Wilderness,' and 'If You Could Only Cook,' and the latter has a combination vaudfilm program that includes 'King of Burlesque' as the picture with Johnny Perkins heading the stage bill. The Indiana is in the money on 'Magnificent Obsession' with a probable take of $8,300, while the Circle is very mild with an indicated $3,200 on 'Dangerous.' The Apollo is coasting along on a repeat run of 'Littlest Rebel' at a fair $3,700.

Exploitation honors to Loew's with a snappy campaign that included a many-sided tie-up with General Electric on 'Cook.' Cookbooks, window displays and heralds were chief items in the hookup on 'Ah, Wilderness,' their other film on the dual bill, Loew's sent out special postcards to all the Millers in the telephone directory as well as distributed special Miller family heralds. Miscellaneous display newspaper ad tieups included one on a hair-dress with the town's leading department store and a 1,000-line ad used by a prominent furrier.

Estimates for This Week

Apollo (Fourth Ave.) (1,100; 25-40)—'Littlest Rebel' (20th). Temple pic brought back for repeat after having previously played two weeks. It built strongly at end of former run, and is justifying its encore with a fairly good $3,700. Last week 'Monte Carlo' (20th) all right at $4,200.

Circle (Katz-Feld) (2,600; 25-40)—'Dangerous' (WB). Bette Davis featured above film's title, but not strong enough to carry the load alone in face of the competition against her in other downtown spots. Results will be mild at $3,200. Last week 'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) not up to previous Hepburn pictures with a moderate $5,200.

Indiana (Katz-Feld) (3,100; 25-40)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U). Word of mouth and reviews helping this one build along to a very good $8,300. Last week 'Collegiate' (Par) did a strong $7,500 in final seven days of briefly extended run.

Loew's (Loew's) (2,800; 25-40)—'Wilderness' (MG) dualled with 'Could Only Cook' (Col). Former drew the biz and the latter was almost disregarded in ads, although considerable exploitation given it. Gross excellent at $10,000 for week. Last week 'Riff Raff' (MG) okay at $6,500.

Lyric (Olson) (2,000; 25-30-40)—'King of Burlesque' (20th) and vaude, headlining Johnny Perkins and Fred Sanborn. Strong stage and screen program; going to be a big $10,000. Last week 'No Mercy' (20th) and vaude, headlining Carl Freed and Harmonica band, plenty okay at $8,400.

SWARTHOUT 8G, PONS PIC 5G IN DENVER

Denver, Jan. 14.

First runs average or below, except Denham which is running strong with 'Rose of Rancho' Gladys Swarthout is popular here because of her appearance at Central City. 'Riffraff' and 'Dream Too Much' only average. 'Capt. Blood' in extended run after week at the Denver is doing fair at the Broadway and should take house to slightly above average figure.

Estimates for This Week

Aladdin (Huffman) (1,500; 25-35-50-60)—'Splendor' (UA). Mild at $2,000. Last week 'Mr. Hobo' (GB) did a keen business, and was set for a second week but with moderate cold wave hitting on end of week, business tapered off and film was held two days over, closed its full week at $3,500.

Broadway (Huffman) (1,500; 25-40)—'Capt. Blood' (FN), following a week at the Denver. Nice $1,200. Last week 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) copped $1,500, nice figure for this spot, used mostly for extended runs from the Denver and Aladdin. 'Rebel' had played the Denver the week previously.

Denham (Cooper) (1,500; 25-40)—'Rose of Rancho' (Par) Strong $8,000 on Swarthout's rep. Last week 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) was one of the films to suffer from the cold wave, being set for a second week, but only got three extra days as result of snow and cold; got $8,000 in first week.

Denver (Huffman) (2,500; 25-35-50)—'Riffraff' (MG) and stage band. Just average for Harlow. $5,000. Last week 'Capt. Blood' (FN) did $9,000, registering several holdouts during the week, and went to the Broadway, whence goeth most of the films that do nicely at the Denver. There it gets an extra week.

Orpheum (RKO) (2,600; 25-35-40)—'Dream Too Much' (RKO). Average $5,000. Last week 'Another Face' (RKO), backed by a strong stage show, 'French Follies,' took in $12,000, with the stage show getting most of the credit.

Paramount (Huffman) (2,000; 25-40)—'Great Impersonation' (U). Mild $2,000. Last week 'Could Only Cook' (Col) topped average by $500, finishing with $3,000.

Montreal Eases Off, 'Obsession' $9,000, 'Dream Much' $7,000

Montreal, Jan. 14.

(Best Exploitation: Palace)

Tempo slows off some currently, with outlook for nothing very startling. Pix are toss-up for audience favor, but Palace will likely win out, although a bunch of non-film fans will patronize Capitol for Pons opus. Loew's not quite up to last week, but still liable to get plenty.

Palace has 'Magnificent Obsession,' and this will build up on femme appeal. Opened big Friday (10) and should hold up for a $9,000 gross, which is good. Capitol has Pons' 'Dream Too Much' and 'Perfect Gentleman,' also good for $7,000. Loew's with a 24-girl line and 'Streamline Scandals' for another standout vaude with 'Socrates' and 'Ladies Crave Excitement' on screen should gross around $13,000. Princess showing 'Show Them No Mercy' and 'Dressed to Thrill' looks like $7,000. Cinema Imperial has 'Roman d'un Jeune Homme Pauvre' and 'Burning Gold' for $3,000. Cinema de Paris shows 'Marchand d'Amour' and 'Jeune Fille a Marier' which should gross $1,200. St. Denis bills 'Le Chemineau' and 'Le Cheri de la Concierge,' figured to gross $6,000. Nabes doing fair biz all over.

George Rotsky has capitalized on 'Magnificent Obsession' being best seller and also work of a Montreal parson to tie up with libraries and have book exhibited in department stores with special reference to picturization at Palace. Five hundred personal wires to professional men and leaders in business and society, four girls on telephones calling social registerites, dignified large scale advertising in local press, exhibition of book in libraries and department stores are making exploitation history in this city under the direction of Rotsky.

Estimates for This Week

Palace (FP) (2,700; 50)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U). Big femme appeal and Irene Dunne, local favorite, might get a five-figure gross, but at least $9,000 is sure. Last week 'Mary Burns' (Par) and 'Coronado' (Par), $7,000, fair.

Capitol (FP) (2,700; 50)—'Dream Too Much' (RKO) and 'Perfect Gentleman' (MG). Started well, but hard to guess how it will hold up; estimate is for $7,000. Last week good at $8,000 for 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and 'So Red Rose' (Par).

Loew's (M.T. Co.) (3,200; 50)—'Socrates' (WB) and 'Ladies Crave Excitement' (Emp) with 'Streamline Scandals' prez. Should go to $13,000. Last week 'Broadway Hostess' (WB) and 'Rainmakers' (RKO) with Marcus Show panicked the town for $18,000.

Princess (CT) (2,300; 50)—'No Mercy' (20th) and 'Dressed to Thrill' (20th). Good average bill at $7,000. Last week 'Could Only Cook' (Col) and 'Devil's Island' (Col) fair at $6,000.

Cinema Imperial (Ind) (1,600; 34)—'Roman Jeune Homme Pauvre' and 'Burning Gold' (Rep). This should gross $3,000. Last week 'Tout pour l'Amour' and 'Forced Landing' (Emp), $2,500.

Cinema de Paris (France-Film) (600; 50)—'Marchand d'Amour' and 'Jeune Fille a Marier' at $1,200, oke. Last week 'Chant de l'Amour' and 'Dieux s'Amusent,' $1,000.

St. Denis (France-Film) (2,300; 34)—'Le Chemineau' and 'Le Cheri de sa Concierge.' Fair, $6,000. Last week 'Dora Nelson' and 'Jeune Fille a Marier,' $6,500.

'BURNS' PLUS SPITALNY OK $17,000, WASH.

Washington, Jan. 14.

(Best Exploitation: Belasco)

Boom that began with holidays is slackening but still carrying grosses above average in most spots. Boys had been saving the good celluloid and seems to have been smart idea.

Palace is leading town easily with 'Tale of Two Cities,' as was indicated in midnight preview for New Year's Eve when audience overflowed to extra house. 'Magnificent Obsession,' other big money-maker of week, started off slowly but word of mouth is sending it up in a hurry.

Smartest exploitation of week was staged by Belasco on 'La Maternelle.' House is usually lucky to break even on foreign-language stuff, but ballyed this one in schools both as kid pic and ideal subject for French students to get a load of their grammar being spoken. School co-operated on strength of special prices to pupils and house is well in the black.

Estimates for This Week

Fox (Loew) (3,424; 25-35-60)—'Riff Raff' (MG) and vaude. Pic roundly panned, but Harlow will give house oke $22,500 with some help on stage from George Givot and Sylvia Froos. Last week, 'King of Burlesque' (Fox) took good $23,000.

Earle (WB) (2,424; 25-35-40-60-70)—'Mary Burns' (Par) and vaude. Sylvia Sidney plus lavish Spitalny stage show will get satisfactory $17,000. Last week, 'Collegiate' (Par) and Stepin Fetchit on stage shot through to swell $22,000.

Palace (Loew) (2,363; 25-35-60)—'Two Cities' (MG). Headed for beautiful $23,000. Last week, 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) got big $12,500 in second stanza.

Keith's (RKO) (1,830; 25-35-60)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U). Started slowly and built immediately. Looks like sock $15,000. Last week, 'Dream Too Much' (RKO) took big $17,000 on nine and a half days.

Met (WB) (1,853; 25-40)—'Captain Blood' (WB). Second week on mainstem romping to big $7,000. Last week, 'No Mercy' (20th) took good $6,000.

Belasco (Radin) (1,100; 25-35-50-70)—'La Maternelle' (Met). House sold this one heavily to kid-minded and French students, will get big $4,500. Last week, 'New Gulliver' (Amkino) milked in second week for passable $2,500.

Columbia (Loew) (1,263; 25-40)—'Old Kentucky' (Fox) (3d wk). Headed for sock $6,500; last week smashed house repeat record with wow $8,000.

PTSBG'S $10,000 'OBESSION' IS MAGNIF

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14.
(Best Exploitation: Alvin)

Expected reaction following hefty New Year's boom isn't failing boys, but couple of stand-outs developing; too, and things aren't as bad as anticipated. Big help, too, was Sunday trade, first time since seven-day week was legalized that business has been anything like it, and an encouraging sign.

'Magnificent Obsession' got away to great Sunday opening at Alvin, with smash proportions indicated, and certain to work into h.o. For opening session, pretty close to $10,000, best here in months, with or without stage shows, looked for and with breaks may even hit beyond that. Stanley, too, keeping up into real money with 'Splendor' and presentation, week-end trade pointing to around $21,000, a figure that should bring no complaints. Started off only fair Friday (10) but management re-booked to open following day 'Gold Medal Boys' band on stage. Local organization a sensation week before in Major Bowes unit, and takings skyrocketed, hitting beyond $6,000 on Saturday.

Fulton, announced to close last week, decided at last minute to stay open and shoved in double bill, 'Charlie Chan's Secret' and 'Hitch-Hike Lady' on Friday (10). Got little or no advance billing and as result got away sluggishly but Sunday a big help and should bring about fairly decent $3,000. Nothing doing for 'Collegiate' at Penn and will be lucky to wind up with $8,500, pretty unimpressive, while Warner also slipping a bit with '7 Keys to Baldpate' and 'Millions in the Air,' maybe $4,600. Downtown down to five first-run sites again with closing last week of Davis, but returns to six Feb. 7 when George Jaffe, former operator of Variety (burlesque), relights old Harris as Casino with vaude and pictures.

Alvin promoted brisk campaign on 'Magnificent Obsession,' selling it wisely from tear-jerking angle (Continued on page 29)

Seattle Duals OK B. O., but Complaints Shows Run Too Long

Seattle, Jan. 14.
(Best Exploitation: 5th Ave.)

Still stressing the dual policy at all houses, but exploitation lead goes to 5th Ave., where 2,000 teachers in local colleges and other schools were contacted through personal letters, calling attention to 'Tale of Two Cities.'

Consolidation of Hamrick and Evergreen publicity departments eliminates synthetic rivalry between the two, formerly headed by Vic Gauntlett and Eddie Rivers separately.

Duals working out for increased b.o., but many complain some about shows being too long.

Estimates For This Week

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (900; 27-37-42)—'Riffraff' (MG) and 'Stars Over Broadway' (WB) dual. Moved from Orpheum, good at $4,100. Last week 'Collegiate' (Par) and 'No Mercy' (20th) dual, 2nd week, nine days, $4,100, okay.

Coliseum (Evergreen) (1,800; 21-32)—'Here's to Romance' (20th) and 'Red Salute' (UA) dual split with 'In the Air' (MG) and 'Way Down East' (20th) dual. Indicates fair trade at $3,000. Last week, 'Rendezvous' (MG) and 'Last Outpost) (Par) dual, $3,700, good.

5th Ave. (Evergreen) (2,400; 27-37-42)—'Two Cities' (MG) and 'Coronado' Par) dual. Going after educationally inclined with 'Tale' and strong for $8,000; last week. 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and 'Night Out' (U) dual, $13,200, great.

Liberty (J.-vH) (1,900; 16-27-37)—'Splendor' (UA) and 'One Way Ticket' (Col) dual. Heavy newspaper campaign, but $3,500 is slow trade. Last week 'Could Cook' (Col), singleton, nine days, 2d week, $5,100, good.

Music Box (Hamrick) (900; 27-37-42)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and 'Night Out' (U) dual. Moved from 5th Ave. Expects good, $4,300. Last week, 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) and 'Millions In Air' (Par), $4,800, big.

Orpheum (Hamrick) (2,700; 27-37-42)—'King of Burlesque' (20th) and 'Baldpate' (RKO), dual. Fair pace, $6,500. Last week 'Riffraff' (MG) and 'Stars Over Broadway' (WB) dual, $9,800, good, in nine days.

Paramount (Evergreen) (3,106; 21-27-32)—'Mr. Hobo' (GB) and 'Dr. Hannigan' (FN) dual. Nine days to get back to Friday change day; big, $7,000. Last week, 'Last Night' (U) and 'Nevada' (Par) dual, $6,100, big.

'CAPT. BLOOD' HEADS PORTLAND AT $7,500

Portland, Ore., Jan. 14.
(Best Exploitation: Broadway)

Holiday trade continues to come in strong, with all houses making both ends fat in the middle. Parker's Broadway splurged this week for 'Captain Blood.' Exploitation rang the bell for another winning episode at that house.

All houses had new pix this week except the Orph, which holds 'Bride Comes Home' after a great first week. No raves for this pic, but the b.o. score was terrific, bouncing the Orpheum into No. 1 gross spot on its opening days.

'Splendor' at the UA is only mild. That house has had a procession of coin-getters, and just closed big 17-day run of 'Two Cities' to okay results. Broadway also netted a bagful with 'Night at the Opera' for two weeks over the holiday season.

Some competish this week with Globe Shakespeare Players, legit. road unit, for three days at the Shrine Auditorium, and Ballet Russe one day. No apparent effects on pic grosses, which continue to show growing results of greater exploitation during the past month. Exploitation in these parts runs to conservative copy, but now in larger quantities. Idea is not only to sell the pic, but also to build wider confidence in screen entertainment.

Estimates for This Week

Broadway (Parker) (2,000; 25-40)—'Capt. Blood' (FN). Answering to exploitation for a big first week around $7,500 and may hold. Last week 'Night at Opera' (MG) closed an okay second week, $4,300; first great at $8,200.

United Artists (Parker) (1,000; 25-40)—'Splendor' (UA). Only fair $4,800. Last week 'Two Cities' (MG) closed big 17-day run to good biz and raves; first week $8,100.

Paramount (Evergreen) (3,000; 25-40)—'Musketeers' (RKO) and 'Navy Wife' (20th) good combo getting biz on the first pic, $5,000. Last week 'Pacific Fleet' (WB) and 'Chan's Secret' (Fox) held this house up for $5,700.

Orpheum (Hamrick-Evergreen) (2,000; 25-40)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and 'Uncle Dudley' (20th) (2d week). Good for $5,500; first week hit the burg's top gross for a great $9,200.

Mayfair (Parker-Evergreen) (1,400; 25-40)—'Dan Mathews' (Col) and 'Stormy' (U). Average play for $2,000. Last week 'Collegiate' (Par) closed a good second week for this house at $3,200, following $6,000 first week at the Orpheum.

K.C.'S B.O. BALLY, 'OBSESH' $12,000

Kansas City, Jan. 14.
(Best Exploitation: Main Street)

If printer's ink can turn the trick the home offices of several chain theatres are in for some agreeable surprises this week, as the local managers have purchased space in large amounts.

On account of the changes of opening dates during the holidays the current week sees first run openings on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, perfect for those who like to catch the opening shows.

Loew's Midland's 'Ah, Wilderness' will likely top the town. 'Collegiate at the Newman is enjoying a fast play and 'Magnificent Obsession' at the Tower is showing increased strength. At the Uptown 'Comes the Band' and 'Chan's Secret' are strong.

The Mainstreet has 'Two in the Dark,' with Ada Leonard's revue on stage and going strong. Management gave the Leonard unit the works for publicity. Spread extra displays through the papers, had thousands of special heralds in railroad and bus stations for 100 miles surrounding the city; thousands of another two-color folder distributed by a coffee company; stills of the star in night clubs and hotels, radio plugs, co-operative ads with department stores, and other stunts; nice.

Estimates for This Week

Mainstreet (RKO) (3,200; 25-35-50)—'Two in the Dark' (RKO) and Ada Leonard's 'Cocktails of 1936.' Stage show drew nice reviews and holding up nicely; looks like close to $14,500, good. Last week, 'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) and Benny Heroff's revue (9 days), $15,500, o.k.

Midland (Loew) (4,000; 25-40)—'Wilderness' (MG). In for nine days and will hang up some nice figures, and should be close to $19,500, big. Last week, 'Riff Raff' (MG) got away to a swell start New Year's Eve and held firm until the last two days closing with $14,800, good but not quite what was expected.

Newman (Par) (1,900; 25-40)—'Collegiate' (Par). [illegible]ight down the alley for the big Newman following of youngsters who go for the light and frothy; in for eight days and management predicting close to $10,000, great. Last week, 'Rose of Rancho' (Par), eight and three-quarter days, helped by star being home town girl, turned in a sweet $10,400.

Tower (Rewot) (2,200; 25-35)—'Obsession' (U) and 'Black and White' revue. Management went on the billboards for the picture, and gave it extra newspaper space; better than normal, headed for near $12,000, big. Last week, 'Could Only Cook' (Col) and stage show $7,500, good.

Uptown (Fox) (2,040; 25-40)—'Comes the Band' (MG) and 'Chan's Secret' (20th). Saturday opening shows brought good business and indications are for close to $4,000; nice. Last week, 'King of Burlesque' (20th) and 'Navy Wife' (20th), dual, 10 days, $8,000, good.

'Riffraff' $18,500, 'Obsession' $9,500, 'Burlesk' 5G, Balto

Baltimore, Jan. 14.
(Best Exploitation: Century)

Clear, bracing weather this week, but the town on the whole has settled down after the flurry of the holidays. Ironic that all during the Xmas-New Year stanzas when the houses hung up their most attractive packages, sloppy weather held forth continually and as such undoubtedly cramped biz. And now the burg seems to be drawing tight the purse strings after the spending orgies that attended the seasonal spending spree.

The Century is doing nicely with 'Riffraff,' but under other recent Harlow starrers at this vaudfilmer. Withal, $18,500 is very solid.

For his farewell flourish as Loew p.a. in Balto Herb Morgan rang up a rattling good campaign for 'Riffraff,' plugging fact that Miss Harlow is now 'honeybrown'-haired. Top stunt was promotion of a booth at the Federal Housing Show at Armory where Century was only theatre represented by exhibit. Show was visited by estimated 85,000 persons.

Estimates for This Week

Century (Loew-UA) (3,000; 15-25-35-40-55-66)—'RiffRaff' (MG) and vaude. Pic not very well cottoned to, though Jean Harlow presence pumping trade that will shove gross to solidly good $18,500. Last week 'Wilderness' (MG) and vaude headed by Silvia Froos, swell $21,000.

Hippodrome (Rappaport) (2,300; 15-25-35-40-55-66)—'Could Only Cook' (Col) and 'Hit Parade' unit on stage. Wobbling to weak $11,000. Last week in nine days 'Dream Too Much' (RKO) and vaude copped swell $19,000.

Keith's (Schanberger) (2,500; 15-25-30-35-40)—'Obsession' (U). A veritable blaze at the b.o. for the best week house has had all this season. Smashing $9,500 and will hold on for a while. Last week 'Show No Mercy' (20th) grabbed a grand $6,500.

New (Mechanic) (1,800; 15-25-30-35-40-55)—'King of Burlesque' (20th). Well liked and building on press reports and public praise. Looks likely to touch $5,000, nifty, and cause house to h.o. film few extra days, though at outset move was not in mind of mgt. Last week, third of 'Littlest Rebel' (20th), nice $3,000.

Stanley (WB) (3,450; 15-25-35-40-55)—'Collegiate' (Par). Fairish $7,000. Last week, second of 'Capt. Blood' (WB), corking $6,800. 15-day run, $21,800, splendid.

'RANCHO' $5,000, L'VIL GROSSES EASING OFF

Louisville, Jan. 14.
(Best Exploitation: State)

Decided letdown in grosses evident in this burg with the heavy spending over the holidays putting a real crimp in the takings.

'Ah, Wilderness' at the State indicates $5,300, with the Rialto right behind at $5,000 with 'Rose of the Rancho.'

National, only vaudefilm house in town, has cut down the vaude to four days a week, Friday-Monday-Tuesday-Thursday double features.

Exploitation looks like a toss-up between the State, Brown, Strand and Rialto, although Rialto has a little the edge on amount of newspaper lineage. Also usual tie-up with book stores, libraries, etc., might be a little help in boosting the take to respectable figures.

Estimates for This Week

Loew's State (3,000; 15-25-40)—'Wilderness' (MG). Strong cast names and fact that play showed here at Memorial Auditorium about year ago with Cohan in lead whetting appetites to see film version; $5,300 indicated, with biz dropping off after nice opening. Last week 'Riff Raff' (MG) enjoyed the best take in town, $7,000, with holiday opening and strong weekend biz.

Rialto (4th Ave) (3,000; 15-25-40)—'Rose of Rancho' (Par). Operatic film not the draw hoped for, due probably to slight familiarity with names of Swarthout, etc.; far from smash at $5,000. Last week 'Collegiate' (Par) took $6,500, in spite of adverse circumstances, weather being chief opposish.

Brown (Ind) (1,500; 15-25-40)—'Mister Hobo' (GB). Arliss $2,000 somewhat under customary mark. Last week 'Dream Too Much' (RKO) disappointing $1,800.

Strand (4th Ave) (1,500; 15-25-40)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U). Not much activity for this one, and will be satisfied with $2,800, light. Last week 'King of Burlesque' (20th) took $3,500, neat.

Mary Anderson (Lisbon) (1,000; 25-40)—'Dangerous' (WB). Will wind up week with $3,500, good. 'Midsummer Night's Dream' booked to follow at roadshow prices. Last week 'Capt. Blood' (FN) took nice $3,000, second week.

National (Ind) (2,400; 15-25-40)—'Cappy Ricks' (Rep). Grosses took a dip, and vaude only in four days. Balance of week will play double-features; $3,500 indicated, not so forte. Last week 'Forbidden Heaven' (Rep) and vaude had benefit of midnight show N. Y. E. and hefty weekend, for take of 4,500.

Alamo (Ind) (900; 15-25)—'Gallant Defender' (Col) and 'Couldn't Take It' (Col), dual. Looks to take light $1,200. Last week 'Transatlantic Tunnel' (GB) and 'Whispering Smith' (20th), dual, $1,500, fair.

'OBSESSION' AT $20,000 IN HUB, MAGNIFICENT

Boston, Jan. 14.
(Best Exploitation: Keith's)

For straight film strength 'Magnificent Obsession' at the Keith Memorial seems to have edge on town at $20,000 pace. Getting ace play from women on matinees, but plenty femmes are dragging in escorts for night shows to swell the take to that very satisfactory figure. 'Rose of Rancho' at the Met will stage show, will run behind at $16,000.

At the Keith Boston, stage draw is pulling mightily for a beautiful $27,000 finish, with 'Red Salute' (Col).

State and Orpheum holding over 'Two Cities,' after smash opening week. Between two stands, will win about $22,000. Opener a sock $44,000, outstanding gross in town for current season.

Some advance scare on 'Red Salute' when threatening phone calls and letters promised some action in protest from students, but nothing materialized.

Keith office is apparently taking its local vaude producing seriously. Charles Koerner, divisional manager, now commuting between Hub and N. Y., spending three days a week in New York on production. Koerner working this week on 'Sketch Book,' for Boston opening this weekend; then the Joe Cook show has to be lined up. Ruth Etting-Toby Wing and Frank Fay-Lupez Velez shows also in the making.

In spite of Boston Post ban on Keith publicity through an alleged discriminatory boner pulled by the company's ad department, Jack Granara's crew took Jackie Coogan and Betty Grable from the current stage show and took them over the exploitation jumps for some cute results. Pulled usual gag at the station when they arrived, posed them with the governor, tied up with the departure of a special train loaded with refrigerator salesmen. All this augmented with a generous showing of interviews and photos. On 'Obsession' a special preview was arranged for Lloyd Douglas, author, a local man, who had not seen his picture previously.

Estimates for This Week

Keith Boston (RKO) (2,300; 35-50-65)—'Red Salute' (UA) and Hollywood stage show. Whooped up bully biz here right from opening hour, and will take around $27,000, socko. Last week $25,800 on 'Another Face' (RKO) and stage show, Jane Froman headlined.

Met (M & P) (4,200; 35-50-65)—'Rose of Rancho' (Par) and Gourfain-produced stage show. Slightly blah at $16,000 pace. Last week oke $26,000 for 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and Phil Spitalny on stage.

Keith Memorial (RKO) (2,900; 25-35-50)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U). Very attractive here and heading towards dandy $20,000. 'Dream Too Much' (RKO) not up to expectations last week at $17,000.

State (Loew) (3,200; 25-35-40-50)—'Two Cities' (MG) (2d wk). After boom opening frame, this week around $11,000; last week $21,500. Makes a 16-day run for this one.

Orpheum (Loew) (3,000; 25-35-40-50)—'Two Cities' (MG) (2d wk). Will hit around $11,000, oke. First week bango $22,500.

Paramount (M & P) (1,800; 25-35-50) — 'Dangerous' (WB) and 'Broadway Hostess' (WB), dual. Doing fair biz at $8,000. Last week 'Capt. Blood' (WB), single, 2d week, hauled in a very satisfactory $8,800.

Fenway (M & P) (1,600; 25-30-40-50)—'Dangerous' (WB) and 'Broadway Hostess' (WB), double. Hitting the medium groove at $5,000. Last week $4,800 for 2d frame of 'Capt. Blood' (WB).

Scollay (M & P) (2,700; 25-35-40-50)—'Capt. Blood' (WB) and 'Millions in Air' (Par), dual. Look hot here, even after two weeks at Par and Fenway, should register good $9,000. Last week $7,500 for 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) and 'Stars Over Broadway' (WB), dual.

Too Many Musicals Sink Philly B. O.'s but 'Burlesque' Oke $15,000

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.
(Best Exploitation: Fox)

Town is overrun with tune films this week and it has been proved on numerous occasions that Philly can only take small doses of this type of fare. Answer: signs point to a batch of low grosses.

Musical pix include 'King of Burlesque,' winding up a two week engagement at the Fox tonight (14th); 'Collegiate' at the Stanley; 'First a Girl,' short-run offering at the Aldine and 'Dance Band' on the Earle screen. To these can be added the Karlton's second run of 'I Dream Too Much.'

'First a Girl,' on fair notices, is staying nine days at the Aldine, although biz hasn't really warranted that. Won't get more than $8,000 for nine days, with 'Strike Me Pink' following.

'King of Burlesque' proved a pleasant surprise and in its second week at the Fox should hook a neat $15,000, above the first week average biz at the house.

'Dangerous' at the Boyd figures for $11,500, a little below average, and 'Collegiate' at the Stanley won't get much over $12,000, which is under the new 7-day average for house. Both pix will scram after single week runs.

'Riff Raff' has been doing nicely at the Stanton and will have completed a 15 days' run when it closes there tonight. Last eight days will give it $7,500.

Although the Earle's pic, 'Dance Band' was lambasted by the crix house will do as well as any in town because of the presence of Bowes Amateur unit No. 2 on the stage. Week's gross should reach $17,000.

Keith's, Karlton and Arcadia, all with second run films, will do fair trade this week and no more.

Last week's business proved decidedly disappointing in several instances. New Year's Eve was exceptionally big, but after that, despite good weather, several films were badly jolted. Most disappointing was 'Tale of Two Cities,' which had $30,000 in its first week at the Boyd and then slumped. Got two days over second week, but only managed to gross $23,500 in that nine days' period.

Estimates for This Week

Aldine (1,200; 40-55-65)—'First a Girl' (G-B). In for nine days and won't get over $8,000 for that period. 'Strike Me Pink' Friday. Last week, 'Dream Too Much' (RKO) got $7,200 on second session.

Arcadia (600; 25-40-50)—'Whipsaw' (MG). Six-day second week of second run ended last night (Monday) with $2,600 gross. 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) today, also second run.

Boyd (2,400; 40-55)—'Dangerous' (WB). In for a week with so-so $11,500 seen. 'Magnificent Obsession' on Friday. Last week 'Two Cities' (MG). Slid fast after great first week; $23,000 in last nine days.

Fox (3,000; 40-55-65)—'King of Burlesque' (20th) and stage show. Ends 2d week today and is getting $15,000, which is good. 'Professional Soldier' (20th) tomorrow. 'Burlesque' went to a sturdy $22,500 in its first week.

Earle (2,000; 25-40-50)—'Dance Band' (FD) and vaude. Bowes Amateurs (No. 2) will give house a nice $17,000 week. Last week 'Baldpate' (RKO) and vaude. Only $14,000.

Karlton (1,000; 25-35-40)—'Dream' (RKO). Second run. Maybe $3,400; last week 'Kind Lady' (MG). First run, $3,800, fair.

Keith's (2,000; 30-40-50)—'Captain Blood' (WB). Second run. Ought to get nice $4,000. Last week 'Another Face' (RKO). First run. Dismal $2,200.

Stanley (3,700; 40-55)—'Collegiate' (Par). Opened Saturday. Just a so-so $12,000 indicated. Last week 'Captain Blood' (WB) $19,000 in ten days—not what was hoped for.

Stanton (1,700; 30-40-50)—'Riff-raff' (MG). Ending second week today (Tuesday), which gives it two weeks and a day; $7,500 for the eight days after $10,000 first week.

A First National Picture

Advance Production Chart

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

VARIETY inaugurates with this issue a new service department for general information of the motion picture industry, and, it is hoped, of particular value to theatre operators. It is called VARIETY'S Advance Production Chart.

Of import to the exhibitor, in the week to week arrangements of his film bookings, is an accurate report of production activities from the Hollywood studios. Such information is intended as a guide to film rental commitments. Many theatre men have passed up money making attractions through non-delivery of certain listed films. The advance production chart should perform service as a barometer of future deliveries of pictures from major and independent studios whose product is released through one of the national distributing organizations.

It shall not be the intention to anticipate in advance of completion of a film the box office merits of a picture. Such judgment is reserved until publication of the studio preview by 'Daily Variety,' and the regular weekly VARIETY review which is written after the pictures have been viewed in theatres before paying audiences. VARIETY never reviews pictures in projection rooms on the theory that this is neither fair to the picture nor the reviewer.

Accompanying the chart, however, will be a detailed report of every picture which goes into actual production before microphone and camera. Names of the producers, directors, writers and cast will be listed. In addition, a brief description of the story material will be given, and such comments likely to be helpful to the man who pays film rental, whether in the nature of a flat rental price or on a percentage basis. Distinction will be indicated between the films contracted for the current season release and those which have yet to be assigned national exhibition dates.

The progress of production in competing studios can be watched carefully by theatre men and also by Hollywood executives. That the man who runs a theatre on a policy of four to six changes of program a week has a never ending problem of booking pictures properly from nine national distributors (and the few remaining states' rights exchanges) seemed to be news to many studio people.

With double feature exhibiting almost universal in the U. S., and with percentage dates the rule in nearly every competitive theatre situation, the ultimate revenue collected by any picture is materially affected by features concurrently produced and released by competing film companies. Never was the 'other fellow' so closely watched in show business as at the present time. VARIETY'S Advance Production Chart keeps the score on production progress, clearly indicating the studio which is abreast of its sales department's promises of deliveries, or the organization which is falling behind its schedule. Distribution season of all major companies starts on Aug. 1 each year; ends with July releases.

With the 1935-36 production season just passing its half way mark, a check-up shows 196 features of the 443 total sold to exhibitors at the beginning of the season to be completed, or ready for shipment of positive prints this week.

An additional 56 films are in process of production at the present time, of which photography has been completed on 20. Assembling, retakes, musical recording and final editing will be completed on eight of these by the end of next week. Hollywood ships on the average eight films every seven days.

Despite the reorganization of management at several of the major studios since last summer, production schedules have been maintained for the past six months at a rate of delivery which at this time prompts a prediction that nearly every plant will fulfill its sales department's commitments.

Three companies, 20th Century-Fox, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and RKO-Radio have not completed as high a proportion of the season's requirements as the number finished at Paramount and Warners.

Officials at 20th-Fox declare much time was lost early in the production season while Darryl Zanuck and staff were moving into the Westwood studio, but that the present schedule of producing, if continued for the next three months, will complete the season's schedule. M-G-M has completed three of last season's releases since the start of this season's production schedule. These are 'Whipsaw,' 'Rendezvous' and 'Bohemian Girl' (Roach), release of which has kept the flow of product at an even pace to the theatres. 'Romeo and Juliet' (Norma Shearer-Leslie Howard-John Barrymore) is not listed among the pictures for 1935-36. Assurances are given by RKO-Radio studio, of which Sam Briskin recently became operating head, that the rate of production will be increased soon, and RKO will make all, or nearly all, of the 48 features it has sold for this season.

Resume of the features now in production follows. VARIETY next week will pick up additional pictures as they start in work.

SYLVIA SCARLETT

Radio release of Pandro S. Berman production. Stars Katharine Hepburn. Features Cary Grant, Brian Aherne, Edmund Gwenn. Directed by George Cukor. Compton MacKenzie novel adapted by Gladys Unger, John Collier, and Mortimer Offner; camera, Joseph August; sound, George D. Ellis; editor, Jane Loring. At Radio City Music Hall week Jan. 9, 1936. Running time, 90 mins.

Sylvia Scarlett..........Katharine Hepburn
Jimmy Monkley..................Cary Grant
Michael Fane..................Brian Aherne
Henry Scarlett..............Edmund Gwenn
Lily ....Natalie Paley
Maudie Tilt....................Dennie Moore

Despite good production values and some strong performances, 'Sylvia Scarlett' is not a reliable candidate for public favor. The story is hard to get. It is puzzling in its tangents and sudden jumps plus the almost poetic lines that are given to Miss Hepburn. At moments the film skirts the border of absurdity and considerable of its mid-section is downright boresome.

As an acting opportunity for the star the name part is varied and colorful although frequently at the expense of credulity. Mistake seems to have been in not sticking to a broad vein of comedy. In the serious passages, notably the half-crazy jealousy of the father (Edmund Gwenn) for his young and helter-skelter wife (Dennie Moore) there is little preparation in the audience's mind for anything so serious as a suicide.

Perhaps it is not valid to ask whether anybody would really fail to suspect the true sex of such a boy as Miss Hepburn looks and acts. But while carrying this off well enough she shines brightest and is most likeable in the transition into womanhood inspired by her meeting with an artist (Brian Aherne).

Cary Grant, doing a petty English crook with a Soho accent, practically steals the picture. This is especially true in the earlier sequences. A scene in an English mansion to which Miss Hepburn, Grant and Gwenn have gone for purposes of robbery is dominated by Grant. Throughout this interlude Miss Hepburn is in the background and pretty silly pouring herself glass after glass of champagne while tossing off free verse about the bubbles being pearls that should be returned to the sea. In other sequences Grant also stands out. Aherne enters late and never overcomes the handicap.

Picture also offers Edmund Gwenn, English legit, and Natalie Paley, from Russia, and a bona fide princess, and Dennie Moore, soubrette from Broadway. Gwenn will be very useful to casting directors in Hollywood. He brings plenty of experience and versatility. It may not be so easy for the princess. Her English isn't too good and neither is her acting here. Miss Moore will be typed for goofy dames and shows promise.

Half-whimsical, almost allegorical, and with the last half having a dream-worldish element that's hard to define, and equally hard to understand, 'Sylvia Scarlett' will encounter a cross-drift of indifference to some of its basic plot situations. Transition of a group of petty crooks into a troupe of vagabond actors travelling in a two motor coach caravan is especially harsh upon the credibility of the story.

'Rose of the Rancho' is a fandango mustang meller. As such it's an inauspicious debut vehicle for Gladys Swarthout, another girl in the cycle of s.a. canaries from the Met opera who augurs promisingly for future celluloid values. It's to the credit of the featured pair—John Boles and Miss Swarthout—and a competent supporting cast, along with certain of the screen artificers that 'Rancho' shapes up like anything at all.

As a b.o. entry this will have tough wicketing. Judicious merchandizing and whatever marquee values there exist in Boles, Miss Swarthout's operatic following, Charles Bickford, Willie Howard and Herb William (who do yeoman work with the comedy chore) will chiefly account for the pull.

In this tango version of a bronc opera, there's also a schism in audience sympathies which defeats the general effect. The white (American), land-grabbers of the period who jumped the claims of the pioneering Spanish grandees, creates a mixed reaction. History having written the evolution of California into a 100% American possession now devoid of anything but faintly romantic Spanish auspices, the average film fan may find it difficult to be captured by the illusions of the premise. But, basically, it's cowboys and Indians under a different label.

Miss Swarthout, a personality songstress who knows how to hit her high registers, is dually cast as a high-caste senorita and as 'Don Carlos,' leader of the Spanish vigilantes who take the law into their own hands to combat the marauding land-grabbers. Boles is the 1852 version of a G-man, sent on from Washington to o.o. the situation. Bickford is a vaguely sympathetic heavy.

Willie Howard, as Pancho Spiegelglass, makes his broad comedy a hokum, dialectic walk-through, and the venerable Herb Williams, who also knows his comedy, gets something from a faltering role of an insurance agent in a community where a policy is issued and on the same day the insuree's beneficiaries collect.

A battery of scenarists and adaptors are concerned in the authorship pie. Benny Baker, among the scheduled cast, wound up 100% on the cutting room floor and one of the better tunes in an excellent Rainger-Robin score, 'Thunder Over Paradise,' likewise, seemingly, has been sacrificed at the altar of the celluloid shears. The title song along with 'If I Should Lose You' (the romantic thematic), 'Where is My Love,' 'Got A Gal in Californ-I-A' (Willie Howard) and some incidental stuff constitute an excellent musical setting.

But despite the incidental highlights, and some occasional flashes of the unusual, the structure is too much against 'Rancho.'

Par made 'Rancho,' from the old Tully-Belasco stage success, as a silent in 1914. In 1935 it's pretty out-moded plot stuff.

Miniature Reviews

'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO). Katharine Hepburn in a story that's hard to believe. Dubious entertainment for the public.

'Rose of the Rancho' (Par). Gladys Swarthout's film debut, co-featured with John Boles. Inept, fandango mustang meller.

'Ghost Goes West' (UA). Rene Clair's first film in English. A-1 artistically and fine business likely in the keys, but not for the tanks.

'Riff Raff' (Metro). Jean Harlow, Spencer Tracy and Harlow's new hair, with a good title and a picture that should mean box office.

'Invisible Ray' (U). Karloff-Lugosi chiller built around a novel idea. Fairly entertaining.

'Wolves of the Underworld' (British made). Slow and uninteresting for the most part. Cast practically unknown.

'The Crime of Dr. Crespi' (Republic). Eric von Stroheim in an overstressed horror picture that fails to impress.

'Morals of Marcus' (GB). Passable entertainment for smaller first runs and double feature houses. Stars Lupe Velez.

'Last of the Pagans' (MG). Life among South Sea natives. Story of more than usual interest. Looks a dualer.

'Toll of the Desert' (Com.). Weak western.

This is the first film in the English language directed by Rene Clair, ace French director. It shows that Clair still has full rein on his sense of humor; that he is still one of the screen's best from an artistic and intelligent standpoint. It should get rave reviews from critics and it should do splendid business in key spots in the U. S. and almost generally abroad. But it will probably do not so well in the minor spots.

It is probably unfair to tone down raves for the film, because as screen art it is undoubtedly a splendid piece of work. The great trouble with it for the American market is not that it pokes fun at Americans (and it does): because Americans can take it; they've shown that in the past. Trouble simply is that it's satire of a very high calibre and the great masses of American cinema patrons will find it miles over their heads. They'll laugh at some of the sequences—they can't help that—but it is not American type comedy; it isn't slapstick; it isn't hokum. And there lies the rub.

A curious, and quick reaction to the film has nothing to do with the film itself. It is the realization that, without being in the slightest pro patrie about it, the American people as a whole are amazingly good natured about themselves. Had Americans made this film, for instance, about the British, or the Scotch, or the French, or any other nation, the screams would have risen to the skies. But there will be no objection to this film. Those Americans who understand it will love it—the others will probably merely shrug their shoulders.

Story that Clair screens this time is a bit different from his past (French) efforts. It has to do with an American who indulges in that curious pastime of buying himself a Europeon castle. He picks up a Scottish manse which has only one fault: it is ancient, it is famous, it has background, it has color—but it also has a ghost. Nevertheless, the American buys the castle and imports it to America stone by stone, ghost and all. In Florida he sets it up again, his daughter, by way of romance, falling for the penniless heir of the castle and ghost.

There are some hilarious sequences in the latter part of film as the ghost comes to America. It is a well publicized ghost, of course, and there is a street procession on arrival, with ticker tape streaming, etc., which is real fun.

Robert Sherwood, in working up the story with Clair from a London Punch piece, has injected a number of hilarious sequences, and some splendid dialog. Robert Donat as the young heir and doubling as the ghost; Jean Parker as the girl; Eugene Pallette as the father, drain every possible bit of good out of their roles.

Photography is splendid and the production generally A-1. Both in the Scottish and American sequences, careful attention to detail productionally will be noted.

But it is not American in pace, the film's only real fault esthetically. And it is too ironic, too slight in story texture, and too highbrow in innuendo, for mass consumption. Donat's name will help the film.

Jean Harlow, with a new wig for extra ballyhoo, and an extremely expressive two-syllable title make a juicy combination in this instance. It ain't art; but it's box office.

Frances Marion and Anita Loos are a couple of gals who know their heart tugs, and with the masculine help of H. W. Hanemann they have supplied an excellent cast with plenty of working territory. Spencer Tracy has the real meaty part in the picture, but Miss Harlow isn't exactly snowed under, because the camera makes up for whatever the script lacked where she is concerned. Miss Harlow has the rare opportunity to be pure and hot at the same time.

Tracy's character falls just this side of being a psychopathic case. He's a conceited tuna fisherman (what has a tuna fisherman got to be conceited about?) with the ability to lead his fellow workers. He becomes the president of the union, but inexperience and a thick head based on supreme self-admiration bring about his downfall.

It is the misfortune of Miss Harlow as a beauteous wage slave in a tuna cannery to fall in love with this guy, marry him, become the mother of his child and, as the final sacrifice, go to jail for him.

Meanwhile the villain pursues her, but this time somebody around the conference table showed an exceptional sense of humor, and the villainy of Joseph Calleia is more likeable than not. As a Greek dialectician Calleia obtains a generous share of laughs, and it's this factor that relieves the otherwise intense melodrama and saves the picture. Calleia is nee Spurin-Calleia, from Broadway legit.

Calleia and several others provide the starring pair with some extraordinary support. Equally excellent in their assignments are Una Merkel, Mickey Rooney, J. Farrell MacDonald, Roger Imhof, Vince Barnett and others, particularly Miss Merkel, who very nearly makes off with the works on several occasions. George Givot has two spots in double-Greek with Calleia and looks like a possibility for straight assignments while getting results with his dialect. Joe Phillips plays an invisible man.

It's all on the waterfront and handsomely presented. Scenically the picture is reminiscent of 'Min and Bill.' Dialog vigorous and cleverly written.

Miss Harlow has a new shade of hair, but otherwise it's the same Harlow, so the constitution is quite safe. The new hue photographs as a light brown. But due to that figure a lot of the boys may not notice the change. After all, the picture only runs 85 minutes.

The Invisible Ray

Universal release of Edmund Grainger production. Stars Boris Karloff and Bela Lugosi, features Frances Drake, Frank Lawton, Walter Kingsford and Beulah Bondi. Directed by Lambert Hillyer. Story, Howard Higgin and Douglas Hodges; adaptation, John Calton; photography, George Robinson and John P. Fulton. At Roxy, N. Y., week Jan. 10, '36. Running time, 82 mins.

Dr. Janos Rukh......................Karloff
Dr. Benet..........................Bela Lugosi
Diane Rukh.....................Frances Drake
Ronald Drake....................Frank Lawton
Sir Frances Stevens.........Walter Kingsford
Lady Arabella Stevens..........Beulah Bondi
Mother Rukh........Violet Kemble Cooper
Briggs ....Nydia Westman
Headman ....Danell Haines

'The Invisible Ray' is another in Universal's cycle of horror pictures. It isn't blood-curdling to the point achieved in some Hollywoodian efforts but it is different and fairly entertaining. An easy number to sell, 'Ray' should do pretty good business. For box office value it has both Boris Karloff and Bela Lugosi, names which goosepimple addicts immediately associate with spine chillers.

Backgrounded familiarly and photographed for eerie effect, the story doesn't make quite the effort to chill that 'Invisible Man' and the 'Frankenstein' series have. It goes along for quite a distance with its menace suggested, but not with any definite signs that it will arrive.

Scenes in Africa are a bit absurd but the radium idea and the power it generates makes a grand excuse for horror stuff. On the expedition into Africa are three scientists and the wives of two, plus a young chap who seems to be along largely to see what it's all about and to make eyes at Karloff's pretty wife. The latter, mistaking her husband's plight with radium poisoning for cooling affection toward her, she goes back to Europe with the boy. The other scientists go back, too, and capitalize on the radium discovery until Karloff, his mind now making him a madman, starts to radium them out of existence. All go except the boy and girl who shoulder the romantic interest, Frances Drake and Frank Lawton. Neither make much of an impression. Karloff himself is eaten up by the radium for a stark finish. He and Lugosi stand away out in an otherwise average cast. Violet Kemble Cooper as Karloff's mother, is over-theatrical.

Photographic job on 'Ray' is to the credit of the two men who headed the camera crew, George Robinson and John P. Fulton.

Wolves of the Underworld

(BRITISH MADE)

Regal release of Julius Hagen production. Starring Godfrey Tearle. Director, George A. Cooper. Based on play by Arthur Rugby and R. H. Douglas. At the Chaloner, N. Y., as half of double feature program, one day, Jan. 10, '36. Running time, 50 mins.

Richard Sabine.............Godfrey Tearle
Joan Harding.....................Isla Bevan
Dr. Orton Munroe.........Russell Thorndike
Gilbert Heath................Michael Hogan
John Heath. ....Kynaston Reeve
Billy Oakhurst.................Roland Culner
Superintendent Sabine.........John Tumbull

Not much of a cast and not much of a picture. This British-made film offers only slight appeal for the States. Old-timers, perhaps, could recall haltingly the name of Godfrey Tearle and he looks oldish in his role of hero-lover. As for the rest of the cast, none is so well known as an understudy over here.

Tearle enters story an unknown and exits from the picture as a successful lawyer-detective. A blonde with sighing hips drafts him to solve her household mysteries. Seems her uncle is a murderer and additionally harbors an escaped convict. Tearle solves everything by thinking.

Whole thing is unreeled very literally. The black backgrounds throughout the picture only dull reception. There isn't the slightest trace of humor to be caught and often the shallow complexities of the drama are too obvious to be interesting.

Not much more can be said for the acting.

The Crime of Dr. Crespi

Republic release of John H. Auer's production. Stars Eric von Stroheim. Dwight Frye featured. Directed by John H. Auer. Adapted from Edgar Allen Poe's 'The Premature Burial.' Story, John H. Auer; adaptation, Lewis Graham, Edward Olmstead; associate producer, Herb Hayman; camera, Larry Williams; editor, Leonard Wheeler. At the Rialto, N. Y., commencing Jan. 10, '36. Running time 64 mins.

Eric von Stroheim's entrance into the field of horror pictures does not get him very far. Overaction and overstress in a creaky adaptation of Edgar Allen Poe's 'The Premature Burial' brings laughs where none are sought. Even with better acting and direction it still would fail to be convincing.

Von Stroheim plays the part of Crespi, the surgeon who induced suspended animation in his rival that he might gloat over the latter's discomfiture. He fails utterly to impress. Toward the close some of his facial expressions got the laugh, and once before there was a chuckle as he stood before a mirror and smoothed down his nearly clean shaven head. It was a natural reaction to a story in which the action has been piled on too thickly. He never for even an instant conveys the remotest suggestion of a professional man; particularly a noted surgeon.

It is cheap melodrama crudely played and while it occasionally shocks, it is a feeling of disgust rather than of horror. With poor taste the grim details of the funeral and burial are over elaborated; excerpts from the burial service, the journey to the grave and even the lowering of the casket and the filling in of the pit, not to mention the subsequent exhumation. It is disgusting rather than impressive and not at all relieved by a main force interpolation at the start and end of the picture of an excitable Italian who is the father of quintuplets. This gets more legitimate laughs, but both sequences are a bit dirty, and out of place, as well. It would take more than a couple of real laughs to make this palatable.

The idea is there, and could probably have been developed into something effective in a macabre way, but in this practically every opportunity has been muffed.

Dwight Frye is hopelessly sunk in his part, with Paul Guilfoyle given a better chance, since he has fewer and less flambouyant lines to speak. Harriet Russell strives bravely for her assignment and at least succeeds in keeping it from being too overstressed. Geraldine Kay and Jeanne Kelly, as nurses, are easy to look at. But they are not on screen much. As a baby scarer this is a weak entry.

SCHWARZE ROSEN

('Black Roses')
(GERMAN MADE)

Berlin, Jan. 2.

Ufa production and release. Stars Lilian Harvey, features Willi Fritsch and Willi Birgel. Directed by Paul Martin. Script by Curt J. Braun, Walter Supper, Paul Martin.

(In German)

Lilian Harvey's first picture after her return from Hollywood is no milestone marker. Though expectation was kept at a boiling point by Ufa's consistent publicity throughout the production period, the film will not add numerically to this English-German girl's fans of yore. But there is still space enough for the frail Lilian on the roster of the rather hefty female screen stars here, to assure her a satisfactory spot.

Suppression of Finland by Russia is the film's subject. Erkki Collin, fighting for Finnish freedom, is wounded when a political meeting is broken up by Russian troops. He escapes and takes refuge in the house of Marina Feodorowna, ballet dancer at the Helsingfors opera. It is love at first sight and, though a Russian, she aids Collin to contact his comrades.

The two are surprised by the Governor, an admirer of the dancer, who daily sends her black roses. He sees through their pretense that Collin is a dancing teacher, and asks him to leave with him in his carriage. Collin believes he is under arrest, but the Governor dismisses him on the road, saying that he is in the habit of picking out his own guests. To convince Collin that she is not the Governor's mistress, Marina comes to live with him.

Pressure on the Finns becomes stronger. Their National festival is brutally broken up by riding Cossacks. The young Finns prepare a final blow against the Governor. They will cut off his military protection during a ballet at the opera house and demand greater freedom from him. If he does not accede they will keep him a prisoner. Afraid for Collin's life, Marina warns the Governor. House is surrounded by troops and the nucleus of the Finnish movement, including Collin, is put into prison. Siberia will be their next abode. But Collin is set free when Marina gives the Governor her promise of marriage. As Collin sails out of the harbor toward a freer country, Marina poisons herself.

Most imaginative moments of the film are in the arrangement of mass scenes. The national festival with its fires blazing into the dark sky, the opera ballet interrupted by Collin's impassioned speech and the wholly surprising moment when the troops take command of the situation are seen from the film's best angles. Technically interesting but too long spun, is a horseback ride through the forest.

Miss Harvey's fragile grace is appealing in the ballet dance, but she lacks the necessary stamina for the more serious moments. Willi Fritsch is unaffected and his power in the opera house speech is a surprise. For the Governor, Willi Birgel, a comparatively new face on the screen with a good deal of stage experience to back him up, combines repressed force with an impressive appearance. Trask.

MORALS OF MARCUS

(BRITISH MADE)

Gaumont-British release of Julius Hagen production. Stars Lupe Velez; features Ian Hunter, Adrianne Allen, Noel Madison. Director, Miles Mander. From play of same name by William J. Locke; adaptation, Guy Bolton, Miles Mander; camera, Sidney Blythe. At Globe, N. Y., week Jan. 11, '36. Running time, 72 mins.

Carlotta.....Lupe Velez
Sir Marcus Ordeyne.....Ian Hunter
Judith.....Adrianne Allen
Tony Pasquale.....Noel Madison

Lupe Velez is substantially responsible for making 'Morals of Marcus' palatable program entertainment. The American star has a part that is rich in possibilities for her and she makes the most of it. With a supporting company around her that's okay, results are sufficient to insure fairly good chances for the picture on this side in engagements that are not too demanding.

The plot of 'Morals' provides suitable action and background for romantic interest even if it is a bit implausible. Its most fanciful element is the willingness of a titled English scientist to take into his home in London the girl who stowed away in his cabin on the voyage from Syria back to England. But without this premise there would be no story and no picture.

Sir Marcus Ordeyne not only fails to turn the girl over to the captain of the boat, but takes her into his imposing home. Although she's a spitfire and shocking in her manners, he sees enough in the girl to even chase after her when she flees under the mistaken notion he's going to marry her out of kindness. Picture ends in Paris where Sir Michael finds the enticing Miss Velez singing in a cheap cabaret.

Action opens in Syria where the girl, about to be sold to a Sultan in enforced marriage, stows aboard an England-bound ship. She had crawled into a crate of archealogical objects which Sir Michael is taking back to Britain and makes such a fuss when he discovers her in his cabin that he shields her from detection. Back in London a titled lady who gets her divorce in hope of marrying Sir Michael figures in the plot. She is played fairly but unimpressively by Adrianne Allen. Miss Allen suffers largely from an ineffectual personality. Noel Madison does a playboy who's on the make for Miss Velez. A steady performance is rendered by Ian Hunter.

There is a little comedy, all of it provided by the star out of the lack of sophistication which her character affords. Miss Velez sings a lullaby well enough, both in London and later in the Paris cafe. Char.

KING OF THE DAMNED

(BRITISH MADE)

London, Jan. 2.

Gaumont-British production and release. Directed by Walter Forde from Lyceum stage melodrama of the same name. Stars Conrad Veidt, features Noah Beery, Helen Vinson. Running time, 90 mins. At Tivoli, London Dec. 30, '35.

Hearty British melodrama which should draw, particularly on its native heath. Story is familiar to all filmgoers, and concerns the usual insurrection on Devil's Island. Set on a neatly disguised tropical convict island, where the governor's idea of discipline would make Bligh in 'Mutiny' look like a beginner.

Story progression is fairly straightforward and obvious. Convicts mutiny in a well-staged scrap, seize control, and with Noah Beery doing something of a Stalin, turn the island into a communal workshop, after prison authorities had been flogging 'em sick at road work.

Veidt, as the leader who eventually goes back to his native land to plead the justice of the convicts' cause, gives one of his typical performances, highly popular here.

Helen Vinson is attractive as the governor's daughter, in love with Veidt, and Beery's work has characteristic vigor. Smaller parts are all well cast, and direction makes the most of the swagger-and-knock—about.

Forde, who rates high as a native producer, made the most of the fight scenes, and despite occasional patches where it doesn't convince, the film generally has plenty of punch.

LAST OF THE PAGANS

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release of Philip Goldstone production. Features Maia and Lotus Long. Directed by Richard Thorpe. Original story and screen play, J. V. Farrow, suggested by Herman Melville's book, 'Typee'; musical score, Nat Finston; film editor, Martin G. Cohn; camera, Clyde De Vinna. At Astor, N. Y., week Jan. 7, '36. Running time, 70 mins.

.....Maia
Lilleo .....Lotus Long
Native chief.....Telo A. Tematua
Boy hunter.....Ae A Faaturia
Taro's mother.....Rangapo A Taipoo

Latest in the cycle of native dramas with tribal residents of a South Sea isle predominating. In earnest effort to reproduce habits and tribulations of the island folk, substance of plot and modern-day tempo tending to popularize entirety. Probably will mostly make double bills but elsewhere it may also do some fair single role business.

Picture is weighted down with native chatter (often with English titles appended on film) that means little. This is counter-balanced in later footage by good mixture of suspense and dramatics.

Film affords Maia, who appeared a couple of years ago in 'Eskimo', opportunity to strut his histrionic abilities in more southerly clime. His acting consists largely of athletic pantomime. Other lead is Lotus Long, also from the Alaskan epic. Both look natural in this film, flaws in the story being no fault of theirs.

Love so dominant that it overcomes superhuman obstacles is theme, although the overthrowing of these obstacles must have made even the natives marvel. Picture has its exciting episodes: underwater battle with shark, cave-in at tropical mines, struggle to capture new wives, hurricane and sailing boat lashed by waves with Maia's daring rescue.

Aside from remarkable pictorial vistas in and about the islands, some 60 male and femme native dancers swing into action and the natives, under influence of heavy imbibing, also go into a swirling bacchanal until they drop from exhaustion.

After Lotus and Maia have been reunited, following deft build-up, director goes for an anti-climax. While this brings on raging hurricane it seems uncalled for.

Director Richard Thorpe has done showmanly job in handling natives. Beauty of the islands has been caught by Clyde DeVinna's camera and musical score enhances dramatic structure.

In metropolitan spots where they go for 'goona goona' pictures, picture should have appeal. When relegated to dual bookings it may get some word-of-mouth. Wear.

A Kiralyno Huszarja

('The Queen's Hussar')

(HUNGARIAN MADE)

Budapest, Dec. 25.

Vero production and Bioscop release. Features Gyula Gozon, Kiari Balogh, Lili Berky, Laszlo Perenyi, Sandor Pethes, Ilona Dajbukat and Magda Olty. Directed by Istvan Gyorgy; screen play and music by Imre Farkas. At the Kamara and Decsi. Running time, 100 mins.

(In Hungarian)

Another yarn about the good old pre-war days, with Empress Elizabeth herself unravelling the troubles of distressed lovers—a thing she has repeatedly been featured doing on stage and film.

Every thing that is remindful of the good old times has been packed into this film: love, romance, serenades, army life, uniforms, moonlight, gypsy music. Result is a nonsensical and utterly naive picture, which absolutely fails to hit the mark or satisfy the requirements of the Budapest public. In the province, though, it may fare better, owing to the legendary figure of Empress Elizabeth.

Owing to the bad story material and the spineless direction, actors are not at their best. Only Gyula Gozon as the batman carries the day. Jacobi.

BUDAI CUKRASZDA

('Budapest Candy Store')

(HUNGARIAN MADE)

Budapest, Dec. 25.

Phoebus production and release. Features Zita Perczel, Gyula Kabos, Artur Somlay, Lili Dobos, Gyula Gozon, Basilo Perenyi and Zita Gordon. Directed by Bela Gaal. Story and screen play by Istvan Zagon. Music by Imre Hubay. Camera, Istvan Eiben. At Royal Apollo.

(In Hungarian)

Average comedy with the usual blend of love, sentimentalism and music, smartly equipped, and with a certain atmosphere of refined elegance about it. Direction and photography fairly good, though not up to the standard of foreign products.

Long-winded, mediocre story material follows the traditional, well-worn tracks, and is not even made the most of by the actors, with the exception of Kabos, who, as always, steals the show.

Zita Perczel is pretty but puppet-like, and not a great actress. Somlay, used to heavier tasks, is wasted in the conventional figure of a middle-aged painter. Perenyi, a beginner, shows promise of a developing. Jacobi.

TOLL OF THE DESERT

Commodore Pictures Corp. release of William Berke production. Features Fred Kohler, Jr. Directed by Lester Williams. Story, Allen Hall; scenario, Miller Easton; cameraman, Robert Cline. At Chaloner, N. Y., one day, Jan. 11, '36, as half of double bill. Running time, 59 mins.

Bill Carson.....Fred Kohler, Jr.
Jean.....Betty Mack
Tom Collins.....Roger Williams
Tegue.....Ted Adams
Dr. Streeter.....Edward Cassidy
Joe Carson.....Tom London
Gangster.....Jack Elliott
Gangster.....Earl Dwire
'One Eye'.....George Chesebro
Gangster.....Billy Steuer

Considerably below standard is this latest sagebrush meller. 'Toll of the Desert,' handicapped further by absence of name draw and flaws galore, will have hard time pleasing even twelve Saturday matinee patrons.

Sketchy plot uses old formula of stalwart, law-abiding son finding his father, from whom he's been separated since 4, as leader of a band of outlaws. Real effort at close, to show conflict in old man's heart as he's led away to gallows after being captured by his own son, is so miserably enacted that it fails badly.

Nearly all the fundamental mistakes of old-time westerns are incorporated in this prairie wildflower. Story rambles aimlessly most of time, actors stand around listlessly as if waiting for their cue, dialog is largely confined to one-syllable words and with few exceptions mangled by cast. Settings and photography when effort made towards production are weird combinations of the old and new, though film's action is largely confined to early 20th century. Close-ups are sad affair. Action stuff, spotted in last few reels, carries its thrills, highlight being rope climb over cliff by Fred Kohler, Jr.

Possessed of remarkable physique, young Kohler's thespian efforts are weak once he opens his mouth. Top-notch as broncho rider and rough-and-tumble fighter. Best thespian effort is by Roger Williams as the lad's father. Only female role is Betty Mack, who sings well.

Film is fair only as secondary feature on subsequent dual bills. Wear.

La Verbena De La Paloma

Don Sebastian.....Enrique Salvador

(In Spanish)

Benito Perojo's latest effort, a transfer to the screen of one of the most famous 'zarzuelas' or operettas of the books, is a faithful adaptation of the work of Vega and Breton. Because of its purely Spanish character, its market is limited, but Perojo has succeeded in puting across the atmosphere and what the Spaniards call 'ambiente' in a way that merits praise.

Plot of 'La Verbena' is the least thing about the pic. Whole production centers on reproducing the Madrid of 1893, when the street fair on the saint's day of The Virgin of the Dove was the most famous of its time. The fair today has lost its picturesque character but Breton's music is immortal and it is used plentifully, perhaps excessively, throughout the film. Best known tune, 'Donde Vas con Manton de Mantilla' ('Where are you going in your Spanish shawl') is put across well by Raquel Rodrigo and Roberto Rey. Miguel Ligero takes top comedy honors.

Perojo's handling of mass action scenes are well done. Fred Mandel's photography okay, but sound is a bit off. Ziff.

(In German)

More Nazi propaganda, but not too thick and not especially annoying. Well made technically and fairly amusing from a general entertainment standpoint. Nevertheless, will find itself restricted to Teutonic audiences solely.

Tells a story of the times of Louis XIV and how those wicked Frenchmen went after poor, defenseless Germany tooth and nail. Liselotte, the Princess of Palatinate, is lured by Louis (he's called Ludwig in this film) into a marriage with a Frenchman for political purposes. But after she leaves her lovely Heidelberg home it seems that the Frenchmen go after her poor German compatriots just the same, ravaging the land and all that pertains to it. Liselotte gives Ludwig a piece of her mind but it doesn't help, so she runs away. Her husband, the King's brother, realizing how just is Liselotte's claim that the Frenchmen are wicked, sinful people and that the Germans are angels direct from heaven, flees with her to help re-establish order in Heidelberg.

Some grandiose speeches about honor, patriotism, etc., make the object lesson pretty obvious. But Froehlich, the producer, has managed, nevertheless, to inject a lot of humor, a merry pace and some splendid characterizations which take the onus off the heavy and calculated preachments.

Renate Mueller as Liselotte is splendid, as usual. Dorothea Wiek, returned from Hollywood and an attempt at stardom, is back at home and in minor roles, where she does quite well. She has just a bit here (as was generally true of her prior to her work in 'Maedchen,' for this same producer) and handles it accurately.

Michael Bohnen, who used to be with the Metropolitan Opera in New York, doesn't do any singing here at all. He is cast as Louis and, while not looking at all like the dainty and vain French King, does a fine bit of characterization, making the character live. Eugen Kloepfer is exceptionally fine as Liselotte's father; Hilda Hildebrand overdoes the Duchesse of Montespan; Else Ehser turns the role of Maria Theresa into a caricature; Hans Stuewe is woefully miscast as Philipp of Orleans, which should have been the film's leading role and which calls for a handsome juve.

financial sources, is a usual procedure in any undertaking that requires several millions.

The Universal deal would involve upwards of $6,000,000, all told.

J. Cheever Cowdin has been supervising all preliminary steps looking towards any possible buy-in, both for Standard and Rogers. It is no secret in Wall Street that he has approached several large investment bankers looking towards handling any new issues of Universal stock that may be forthcoming once the option has been picked up and initial payment made for certain issues of Universal.

Rogers had been in New York for some time conferring with Cowdin and Universal executives before returning to Hollywood. Cowdin remains in the east. Before leaving, Rogers and Cowdin completed an exhaustive check into U and its affairs with a view to getting a complete picture of the company as it stands today. At work until midnight the day before he left (last Friday), Rogers went west with a complete record of the U setup.

A few weeks ago Rogers asked Universal to give his son, John, 18, a job of some kind to start him off in the film business. He was spotted in a minor role in the publicity department headed by Paul Gulick but resigned Friday (10) in order to return to the Coast with his father.

Not indicated whether the final deal would be closed in New York or on the Coast. It may be west, with Carl Laemmle and Carl, Jr., on the ground there. Original loan of $750,000, carrying with it 90-day option to buy U at $5,500,000, was negotiated in the west, Rogers and Cowdin coming east later.

Although only customary routine conferences are being held daily between Standard Capital (J. Cheever Cowdin) and Universal officials, it was reported in unofficial circles yesterday (Tuesday) that outlook for consummation of deal was extremely bright. Biggest task confronting Standard Capital-Rogers interests, before expiration of option date early in February, is obtaining $3,500,000 in cash and negotiable gilt-edge securities. Actually Standard-Capital-Rogers organization has only $1,500,000 in cash to obtain. Remaining amount can be in U. S. bonds or similar sec[illegible]rated as equivalent of cash.

Later, set payme[illegible] be required every six months or year but this is regarded in Wall Street as merely an underwriting job. Would be cared for through issuance of new stock, probably both preferred and common.

Fact that money rates are easy and that there is a surplus available for investment purposes has been aiding Standard Capital in its negotiations for specific funds in the street.

Shorts

'THE SIX-DAY GRIND'
With Jane and Goodman Ace
Novelty Comedy
10 Mins.
Columbus, New York
Van Beuren-RKO

Jane and Goodman Ace, likable radio couple, known as the Easy Aces, do an offscreen conversational diagnosis of the six-day bike race with scenes and action and a couple of funny silent titles.

While the subject matter is not hilarious per se, the formula used by the Aces is quite different from the usual run of shorts. The scenes at Madison Square Garden are library shots with the Aces performing as two customers in a film audience watching the show. Shan.

'COUNSELITIS'
With Leon Errol
18 Mins.
Comedy
Astor, N.

To Leon Errol's credit that this short turns out as well as it does because story is patterned on 'Pay the $2.' Concerned chiefly with Errol's arrest on trumped up shoplifting allegation and his subsequent discomfiture in court where he's charged with everything from petty larcency to dope peddling. Al Boasberg wrote and directed.

Support cast includes several standard short feature players who contribute much to effective set-up. Polished type of comedy here proves entertaining, for a change. Wear.

DAVE APOLLON CO.
'The Wishing Stone'
10 Mins.
Columbus, N. Y.
Vitaphone No. 9911

Only fault to be found here, and unusual, is that subject is too short. No new tunes, although the old ones are injected with novelty via Apollon's clever clieling by a plane's forced landing, band is whisked around the globe by virtue of the mythical powers of a stone in possession of one of the orchestra. First stop is Mexico and suitably costumed boys deliver 'La Cucaracha.' Then Russia, Hawaii and U. S. successively.

Although predominating throughout, Apollon hits his pace in the vodka atmosphere. Roy Mack directed, and obviously on the job.

'ROMANCE OF THE WEST'
Technicolor
With Phil Regan, Henry Armetta, Dorothy Dare
16 Mins.
Stanley, N. Y.
Vitaphone No. 9109

Little of this short is devoted to romance, but there is lots of west in gorgeous panorama. During the unreeling Phil Regan extolls the beauties pictured via a smooth rendition of 'West of the Great Divide' sung to Dorothy Dare. Government helped in permitting shots of Yellowstone Park, the Grand Canyon and Yosemite Park for background.

Story revolves around a grounded plane en route to Chicago. Passengers are befriended at a nearby ranch which is location for Miss Dare's dancing and most of Henry Armetta's comedy. Time element hampers latter and he doesn't get much chance. Quickly hated romance between Regan, one of cow hands, and Miss Dare is excuse for Regan's yodeling.

Tinted process aids this in surpassing what would be an ordinary travelog with injected story.

BUSTER KEATON
With Lona Andre, Harold Goodwi Grant Withers
'Three on a Limb'
Comedy
12 Mins.
Roxy, N. Y.

Although much slapstick of a familiar character finds its way into this two-reeler, it is one of the better of the Buster Keaton shorts of recent date. Among other things, it is fast all the way, winding up with more than the usual speed as three different men try to push themselves into position to marry the girl who's standing ready with a minister and the folks.

Keaton is the dumb-cluck member of the trio, the others trying to get hitched to the girl being a rough sailor and a tough motorcycle cop. Laughs are not big but come close together toward the end where the marriage sequence figures.

Short opens at a roadside eating establishment up to which Keaton draws in his broken-down Ford in quest of a sandwich. He falls for one of the waitresses and accompanies her home to get the parental okay. He isn't favored, being a dolt type and this time dressed as a boy scout, but he wins in the end by means which are fair if seemingly foul. Lona Andre, Harold Goodwin and Grant Withers are among those in a rather good supporting cast. Char.

PARAMOUNT, N. Y.

Glen Grey and his Casa Loma orchestra on a holdover are augmented by Mike Reilly-Eddy Farley and the Onyx Club Boys (6), now nationally famed for their 'Music Goes Round and Round' which Reilly-Farley composed and popularized at the West 52d street (N. Y.) nitery, the Onyx Club. That the b.o. draught from the Onyxites is potent was amply manifested at the show caught.

With 'Rose of the Rancho' (Par) on screen, in which the Met and radio canary, Gladys Swarthout, is co-featured in her filmusical debut, the contrast of the high C's and Farley-Reilly's 'Round' is one of those okay b.o. circumstances that should please both factions. Incidentally, if Reilly and Farley are to establish themselves in the show biz firmament as seems to be their destiny on the strength of their song, it wouldn't be a bad idea for them or their managers to decide officially whether Mike Reilly is to be Riley or Reilly, and stick to the one spelling.

The in-person hors d'ouvres to the celluloid course starts with Don Baker's organolog glorifying the Wurlitzer, illustrating how the instrument can give out sacred music, hot, symph, sweet, etc. Too long and a lull. This reaction is furthered by the placid shorts preceding. Besides the Par newsreel there's a 'Liebestraum' short, as flaccid as the classical musical composition suggests, and a Fleischer Technicolor, 'Somewhere in Dreamland'.

The Casa Loma Holds A Meeting' tees off smartly with Pee Wee Hunt vocally detailing that this is a syncopation corporation, Glen Grey prez, whence follows some intricate instrumentation by the brass, reeds and rhythm batteries. Combo of 16 is a corking terp team and also knows its stage values.

Carolyn Marsh, added, retards some of the good effect with three vocal solos, two right down her alley. They are 'Cheek to Cheek' opening and 'Top of Your Head' closing, both rhythm numbers. But the midriff portion, 'Parli Mi d'Amour, Mariu' (in its original Italian) and again reprised with Al Silverman's American translation of the C. A. Bixio waltz ballad, as 'Tell Me That You Love Me Tonight', isn't for her.

Running time sequence, as result, necessitates a medley of 'Miami' and 'Thanks Million' by the band which lets it down. Hunt then picks it up with the saucy 'Beesie Couldn't Help It,' but it remains for Kenny Sargent to wham 'em with his 'So This Is Heaven,' 'I Cried For You' (oldie revival) and an encore, 'Blanket of Blue' (also an oldie), all registering for smacko returns. Sargent is a personable youngster who knows how to sell his pops and, from the mezz loge of the Par, suggests a personality that might rate a screen-test.

Reilly-Farley and the Onyx Club Boys sock out their own 16 minutes of effective hokum. Reilly, with a fetching Duranteish personality and and easy stage presence that more than casually suggests the Schnoz, is the fulcrum throughout of the sextet. Eddy Farley, if he's to be accorded co-billing, must either be built up for presentation purposes or played down altogether. Reilly almost takes everything away from his collaborators, whether it's in selling the opener, 'Clap Your Hands,' 'Snap Your Fingers', the ensuing 'Double Trouble' or the finaleing 'Music Goes Round,' as he illustrates how to push the little valve down.

'Clap Your Hands' is another of the madcap sextet's Onyx Club nonsensalties and suggests wide (if not as wide as 'Music') popularity possibilities. But in 'Goes Round' the kiddies are really on native heath. Working as a swing sextet, up in front of the Casa Lomaites, the big band accompans the Onyxers and withal it's a grand pluefest for the 1936 version of 'Yes, We Have No Bananas'. Where the stereopticon eye effect vamped off with 'Smoke Rings' (the Casa Loma thematic) at this portion a panorama of notes, going round-and-round, visually illustrates the Reilly-Farley ditty. Abel.

IMPERIAL, TORONTO

Toronto, Jan. 11.

New hi-hat policy at the Jack Arthur showshop, which currently introduces a 61-piece symphony orchestra as the marquee draw plus Lily Pons in 'I Dream Too Much' (RKO-Radio). Looks like a 'show-them-no-mercy' trend as far as the Imperial audience is concerned.

Retention of Reginald Stewart and 'his' symphony (two-thirds of the membership drawn from the Toronto Symphony Orchestra) was plugged as meeting 'the public's demand for the finest in music.' Judging from the opening day's business, the public is not particularly interested. There were shirt-fronts and wraps in the loges, but nothing too startling upstairs or down despite the presence of the local music critics.

Management was apparently governed by the success of the 'Promenade Concerts' at the University of Toronto stadium last summer, which drew crowds of 7,500 weekly; should have remembered, however, that the 3,640-seater Imperial would take care of these music-lovers the first day alone, plus the records which show that the majority of the 'Prom' attendants paid only two-bits a seat to satisfy that hypothetical 'music-hunger.'

Parted traveller reveals the 61 musicians on three parallels before a silver cyclorama. With Stewart conducting, they do Tchaikovsky's 'Fourth Symphony.' Billed as 'an hour of symphony,' this runs 48 mins. Encore on opening night, which will probably not be called for again now that the hi-hats are weeded, was 'Dance of the Clowns' from Rimsky Korsakov's 'Snow Maiden.' Because of acoustics and the flight of sound into the proscenium-loft, would be better to rip out a few of the front rows and put the orchestra into the pit. Much of the effect is lost with the symphony-players on stage.

Stewart and his men are in for a second week but understood that the subsequent musical fare will be much lighter. That may help, but doubtful. McStay.

CHICAGO

Chicago, Jan. 8.

Business is great at the Chicago, with the headliners Veloz and Yolanda and Red Hodgson, already ticketed for a holdover week. The walloping exploitation which Veloz and Yolanda have gotten in this town during the past two years and the sensational sock of Hodgson's 'Music Goes 'Round and Around' song is bringing the business.

Veloz and Yolanda's long stay at the Palmer House at $2.50 per plate made them a class attraction, and this past season their nightly plugging over WGN, the Chicago Tribune station, with their orchestra, directed by Shep Fields, has made them known to the thousands who never were inside the Palmer House.

They have acquired a fine flair for showmanship, in so far as musical accompaniment, the use of lighting effects and the correct head-cum-shoulder attitudes are concerned. They deliver three dance numbers, the romantically heightened 'Moonlight Madonna,' a neat tango, and a new dance which is by far their best, a clever interpretation of 'Music Goes 'Round and Around.'

Equalling them in audience waltop is Hodgson (New Acts), cowriter of 'Music Goes Round and Around.' Reception shook the rafters and completely stopped the proceedings on his single rendition of the hit song. Good performer, he has made the best of the possibilities of this tune as the basis of a personal appearance. Had to make a speech.

Show opens with the Shep Fields orchestra running through four popular tunes. Good enough for a band which has been restricted to dance music. Moved down into the pit later for the Veloz and Yolanda accompaniment.

Two singles in the line-up are over in fine fashion, John Tio, the wonder parrot, which has been around in vaude for the past two years, and Boy Foy, import from England, with a new wrinkle in juggling, adding to it by performing the tricks while on a unicycle.

Fred Evans delivers his usual eye-filling chorus routine to dress the show and give it bulk. Picture, 'Bride Comes Home' (Par). Gold.

JEFFERSON, N. Y.

How little vaude is left is evidenced in that first two acts on here are still fresh in the memory of this reviewer, having caught at the Grand Opera House recently, and one was a new act then. Vaude routes must be run on a trolley line now.

Show here is nothing to write home about, but serves its purpose being the sole remainder of the species on Manhattan's lower east side.

Initial act, 'Dance Portraits,' is the newcomer. For some reason they worked better and met with more success when they broke in at the G.O.H. Ageing and practice should improve this type stuff, but something happened en route across town.

Even Bob Howard, colored, who wowed them at the G.O.H., had a tough time here. Seemed entire audience was from Missouri. Howard finally warmed them up with his player piano impressions on regular pianoforte. Those he got he held by throwing in 'Music Goes 'Round and 'Round' for his exit.

Radio Ramblers, originating from WINS, please the house with their hoked impersonations. Copies of popular male songbirds are overshadowed by take-off of air announcing personalities by act's comedian.

Joe Morris is billing Dorothy Ryan along with his other femme aid, Flo Campbell, but the kid stooge is left off the card. Act liked as usual.

Arabian tumbling by the Bee Hee and Rubyette troupe closes the show speedily.

'Broadway Hostess' (WB), film.

Piccadilly, London

London, Dec. 31.

It will take the management a good many weeks to live down the bad effect of last week's show. One of the worst ever staged here.

Bad attendance this week, despite being put down to pre-New Year's slump, is proving the vaudeville clientele is losing faith.

With a sparge attendance there is always a danger of the wise-cracking guy in the audience. And there is invariably one to be found here. The management should instruct ushers to be on the alert. At present they are passing it up, with the danger the house is likely to become like the old Academy.

This week's bill has many disappointments, about four advertised acts not materializing. Biggest disappointment is the Three Bonos, an act that played America last year and has built up quite a reputation locally. Will not play England for some time now, as they cannot get a permit.

Last minute changes were necessary, with several replacements.

Only newcomer on the bill is George Beatty, in for two weeks. Beatty has a nice clean-cut personality, can deliver lines, and has a lot of new material. He should have no trouble in making the grade here.

Three acts are back in very quick time. Bubbles Stewart and Sisters is an offering that has made good in a short space of time. Bubbles, who is the mainstay of the act, is an excellent mimic; the two sisters are a good foil for her.

The Three Music Hall Boys, in place of the Bonos, can sing besides their tin-type comedy. They are worthy of the return date.

Of the locals the outstander is Stetson, known in America. His juggling with hats and cigar boxes is done in easy and nonchalant style. Always good.

Larry Camble, who has a Royal Command Performance to his credit, is a uni-cyclist with plenty of comedy. Works with the help of the house leader.

Rest of the bill is fair, but the management will have to do a lot better, if they still hope to get away with it.

House folded after 12 weeks on Jan. 11.

MUSIC HALL, N. Y.

Leonidoff's stage department trots out three items this week. Each is enjoyable. 'A' is 'Wax Figures' (Betty Bafnister and Marie Grimaldi joint soloists) in which the corps de ballet flutters hither and yon in the Music Hall's best—which is very good —fluttering style.

'B' is Vin Lindhe's gang of robustious male singers dressed up to carry out the billing, 'The Muscle and Brawn Club'. Cross-checked sweaters, swagger stocking caps and moustachios a la Yale, 1885, form an amusing setting for the medley of nostalgic songs. Gleeers carry banners with comic legends. They pause in their vocalizing for the Carr Brothers, also dressed in keeping with the motif, to haul themselves through an acrobatic routine that starts on a spoofing level and then goes serious and, either way, is tiptop sight entertainment.

Hilda Eckler, Jerome Andrews and Murray Golden are the pig-gummees in an interlude that introduces Item 'C', 'The Cake Walk'. The turntable does a spin and the Rockettes appear. Half are garbed in black tights with red clawhammers and top hat hats and carrying canes. Other half are in skirts not dissimilar to the outfits employed for the can-can. 'Cake Walk' is high in color and animation. As done by the Rockettes it brings the stage show to a sock curtain.

Another standout on the program is Walt Disney's Silly Symphony, 'Cock O' The Walk' wherein the hens, roosters and geese do the carioca. Music Hall patronage chortled with pleasure at the absurdities.

Viola Philo and Jan Peerce, those Music Hall standards, stand up in the orchestra pit to nail down arias from Puccini's 'La Boheme'. Nice stuff. Overture, however, might have been clipped a few minutes.

'Sylvia Scarlett' (Radio) on the screen. Business very light opening night (9). Land.

LOEW'S STATE, N. Y.

After successive weeks of name stage shows, Loew's State holds a weakie currently. Layout of five acts holds little in the way of marquee strength and hardly more in entertainment values. It's in support of the screened 'Splendor' (UA) and biz Friday night was only fair.

Show's standouts are its men, Emile Boreo (next-to-closing) and Eddie Rio and Bros. (deuce). Both turns are of the hoke comedy variety, though Boreo's carries more individuality. His freak singing was just about getting over at the closing show when he uncorked his flag-waving, shell-shocked soldier bit. It brought him three encores and he almost milked himself a fourth. One of them is a French version of 'Music Goes Round and Around' and it's okay.

Billed brother of the Rio act sets himself quickly with an impression of a woman taking a bath. It's good pantomime and the ladies in the house yelled. Then his three brothers come up out of the audience and from there on it's knockabout stuff, some of it on the borderline but most of it good for laughs. They hoofed off to a neat reception.

Top billing in the show goes to Blanche Calloway's (Cab's sister) band, which closed the bill, and the Three X Sisters, in the middle frame, and both are somewhat disappointing. Three X Sisters came in with the harmony fad started by the Boswells and then turned to novelty and imitations for the major portion of their act. They carry little sock, though they preface the mimicry cutely by pretending it's an amateur program.

The Calloway ork is all Blanche, and she's a thigh-grinding, shouting type that shortly begins to wear. Her 13-piece band is hardly top-notch musically, the arrangements being mediocre. Doubles up on Boreo by also playing 'Music Goes Round.' This rendition, however, is not so hot. Legs and Miss Calloway's attempted clowning detracts further instead of helping. Three male specialists are with the turn, harmonica, playing kid, hoofer and a lanky tenor. First two are good, third doesn't get much of a chance.

The Yacopis (8), one of whom is a woman understander, open. Fast teterboard stunts, some of them involving two and three high double-cocking, gives the stage end an applause start. Scho.

STANLEY, PITTS.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 10.

It'll probably be a long time before the Stanley goes in again for Hippdoromitis. Current show has for its headline act Lottie Mayer, and her underwater ballet and tank turn gave the backstage crew enough mechanical grief to last it a lifetime. Customers at first afternoon performance who got into their seats around eleven bells didn't see daylight again until more than four hours later, with management tossing in one short after another until the presentation was set.

Even then, things were pretty ragged, with tank sticking out so far that it interfered with in-one acts and everybody apparently in a dangerous state of indecision.

Mayer girls are also a pretty good ensemble on land, contributing three or four dance routines in addition to their water stuff. Open with a roller-skating turn, but Stanley stage isn't deep enough for this act that can't be set and when Three Whirlwinds, also on skates, follow them on, two men and a girl were constantly flirting with broken necks and didn't hide their fears very well. A couple of times, during a spin, one of them would get his head caught in the curtain hiding the tank and act was constantly in peril, virtually destroying their effectiveness.

Eddie White, here only couple of months ago, back again as m.c. and solidifies original good impression although he, too, seemed a little ill at ease because of the difficulties behind him. Couple of times he had to stall for time, which forced him into repetition. His own spot next-to-closing, in which he mixes songs with a flock of gags, way overboard on time.

Other acts are Lela Moore and Three Sailors. Miss Moore's the former Pittsburgh girl who went east last fall with her man-girl 'Dance of the Lovers' and got lot of attention when she claimed a performer at French Casino infringed on her idea. However, idea, although perhaps not in its present form, dates back considerably beyond even year of Miss Moore's birth, but she has the thin down to such a fine point that it creates an uncanny illusion. A better finish is all that's needed.

Sailors still wowing 'em with their lunacies. Boys haven't been around here in some time and have added a lot of new material, novelty-talling shrewdly with the old sure-fire stuff and giving the customers their first opportunity of the day to become palm-conscious.

Mayer turn naturally closes. It's a good act, a return to what was once standard in show business, but doesn't belong here. As a moderately permanent spectacle in a big auditorium, okay, but where the billing changes weekly and the stages aren't too commodious, too many troubles present themselves. Girls are all expert divers and turn has been showmanly projected, but reception is only lukewarm. That was possibly because mob had waited so long.

Even curtain didn't bring a let-up, and pit band was forced to ad lib for 10 minutes until stage was mopped up and horns could be lowered for film. Dave Broudy's band presents an effective overture, but musical lads deserve additional bouquets for wet beating they take during the tank act. Wear and tear on stiff-front orchestral shirts newly-pressed tuxes will be nothing short of appalling before the week is up.

Picture, 'Splendor' (U), and business at getaway n.s.h.

ROXY, N. Y.

For sometime this large de luxer hasn't had any Broadway stage opposition except from the State but now it also has the Paramount to consider. Because of the wide difference in policies and prices as well as type of trade drawn, the Music Hall nearby isn't such direct opposition as the Par and State. Getting something living into the Par—for the present, pit shows—may deflect some of Roxy's steady patronage. In the morning the prices are the same while at night up here it's 55c. against 75c. at the Par and stronger pictures as a rule to be expected at latter.

Through its consistency of policy and a fair break on pictures the Roxy, however, has built up a steady clientele. Frequently a mediocre picture gets by up here on the combination of stage show and bargain prices for fair profit. House sells a big show—usually three hours in length or more at 25, 35 and 55c., never any more than latter including Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. Success Roxy has had with its policy although the admission prices couldn't be matched, no doubt prompted the Par with a poor run of picture luck lately, to reinstate live entertainment.

Stage shows at the Roxy follow a certain formula and folks who patronize the house know about what to expect week in and week out. Pattern varies little and the type of acts booked also follow a standard booking demand. Staging is about the same most of the time. Fixture of the theatre is the Gae Foster Girls, a line which has developed well after a long stretch here. Freddy Mack, in the pit over the musical men and acting as a sort of m.c., has been here sometime now and he's standard, too.

Marty May heads this week's Fanchon and Marco production. He and another act, the Three Lees, give the current unit more than an adequate amount of laughs. May is pretty well known, having been around for many years. He has an air audience, too, through broadcasting on both big networks and comes to the Roxy this week as one of the most seasoned performers house has played under present policy. His material is away above the average and his showmanship something that vitally helps the material across. May has a clever foil in Carmen Lawton, a young lad for an encore, Larry Raymond, who whistles 'Poet and Peasant' in the way that can't miss from the big stage here.

Three Lees go in for roughhouse, dancing and novelty, filling the requirements of an early position very well. Peter Mesrobian, winner of the last Fred Allen amateur contest is on shortly after the opening. He plays a violin for nice results. The Three Walkmirs, novelty act, opens.

Girl billing herself merely as Chiquita is from Mexico and has distinct possibilities. She has a lot of personality and a winning way of rendering songs. Does Mexican as well as American pops, working behind a mike.

Feature 'Invisible Ray' (U). Rest of show includes newsreel, 'Three on a Limb' (Educ), two-reel short with Buster Keaton and 'Billboard Frolics' (WB), a cartoon. Char.

ALHAMBRA, PARIS

Paris, Jan. 2.

Georges Milton, musicomedy and screen star, headlines the holiday show here, in a tab revue filling the last half of program and featuring, one after another, characters from seven of his film successes. Actor's big local name puts it over.

Second billing goes to Ai Trahan and Lady Yukona Cameron. Trahan works in French, and gets plenty of belly laughs to justify his local billing as the leading comic of America.

French pantomimist named Sherkot, who rarely plays in his home country, gets even a better hand for his mimicry, and a good-looking girl trapezist, Elly Ardeity, likewise clicks with equilibrism.

Paul Duke, cigarette magician, is more or less submerged.

Group of seven Viennese girls billed as the Singing Babies, who warble in four languages to piano accompaniment, makes good both with looks and harmony.

French acts include Franconay, singer and imitator, in a return engagement; a good trio of singers called Jean, Jac and Jo, and Six Headings, a comedy bicycle number. Stern.

EMBASSY, N. Y.

eral administration and opposition leaders discussing probable effect of A.A.A. decision on farm populace. Highlight of this reel was Father Coughlin's comment that the 'brainless trustees' had overlooked something in framing their legislation for the farmers.

Following through with the Washington locale, Pathe tried to summarize veterans' bonus situation. Same company handled senate munition's probe by going into committee room, with silent close-up of J. P. Morgan. Also touched on probable fate of T.V.A. in hands of supreme court. Main points of President Roosevelt's speech at the Jackson Day dinner in the national capital city caught in vivid manner by Pathe.

Col. Franfi Knox' sweeping attack on 'Roosevelt's 'state of nation speech climaxed by recital of a plan in answer to president's attack on anti-new dealers. Given real kick when Colonel Knox concluded with statement that whole plan outlined was program on which Roosevelt was elected, but since forgotten. This climax drew biggest hand at show caught. Covered by Universal.

Embassay spots arrival of Lindberghs in England as next most vital news of week. Paramount obtained some excellent closeups of the noted aviator, carrying his baby son, followed by his wife, as they carefully came down the gangplank. Views show big crowds that greeted their landing in British Isles.

News from Italo-Ethioplan front holds plenty of footage, but bulk of newsreel shots were usual humdrum affairs. Paramount shows Red Cross workers caring for wounded and pressing newsreel AP sound truck into service. Bombing scenes lacked authenticity. Fox Movietone offered one of high marks of this war footage, depicting Italian officers giving away bright new silver to Ethioplans agreeing to sign up to aid Il Duce.

Troop movements on Ethiop side and arrival of new contingents from Italy well handled by Universal.

First move of Japan into northern China given neat treatment by Paramount, though nothing startling. Same company added an amusing touch with ship reporter's interview of Doug Fairbanks turning into quiz of the writers.

Best spot news contributions otherwise furnished by Universal, with its vivid handling of ice jam at Trenton, N. J., and Paramount's photographic job of ruins of fire-gutted inn at Westfield, Mass.

Superb coverage of skiing at St. Moritz by Fox led procession of sporting news. Otherwise it was slim, with departure of Olympic bobsled and hockey teams predominating (Fox), with Ed Thorgensen doing spiel. Same reel showed departure of prize race horse, Omaha, for Europe. Legion auto race at L. A. came from Universal.

Good covering done by Par on new aqueduct which will carry water supply from Colorado river to Los Angeles and some 12 other municipalities. Parade of Aimee Semple McPherson followers in Los Angeles was Universal clip.

Ship building activity, with S. S. Queen Mary nearing completion, in England described for Fox Movietone by Sir Malcolm Campbell. Same newsreel added appealing note with its handling of a Shirley Temple contest in Paris. Paramount pictured French helicopter cracking up on test flight. Metro showed first snowfall in Yosemite mountains and skiing.

Fashion developments handled by Universal, showing sun bathers at Miami and airplane and bathing suit styles on flight from L. A. to Palm Springs by Fox.

'Beautiful Banff and Lake Louise,' Fitzpatrick Travel-talk in color (Metro), was short feature on bill. Wear.

KEITH'S, BOSTON

Boston, Jan. 9.

This week's Keith show is a blend of the Jackie Coogan-Betty Grable unit, with some extra talent for support, and it all comes out bonded stock.

Coogan and Miss Grable get top billing and ace spots in the routining, but they have plenty opposition for honors in Joe Morrison, Armida and the Three Nonchalants.

Coogan m.c.'s most of the show, grins a lot, plays around in a scene with the California Collegians, and surprises with some hoofing in duo with Miss Grable. She, in turn, proves she can sing and dance adequately and outshine most blondes in vaude on looks.

Although Coogan skillfully avoided the sterotyped Hollywood speech, Joe Morrison, after socking with a rep of pop tunes, slipped a cog when he curtained an invitation for 'all you people to please look me up if you ever come to the Coast.' This stirred up an 'Oh, yeah!' in the house. On his singing Morrison stands out like a million.

Three Nonchalants, rough-house, yet clean-cut, tumbling, risley-perch team, are new to this section. Smart-looking in light gray street clothes, these lads lay off the vulgarity and concentrate on comedy and smart acrobatic work. Routine includes about everything possible without equipment, but the gasper is the final triple stand perch, ending in a fall forward with the top man shooting the width of the stage. A big asset to this show.

Armida is introduced by a Spanish line number by the 24 'Hollywood Dancing Debutantes' (held over from last week), sings a couple of numbers and impersonates Lupe Velez and Dolores Del Rio. Difficult to distinguish between the two impressions which might have been too subtle for other than Hollywood consumption. Mexican miss can still scorch a song, and in this department she wows.

California Collegians, in town a few months ago, and even with a condensed routine they're whammo as a novelty orchestra. Collegians also supply some musical backup for hoofing and a scene to demonstrate a play-back.

Much praise is due the scene representing the filming of a picture. Lights, camera and sound boom all look authentic, lending the right atmosphere to an almost true-to-life scene taking. Warren Wilson, director, tales Josephine Dix, Jackie and Betty, and Walter McGrail through paces on a sound stage, after Wilson explains the terms he is about to use in the sequence. Scene is built around McGrail, who clutters and bungles the shooting with his lethargy.

Line girls have three rather conventional but well-rehearsed numbers, all enhanced by colorful, fresh costuming.

Show, running a bit long (85 mins.), when caught, can easily be trimmed without pulling its punch.

Screen, 'Red Salute' (Col). Fox.

SHEA'S, TORONTO

Toronto, Jan. 11.

With Jerry Shea reviving his policy of lengthy stage shows and insisting that vaudeville turns don't earn their pay envelopes in this house by walking on and off and don't even justify their talents, this bill runs 72 mins. and is still to be stepped up on time-expenditure. Harry Anger is back as production chief and the line-girls under Marjorie Hartoin's direction, have done the prodigal act. Pat Rooney and Pat Rooney 3d are the headliners, with Reynolds and White crowding them on audience reception. Most of the bill is vaudeville in the traditional style and a fine blend of entertainment that had no trouble getting over when caught.

Traveller parts on a cocktail lounge in full-stage with the Smart Set Foursome, two men and two girls in tails and black evening gowns, finishing a harmony warble as the line girls in white silver spangled gowns allow with a hot routine and Maureen Rec, unbilled statuesque blonde in white, out for hi-kicks in waltz tempo and scoring on grace and striking appearance. S. S. Foursome close the scene with a harmony medley, this including 'Music Goes Round' and a scat finish.

Red Donahue and his trick mule trail in 'one.' It's standard and still sure of good returns. Line is back before full-stage yellow drapes in black costumes and fantastic head dresses for modernistic rhythmics and shadow effects, strong on precision and dramatic groupings that is a nice hand at the finish. Then Barbara Belmore on with two gigantic fans and in long white costume for manipulations and into an acrobatic finish. Roy, Lee and Dunn next for a soft shoe tap, a face slapping break-up, two of the lads doing a drunk dance in concert, and clinching with the trio doing a dummy-dance as finish.

Girls back in long yellow gowns for a soft shoe, Maureen Rio trailing for a tap and backflips. Then Reynolds and White in comedy uniforms for varied instrument playing and sure-fire in an act they've been doing for years. Trick finish in which costume-transformation reveals half of the act as a woman still gets over with the uninitiates and gets a socko reception. All a nice build-up to the Rooney entrance, with pop still showing the youngsters what soft dancing really should be, this accentuated by Rooney 3d duplicating his father's steps but coming down much more heavily on the boards. The 'Rosie O'Grady' routine stopped the show when caught; ditto the back-to-back effect. Father and son went over big and had to beg off.

Full stage finish has the girls on in Rockettey togs for a diluted Rooney routine and everyone on for curtain. Nice biz at opening. Feature, 'Charlie Chan's Secret' (20th-Fox). McStay.

OLYMPIA, PARIS

Paris, Jan. 2.

Francis o A. Mangan's holiday stage show here—his last for this Paris venture—runs nearly half an hour and drags.

It's in two parts, first a ballet led by Hara Dian, plus the line, and second a Christmas toy shop tableau.

Fred Woodward, with his daughter, Didi Dax, and Bobby Benda, does his nule act, plus acro dancing by Bobby and French patter by Didi. Act is billed as 'L'Eclope' (Pegleg') and mule has a wooden leg.

Doris Niles contributes with a Spanish doll dance.

Okay for holiday trade. Stern.

National, Louisville

Louisville, Jan. 10.

In answer to the query, 'When will vaude come back,' the National has assembled a layout of acts that sell on their merit, and the only reply to that question, speaking for Louisville audiences, is 'It is back.'

Of course, the pit orchestra is spotted upstage in a nice set (they sound better up there than in the pit), and the acts are introed by an m.c. Then there's a line of six girls who are on for about four routines, as well as two girls who step out from the line to do a dance.

Bill, nicely put together, opens with a nifty tap routine by the Beatrice Gardner Girls, six of them, and while it's pretty hard to dress the stage with that small number, they are okay and doing their best.

Don Galvan, Spanish guitarist, introes himself as m.c. and said he's glad to be back in Louisville. This brought titters, as local rags carried plenty about year ago or so, when Galvan appeared at another theatre. It seems that Galvan serenaded a woman patron with a love song. The lady took offense and filed suit against Galvan and the theatre, alleging she had suffered 'extreme embarrassment' and 'humiliation, and sued for quite a sum. Galvan made no mention of the incident here.

Meyers and St. John, man and woman, are on for some acro-dancing, with some comedy worked in. Femme clicks with her dancing, and her partner indulges in some loose jointed leg swinging, very well done.

Next is Monroe Brothers, trampoline performers, highly praised by the emcee, who told the audience that the boys open in England in three weeks. Lads then on in tramp outfits and deliver several good comedy bits new to the patrons here. They have audience turning loose plenty of laughs, and go lightly on the mat bouncing, although demonstrating that they know their stuff. Got a big hand.

Another act bullish on the laugh side is Eddie Hanley and Company. Hanley turns in a rib tickling click, with his mugging, sharpshooting bit with his stooge partner, and a comedy adagio dance with femme partner. It's all extremely well handled, and Hanley knows how to sell it, although music and light cues were clumsily worked at show caught.

Finale has the girls on for a novelty dance, wearing large, grotesque mardi gras heads. Had difficulty keeping in line, for the reason that the girls couldn't see very well through the masks, and were continually bumping into each other. But this handicap really helped rather than detracted, for the bumps only made the figures more funny.

Present bill in for four days only, balance of week to be double feature film policy. Biz good at first show Friday. Picture, 'Cappy Ricks Returns' (Rep). Wiede.

ALVIN, PITTS.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 10.

This Harris-owned de luxer is still casting about for a permanent policy and a paying one. So far this season house has dabbled among single features, double features and combo stage-screen attractions, some on full week, others on four days. The current bill goes them one better, or perhaps worse—it's in for three days.

Strategy of management in this respect continues to be quite puzzling. For one thing, it's the best stage layout Alvin has dug up in a blue moon. But there's not a name among the five acts that can be counted as ready cash at the local box office. It's a cinch the mob will go out and rave about the bill, but by the time the raves get around and the crowds start coming, they'll be too late.

On Broadway a line-up including Eddie Garr, Everett Marshall, Five Cabin Kids, Thelma Leeds and Six Danwills would mean something. But in the sticks they're all doubtful b.o. at the getaway. Opening show seemed to bear this out. Downstairs was just a little better than half full with the balcony practically barren.

Nothing wrong on the entertainment end, with everything running off smoothly despite short rehearsal time and each act a click. Garr serves as m.c., being introduced via mike by Bernie Armstrong following latter's organiog, and does a neat job of it, likewise registering a solid click with his impersonations. Imitators these days are a nickel a dozen, due to Major Bowes and the other network Columbuses, but Garr's enough of an expert to eliminate the curse of comparison.

Opening has Harris, Claire and Shannon, two girls and a man, in a ballroom routine that has class and charm. They're followed by the Cabin Kids, five colored youngsters, the littlest a natural deadpan clown, who sock cleanly with their low-down harmonizing. House may have thought it was giving tots a break by injecting in bill one of their Educational shorts, but just the opposite seems true. Two-reeler went on before show and took the edge off them, although fortunately not enough to make too much of a difference.

Thelma Leeds, last-minute substitution for Ella Logan, is another cinch. Starts off slowly but works herself into a bonafide hit. Has a corking pair of pipes, a swell delivery and a comeliness that rate her a distinctive addition to the younger torch artists. To break up the vocal stuff a bit, Harris, Claire and Shannon come back on for their second number, another classy piece of ballroomology, and that brings on Marshall next-to-closing. Singer, recently back from Hollywood, is still 100% on voice, and if he ever gets away from chewing up the scenery, should be a cinch in any medium.

Six Danwills bring down a corking curtain with their acrobatic stuff. One of the most talented and exciting acts of its kind around. Jerry Mayhall's band on stage, but the eight-piece outfit looks lost stretched out across the platform and might do better in pit.

Los Angeles, Jan. 10.

Bill Robinson took all his tappsicory gleaned from the Harlem rhythm bayous away from the picture studios for a week to aid Al Lyons and his Cocoanut Grove orchestra to put on a real hot show.

Capable presentation, hour in length, but it's mostly band, with Robinson filling in nice spot with patter, dance and song. Audience goes for Robinson in big way, and house was three-fourths capacity at second show. It's Lyon's second week at the spot.

Featured artists in the band include Judy Starr, Nick Cochrane, Bob Rogers and Neil Castagnoli. Former is attractive blonde, toy-sized singer, who puts over 'Music Goes 'Round and 'Round' with a bang. She and Cochrane do a tuneful duet of 'Moon Over Miami.' Cochrane reaps much applause with his comical 'Pretty Woman.' Pantechonettes, precision chorus, do three numbers.

After Robinson does his 'African Hula' conception of 'Continental,' girls return with a repeat version of 'Truckin'' which they did a coupla weeks ago. But this time Robinson is in front and it goes over with a wham.

'If You Could Only Cool' (Col). screen. Hane.

Balaban Appeals from Chi Dearborn Decision

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Local courts last week decided that the Marshall Field estate has full claim to the Dearborn theatre and could oust Harry Balaban from the property despite the Balaban claim that he has nine more years to go on his lease on the northside house. Court, however, permitted Balaban to enter an appeal, on posting of $20,000 bond, which was complied with.

Field estate desires the property to be turned over to the Jones, Linick & Schaefer firm for operation.

Mpls. Admish Wrangle

Minneapolis, Jan. 14.

There's consternation among indie neighborhood exhibitors here as result of Publix reducing the night admission price at the Loring, one of its bigger and more elaborate uptown houses, and several other neighborhood theatres from 25 to 15c. Northwest Allied States sent Stan Kane, its executive secretary, to confer with John J. Friedl, Publix circuit general manager, regarding the situation. The latter stated that conditions in the particular spots involved necessitated the drop. The frequent stage shows downtown is hurting the neighborhood houses nearest the loop.

There is no intention at this time to alter the downtown price schedules which were upped at the start of the current season, in part due to the insistence of independent neighborhood exhibitors. Independents feel that the trend of scales should be toward higher levels and they fought successfully for an increased admission for stage shows in conjunction with pictures at the Publix and Singer houses. Publix and the Singer Orpheum also set the time for changing from matinee to night prices at 5 p.m., instead of 6:30 p.m., as formerly, and Friedl set a 55c. top, instead of the usual 40c. for straight pictures at his 4,200-seat Minnesota theatre and he has scaled several outstanding pictures at other houses at 55c. The Orpheum is doing the same thing this week with 'Magnificent Obsession.'

SPARKS COMBATS DIXIE FAIRS AS B.O. OPPOSISH

A veteran agitator against opposition amusement or sports ventures, which set up against theatres in an allegedly unfair manner, E. J. Sparks is now campaigning against efforts of carnival interests to promote local organizations for formation of fairs with the view to escaping the payment of license taxes. An effort in this direction by carnival men at Bradenton, Fla., has been licked, with Sparks interests invoking the aid of local newspapers in fighting the tax-escaping maneuvers.

Believing that the carnival plan to set up local fairs in avoiding income taxes is something that may not only affect the rest of Florida, in which Sparks is the largest theatre operator, but other states as well, he has sent out a mimeographed brochure warning of the situation to all of his own managers and other southern circuit operators. Sparks contends that 'we never know when it will be necessary in any of the towns to combat a similar situation.'

JANUARY IS REPUBLIC MONTH

RCA HIGH FIDELITY RECORDING

London's Big Holiday Biz; 'Ghost,' 'Mutiny,' 'Top Hat' Head B.O. Parade

London, Jan. 5.

Holiday business in London was hot, perhaps hotter than in years.

This was partly accountable to the number of new and important pictures coming in, and partly general optimism.

Biggest hit was Rene Clair's 'Ghost Goes West,' (London-UA), which claimed 98% capacity over the holiday, at the Leicester Square.

Empire's 'Mutiny on the Bounty' (MG), opened slightly higher than the Metro theatre's 'Broadway Melody' (MG), which lasted three weeks at an average of $50,000 a week. Whether 'Bounty' will last the pace to the same tune is another matter, as the London press was mostly lukewarm.

Carlton, with 'Top Hat' (RKO) in its third month, did well for a small capacity fixed-time house. Picture comes out Jan. 8 after beating the 'Bengal Lancer' (Par) figures.

While no theatre did bad business, one or two could have done higher.

Capitol was not a rave with the home-made comedy, 'Foreign Affaires,' nor was the Tivoli outstanding with 'Thanks a Million' (20th), which came off immediately after the holiday week to be replaced by 'King of the Damned' (G-B).

Plaza found 'Mary Burns, Fugitive' (Par) almost too much for a fortnightly stay, and replaced with Colbert's 'Boss' (Col).

London Pavilion found Miriam Hopkins in 'Splendor' (UA) a subholiday attraction, particularly with a press panning.

Rome Permits First Cinema for Foreign Films in Original

Rome, Jan. 2.

New Cinema, first in Italy to wangle permission to show foreign films in the original language, has opened here.

Until now, no theatre in Italy has been allowed to show film in any language other than Italian; even film with Italian written subtitles, but with foreign spoken dialog, were forbidden. New Cinema will be allowed to display films in the original languages to experts, artists, students and foreign diplomats.

Opening feature is 'Becky Sharp' (RKO).

Under direction of architect Marcello Piacentini, cinema is spotted in the old Quirinetta theatre, completely redecorated and enlarged. It can seat 350. Performances two-a-day.

LONDON THEATRE BATTLE GROWS HOT

London, Jan. 14.

The new year started here with an even more bitter fight for cinema ownership supremacy than was waged through most of the past year. Oscar Deutsch is acquiring and building new houses. Fred Bernhard, now controlling nearly 150, is getting ready to build some more. Donada likewise is extending.

Gaumont-British, despite rumors of its controlling the Hyams chain, is buying or building six supers around London. All the big circuits are fighting for control of the Moorehouse cinemas, numbering around 60, in Lancashire.

John Maxwell, head of Associated British Cinemas (BIP) recently acquired 12 new ones and is negotiating for 14 more, besides having an even half dozen in course of construction. The Maxwell circuit is shortly issuing a big hunk of unused debenture shares and it is figured to control 300 cinemas before Easter.

SIGN 3 FOR MEX PIC

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Antonio Moreno, Lupita Tovar and Barry Norton are going to Mexico City to appear in pix for Jose Bohr.

Mexican producer also is seeking Buster Keaton for comedies.

Landi Vice Chaplin

London, Jan. 14.

'Koenigsmark' (Capitol), film starring Elissa Landi and produced in Paris, in English and French versions, has been taken by Arthur W. Jarrett, head Gaumont-British booker, and marked in at the Tivoli to open Thursday (16). That was the date originally skedded for the Chaplin film.

'Koenigsmark' is distributed by C. M. Woolf.

PAR, M-G BURN AND COOL AT HAGUE

The Hague, Jan. 4.

Both Metro and Paramount did an about face in their respective decisions to resign as members of Bioscoopbond (Netherlands Cinema Association) last week, when the board considered informing its exhib members to discontinue showings of the product of these two American companies.

Association had issued an order prohibiting the erection of new theatres for one year. This edict, extended for an additional three months, nettled Metro, which had planned construction of a new house here. When special dispensation was not forthcoming, Metro decided to withdraw from Bioscoopbond and Paramount said it would follow suit.

Before counter move of the association was launched, the rebels changed their minds. Par's Central European manager hotfooted it to Amsterdam for a confab with the board, resulting in a compromise.

NEW HUNGARIAN GOV'T BILL SHUTS CINEMAS

Budapest, Jan. 3.

Six picture theatres in large provincial towns went dark just before Christmas on account of a Home Office decree that persons possessing exhibitors' licenses may no longer enter into or renew partnership contracts.

Home Office distributed these licenses as a reward for political services or on personal grounds to people who had no inkling of picture biz. They kept going by taking unto themselves partners with the necessary cash and experience in business.

Now Home Office says that since the license only gives the government control over the licensee, but leaves the partner a free hand, consent to such partnership contracts will in future be refused. Just in what way government wishes to exercise control is a mystery.

Result is closing down of theatres where former partnership contracts have expired.

Court Nicks Par for Canning Dave Souhami

Paris, Jan. 14.

Paris court has awarded David Souhami $60,000 damages, plus costs, for 'motiveless discharge' by Paramount. Souhami was head of Par's local offices for a number of years and had signed an undated resignation when accepting the job, filling in the date when the time came. It was this action that the court particularly objected to.

Paramount has 20 days in which to appeal the decision, which, it is understood, it will do.

Hummel to S. A.

J. S. Hummel, foreign sales chief for Warner, left New York Dec. 9 for a business trip to Rio de Janiero. Trained to Florida, where he embarked on a plane for the remainder of the journey.

Plans to use air as much as possible during the trip.

'Ingratitude'

Mexico City, Jan. 14.

Suit for $2,500 has been filed against a cinema operator in Leon, Guanajuato state, a large footwear manufacturing center. Plaintiff alleges the exhibitor promised several years ago to admit him and his numerous family gratis to his cinema at all shows as a token of gratitude for an unnamed service. After extending the courtesy for six years, exhibitor decided to call a halt. So plaintiff asks the $2,500 as balm for 'ingratitude and injured dignity.

PIONEER BRITISH PIC COMPANY LIQUIDATED

London, Jan. 5.

Passing of a pioneering picture concern went practically unnoticed here when Sir Gordon Craig, presiding at a stockholders' meeting of New Era National Pictures, Ltd., voted for liquidation of the concern.

New Era's history goes back 15 or more years. At one time it was the chief production outfit in the country, making a fortune out of a series of war films, 'Mons,' 'Zeebrugge,' 'The Somme,' and the like, most of them straight reproduction of scenes from the battle, illustrated by moving maps.

Craig in his final curtain speech pointed out the hopeless position of the indie in the British production field. Craig is no relation to Gordon Craig, theatrical impresario and producer, who lives in semi-retirement in Europe.

FRIEDLAND QUITS U; PARIS CONVENTION

Paris, Jan. 5.

Under the presidency of N. L. Manheim, Universal foreign sales chief, U's European agents met in a convention in Paris last week. Particular subject of discussion was putting across 'Magnificent Obsession.'

Resignation of Max Friedland, Laemmle relative, as Universal's continental chief, was announced, and Sigmart Kusiel presented as Friedland's successor. Kusiel's last post was as head of Hispano-American Films at Barcelona. Headquarters of Friedlan has been in London.

Those who attended the meeting were A. Peres (Paris), P. Schlier, (Prague), H. Gussen (Stockholm), M. Gojchrach (Warsaw), Charles Weill (Brussels) and B. P. Sislian.

B. I. Sells Out

London, Jan. 14.

Although no date was set for the proposed $5,000,000 debenture share issue by British International, the entire issue has been underwritten at a premium and the banking house which underwrote it has no shares left for the general public.

Present shareholders bought up the whole new batch of paper.

More Arguments on Pathe-Natan As Court Names 'Investigator'; Bankruptcy Feared Next Step

Paris, Jan. 5.

Step which it is feared may lead to the bankruptcy of Pathe-Natan was taken by the Commerce Tribunal in appointing M. Coutant 'investigating receiver' into the affairs of the company.

Concern is already run by a judicial administration, appointed by the court. Coutant will look into solvency of affair, and if he finds conditions unsatisfactory will order suspension of payments.

This apparently is the direct result of bankruptcy of the P-N theatre-holding subsidiary, Societe de Gerance des Cinemas Pathe, and of the plea by J. Mauger, latter's receiver, that P-N's general guaranty of the subsidiary's obligations be put into effect.

Opposing this, Pathe-Natan stockholders will contend that the general guaranty does not exist, because although voted by the board of directors it was never ratified by the stockholders, and (they contend) the board has no legal right, under the company's charter, to undertake such an obligation. This contention is expected by the stockholder's advisers to be sufficient to stave off bankruptcy of the parent company, whose financial situation has been considerably improved under recent operation. Figures of past months prove that business is sound, they say, provided it is not saddled with obligations that don't belong to it.

Court Maintains

Despite the legal objections of Robert Dirler, stockholder, and M. Ploton, judicial administrator of Pathe Cinema, a local court maintained bankruptcy of the P-N theatre-holding subsidiary, and F. Mauger, receiver of the subsid, brought an action against the parent company invoking the latter's guaranty.

Meanwhile, Dirler, president of the P-N stockholders' protective, is renewing his pleas for a stockholders' meeting at which he can be chosen to head the business, insisting that if this happens he will be able to satisfy creditors and pull the company out of its jam.

Despite the bankruptcy of the Societe de Gerance, the Pathe chain of theatres will be kept open, by order of the court for at least two months, and operated by the receiver. This does away with fears that the chief assets of P-N would disappear as a result of the subsidiary's bankruptcy, and at the same time disappoints those who were expecting to be able to buy up some theatres cheap.

Bit of a storm in local film circles was created when Henri Klarsfeld, head of Paramount's sales here, was named to check up on the Gerance receiver in the interests of the creditors. French law calls for the appointment of watchers over the watcher. Trouble arose when it was learned that the rep of an American company had this job, still more because Klarsfeld is vice-president of the distrib's organization headed by Georges Lourau, Tobis chief, on which the former Chambre Syndicale outfit is particularly down. Klarsfeld finally dropped the job, to be replaced by H. Roussillon, French distributor.

Ambitious Mex

Mexico City, Jan. 14.

Mexico pic producers propose to undertake their most ambitious program in 1936, the sixth year of the life of the local film industry.

Producers plan a total of 75 features and 40 shorts this year. Output in 1935 was 40 features and 22 shorts. A Mexican newsreel is to be revived on a more expansive basis, too.

G-B TO DISTRIB WOOLF PIX IN U.S.

London, Jan. 14.

Gaumont-British is practically set to distribute Charles M. Woolf's local productions in America. Woolf used to be the G-B g. m. before he struck out on his own a few months ago.

Deal is understood to involve about 20 pictures annually, of which G-B will have its choice, with turndown clauses due to limitation of markets which affect its own local productions as well.

Woolf is also understood dickering to acquire solid English distribution rights for Universal pictures. If going through, it means that Universal will probably close its local offices and move a skeletonized staff into the new Woolf building being erected on Wardour street.

DUCE OKAYS PROJECT OF NEW ROME STUDIO

Rome, Jan. 2.

Outfit will comprise 30 buildings, extending over 60 hectares of ground, and will contain modern technical equipment. When finished, it will the biggest moving picture studio establishment on the continent, it is claimed.

Prexy of Cinematographic Establishments, Inc. (CINES), Signor Roncoroni, and architect Peressutti have presented the construction plans to Mussolini, Duce gave his o.k. to the plans.

Britons in Hollywood

Hollywood, Jan. 14

British colony is making big plans for Mayfair Club's supper dance to be held Jan. 25. Swank white cards, the length of a table top, invite members to attend. White is the order of the evening for women, and the money the gals are planning to spend is no small potatoes. Hairdressers have been engaged weeks ahead and studio designers, as well as other favored stylists of the colony, have been working overtime trying to outdo each other.

Among Britishers who will glow in this setting are Merle Oberon, on the board of governors; Leslie Howard, on the board of director; Paul Cavanagh, who will escort his sister, Lady Paget (and leaves shortly after for his first visit to England in four years); C. Kyle Bellew, Charles Chaplin and Monckton Hosse.

Ronald, son of Leslie Howard, is working as an extra in 'Romeo and Juliet.' He dresses with the extras, eats with the mob, and speaks to his father only when they're driving to and from the studio.

Herbert Mundin regrets—he cannot grow a beard for 'Under Two Flags.' The only man in the production without, he tells a story of trying for five months to grow a mustache for 'Cavalcade.'

Colin Tapley, for the first time since he suffered a concussion trying to make a parachute jump, is taking up flying and expects to receive a license shortly.

The desert is calling. Mona Barrie has packed her sunsuits and gone to Palm Springs. And Herbert Marshall has deserted the film colony for a desert hideaway. Wendy Barrie, returning from a vacation in Del Monte, is visiting her mother and sister in Palm Springs.

Merle Oberon ill with the flu and Ida Lupino laid up with tonsilitis.

Binnie Barnes to be in Metro's 'Small Town Girl.'

And Mary Ellis will be starred in Walter Wanger's 'Brazen.'

One of Henry Wilcoxon's fans in England, having read about his beloved dog, wrote asking for a pup from the first litter. Replied Wilcoxon, 'The dog's name is Peter.'

Film colony is looking forward to the expected visit of Jessie Matthews. Plans for entertaining the British star are already under way.

GAUMONT-ELYSEES AS MG PARIS SHOWCASE

Paris, Jan. 5.

After a long search, Metro has at last found a showcase in Paris to replace the Madeleine, recently turned back to the Gaumont circuit. Hakim Brothers have handed over the lease to the Elysee Gaumont, upper Champs-Elysees house, and Metro will commence its operation with 'Broadway Melody of 1936.'

New showcase is far from the popular film district in which the Madeleine is situated, and is more suited to presentation of original versions than try-outs of dubbed pictures. Metro's policy at the Madeleine for a long while was to show French language pix only, although toward the end this was not constantly adhered to.

EXPLOITATION

By Epes W. Sargent

Hustling in Balto

Baltimore.

Herb Morgan, in exploiting 'Riffraff' (MG), current at Loew's Century, stressed the fact that star Jean Harlow has dyed her locks from w.k. milk-whiteness to 'honey-brown.' As a start on subject, Morgan persuaded featured femme warbler with orch in burg's most popular nitery to 'be the first girl in Balto' to follow trail blazed by Miss Harlow in acquiring a 'honey-brown.' Got the News-Post to use copy and art on the story.

Also conducting a contest with newspaper, soliciting from public the ideal name for Miss Harlow's newly colored hair. Further, had two co-op newspaper ads from Gotham hose; 250 New Day cigar ad strips promoted and gummed up as displays in cigar stores; had slew of window display fashion blowups.

Biggest stunt was absolute promotion of booth space at Federal Housing Administration Home-Show held in Armory here. There were 157 other booths dressed up, but rest paid for space. Morgan did up his booth in flashy style and got in excellent licks, being only theatre represented in place. Show ran eight days, playing to over 80,000 visitors.

Had a dept. store give away at beauty salon stills of Harlow with each hair-dyeing job purchased by customers. Also a transcription period of 15 mins. as well as quantity of spots on WCAO.

Nearly two years ago when 'House of Rothschild' (20th) was released, press department tied in Ridgeway Tea Co. on a national hookup campaign. Ads fostered by tea company carried cut from pic and copy.

Ads are still used here in Balto, chiefly in street cars and busses. Longest length tie-in campaign any film has ever had around here. Pic hasn't been shown on a Balto screen for about a year.

Stirred 'Em Up

Frank La Falce stirred things up in Washington when he campaigned 'Crime and Punishment' at the Metropolitan.

He started off with letters to the editors of the photoplay sections of all the local papers. These were several to the effect that although only one academy award was given for the best performance of the year and urging greater generosity. Nothing said about the title until the last note, which invited the editors to a special screening in the private projection room.

This was backed up by a similar appeal to the public, urging all and sundry to sign their names to a petition to the academy to give joint award to Arnold and Lorree. To back this a petition sheet was placed in the lobby.

Petition was sent to Columbia with the suggestion it be sent along to the academy. Probably no dice, but the stunt sold the picture very largely at the capital.

For Leap Year

Union City.

Capitol is staging a Leap Year birthday spread in the house on Feb. 29, and management is out to gather as many persons celebrating on that date as possible. Hudson Dispatch, local sheet, has taken to the idea, and is co-operating fully. House has had several front-page stories, and there's regular copy to be inserted all along up to the party date itself.

Persons are requested to register either at the theatre or newspaper. Management also dickering to get some film stars over to assist in the celebration. E. D. Yarbrough is house manager, directing the stunt. Founded on Al Woods gag for 'Night of Jan. 16.'

Music Stands Help

Lincoln.

Extreme unlikeliness of the Stuart's finding use for the ornate music stands used by the house's one time 25-piece band, saw them put to some use in exploitation in the foyer of the house.

Flicker lights have been put in the music box and thin white paper with coming attraction signs painted on, stretched drum like over the opening. It makes an attractive, eye-catching sign. But the union tears its hair.

Einfeld's Idea

S. Charles Einfeld, Warner director of advertising and publicity, hit a new tack when he prepared ad copy for a list of 12 national magazines lately.

Instead of waiting for the New York critics to come in with their reviews of 'The Story of Lewis Pasteur,' he used the comments of the Hollywood contingents of the trade press, first explaining what the preview criticisms are. It gave a fresh and convincing angle for the exploitation of the First National pic. Still some new ideas.

Local Appeal

St. John's, N. B.

A special Christmas-New Year's period presentation of 20 local girls and boys in a musical melange, titled 'Kiddies in Wonderland,' was offered at the Empire, in St. John's, starting Christmas Day and continuing until and including New Year's Day. The St. John Amusement Company, operating the Empire, newest of the local picture houses, engaged George Martin, a local dance instructor and dancer, to direct the production, for a month in advance of the opening.

One afternoon and two night performances were offered daily during the engagement with five individuals and a trio of sisters allotted the featured positions. The presentation was equally billed with the film, 'Folies Bergere.'

Normally, this house offers a dual bill in talking picture features, one being eliminated by the juvenile presentation. There was no interference with school activities owing to the engagement being during the regular two weeks of holidays granted the pupils in the local schools. The normal top of 15 cents was boosted to 25 cents for the presentation. Local interest in the boy and girl performers was cashed in on by this theatre, adults and children participating. The juve show took so well an extension was made for New Year's week.

One Break

Martin Goldenberg, manager of Keith's, Philadelphia, gets the re-play on hits from other RKO houses and has to do what he can to whip up a fresh batch of stunts; not always easy. That's why he appreciated a break when Frank Conroy came to town with a legit show. Conroy played the G-Man in 'Show Them No Mercy,' and Goldenberg had the picture, second run. He got not only Conroy, but Whitney Bourne, who also has played in pics. Conroy told about his experiences in the film, and then Miss Bourne told how much it appealed to women, ballooning it up for the femme trade. Cast was toured all day at the half hour breaks, and they were waiting for it when it came along.

He also got out a special herald for the pic telling 'What headlines dare not tell,' which was effective coming on the heels of the Lindbergh exodus.

For 'If You Could Only Cook' he mangled the mailing list of a club run in one of the dailies and sent an appropriately worded form letter. That helped, too.

No Foolin'

Offering money back to all patrons who could truthfully say that 'Captain Blood' was not a money's worth picture, Michael H. Chakeres, of the Regent, Springfield, O., borrowed a lie detector from the local police and set it up in the lobby. All who asked for coin were put to the test with some planted to make sure there would be enough to get interest.

A 9 x 5-foot flag was hung in the street in front of the theatre and 500 bookmarks were placed through the city library. Other gags included paper napkins, imprinted grocery bags, a coloring contest and 50 special three-sheet boards on roads leading into town.

McCoy Stunt

The Strand theatre, N. Y., promoted the Pilot Radio Corporation for a short wave hookup for the lobby of the Strand for a tieup in advance of 'Ceiling Zero.' The receiving set is prominently displayed in the lobby of the Strand, picking up messages between the airplanes and the airports.

Explanatory display card tied up the coming 'Ceiling Zero' and the short wave set as used in the picture.

Trips for Essayists

Los Angeles.

Metro and Fox-West Coast public relations departments are collabing on exploitation of 'A Tale of Two Cities' with a prize essay school contest in which first three winners get first class trips to London and Paris.

Toppers will be selected from regional essay and note book contests in schools, colleges, clubs and theatre groups. Contest will close May 15 and winners will be notified before July 1. Miss Rylls Hemington is handling for F-WC.

Heraldry

M. & P. theatres' Boston office computes that 2,000,000 heralds were distributed by the various circuits in 1935 and brags that a large proportion were either unique in format or given unusual distribution.

These are all handled through the Boston office, which takes a natural pride in the accomplishment, but promises even larger performance for the coming year.

For College Kids

Lincoln.

Pushing 'Collegiate' into the limelight, Johnny Echols bought the most dilapidated old Ford to be had among the local junkyards. He had pictures shot of it and plastered in the college paper announcing that on a certain night it would be hid somewhere in the college neighborhood and whoever finds it can keep it.

The car besides carrying the label 'Collegiate' had such letterings as 'Finders Keepers' and 'Here I am, Come and Get me.' Follow through on the stunt is to photo the finder and have him carrying a big placard with the show stuck on it. The college paper has promised to bite both times.

It's an Idea

Albany.

'Sensational Prologue.' That's the billing for an added starter with the Bert Smith Varieties, tab playing upstate film houses.

The a. s. consists of permitting audiences to see how the cast makes up and dons costumes for the show. It's done for 15 minutes on the stage before the revue starts.

Petition set forth that defendant, Royal Neighbors, refused a payment of $1,642 last month and threatened cancellation of lease if higher amount was not paid. St. Louis Amus. Unusual

Joe Well, of Universal, who leans toward a press book, the cover of which can be used for an insert card, has gone to the other extreme on 'Magnificent Obsession.' He is sending out a 'hand book' in fabrikoid cover with 10 pages, each a trifle shorter than the one below and each on a different-colored paper, with the result that the exposed margin, which is indexed, gives the suggestion of a rainbow.

In the comparatively limited sum space he gives all the necessary information. Which is something to think about.

Contest for Col.

Boston, Mass.

Carl D. Goodwin, contest director of the Massachusetts Safety Council, is working on a contest to be released shortly through the Boston Evening American columns devoted to the Columbia's Junior Adventurers Club, in conjunction with Columbia Pictures exchange.

Tentative plans call for the telling of how to avoid accidents and will also show motion pictures to the various club units in reater Boston.

Kugel's Campaign

Lee Kugel, one of the real old-timers, is working for Columbia on 'If You Could Only Cook.' He sends in his campaign for the Olympic, Syracuse.

One stunt was the free service of waffles and coffee to the women attending the matinees, hooking electrical waffle irons to the title. This involved a deal with a local electrical store for the loan of four waffle irons, three coffee percolators, refrigerator and a setup of mixers, etc. The company also supplied a chef and waitresses. To put this over Kugel had to promote 40 pounds of coffee, 50 pounds of butter, 50 quarts of milk, 25 quarts of cream, 125 pounds of a brand flour, 20 pounds of cube sugar, 5 gallons syrup, 24 doz. eggs, 3,000 each paper cups plates and spoons and 3,000 napkins. He not only got special stories on the waffles, but got the theatre to spend an additional $50 in advertising the stunt.

The Liberty carriers tucked 3,000 copies of the G. E. cook book in copies delivered, and there were two large window displays of electric appliances, with the company bannering both sides of all delivery trucks during the run. Three co-op ads made the papers generous with special stories, and there was daily mention of the picture, and the Postal delivered 2,500 heralds, stuffed into telegram envelopes.

High schools were contacted on the waffle stunt and there were a number of privilege stunts worked.

Kugel broke into theatricals at a time when anything above the usual newspaper ads and posted paper made town talk, and he's been growing up with the business ever since.

Touted Author

Indianapolis.

Bud Summers, Don Wright, and Frank Moneyhun went the lofty brow way to appeal to cap and gowners, sawbones and parsons in behalf of the 'Magnificent Obsession' pic showing at the Indiana. 9,000 letters were mailed preachers and doctors, calling attention to the fact that a gentleman of the cloth authored the story, and that it dealt chiefly with the medical profession.

In addition, the lads used the general commercial tie-ups, managing to check off such items as a book tie-up with the Indiana News Company, with 20 posters on stands; 24 tie-ups on number 14 cards; a travel agency window, 10,000 heralds distributed by Postal Telegraph; a book window at Ayres and Stewarts rental libraries, and a small co-op ad with Strauss' on men's clothes.

Summers and Tom Devine, manager of the Indiana Roof, ballroom on the fifth floor of the theatre building, got together on a plan to exploit 'Captain Blood' which might furnish inspiration for theatre managers in other cities.

A Pirate dance is scheduled for Jan. 22, ten days prior to the opening of the pic, with prizes donated by a jewelry store to be awarded for the best pirate costumes. Jewelry shop ties in with display ads, and a 'treasure chest' window. Girls from the 'Vanities,' playing the Indiana stage, will pick out the winners in the contest. This triple combination focuses public attention on the current attraction, the next up, and the ballroom, with everyone benefiting from the union.

Commercial Hooks

Some managers make a point of tieing in to local stores on special stunts and have worked so many ideas to such advantage to the merchants that sometimes the dealers come in with ideas of their own, knowing that a hook to a theatre will make any stunt more attractive.

Idea started away back when a stationer grumbled that he was stuck with a lot of modeling clay composition. He had been high pressured into buying far beyond his needs.

Manager contacted the art teacher in the public high school and got her to make three figurines of current picture players. These were put into the store window with the stills from which they had been modeled and with a display of the modeling material. A $5 prize was hung up for the best entry, the store putting up the cash. At the end of the third day the dealer had to wire for more composition, and he sold out the new batch, too.

Then a grocery wanted to come in with a soap modeling contest, and that was a success. For several years the theatre has been lined up at least one contest, ranging from the best pie made from a proprietary filler, to the best dress designed for cotton goods which a store is pushing. Contests are so varied that they do not stale, and an effort is made to give each one an idea punch.

HAILE 'DARED' INTO FRONT SHOTS BY U

A dare flung at Haile Selassie's government got the first newsreel cameraman to the Ethiopian front. Howard Winner, Universal cameraman, is now in Dolo, near Italian Somaliland, recently reported bombed by Italian aviators. The cryptic question, 'How do we know the Italians are bombing these hospitals?' transmitted to Haile Selassie by Charles Ford, U's newsreel editor, prompted the Ethiopian government to allow the newsreel grinder to visit the front.

He was flown from Addis Ababa, far to the north of Dolo, in the government's lone plane. Not known just what pictures Winner has obtained thus far, but significance of his visit is indicated by London Daily Mail offer, already made to Universal, for 20c per word for first-hand story by newsreel cameraman. No deal made thus far by U, but company plans to sell story (probably to the N. Y. Times).

Winner, worn out with routine picture-taking in and about Addis Ababa, was getting ready to leave for Aden, in Arabia, to shoot the concentration of 35,000 British troops there when Emperor Selassie granted permission for him to visit the southern front. It's first time any newsreel cameraman got up to the Ethiopian front. No other cameraman or newspaper correspondent went with Winner.

Bill Danzinger's Rest Cure, Herb Morgan In

Baltimore, Jan. 14.

Lou Brown is being sent in to replace Morgan here. Brown, who held spot some years back, comes over from Washington Loew office, at which spot he is being succeeded by Ray Bell.

Considerable Anti-Bank Legislation on the Tapis

Solution of 'bank' and kindred special nights that smack of gambling looms for the industry while legislatures in some 20 states are in session this winter. The legislators are meeting in regular session in about half of these states and in special session in 10 others. In at least half of the 20, moves already have been instigated to introduce bills which would curb lottery nights. In most states church leaders are waging the biggest battle to have these stunts abolished.

Strange phase of the whole set-up is that in a majority of states, exhibitors are making no move towards combating this legislation, which would outlaw bank nights and other lottery stunts that have flooded the industry in recent months.

St. L. Exhibs Trying To Straighten Out Matter of Scale, Etc.

St. Louis, Jan. 14.

Plan to eliminate differences over matinee extension, bank nite, bargain nites, giveaways, etc., which caused three Fanchon & Marco houses here to extend matinee prices until 7:30 p.m., are under way as result of conference held Friday (10) by Harry Arthur and Marco Wolff, of F & M, Fred Wehrenberg, pres. MPTOA of St. Louis, Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois and L. K. and J. C. Ansell, owners of three second run houses. Arthur said he would abide by any rules the nabes laid down but he would not do anything that was not according to letter of the law. Arthur stated he would go to 6 p.m. with his matinee price, if the nabes did likewise or he was prepared to do anything they did.

He reminded them that he did not make a move in the extension of matinee prices until after the nabes, requested last September to discontinue bargain hours, nights, etc., let time for cleaning up situation elapse. Arthur said he would meet any competition and was prepared to put second-run pictures in New Grand Central theatre, now shuttered.

NW ALLIED'S SQUAWK

Against Distribs' Failure to Deliver Certain Pix

Minneapolis, Jan. 14,

Northwest Allied States is preparing to make the matter of major distributors' failure to deliver pictures in their last and lowest-priced group a major order of business at regional meetings to be held in March and at the annual convention here in April.

An announcement from the independent exhibitors' organization declares that if the distributors continue to ignore the complaint against the practice which, it is claimed, has the effect of raising the average price of exhibitors' pictures far beyond the figures contemplated originally, 'strenuous means will be employed and nothing will be left undone to correct the evil.'

Only one major distributor, Metro, is given a clean bill by Northwest Allied States. That company sells pictures by name and number, Northwest Allied states.

Rialto, Wash., Auctioned For $300,000, Lone Bid

Washington, Jan. 14.

Rialto, 2,100-seater and once capital's ace film house, was auctioned for $300,000 last Wednesday (8) to Charlotte A. Engle, representing the note-holders, the only bidder. No plans for use of property, which includes two small stores and two-story office building, have been set.

House was owned by Tom Moore, who built it in 1917 at cost of $250,000, when 9th street was town's gay white way. Moore leased it to Universal for 10 years in 1925. As theatre district moved west, house began slipping and Universal got out from under last year. Moore reopened house for two weeks last fall but flopped from lack of flicker product.

Theatre was town's only dark house.

and started getting customers conscious of it weeks ahead of time. Sold on the idea of being another 'Back Street' and 'Imitation of Life,' both of which did swell here in past.

Estimates for This Week

Alvin (Harris) (2,000; 25-35-40)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U). Got away on Sunday, first time house has had Sunday opening, and started out like a smash. Continued vigorous trade indicates at least $10,000, great and better than some weeks in which house has had stage show as well. That also means probably b.o. Last week 'King of Burlesque' (20th), in six days just fair at under $6,000, and on three days with 'Great Impersonation' (U) and show headed by Everett Marshall, Cabin Kids and Eddie Garr about the same thing.

Davis (WB) (1,700; 25-30-40)—'Sanders of River' (UA) and '$1,000 a Minute' (Rep). House closed down last Thursday (9), holding New Year's week bill over for two extra days. In prolonged session, couldn't better $3,000, below house average and tip-off on hopeless struggle of site to keep going. Competish too keen, but WB claims it's satisfied since it was intention to keep it going only long enough to clear shelves of accumulated product.

Fulton (Shea-Hyde) (1,750; 15-25-40)—'Chan's Secret' (20th) and 'Hitch-Hike Lady' (Rep). House was closing one day and not closing the next all of last week. Finally at last minute decided to stay lit, and current bill went in on day's notice. Slow start as result, but a good week-end may enable it to keep head above water at $3,000, or perhaps slightly below that. Last week, with nine days, 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) around $4,100 after swell $7,500 on regular seven-day opening session.

Penn (Loew's-UA) (3,300; 25-35-40)—'Collegiate' (Par). Nothing doing on this one; poor $8,500. Last week 'Capt. Blood' (WB) came through with sizzling $17,000.

Stanley (WB) (3,600; 25-40-55)—'Splendor' (UA) and Lottie Mayer's Hippodrome water ballet. Management made a smart move in bringing in day after opening local boys' band, which week before had been sensation of Major Bowes unit. Business took jump immediately, getting more than $6,000 on Saturday (11) and should wind up week with $21,000, fine. Last week Bowes unit with 'Dangerous' (WB) sensational at slightly better than $30,000.

Warner (WB) (2,000; 25-40)—'Baldpate' (RKO) and 'Millions in Air' (Par). Off over last week, but not many complaints at $4,600, which at least permits house to stay in black. Last week 'Ibbetson' (Par) and 'Pacific Fleet' (WB) good marquee draw and got fine $6,400 in eight days.

Rise in the number of damage suits against distributors, as well as the fact that many state legislatures and Congress are now in session, is heightening the demand by distributing companies for a full-time revival of Film Boards of Trade. Feeling among industry and trade association leaders is that producing-distributing companies cannot afford to wait much longer in placing these boards in full operation.

Current threat of adverse legislation and growing annoyance of major distribs at manner in which civil actions, instigated by exhibitors, are piling up, are making distribution companies fully cognizant that something must be done. And soon. Because the Film Boards of Trade always have maintained a skeleton staff, this would be the logical organization to act as spokesman in various communities for the industry.

Since the NRA was declared legally dead, as far as code matters and enforcement were concerned, the industry has gone along without any specific unit or organization designated to deal first-hand with exhibitor problems and conflicts. Result has been that when an exhib fails to obtain what he considered a fair deal from a distributor, he rushes into court. Millions in law suits have been filed against distributor companies in all sections of the country.

In an effort to avert further piling up of these damage actions, and to have full-time association representing major and independent companies in all legislative matters, there is now a concerted move looking toward reviving Film Boards of Trade. While this will mean an added expense to distributors, feeling is growing that the business will save in the long run, besides maintaining a better good-will attitude all around.

Giveaways and Flat Rental Films Hurting % Pictures in Midwest

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Distributors in this territory are beginning to worry in earnest over bank night and the inroads the money giveaways have made into the earnings of the exchanges. The exchange managers have been trying to laugh the matter off as strictly a one-shot proposition which would die out within a few weeks. But the exchanges are really going into headache sessions to find out what can be done about the bank night giveaways which have mushroomed throughout the midwest.

Exchanges themselves estimate that in the Chicago territory alone the bank night has injured the total receipts of the distributors here by between $10,000-$12,000 each week, the revenue from percentage pictures being particularly seriously affected.

Distribs have stopped sitting back and taking this $12,000 clip in revenue in silence and are now seeking several possible solutions to their problems as yelps zoom in from the home offices about the shortened income from Chicago exchanges. The biggest percentage pictures of the season have turned in only mediocre returns in this territory despite the fact that these same pictures have cleaned up in the rest of the country.

Exhibitors with the money giveaways have arranged their special nights so that they fall on days when they are playing a straight rental picture so that no matter how well the house does on the gift night, the exchanges get their flat rental. Exhibs then spot their percentage pictures on the day just preceding or following the bank night or screeno night, when business falls off to the worst levels of the week. Public has decided that if they are going to the theatres they might as well go when they have a chance of winning some money besides seeing a picture, so that their amusement appropriation is spent on the giveaway nights while the other nights of the week naturally suffer.

Chicken Feed

Result is that the theatres are making about 75% of the weekly gross on the bank and screeno nights which are run twice or three times during the week, while the 25% of the gross is turned over to be fought for by the percentage pictures and the other also-rans. This is just the reverse of the previous arrangement in which the percentage pictures accounted for the major portion of the gross.

bullish in last week's trading in stocks, with amusements giving an excellent account of themselves. Nine amusements hit new highs for present year and 1935, as three bonds registered best prices in more than two years.

Amusement Group hit 43¾, as measured by the averages for 12 representative issues, the highest point reached in more than three years. This new top was made on heaviest volume since the middle of last November. Group finished at slightly below 43¼ for a gain of 1.718 points. Low mark for week was 41.

Stocks to reach new 1935-6 peaks, their new highs and net gain for week were American Seating, at 26¼, up 2; Columbia Pictures pfd., at 50, up 2; Radio common, at 13½, gain of 25c.; RKO, at 7¼, up 1¼; 20th Century-Fox common, at 27, advance of 2½; 20th-Fox pfd., at 36⅝, up 3¼; Warner Bros. common, at 10⅝, up 12½c.; Westinghouse common, at 102⅝, an advance of 5¼, and Westinghouse pfd., at 127¼, up 1.

General Theatre Equipment liens and certificates of same went to new highs at 26¼. The bonds showed an advance of 3⅞ at the close, 25. Keith 6s also made new 1935-6 peak at 96½, up 3 points on the week.

Amusements followed general uptrend most of time, many issues hanging up new highs in Friday's (10) trading. RKO made its new top that day, after it had gone forward on comparatively huge volume the preceding day. Twentieth Century-Fox issues also made their new highs on Friday, after reaching new peaks on two previous days.

The Century Club

After getting into the select Century Club on Tuesday, Westinghouse common later pushed forward to 102⅝. Although not making a new high, Eastman Kodak common again came back into favor as it was thrust upwards 4½ points to 163¼.

Universal preferred again was taken in hand as the week closed and pushed up to 59⅞. Stock spurted an advance of 6⅛ points at the blow-off. Radio B also resumed its advance by going forward to 90⅜, a short distance from previous peak. This issue was up 4¼ points on the week.

Paramount 1st pfd., which has been featured by wide swings in recent trading, advanced to 83. At this level, it was up 2½ points. Stock wound up trading at 81⅛, gain of 1⅛.

After two weeks of marking time, the two 20th-Fox stocks again were whirled upwards to new tops.

Chartwise, 20th-Fox common followed indicated upturn by shooting to new high at 27. Such move was anticipated by chart readers, since the stock had fluctuated between 22 and 24 for two weeks and at considerably lower levels than in the two preceding weeks. Stock drifted to these lower levels on diminished volume and, in addition, there was some evidence it had been fairly well cleaned out for advance.

Continued strength in Radio B apparently is based on expectation that recapitalization plan, on which Joe Kennedy is working, will include payment of considerable portion of $21 due on this issue in back dividends. After making new top at 92, it has not been able to penetrate the 90 mark. Chart experts believe that Radio B is in a considerably improved position as a result of healthy shake-out in previous week which dropped the issue to 82¼. Since then it has held above 85.

Plenty of resistance has been encountered by Warner Bros. common between 10¼ and 10⅝, but the stock has been able to hold consistently above 9⅝. Encouraging factor to chartists is that it has shown the greatest volume on the upside. Main question now is whether the stock can decisively penetrate the resistance level around 10¼.

Loew's common has managed to stay above 50 now for eight weeks, but has been unable to get through the 55 level after a spurt late in December carried it to this new high price. Latter part of December witnessed a reaction which carried it down to 50¼ on sizable volume. Further test of this lower level was made last week when the issue dropped to 51⅞.

Amusement Group has been able to hold above the 40 mark, as measured by the averages, for the last three or four weeks. Resistance level around 43 was definitely pierced last week on heavy volume. This would indicate that the group may go higher before reaction sets in.

With leading trade indices continuing to climb and make a rosy picture, as compared with reports from industry at this time last year, Wall Street continues to be conservatively bullish. A fairly accurate indication of this frame of mind is found last week in the boost in stock exchange seat prices. The top sale, which was at $155,000, marked an advance of $20,000 over the last sale in 1935 and was the highest price paid since February, 1934, when one changed hands at $190,000.

Best performance by an amusement issue on the curb was Technicolor. Evidences that this stock was being groomed for an early move have been visible for the last few weeks. The stock justified this belief last week by spurting to 21⅝. Even in the face of profit-taking, Technicolor showed a gain of 3 points net. Trans-Lux, which is swayed to some extent by the amount of volume on the stock exchange, snapped back to 3⅞, near its best 1935-6 price, a fractional advance on the week.

In addition to General Theatres and Keith obligations, amusement liens generally were strong. RKO debentures pushed forward to 82⅝, but dipped to 80 at the gong. This gave these bonds a 2-point gain. Warner Bros. 6s held around the year's high much of the week, finishing near the best prices for an advance of 1⅝.

Loew 6s became actively higher, nearing the 105 level near the blow-off for a 75c gain. Paramount Pictures 6s were the most active of the higher-priced liens. These obligations went to 95½, but were pushed back to 94 at the close, for an advance of 75c.

Estimate 20th-Fox Net, For '35, at $4,400,000

Current estimates in Wall Street are that 20th Century-Fox for the year 1935 will show net earnings of around $4,400,000. This would include nearly $1,000,000 in dividends receivable from 20th Century-Fox Film's 42% stock interest in National Theatre (Fox-West Coast).

If this estimate is correct it means net earnings for '35 are more than three times over the former Fox Film company for 1934. The merger of Fox with 20th Century was effected last August.

20th Probably to Retire $1,696,000 In 6% Debentures

20th Century-Fox's convertible 6% debentures, due next April 1, probably will be retired out of treasury funds. Company does not feel that any new financing will be necessary. These Fox Film Corp. debentures total $1,696,000.

Twentieth-Fox also is contemplating changing the first sinking fund issues of Fox Realty Corp. of California and Fox Film Realty Corp. for bonds bearing a lower interest rate, thereby effecting a material saving each year for the company.

As of last March, these realty issues totalled $1,556,300 and $748,900 respectively. In case this new financing is done, the parent company probably will have to register under the Securities Exchange Act.

Reports current in Wall Street were that the recent efforts by several investment firms to buy the holdings of Chase National Bank in 20th-Fox thus far have proved unsuccessful. The Chase bank, on Aug. 26, 1935, held 57.01%, or 774,753½ shares of preferred, and 31.58%, or 387,376¾ shares of common.

Tentative moves of 20th Century-Fox to obtain control and operation of Fox-West Coast and affiliated circuits were looked on favorably in the street last week. Financial observers feel that such a move, if carried to a successful conclusion, would obtain added outlets for company product and eventually working for further increases in income, directly and indirectly.

tion of his first big 'dream.' He visioned himself manager of his own theatre and conceived the idea of building a bigger house than the Capitol, with stock subscriptions from his many radio followers to supply the funds.

Roxy started to build the huge Roxy at 50th street and Seventh avenue with the stock subscriptions, but was unable to complete the project without assistance, and Fox Films stepped in. This was later to deprive Roxy of control of the theatre, but in the meanwhile the Roxy opened, and it was the last word in amusement palaces up to then. He called it the 'Cathedral of the Motion Picture.' It was here that Roxy showed what he was capable of with money to spend and room to operate in. His presentations were the most lavish ever attempted and his grosses were the biggest on record. With Fox's 'Cock-Eyed World,' the house hit the all time high week's gross of $167,000 and nearly a half a million dollars in four weeks. As part of the stage show with that picture, Roxy put soldiers on a treadmill behind the screen and dissolved this scene into the main title Roxy claimed for years after that the stage presentation, not the picture, was responsible for the business.

Music Hall Idea Born

Roxy conceived the idea of a huge music hall, bigger than the Roxy theatre, back in 1928. He said he thought about it while standing on the deck of a boat going to Europe. He interested William Fox in the idea and Fox bought up a large parcel of land in back of the Roxy. But Fox turned his buy into a parking lot instead and Roxy then went after the Rockefellers.

Through M. H. Aylesworth, then president of NBC, Roxy presented his dream to David Sarnoff and Owen D. Young of the Radio Corp. of America, and with these men he sold the idea and himself to the Rockefellers.

The Rockefellers had been interested in erecting a new opera auditorium to replace the old Metropolitan Opera House, along with a large civic center, and had bought up 12 acres of property from 48th to 50th streets between Fifth and Sixth avenues. A deal was arranged among NBC, RKO, RCA and the Rockefeller interests, with Roxy engaged to supervise the construction and handle the operation of the two Radio City theatres, one of which was to be named in his honor and the other the Radio City Music Hall.

Music Hall opened Dec. 27, 1932, and the Roxy theatre (now the Center) two nights later. One has 6,250 seats; the Roxy (Center) 3,700. Together they cost $12,000,000 and together or alone they were psysically superior to any theatres in the world. The pre-opening costs were $900,000, exclusive of construction, and the Music Hall alone was geared at a weekly overhead of $120,000, much of which went into the stage show. In a short while the nut was cut in half with the Hall changing to a grind and adding pictures after the opening variety policy had failed. But the shows at the Music Hall continued to be more lavish than those of all other presentation theatres, under the Roxy influence, and that influence and the stage show style he set still prevail at the Music Hall.

The Music Hall opened with a back and front personnel of 1,000. In a week the number was cut to 700. There were 80 stage hands behind the scenes and 74 musicians in the pit. There were two lines of 48 girls each and, in all, 400 people on the stage. The public was dazzled by numbers, space and color, but they didn't see everything. Over the theatre were the living quarters of the managing director—Roxy—furnished and equipped, exclusive of construction costs, for $250,000. There was a dining room staff of a headwaiter, two waiters, one cook and one pastry chef, prepared to spread a meal for 30 people if necessary.

Among the furnishings were three solid silver table services, all marked with an R, each service being for a different meal—breakfast, etc.—and the kitchen pots and pans bill was $2,200. Besides the dining room, which was 19 feet high, there were two bedrooms. Roxy designed it all himself.

After leaving Radio City as its theatre director, Roxy continued his weekly broadcasts with his 'Gang' from the theatre, and then with his troupe he went on a tour of the Paramount picture theatres at $10,000 a week for the show. Following that trip, his first experience as a stage player outside of appearances in the orchestra pit of his own theatre or at benefits, Roxy returned to theatre operation under a deal with Warner Bros. and re-opened the large Mastbaum in Philadelphia. That never got going in the old Roxy style. Roxy's last major effort was a commercial program with his 'Gang' in behalf of Fletcher's Castoria on the CBS network for 26 weeks last year. Shortly prior to his death he had drawn plans for a new program to be called 'Roxy's Professional Hour' and deals for its sponsorship were under way. His personal attorney, Samuel Spring, stated Monday that a deal had been on also for Roxy to return to the original Roxy theatre as managing director.

In all his years as a theatre operator and showman Roxy was always a creator and seldom if ever a imitator. His policy was copied all over, but never with the success that Roxy himself met, because Roxy's policies required heavy expenditures, and few others had the money.

Roxy pioneered with class entertainment in the pop priced picture theatre field. He gave them more people for 75c. than they'd ever seen before. He gave them more color than they'd ever seen at any price. He was the first to put 100 musicians in a picture house orchestra pit, and the first to put white gloves on his ushers. He was a practical idealist in front of the house as well as backstage, and the military 'Roxy service' became famous all over the world. He trained his staffs to be polite and alert and say 'Thank you.' He became an expert in stage lighting, in scenery construction, in staging, in program building and even in music. He created the de luxe theatre and the air of elegant luxury. He was the No. 1 exhibitor of the world and without a close competitor.

Few Personalities

Although he produced stage shows for years, Roxy developed few stage personalities, perhaps because he specialized in mass effects rather than individual talent. Most of his 'discoveries' were in the classical field of music, singing, dancing, or staging. They included Erno Rapee, Patricia Bowman, Jan Peerce, Viola Philo, Leon Leonidoff and Clark Robinson.

While he handled and spent millions, it is doubtful whether Roxy ever personally reached the status of millionaire at any time. He was a high salaried man (he drew $2,500 a week at Radio City) but he never gained complete financial control over the theatres he operated for others.

Roxy's first serious illness occurred just prior to the opening of Radio City under the strain of getting the project under way. He attended the opening with a nurse at his side, and shortly after the opening had to go away for his health. A year ago, following a heart attack, his physician warned him against continuing his work, but Roxy replied: 'I would rather die with my boots on.' He was an ardent golfer and the weekend before his death he played a strenuous 18 holes.

Surviving S. L. Rothafel are his widow, a son, Arthur, and a daughter, Mrs. George Bijur. The son was formerly connected with a studio on the Coast and is now in the advertising business.

Funeral services will be held today (Wednesday) at 11 a. m. at the Central Synagogue, Lexington avenue and 55th street, with burial in Linden Hills cemetery, Brooklyn.

Loew's $1,811,396 Net

For the quarter ended Nov. 21 last, Loew's, Inc., shows a net profit of $1,811,396, which is equal to $13.25 a share on the preferred and $1.08 a share on the common stock of the company.

This earning compares with $2,001,308 for the corresponding 12 weeks in 1934, or $14.64 on the preferred and $1.23 on the common.

STATIONS, BURNING UP, REPORTED SET FOR LEGAL TILT WITH ASCAP

Broadcasters and Transcription Firms Rap Network Influence—N.A.B. Pleas Turned Down Flatly by Society

(Warner Bros. had by press time yesterday (Tuesday) obtained licensing contract signatures from 202 stations. Newcomers to the list included WDAF, mouthpiece for the Kansas City Star, KRLD, operated by the Dallas Times-Herald; WOAI, the San Antonio Light's outlet; KOMO, Seattle; KALE, Portland, Ore., KVOO, Oklahoma City, and WJAR, Providence.)

Leaders of the indie faction in the National Association of Broadcasters had by press time yesterday (Tuesday) reconciled themselves to the fact that there was nothing they could do to prevent the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers from bringing the stations in general into line by today (Wednesday). In a wire sent out to 380 stations last Friday (9) ASCAP gave the broadcasters until Jan. 15 to accept the new five-year license agreement or consider themselves intriguers.

Impression in both radio and music circles is that several major stations, including WLW, Cincinnati, will resist the ASCAP ultimatum with counter litigation, should the Society file infringement suits against them. The resisters, it is anticipated, will charge that they have been subjected to a squeeze all the way around with the national networks co-operating with ASCAP in putting over the latter's new contract. Indications were also given yesterday (Tuesday) that, even though the vast majority of stations will have yielded to the ASCAP ultimatum, an emergency meeting of the NAB membership will be held in Washington within the next four weeks to discuss what legal action can be taken to vacate the ASCAP contracts. It has also been intimated that this meeting will discuss the proposition of asking NBC and Columbia to withdraw the membership of their owned and operated stations from the trade association.

Efforts of James W. Baldwin, executive secretary of the NAB, to induce ASCAP to agree to a temporary stay on its ultimatum proved fruitless Monday (13). Baldwin in a wire to Gene Buck, ASCAP prez, on that day had asked that he be permitted to appear before the ASCAP directorate so that he could present his plea for a postponement, but he was advised that the board was determined to let the ultimatum remain as is. In a subsequent phone conversation with E. C. Mills, ASCAP gen. mgr., Baldwin again sought a stay of action, suggesting that the ASCAP board first permit him to present a tentative program on copyright fee adjudication that he had mapped out. Mills' answer was that contracts from stations were rapidly pouring in and that the Society would at a future date be willing to reform these contracts if a satisfactory plan in that direction was contained in Baldwin's program. Mills remarked that if there was to be any rewriting of contracts this would have to include those now held by the networks. Following this conversation Baldwin airmailed to ASCAP a copy of his program.

Networks Position

Top executives of both NBC and Columbia have since the issuance of the ASCAP ultimatum been mulling over what action to take toward their associated outlets which by midnight today (Wednesday) had failed to accept the Society's five year contract. View taken by these network officials is that they propose to stand by their present agreement with ASCAP and there would be no alternative for their associated outlets but to yield to the contract as offered by the Society. Indicated last minute action on the part of the networks was that they would, as the deadline approached, check with ASCAP on the stations heard from and dispatch a telegram to recalcitrant affiliates warning them of the contractual complications that would follow if they did not obtain the necessary license coverage for music. These wires will, it is understood, call the affiliated stations' attention to the clause in their contracts with the networks which stipulates that they must have licenses from ASCAP or such other copyright owners which control music broadcast by the webs on commercial programs.

It was reported in broadcast circles yesterday that the more important of indie transcription manufacturers would ally themselves with resistant broadcasters in bringing legal action against the Society. From this same source it was learned that the proceedings would revolve around the charge that the Society in refusing to deal directly on performing rights licenses with transcription makers for commercial programs turned out prior to Jan. 1, 1936, was acting in restraint of trade. It was also indicated that the national networks would be drawn into the litigation, with the allegation being that they had been working hand in hand with ASCAP in imposing the five-year contract on the independent stations and as such constituted part of the alleged conspiracy.

Chevrolet Case

Most important of the request for direct licensing of transcription was made to the ASCAP board by the World Broadcasting System in behalf of Chevrolet. World, in its petition stated that the mechanical licenses the programs involved had been obtained long before Jan. 1, 1936, and that unless clearances were obtained from the Society Chevrolet would be prevented from placing the disc campaign on 380 stations, with heavy damages resulting both to the transcription producer and the auto manufacturer. Warner Bros. issued a performing release this program series to Chevrolet two weeks ago, with the understanding that the former would have until Oct. 1 to work out a fee for the music involved. Under the Warner permit the Chevrolet discs may be played on any station, regardless of whether it holds a Warner license.

Temporary quarters which the NAB maintained at the St. Regis hotel in New York have been abandoned. It is Baldwin's belief now that there is nothing to be gained for the indie broadcasters by his keeping in close contact with ASCAP and that hereafter the copyright matter could be carried on most effectively from Washington.

HOTEL SUIT AMENDED; JOLSON IS DROPPED

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14.

Al Jolson, named with NBC in $100,000 damage suit brought here last summer by Summit Hotel, Uniontown, Pa., was eliminated as a defendant in the action last week in amended statement of claim filed in common pleas court.

Hotel claimed Jolson made derogatory remarks about spot while interviewing Sam Parks, Jr., open golf champion and once the pro there, on radio last June. Three judges later expressed an informal opinion that Jolson and broadcasting company shouldn't be joined in one suit. As result, counsel for Summit filed amended action, dropping Jolson and naming only NBC.

JACKSON CHIEFS CHI E. KATZ REP OFFICE

Chicago, Jan. 14.

After having been on the E. Katz newspaper-radio station representative company's payroll here for two weeks, Lowell Jackson was formally announced as special radio contact and salesman for the local E. Katz firm. Eugene Katz made the appointment for the outfit.

Jackson moves in on the Katz payroll after having had his own station rep outfit of Jackson-Moore. With the acquisition of Jackson the rep company also added WOWO, Ft. Wayne and WMC, Memphis, to its list of stations.

WARING DECISION DELAYED

Additional Briefs Postpone Philadelphia Verdict

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.

Decision by Judge Harry S. McDevitt is expected next week in case of Fred Waring against WDAS. Lawyers for opposing sides entered additional briefs last Friday (10). Expected losing side will appeal, with likelihood of case being carried to highest courts and ultimate decision a matter of months or years off.

Matter, involving broadcasting rights of phonograph records made by performers, reached court when bandleader brought injunction suit against station.

'WE LOVE A PARADE WITHOUT WB MUSIC'

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.

Warner-ASCAP split has had one more reaction on broadcast situation. It busted up elaborate plans for other description of annual Mummer's Parade here. Because paraders have bands that play pop tunes during the march, WIP and WFIL cancelled original intentions of covering entire affair and broadcast mere half-hour programs in which music was glaringly missing.

Entire parade lasts upwards of four hours. WIP at first had exclusive, but WFIL brought its short-wave equipment into play and also described part of show. Both feared bands would play W-B tunes.

Col. Stoopnagle's Wife Will Contest Divorce

Rochester, Jan. 14.

Mrs. Frederick Chase Taylor, wife of Col Lemuel Q. Stoopnagle of Stoopnagle and Budd, radio comedy team, will fight any divorce her husband may obtain in Nevada, she announced at her home here. She was surprised by a divorce suit secretly filed in Carson City, Nev., charging mental cruelty and incompatibility.

They were married in Brighton, suburb of Rochester, in 1919 and have a son, Frederick, Jr. Taylor's home is in Buffalo.

Wynn May Be Back

J. Stirling Getchell agency has taken on option on Ed Wynn's services for Plymouth Motors pending the closing of a time contract for the show on CBS. Cash involved in the option is $2,000.

Wynn would like to have Cliff Hall do the straight in his new air act. Inquiries in this direction by Wynn last week revealed that Jack Pearl's ex-feed was on the Westcoast and had no intention of returning to New York for some time. Allmony trouble is one of the reasons.

Fred Astaire Indef

Lucky Strike has not decided whether to bring Fred Astaire back for a series of appearances on its Saturday night program over NBC. Original plan of the cig account had been to return him for either four or six weeks soon after he had completed work on the RKO production, 'Follow the Fleet.'

Commercial's position makes it uncertain whether Astaire will introduce the music from 'Follow the Fleet' on the air as he did for 'Top Hat.' Astaire is getting ready for his next picture on the Coast.

Beemer Sues Wife

Detroit, Jan. 14.

Charging his wife with neglect of their home and four children for past two years, Brace Beemer, assistant general manager of WXYZ, filed suit for divorce last week. He declared he was forced to hire three servants to take her place.

Beemer petitioned for an injunction restraining his wife, Evelyn, from removing their four children, Robert, 10; Joseph, 8; Barbara, 6, and Richard, 2, from jurisdiction of Circuit Court.

Baldwin Raps ASCAP

Washington, Jan. 14.

Denouncing precipitate moves to force the industry to initial five-year contracts with American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, James W. Baldwin, managing director of the National Association of Broadcasters and the association's advisory committee on copyright Monday (13) fired a broadside at copyright-owners, demanding an end to 'discrimination' and general overhauling of the licensing system now in use.

N. A. B. blast was in the form of a lengthy statement outlining both the immediate and long-term program in behalf of association members upon which Baldwin and the six-man committee have embarked. Besides serving notice on the music publishing industry, the statement served to answer recent protests by Leo V. Fitzpatrick, vice-president of WJR, Detroit, and president of the N. A. B., and to rebuke the networks 'for failure to play ball with independents.'

Reflecting approval of the attitude taken by the Warner Bros. houses and accusing ASCAP of trying to induce broadcasters into tying themselves up for five years, the declaration reiterated demands for a pet-piece basis of licensing stations, equal treatment of all broadcasters and of different members of the same classes, indemnities against infringement actions, uniform contracts, and various other new practices and principles.

Warning members to scrutinize contracts thoroughly, the N. A. B. committee threw out a veiled hint to the industry to think carefully before yielding to ASCAP demands that five-year contracts be signed by Wednesday (15) but the statement did not go so far as to give specific advice to broadcasters. Baldwin voiced the opinion that stations needing ASCAP music appear to have 'no alternative but to accept the five-year contract' but at the same time lamented that the Society's deadline has put 'increased obstacles in the way of future negotiations.' If the obstacles are insuperable, N. A. B. officer suggested, 'that is all the more reason for bending every effort to carry out the rest of the program.'

Negotiations which have been going on for several weeks, the bulletin informed N. A. B. members, are aimed at elimination of all discriminations, an equitable basis for fixing costs, clearance of copyright at the program source, compulsory and up-to-date catalogs, reasonable clerical arrangements, and, above all, a measured-service licensing system.

The Baldwin statement left no doubt about the depth of feeling among independents over the failure of the two principal networks to help the industry present a united front in the campaign declaring that the 'principal obstacle to satisfactory negotiations with ASCAP proceeds from its outstanding contracts with the two network companies and certain individual broadcasters. In this manner, Baldwin replied to the protests from Fitzpatrick that the present 'network-dominated' N. A. B. regime is selling radio down the river.

It cannot be denied that the fact that such contracts are outstanding presents a serious problem in any future negotiations, particularly since some of the contracts (e.g. those of the two networks) contain material advantages which will not lightly be surrendered,' Baldwin asserted.

The temporary 90-day contracts offered by the Warner Bros. firms, the bulletin stated, provide the first 'substantial hope of the accomplishment of certain of the broadcasters' prime objectives' but at the same time contain defects which should be removed in permanent agreements and future negotiations. Primary objections listed were the limitation on indemnity provisions and the burdensome report requirements.

Praise WB Practice

Demanding compulsory furnishing of catalogs, Baldwin warned members not to sign any contracts which do not require the licensing organization to provide complete lists and up-to-date additions at fixed periods. In this connection, the Warner Bros. contracts were praised.

Contracts requiring an undue amount of clerical work must be avoided, the bulletin said, noting that only limited report can be expected from affiliated stations concerning network broadcasts, and that stations are not in position to make complete accounts about records and transcriptions.

Three principal systems were described as possible in analyzing the chances of working out a satisfactory per-piece license scheme. Remarking that the practical difficulties of fixing a price scale on the basis of station size, power, business volume, service area, or frequency, N. A. B. listed these possibilities as (1) a fixed price for each number per performance, (2) fixed prices per performance for different classes of compositions, and (3) uniform charges based on a percentage of the rate card.

The second basis, involving a sliding scale based on card rates, is sought by the N. A. B. negotiators. Baldwin remarked that while as many as 40 classifications might be required, the committee feels this system is practical if a simple classification method can be doped out.

Enactment of the Duffy copyright bill, wiping out the $250 minimum penalty, and vigorous enforcement of the government's anti-trust suit against ASCAP are developments which offer hope to the industry in working out a long-range copyright program, the bulletin said.

Miss Laudin on WMCA

WMCA, New York, and the Inter-City hookup are bringing Luella S. Laudin, one of the guiding lights of the Women's National Radio Committee and editor of the sometimes virulent 'Radio Review,' to the mike tonight (Wednesday) at 9.15 to talk about radio programs. Dick Fishell slated to conduct the stanza in the form of an interview.

In preparing her spiel, Miss Laudin stated that WMCA had given her carte blanche leeway to say anything she wished about the current state of radio programs, and is also okaying mentioning of names in connection with programs which draw bad notices.

Mary Pickford's Program

Mary Pickford's program for National Association of Ice Industries starts Feb. 11, over Columbia Broadcasting from Hollywood. Broadcast will be known as 'Parties at Pickfair,' last name being the title of the Fairbanks-Pickford home in Beverly Hills.

Handled by Donahue & Coe.

'NIGHTER' MAY SWITCH TO L.A. FOR AMECHE

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Possibility that the 'First Nighter' program will be moved to the Coast following the signaturing of leading man Don Ameche by the 20th Century-Fox. Campana heads and Aubrey-Moore & Wallace chiefs are flipping to the Coast to look over the situation before deciding.

Ameche himself is tied in with 20th Century on a deal which is understood to call for the privilege of doing three radio shots weekly.

Another angle which is yet to be worked out is the question of the Ameche name. Picture studio is pondering whether or not to change the Ameche moniker to something that may look better in lights, but with the Campana mob understood plenty upset over the plan to alter leading man's name.

Tom Coakley orchestra returns to the St. Francis Hotel, Frisco, and the Columbia-Don Lee network after seven month tour of eastern and southern key cities.

NBC MAY BUY STATIONS

Say Commercial Television Dependent Upon Biz Conditions in '36 and '37

Commercial television is a definite possibility in 1937 and more than a probability in 1938, in the opinion of some experts. But the matter is believed dependent on conditions during 1936 and next year as regards the public.

Because commercial television will undoubtedly follow the general lines of radio, with programs sponsored and receiving sets in the home, it's not expected in theatres. No tie-up with theatres in any way is proposed, according to a survey of the field. Excessive cost will likely keep theatres out of this field until later phases.

But real developments are expected in television this year. Two major forces are Radio Corporation of America and Television Laboratories, Ltd. (Farnsworth). RCA expects to be on the air this spring and to supply telephone and television programs to ultra-wave sets of 5 to 7-meter calibre in the New York metropolitan area. Construction of equipment for a television station atop the Empire State building is now nearing completion, with a transmitter on the 86th floor and antenae on foremost peak of the tower. These programs will cover distances of 20 to 30 miles. RCA will spot receivers of various types in and about N. Y., most of them to be placed in hands of those selected by the company's engineers. From these tests the company expects to obtain firsthand information on televistic broadcasts.

Programs of RCA will consist of talent in person and moving picture films.

Television Laboratories has announced stations for New York, Philadelphia and San Francisco. Plans were made known in a general announcement. There are also a few other television outfits. One is headed by William Hoyt Peck, formerly active in and around New York but more recently headquartered in Montreal. He is expected back in New York. Another is National Television Laboratories.

England is still fighting over the system it plans to use in tests. Program is under the control of British Broadcasting Corp., with Electrical and Musical Industries, Ltd., and Baird Television Corp., also bringing forth their systems.

George Engelter, formerly on the KRNT announcing staff, becomes manager of the traffic department in the new set-up, while Aleyn Curtis continues as advertising promotion manager.

Rodney Lien also continues as treasurer of KRNT, KSO and WMT of Waterloo and Cedar Rapids and no changes are scheduled for WMT personnel.

W. A. Richards has resigned as program director of KRNT.

Jack Nelson to N. Y.

Hollywood, Jan. 14

Jack Nelson, radio producer for the Lennen & Mitchell agency, is heading east to handle the Paul Whiteman program.

He held the reins here on the Bing Crosby and Eddie Cantor Hall of Fame shows.

LOHR TELLS 'EM

Gathers Up Reigns of Authority at NBC

Lenox Riley Lohr, NBC's new president, took hold of the job last week as far as the home office is concerned. He also issued his first interoffice memo. It was addressed to department heads and advised them that those who were accustomed to reporting to M. H. Aylesworth and Richard C. Patterson, Jr., the executive v.p., were henceforth to do their reporting to him (Lohr) direct.

No arrangements have been made as yet for Lohr's greeting of the entire home office personnel.

JAN. 22 NEW 'GET OFF AIR' DATE

Washington, Jan. 14.

Refusing to back down on their previous decision to award a new station to the Brooklyn Daily Eagle Broadcasting Company, members of the Federal Communications Commission last week denied a rehearing on the case to WVFW, one of the three Brooklyn stations adversely affected by the decision.

One member of the commission, Irvin S. Stewart, protested the denial action and urged reopening of the case.

Strongly opposed to ownership of radio stations by newspapers, Commissioner Stewart issued a four-page dissenting opinion, in which he pointed out that the rag's victory in acquiring a station could hardly be in the 'public interest, convenience and necessity.'

Screams of WARD, WLTH and WVFW, who shared with WBBC on the 1400 kc frequency, were disregarded by six members of the Commish, when it was decided to kick the first three Brooklyn stations off the air; jump WBBC's time from one-quarter to one-half and ring in the new station, for the remaining half-time on the same assignment.

Commissioner Stewart, though holding no brief for the three disappointed stations, objected to WBBC's time-increase, as well as to granting of the Brooklyn Eagle's application. Admitting that WBBC might have been 'slightly better than the three stations deleted,' the commissioner declaring that 'judging from its past operations, it might have suffered the fate prescribed for them without any material loss to the public.'

Three stations whose license renewals were denied will go off the air Jan. 22, carrying out the commish ruling that they were operated in a 'negligent and slipshod' manner, but plans to carry the fight back to the FCC doorstep already are in progress.

S. J. Gellard, president of WLTH, remarked that 'we have progressive plans to put before the commission, and the WLTH management feels confident the commission will approve.' Station WVFW is angling for a stay order against the Communications Commission and Rabbi Kronenberg, who operates station WARD, has filed a hearing application with the commish, seeking to prove proper operation of his transmitter and that he 'has no apology to make' for its performance on the air.

Zac Friedman off WMCA

Zac Friedman has quit as manager of the WMCA, New York, Artists Bureau.

No decision has been made as to his successor.

SELF-PROTECTION PROMPTS MOVE

Network Has Made No Purchases in Four Years Fearing Monopoly Cry—Meanwhile Columbia Has Been Dangling Bait Before NBC Affiliates

WHO CASE

NBC has under consideration a proposal to purchase outright several affiliated stations which are located in strategic spots. Through such acquisitions the network would feel secure from any further raids by Columbia and also prevent any shiftovers of important outlets to the Mutual Broadcasting System.

It is over four years since NBC has done any buying or long-term leasing of stations. Network has been largely influenced against indulging in this procedure by two factors; one is the operating losses that such control have entailed in most instances, while the other has had to do with wariness of giving cause for cries of monopolistic practices or tendencies. It has preferred to keep its strategic releases in the fold by the good-will or prestige method, and, as later developed, through an upping of the associated stations' compensation.

In the past Columbia's bid for strengthening the links in its chain has had one element strongly in its favor. This was the injunction laid down by David Sarnoff that under no circumstances was NBC to attempt to wean away CBS affiliates by the purchase route.

NBC is aware of the fact that Columbia is keeping a sharp eye on the calendar as far as the expiration date of WHO's contract with the former network is concerned. NBC's deal with the Des Moines 50,000-watter has a couple years to go, and NBC is disposed to effect a solution of this situation for the future long before the present agreement expires.

WJR Difficulties

One switchover to CBS that has NBC still upset is that of WJR, Detroit. With the new president, Lenox Riley Lohr, in the position of actual operating head of the network, NBC figures that it will be able to treat more effectively when similar situations arise in the future. In regard to the WJR matter, NBC execs feel that they can derive some balm for themselves from the report that Columbia is experiencing from WJR some of the headaches that were once NBC's lot. One of these CBS concerns involves the contract that WJR has signatured with Wheaties (General Mills) for a reported $40,000 for the broadcasting of the Tigers' out-of-town games, 77 in number. Under such circumstances CBS commercials would be barred from the station's spring, summer and early fall afternoon schedules.

Salt Lake City, Jan. 14.

Latest step in NBC's expansion campaign for the blue (WJZ) network is the addition of KLO, Ogden, Utah, to the list of affiliates. NBC's ultimate aim is to have a second station in every important point outside the basic area so that there will be available separate supplementary outlets for the red (WEAF) and blue links. NBC capped a survey of several months along this line by reviving the old orange link some weeks ago and making it the Pacific supplementary of the blue trail.

KLO's joining of the blue becomes effective today (Wednesday). Station, which operates full time on 1,400 k.c. and at 2,500 watts, is owned by the Ogden Standard Examiner. KLO's transmitter is located 30 miles from Salt Lake City, and the network figures that with the necessary changes in the station's transmitter KLO may be able to shoot a signal which will include Salt Lake City.

Network night rate for KLO is $120 for an hour, $72 per half hour, and $48 per quarter hour.

Denver, Jan. 14.

Stations KFEL-KVOD are strongly reported here as joining NBC network. Have been unaffiliated previously.

Would presumably become part of new Western loop of the blue web.

Omens Favor Zippy '36 for Radio; NBC Strong Snap-Back on Accts.

DURANTE CHANGES MIND

Stays With 'Jumbo,' Otherwise But Little Changed

Texaco has dropped its intention of radically changing the 'Jumbo' program, and the original setup stays practically as is for the second 13-week stretch over NBC. Jimmy Durante has agreed to remain, along with the rest of the cast from the legit show, while Eddie Duchin takes over the baton.

Slight alteration in the script formula will allow for the booking of outside specialty acts on a weekly basis. This started last night (Tuesday) with the Cabin Kids. Otherwise no changes contemplated except a possible reduction in the size of the present large orchestra.

The Boys Relent; Let Cantor Pick Up the Check

Eddie Cantor and the New York radio editors are now palsy-walsy. Uproar that Cantor caused last season when unloading some unflattering comment concerning the columnists was forgotten in a dinner thrown last week by Cantor with the scriveners as his guests. Bob Taplinger handled the details for the comic.

Those showing up at feed included: Aaron Stein, Post; Alton Cook, World-Telegram; Charles Butterfield, A. P.; Charles Kenny, Mirror; Dan Walker, News; C. J. Ingram, Jersey Journal; F. Hyman, King Features; Al Sonne, Newark Call; Orrin Dunlop, Times; Everett Walker, Herald-Tribune; Leo Miller, Bridgeport Herald; Sam Kaufman, Sun; Louis Reid, American.

Eddie Cantor continues his Pebeco broadcasts until May in the east, and will include some six weeks of them from Florida. Will be Miami or Palm Beach, depending on which has the better pickup bands available.

Cantor's next Sam Goldwyn filmusical will also depend on a definite legal proviso, says the comedian, of 'what constitutes a reasonable period of production.' Last Spring he was rushed west and shooting didn't start until Oct. 1. Cantor claims that cut his opportunities for broadcasts and personal appearances sharply.

$5 Raises at CBS

Raises from a dollar to five bucks went into effect last week at CBS home office. Most all departments included in the payroll increase, from production to stenographers.

Scale was varied in some cases, but never over the five mark.

K. K. Hansen's Chore

Kenneth K. Hansen has replaced Douglas Storer as radio talent contact for the Rockwell-O'Keefe office.

Storer resigned some weeks ago to manage Robert L. Ripley.

Having hung up an all time record last year (approximately $86,000,000), broadcasters currently are in unanimous agreement that the stage is set for an even better haul in 1936. Primary basis for this expectation, of course, is the general business outlook which—presidential year notwithstanding—continues more than ever to assume the proportions of a lucrative boomlet.

From a more specific angle, the webs are cheered by the speed with which they pulled out of the chaos following the end of the Fall season. This is particularly true of NBC. Latter had the weeps for a while, following the loss of some cream biz, but subsequently its account roster has perked up to the extent that its sales department now unofficially expects a $34,000,000 year in 1936. Past year was worth $31,148,931.

Latest bookings at NBC include the following: a series for Bowey's Inc. (fruit and chocolate products) to begin March 1 over the Red and run for 52 weeks on Sunday afternoons 1:30 to 1:45, and Thursday afternoons, 5 to 5:15; talent and show not set. Second newcomer is Remington Rand which will sponsor Edwin C. Hill's 'Human Side of the News' over the Red Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays 7:30 p. m. beginning Jan. 27. Also recently entered on the books is a stanza for the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. Will bankroll the Pittsburgh symph on Thursdays 8:30 to 9 p. m. beginning Feb. 6 over the Blue.

NBC PACIFIES WEEI, BOSTON

Boston, Jan. 14.

WEEI has signatured NBC's new station compensation contract, with the network allotted a stipulated number of commercial hours per day. Agreement becomes effective March 1.

Negotiations between the web and its local red release reached an impasse early last year when the station objected to the moving of certain local programs to make room for NBC commercials and the coverage survey made of the outlet by NBC which resulted in a reduction of WEEI's network rate.

Compromise included the making of another survey and the upward readjustment of the rate.

C. L. McCarthy at KYA

San Francisco, Jan. 14.

C. L. McCarthy is the third new executive to join KYA during the past few weeks.

McCarthy comes to KYA from San Jose, where he has managed KQW since that station was taken over by Julius Brunton, owner of KJBS and affiliated stations. Succeeding him in San Jose will be H. Felberg.

ADELE ASTAIRE
Interview, Song
5 Mins.
RCA MAGIC KEY
Sunday, 2 p.m., E.S.T.
WJZ, New York
(Lord & Thomas)

This is as close to a public appearance as Adele Astaire (Lady Cavendish) has made in this country since her marriage. Occasion, presumably by request, came on the regular RCA Sunday hour (12).

As a matter of fact, Miss Astaire actually did less than five minutes and can carry more weight than the script allotted her here. For comediennes of the calibre of this young lady don't forget. Indicating that inasmuch as Miss Astaire is on her way to the Coast to visit her brother, Fred, she probably will also be met at the train by not more than 2,000 offers to take a whack at pictures.

In this instance she opened via a bantering interview with the announcer, a couple of paragraphs on England, plus a few asides for her brother and finished with a paraphrase on 'Here Come the British.' The song permitted the best opportunity although her method throughout was superior to the material.

But this broadcast by Miss Astaire should not be taken too seriously inasmuch as it's extremely doubtful if she has any air, film, or stage intentions. Yet this brief appearance was sufficient to indicate that any decision on professional resumption will be hers. Sid.

'MELODY MAN'
With Wayne Cody
Song Contest
15 Mins.
Sustaining
Daily, 5:15 p.m.
WFIL, Philadelphia

Hitting the ether since June, this stanza has grown to be time-tester for station because it's sure-fire mail-puller. Cody, who also is 'Jolly Man' of another series, has been averaging around 1,000 replies a show, hitting single high of more than 2,800.

Plunking ivories and humming or da-de-da-ing familiar tunes, he plays five numbers in show and invites dialers to guess titles. First 25 correct answers (by mail) get film ducats. Tie-in with Arcadia, Carman Tower-Nixon-Roosevelt houses gets station the Annie Oakleys and free ballyhoo for show in exchange for gratis air plug.

Cody has free-and-easy manner, kids announcer, listeners and songs. It's all informal and almost certain to please. And he gives enough plain hints to make correct answers easy. Strange angle of returns is that many dialers from distant towns send in answers hoping to get ducats to Philly shows. Price of carfare would often be much above cost of ticket. It's the old sumpin' for nothin' urge. 'Melody Man' has been all over WFIL board at various times, but he never misses with mail. Hobe.

HENRY HICKMAN
'You and Your Radio'
15 Mins.
RCA-VICTOR
WFBR, Baltimore
(Lord & Thomas)

Half-year back WFBR started this series of weekly programs on sustaining basis. At time object was to interest public in keeping radio sets well conditioned and keeping the folks well aware of what programs (all, of course, emanating from WFBR) were considered eminently worth cupping an ear to. Each week some local prominent, drawn from all paths of life, was guest for announcer Hickman, and gave the answers off prepared script when queried what each personally thought about radio as entertainment, educational factor, moral uplifter and all the other attributes radio credits itself with having. Programs were off the beaten track, and successful.

Recently WFBR bought heap of transmitter equipment from RCA, and last week that company popped up as bankroller for series of programs. Very brief plugs, advertising set tubes, and so unobtrusively sifted into program that it scarcely sounds like a commercial. In that, program retains its high order of merit.

WEAVERS OF MELODY
Quartet, Sports Review
15 Mins.
PENDLETON WOOLEN MILLS
KOIN, Portland, Ore.

This is a highlight local spot presenting a well-balanced quartet, with two instrumental side men, tied in with local sports news. KOIN in the past has been a leader in reenactments of sports events on the coast, and is here doing a nice job of showmanship in two or three-minute dramatization of sports highlights of the week preceding program.

Commercials are handled in semi-humorous vein, with entire program tempoed to swift pace. Quartet measures up well, and announcer, Billy Sandiford, does a slick job of m.c.'ing. Feature is good example of local production with merchandising angles. Bcede.

CORNELIUS VANDERBILT, Jr.
News Commentator
15 Mins.
MARTINSON'S COFFEE
Sunday, 1:30 p.m., EST.
WEAF, New York
(Albert, Frank, Guenther, Law, Inc.)

Personalities in the news of the week is the substance of a new local series with Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr. airing on Sundays for Martinson's coffee. In the first program (12), speaker did some brief commercial boosting for the java product, ran out of breath and lost his place in the copy. Otherwise, it was a straight reporting job, with his ability to glean the news-squibs, apparent for the most part.

Most of the talk centered around Washington, with various political figures discussed from their health to their attire. Observations also hopped to the Cocoanut Grove, L.A. and then back to the Hauptmann case. During the week, Vanderbilt dined with various celebrities which helped to provide copy for the quarter-hour run. Bral.

ROUND THE WORLD IN N. Y.
Music, Singing, Talk
30 Mins.
N. Y. SUNDAY MIRROR
Saturday, 7 p.m.
WNEW, New York

This third in series of new broadcasts by the Sunday Mirror, conducted by Kenneth McCaleb, m.e. of Sunday Mirror magazine section, was visit to New York's Russian colony. As with preceding trips to typical foreign neighborhoods, leading musicians, singers and leaders representing N. Y.'s Russos comprise most of broadcast.

Probably most pleasing soloist was Miss Nadine Kortez, who appeared in one of original Chauve Souris shows and who now is currently singing at St. Regis hotel. Another innovation was the appearance of Inna Rubelova, who sang two of her own compositions. Additional Russ background was provided by an interview with Prince Alexis Obolensky who sang in 'Music in the Air' production which served to emphasize accomplishments and points of interest with Russians in America.

Adroit manner of introducing artists and conducting whole program as done by McCaleb is strong point of proceedings. Originally he made his debut on the airwaves as pinch-hitter for Jack Lait.

Bally for the Mirror is held down to absolute minimum, making it doubly effective. Program recently was extended to half an hour from original 15-minute length. It supplants Lait's Mirror Flashes, now moved to WINS. Wear.

SHEA'S SYMPHONIC ENSEMBLE
John Ingram, Gertrude Lutzi, Audre Ely
Music
30 Mins.
SHEA OPERATING CORP.
Saturdays, 7:30 p.m.
WBEN, Buffalo

'Symphonic' tag a little misleading on program caught which was made up entirely of pop hits—mostly film tunes past, present or future in Shea theatres. But very agreeable as a light musical half-hour with good change of pace and plenty of variety including vocal quartet, harmonica medley and two sopranos.

Broadcasts from the mezzanine of Shea's Buffalo are old stuff here, talent formerly being supplied from current stage show. Since stage shows have been eliminated burden of entertaining falls on regular orchestra staff. John Ingram, director of pit band, recently took over broadcast period, previously delegated to an assistant.

This same program served as radio training ground for Louis Breese, Ingram's predecessor and now being handled by NBC with broadcasts from the Weylin.

High spots of Saturday's (11) show were solos, 'Love Me Forever' by Audry Ely, mezzo-soprano, and 'When I Grow Too Old To Dream' by Gertrude Lutzi, lyric-soprano. Both good jobs and enough difference in character of voices to distinguish. Not such a happy result later when two operatic-type voices attempted light, bouncy interpretation of 'Little Gypsy Tea Room.'

LOUIS AZRAEL
Talk
15 Mins.
SCOTT MOTOR CO.
WBAL, Baltimore

Azrael, columnist on Hearst rag here is a scribe with a large following in Balto. At a glance a natural for the ether in a chatter role, his voice is against him badly. Very unfortunate. Has style, charm, wit and mountains of material—but a pair of pipes that grate, rasp and devalue his performance.

Guest-warbler five-year-old Ethel Ossman, sang song after Azrael oversold her with glowing intro. She proved fair. Might have been better inserted during the several tedious, repetitious, commercial raves by announcer.

CAFE OF THE RED DAGGER
With Tex O'Reilly, Craig McDonnell, Enoch Light, Martinez Oyanguren
Drama, Songs, Band
30 Mins.
SPUD CIGARETS
Tues., 11 p.m., EST
WOR, New York
(Kenyon & Eckhardt)

Spud has set out to cram a lot of color into this weekly stanza, but the thing falls far short of being either colorful or good entertainment for several reasons, of which not the least important is the total absence of the femme element in both the cast and the adventure narratives. It is obvious enough why the episodic bits can't mix up the central figure of this series, Tex O'Reilly, with women, as he has a wife waiting for him back in the States, but the Latin-American cafes in which adventurer is purported to plot many a coup might easily have some femme entertainers. At least, from the angle of smart, well-rounded routining, the program could include one signorita to air an occasional ditty.

Proceedings are awkwardly dovetailed and paced. Dramatic portions fail to develop a sense of mounting excitement at any time. The weakness in the latter case lies more with the writing than the casting and acting. Adding to the general dullness is the incidental conversations, those that serve to paint the program's background and introduce the musical numbers, and the others that attempt to lead up to O'Reilly's rep as a soldier of fortune and his divers adventures.

Musical phase of the show consists of Martinez Oyanguren's strummings on the guitar, Craig McDonnell's bass-baritoning of ballads of the mauve decade, and the tango instrumentations of Enoch Light's orchestra.

Plug revolves around the assurance of Spud's power to stimulate and refresh and the recital of testimonials along the same lines. Odec.

CARL VON HOFFMAN
Philips Lord Adventure Tales
30 Mins.
PHILIP MORRIS CIGS.
Tues., 8 p.m., E.S.T.
WEAF, New York
(Biow)

New twist given strange adventure tale formula on this well established program, with Philips Lord (Seth Parker) acting as emsee and introducing narrator of fresh thrill story for each program. Stories constructed along showmanship lines for ultimate in appeal to listeners. One caught here builded nicely for climax.

Carl von Hoffman, speaking with slight foreign accent, gave straightforward recounting of troop train revolt in the desert with 400 soldiers held accountable for setting fire to officers de luxe car. Conveyed idea of how common soldiers on this train were aroused by being treated like cattle while officers lived in luxury.

For destroying officer and private car, odd numbered men in long line of soldiers were executed. Youth, still in his teens, at end of line, drew odd number and was about to be mowed down when burley trooper shoved him aside, dying in his stead. Speaker verified story by stating simply that he was the 14-year-old lad saved from firing squad by fellow soldier's altruistic act. Wear.

THE MARRIAGE CLINIC
With Frances McDonald
30 Mins.
Sustaining
Sunday, 10 p.m.
WNAC, Boston

Locally produced sustainer looking for a sponsor and a commendable job. Credit is split two ways. Material, taken from actual cases unfolded to Frances McDonald, lay judge of the Good Will Court of New York City, is aces because it's real. Production, which makes the stuff listenable, is also tops, and a bow goes to Fred Bishop who produced under supervision of Linus Travers.

Three cases presented on show caught. A married woman, unmarried woman, and a twice married man supply diversified problems that lend more than enough variety to make the 'court session' engrossing. Clerk of court swears in problemites and they go ahead with their grief at the insistence of the judge. After story starts moving a cutback dramatic scene develops the meat of the tale. Clerk of court then reads the judge's decision.

Dialog is plausible and convincing, easy to understand. The decision carries some of the dignity attached to a court and advises directly what the perplexed person should do. None of the cases are blah, blah of the type found in 'advice to lovelorn'; but vital mixups that might befog any marriage.

Domestic riddles are derived from real life cases of befuddled people in this area and fictitious names are tagged on characters who enact them. Frances McDonald conducts a column along same lines, with same title in Boston Post, but paper does not get a plug, though the column does.

Airs Sunday nights at 10. First 50 to write in for invitations are allowed to attend the court at the studio. Fox.

JULIET LOWELL
Novelty
30 Mins.
Tues., 9:30 p.m.
FORD
WABC, New York
(N. W. Ayer)

Waring stanza (7) marked the first ether appearance of the collector of 'Dumb Belles Lettres,' prize examples of innocently cockeyed letter writing which Miss Lowell previously has made public in book and film short form. Dozen or so of the juicier samples were aired in condensed version, and in conclusion the files of Waring and the Ford Motor Co. were tapped for additional specimens.

Strictly novelty stuff, and presented as such. Waring assigned members of his ensemble to help the author with her reading, and this heightened the novelty effect still more. Made an okay interlude in the stanza and was fortunately kept to 10 mins. or less. The innocent human makes a poor gagster when letter writing, and once the refreshing naivete is worn off the comedy is gone.

AMERICAN RADIO WARBLERS
With Louis Sonnen, Bob LeFevre and birds
15 Mins.
AMERICAN BIRD PRODUCTS CO.
Sunday, 1:15 p.m.
WTCN, St. Paul-Minneapolis
(Weston-Barnett, Inc.)

With Louis Sonnen at the studio organ piping out song-inducing melodies, flock of trained canary birds bursts out in full-throated warbling. Bob LeFevre's smooth announcing does much to enhance the program. Here and there there's a singing letup, but with organ music flowing along easily, such interludes help, as the birds sing spontaneously and more than make up for the lapses.

On every Sunday (1:15-1:30 p.m.), it's a pleasant tit bit of entertainment. Commercial has to do with balanced diet necessary to keep a good singer in the pink, what slick gifts they make for wife, mother or sweetheart, and promise that all birds sold by the company are understudies to these radio birds and that any one purchased will be replaced if he doesn't prove an industrious melody-maker. Raschick.

KAZANOVA and her TSIGANES
Gypsy Music
10 Mins.
RCA MAGIC KEY
Sunday, 2 p.m., EST.
WJZ, New York
(Lord & Thomas)

To lend authentic continental flavor to its weekly Sunday spread, RCA presented Kazanova and her Tzigane orchestra for its varied listening public. New musical import just over a short time, having opened as a new attraction at the French Casino. Such stringed fare is having a vogue now in the niteries.

It's not the first of the gypsy contingents to debut this season, but perhaps carries the stamp of popular appeal to Americans more than similar groups. For instance her version of 'Blue Danube' stays clear of the sweetly arranged waltz as is generally played, but is virile with moods, and depicts the muddy stream in a new vein. Leader's batoning manages to lift any boredom which might creep in. The initial number paved the way for more it seemed, but just one encore was done.

Orchestra was presented as a closer on the first half, and could have stood repeating. Bral.

'CIVIC CALENDAR'
With Bill Herson, Phil Crist
Chatter, Songs, Pianology
15 Mins.
Sustaining
WFBR, Baltimore

WFBR solved question of caring for demands made for free spot announcements for charity affairs, large club gatherings and news, big-scale social activities, etc., by devoting early a. m. quarter-hour on weekdays to bulking the stuff, assembling a two-man team of informal entertainers to ladle it out with blithe, bright comments. The team, composed of station news-announcer Herson and local vet radio tenor Crist, ideally mated.

Undoubtedly, dishing out announcements of purely unmercenary nature, which WFBR feels is good-will gainer and sop to demands, is heavy stuff, and fact it comes to public in airy, burnished manner should evoke gratitude.

KATHRYN CRAVENS
'News Through a Woman's Eyes'
15 mins.
Tues., Thurs., Sat., 1:00 p.m.
Sustaining
KMOX, St. Louis

Kathryn Cravens, one of the few women news commentators in the country, doesn't have to take a back seat for any male doing the same work. Her viewpoint of news, from a woman's angle, together with her very good style of presenting her facts, make the program an engrossing one. Should grow in popularity.

Her New Year resume of the news highlights of 1935 showed Miss Cravens to have a keen appreciation of values. Her voice is appealing. Hurst.

PAUL SULLIVAN
Newscast
15 Mins.
WLW, Cincinnati

This 500,000 watter's news programs enjoy fancy showmanship trimmings. Handled in 'editions' from 7:45 a.m. to 11 p.m. Hits its best stride in the latter runs.

Paul Sullivan barks with a nicety of diction and tonal modulations to stress what's important in his stories. Staff of ex-newspapermen housed alongside INS, Dow-Jones, sports tickers, etc., do the rewrites.

Forte of the rewrite redhots is linking up outstanding stories on a common theme. Style of news handling not considered in newspapers, as it allows nothing for heads, but listens and would read like one long account of what's been going on over the planet. Means arduous revisions from teletyped matter and a degree of editorializing.

Program style has another advantage. Dash of editorializing and fancy writing enable scribes to put some parsley on the day's happenings. Higher level of entertainment value thereby accrues to session.

Sullivan's signoff on the five-star release, 'It's thirty in the newsroom,' is known to have aroused lotsa curiosity among listeners unfamiliar with the news end of dailies. So much so that the station prepared a form letter of explanation for queries. Kolling.

FRANK CARLE'S ORCHESTRA
Sustaining
15 Mins.
WGY, Schenectady

Unit broadcasts a quarter-hour program at supper time Wednesdays. Carle, tabbed 'the wizard of the piano,' is leader and star. His ivory stroking lends a touch of the different to straight jazzology. Fingering in the treble is showy, whether it be in solos, breaks or runs; it strikes the ear pleasantly via a loudspeaker. On first salvo heard, the individualistic pianoing seemed to dull the rhythm—for dance purposes—of at least one number, but this was not noticeable second shot. Carle did 'Humoresque' with jazz touches on the latter.

Orchestra, which apparently is only medium-sized, plays smoothly and rhythmically. Vocalizing, solo and ensemble, not used to any great extent.

Band's location was not stressed by announcer on first swing, but the spot, on the New York Road outside of Rensselaer, was tabbed at signoff last week. Jaco.

JUST ANOTHER AMATEUR
Phil Cook, Mrs. Phil Cook, Lei Stevens, Melodiers Quartet
30 Mins.
Sustaining
Thurs., 8:30 p.m., EST.
WABC, New York

Phil Cook could probably make this idea of his an attractive commercial proposition if he got himself a resourceful writer or two and was plotted in a more felicitous spot than the one he now holds. It's nice homey entertainment, with Cook's knack for keenly compounded imitations and characterizations effectively supported by a studio band under Leith Stevens' direction and the Melodiers quartet.

Running through the parade of takeoffs and character bits is a thin skein of story revolving around old Jim Brown and his daughter, Mary, and the latter's suitor, Bill Williams, who has crooner ambitions. Mrs. Cook plays Mary in the cross-fire, and is the only line reader in the act besides Cook. Imitations and the band and vocal interludes are rung into the routine by the device of having Cook indulge in patter about his home receiving set and occasionally remarking: 'Let's see what's on the air now.'

Program's initial two installments found Cook at his best in imitations of Stepin Fetchit and Wendell Hall and a burlesque of a murder trial broadcast.

'Just Another Amateur' also serves to introduce Cook under his new managerial banner, the CBS Artists Bureau. Cook's previous affiliation was with NBC. Odec.

LIONEL BAXTER
'The News Room'
10 Mins.
COMMERCIAL
Daily, 8 a.m.
WAPI, Birmingham

The best attempt locally to present a news period. Styled pretty much after WLW's Paul Sullivan this one is handled by Lionel Baxter, who is rounding out gradually a distinctive style. Program is sponsored by department store.

Was started several weeks ago with material furnished by 'News-Week' which made it plenty old. Now has INS. Only drawback to its newsiness angle is that INS is afternoon service and the program goes on at 8 a.m. A favorite time for merchants after housewife attention.

Another fact or result by some social listeners is that it comes on at same time 'Breakfast Club', thus killing 10 minutes of the chain program.

For a local program, pat.

BOSTON FIGHTS WTIC MOVE

More Rumblings of Favoritism

Washington, Jan. 14.

Following futile efforts to soft-pedal the matter, Federal Communications Commission has ordered a thorough sifting of rumors of political influence in the administration of radio affairs. Simultaneously, members of Congress began laying new foundations for a complete inquiry into all commish activities.

Following an acrimonious five-hour session which was featured by bitter dissension and inflammatory argument, commish decided that five of the seven members should conduct a sweeping 'factual' probe into the way applications of rival groups in Binghamton and Schenectady, N. Y., have been handled. The committee, which is headed by Commissioner Irving Stewart, will delve into a mass of insinuations, innuendoes, rumors, charges and gossip.

Binghamton-Schenectady contest, originally only a minor tiff of local importance, threatens to take the status of a cause celebre. Despite statements to the contrary the justice department still has not submitted, it is said, a formal report on its investigation of the favoritism charges. Understood here J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, has ordered a new probe, disclaiming any knowledge of the prior inquiry.

Although the entire commission was solemnly pledged to keep the entire matter secret, news of the new probe leaked within a few hours after the tempestuous Thursday (9) meeting wound up.

Resolution calling for general probe of Federal Communications Commission will be introduced in Congress today (15) Representative William Connery of Massachusetts announced Tuesday (14).

Republican support of the investigation demand is assured but whether Democrats will permit action on Connery resolution is problematical.

Bloc of at least 20 members is pledged to carry on the fight for airing of commish troubles. Chairman Anning Prall meanwhile has announced he has no objection to congressional quiz.

Broadcasters Reticent on Payrolls

Treasury Receives Comparatively Meagre Information—23 Web Officers Top $15,000

Washington, Jan. 14.

With William S. Paley, president of Columbia Broadcasting System, heading the list, 23 officers of the two principal networks were revealed last week to have collected more than $15,000 each during 1934. Dope was contained in bulky report to Congress by the Treasury Department.

Government's voluminous document, supplying information for use in connection with possible salary control laws, contained remarkably little data concerning salaries in the broadcasting industry. For failure to comply with Treasury demands for detailed lists, broadcasters are liable to receive stiff punishment at the hands of the courts.

No indication of the amounts paid radio talent was given by the report, with neither of the two chains recording any fees for performers and the long catalog omitting such names as Paul Whiteman, Ruth Etting, Rudy Vallee, and other nationally-prominent entertainers. Only way radio performers entered the list was when their pay for motion picture work was mentioned, and only a handful were in this category.

In addition to Paley, whose salary was $147,295, Columbia reported 10 executives draw more than the stipulated $15,000 minimum.

National Broadcasting Co. list was topped by Merlin H. Aylesworth's $45,000.

Reporting

Among the few independent corporations which did come through were WGN, Shepard Broadcasting Service, WJR, Don Lee System, WCAU, and WBBM.

WLW Disregards Mail; Charts New-Type Map

Cincinnati, Jan. 14.

Disregarding altogether the conventional mail response and listener density surveys, WLW is issuing what may be the first 'sales effective map' of the radio industry.

Basing its map on data from a special test offer by Horlick's Malted Milk, considered a semi-luxury item, over one-half the United States is charted in three colors on sales increase figures attested by the sponsor. Offer involved purchase of a 50-cent item to obtain a box top to which ten cents cash had to be added.

Josef Israels' 2d Nixed For Vallee Program

Not desirous of becoming involved any questions concerning the Italo-Ethoplan dispute, Standard Brands nixed the guest appearance of Josef Israels 2d on Rudy Vallee's program. Food distribs feared letters from crank listeners.

Israels recently returned from dark continent where he personally observed activities for the New York Times, Columbia Broadcasting and handled the newsreel crews for Pathe.

Philly Broadcasts Off For Atlantic Refining

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.

Atlantic Refining, formerly planning to air next two White Flash Saturday night shows from Philly, has gone back to regular schedule since Frank Parker's tentative p.a. tour has been delayed. It was first thought that with Bob Hope in town for 'Follies' engagement and Parker being at Earle theatre, it would be easier to originate CBS show from WCAU.

Plan now is to have it at regular place and pipe Hope from Philly. N. W. Ayer handling it.

New Kellogg Series

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.

New Kellogg series over NBC blue network beginning Jan. 24 will probably have Red Nichols, James Melton and gal singer understood to be Gogo DeLys. Program is dropping 'College' part of title, now to be known as 'Kellogg Prom.'

Melton contract gives him guest privilege but is otherwise exclusive. He'll do three numbers, Nichols will lead three band numbers and Melton and gal will team for one. Renewal is for 13 weeks. N. W. Ayer handling.

RUMORS NAME CBS BACKER

Stations in Beantown Agree to Unite to Oppose Moving Hartford 50,000-Watter Into Community Already Well Serviced

WHDH SETTLES

Boston, Jan. 14.

All Boston stations propose to present a united front against Cherry & Webb, Providence merchants, before the Federal Communications Commission if the Rhode Island station and department store operators attempt to move WTIC from Hartford to Boston. Pact among the local broadcasters includes pooling financial and legal resources for the fight.

It is also expected that operators of stations in Worcester and other Massachusetts towns may join the wall of opposition. Boston broadcasters will contend that the Hub, if not the State, is away overboard with broadcast facilities and that the intrusion of a 50,000-watter would make it tough for the present setup to exist. Also that the public in this area is as thoroughly serviced with programs of varied and high calibre as any section in the country.

Hartford, Jan. 14.

As soon as Cherry & Webb have got together with the Travelers Insurance Co. on the terms of payoff for WTIC an application for permission to move the station will be filed with the Federal Communications Commission. Actual cosummation of the purchase is predicated on the FCC's approval of two transfers, the ownership of the station and the latter's facilities from Hartford.

Report persists in New England broadcasting circles that CBS is putting up a major share of the purchase coin and that most of the option money, reputed to be $25,000, came from this source.

William S. Paley has induced the owners of WHDH, Boston, to release CBS from the contract which was to make the network an operating partner of the Hub outlet starting Jan. 1, 1937. Settlement was effected amicably, although the web had for a while thought it would have to dig deep to get out of this particular dilemma.

Columbia had resorted to the WHDH affiliation as a means of combatting the problem in Boston which its differences with John Shepard, 3rd, threatened. Shepard's contract with the national web expired at the end of this year.

WJJD Transmitter Moves Closer to Chicago Loop

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Federal Communications Commission last week upheld its original okay on the moving of the WJJD transmitter from Mooseheart to Des Plaines, which switches the station to within 15 miles of the loop.

Ralph Atlass, owner of the station, expects to have the new transmitter in service by March 15.

Ayer Men to N. Y. C.

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.

James H. Connolly and Aylward H. Stockwell were transferred last week from N. W. Ayer's local office to radio department of New York headquarters. Former was in rate bureau here, latter was in business department.

Agency this week grabbed two new accounts, Window Shade Institue, of New York, and U. S. L. Battery Corp., of Niagara Falls. Campaigns start at once for former, soon for latter.

FCC's Washington Docket

Washington, Jan. 14.

Grants and Applications

Avalanche of examiners' reports and applications last week was acted upon by the broadcast division of the Federal Communications Commission. Following two weeks of holiday inactivity and one week during which the commish was too concerned with its own troubles to bother with regular weekly meetings, members of the broadcast division got down to business and cranked out 16 pages of decisions.

Seventeen examiners' reports were acted upon in the record wash-up of unfinished business, with commissioners dealing out seven denials; dismissing three applications with prejudice; granting four; remanding two to the docket for further hearing and reaffirming one grant. In numerous instances recommendations of the examiners were reversed by the commish.

Sustaining Examiner R. L. Walker, commish okayed change of hours for KGKB, Tyler, Tex., from specified to unlimited, days, and specified hours nights, from sundown to 8 p. m. Walker was reversed, however, when pleas for two other Texas smallies were turned down. Paris Broadcasting Company, Paris, Tex., and Dallas Broadcasting Company, Dallas, Tex., were the two disappointed stations, each having requested frequency of 1500 kc.

Three other Texas locals were nixed by the commish, Examiner Walker recommending the denials. Centennial Broadcasting Corp., Dallas, asked for smallie to be operated on 1200 kc; Brownsville Broadcasting Company wanted station to be operated on the 1370 kc frequency with 100 watts and Denton Broadcasting Company, Denton, Tex., requested another 100-watter to operate on 1420 kc.

William A. Schall, Omaha, Neb., must revise his plans for ownership of a radio station. Local, for which he asked 1500 kc, was one of two Omaha stations on which commish turned thumbs down, sustaining Examiner R. H. Hyde. Omaha Broadcasting Company, jockeying for the same assignment, was second to receive denial.

New station for Salt Lake City, Utah, was jilted by commish, the application being dismissed with prejudice, reversing Examiner P. W. Seward's recommendation. Transmitter, which would have operated as the Mountain States Broadcasting Corp., had requested 550 kc with 500 watts, unlimited.

Night juice-jump from 500 watts to 1 kw was okayed for WGST, Atlanta, Ga. Station, which operates on 890 kc, unlimited, has been using a day power of 1 kw which will remain unchanged.

Operating hours of WROK, Rockford, Ill., will be changed from sharing with WHBL, Sheboygan, Wis., to unlimited, commissioners upholding Examiner P. W. Seward. Station operates on 1410 kc with 500 watts.

Two Florida smallies were doomed, when their applications were dismissed with prejudice by the broadcast division. Tampa Broadcasting Company, Tampa, and D. B. Sutton, Miami, had asked 1370 kc and 1210 kc, respectively.

The applications of Regan & Bostwich, St. Albans, Vt., and F. N. Pierce and Tem-Bel Broadcasting Company, Temple, Tex., were remanded to the docket for further hearings. Permission for WJJD, Inc., Chicago, Ill., to move transmitter from Mooseheart to Des Moines, was reaffirmed.

Despite recommendations of Commissioner Thad H. Brown that Station KFBI, Abilene, Kans., should be taken off the air, commish reinstated the 5 kw transmitter which had been disciplined.

Examiners' Reports

New station hopes of Wisconsin Broadcasting Company, Oshkosh, were jarred last week, when Examiner John P. Bramhall turned in an adverse report on company's qualifications. Stating that outfit did not have the proper equipment and was not financially eligible, Examiner Bramhall recommended denial of the plea. Broadcasting company is requesting 1310 kc frequency and will operate with 100 watts nights, 250 watts days, when and if application is granted.

New station for Pottsville, Pa., also looked unlikely, with Examiner Melvin H. Dalberg putting the curse on E. L. Clifford's application when Clifford refused to give any details about nature of his proposed programs or to loosen up about what persons he would employ to operate the transmitter. Clifford requests 580 kc with 250 watts, days.

NET LOSS ON MEDAL

Waring Has To Move Show to Philly To Be Decorated

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.

Fred Waring's first Ford broadcast over NBC this Friday (17) will originate from WFIL. Presence of bandleader in Philly to receive gold medal from Poor Richard Club will necessitate bringing show here. Actual broadcasts will be made from Arcadia International Restaurant, with Ford dealers present. Both 9:30 and midnight shows will originate from nitery floor.

Figure it will cost Waring several hundred dollars in line charges, price of standby band, train fare, hotel bills, etc., to receive medal. Original plan was to have dummy presentation on Ford show as well as at Poor Richard banquet, but motor officials frowned on it as not McCoy. N. W. Ayer agency handling broadcast.

Rentling in the Clear

St. Paul, Jan. 14.

Gregory Rentling, manager of KROC, Rochester, Minnesota, is reported out of danger and on the mend at Colonial Hospital, Rochester, after four weeks.

Following an operation for appendix, station manager suffered pneumonia and after that another form of infection. He now seems to have beat the reaper.

623 STATIONS NOW IN U. S. A.

Washington, Jan. 14.

Substantial progress was made toward correcting underquota conditions during the year ended last June 30, Federal Communications Commission said last week in its annual report.

While silencing two existing stations, Commish authorized construction of 39 additional transmitters, bringing the total number of licensees at the end of the fiscal year up to 623. Number of existing stations currently is the highest since June, 1928, when 677 outlets were functioning and represents a net increase of 30 during the past year.

Taking advantage of feature of the 1934 Communications Act which permits construction of 100 watters without regard to quota limitations, Commish granted tickets for the erection of 31 locals. Balance comprised one 500-watter and seven 250-watt transmitters. None of the eight stations with more than 100 watts was given unlimited time, the object being to bring the day facilities closer to quota without increasing excess allocations on the night side.

RIGHT TO SPANK ASKED

WELL-HEELED G. O. P. MAY HAVE ITS SPENDING SLOWED TO RIVAL'S PACE

'Equality of Opportunity' Presents New Complication —Republicans Have Big Chest, but Democrats Not Too Flush for Broadcasting

Washington, Jan. 14.

Amount of radio time used by the contending political forces this year will be determined largely by the size of the bank-roll which the Democrats are able to collect between now and summer. Republicans expect to be well-heeled and in a position to buy large gobs of air space.

Total outlay this year probably will surpass the $400,000 outlay by Republican and Democratic organizations in the 1932 tiff, with state and local political groups as well as individual candidates for Congressional and other offices adding to the pot which broadcasters will collect. American Liberty League is expected to spend freely, and other similar groups, including the National Economy League.

While anticipating a chance to pocket considerable coin, broadcasters are perplexed about a troublesome feature of the political situation, the requirement in the 1934 communications law that rival candidates for office must be afforded equal access to the air.

In view of the legal obligation to treat every contender alike, the industry is on the verge of placing a definite limitation on the amount of time sold to political spouters and may take the unprecedented step of declining to sell to anyone except officially-designated spokesmen for the Republican and Democratic national headquarters. These moves are being pondered in self-defense.

Planning to demand cash on the line for all broadcasting facilities after the two candidates are selected, chains are waiting for some reliable indications as to the size of the relative war-chests and spending tendencies of opposition camps before arranging final policy. The stand which the webs eventually take will depend to a large extent upon the money situation.

G.O.P.'s Big Chest

If, as is generally expected, the Republicans have several times as much to spend as the Democrats, the broadcasters will be compelled to turn down a substantial amount of potential income in order to give equal broadcasting opportunities to the rival groups. In the event the Dems are hard up for dough, the national networks probably will decline to accommodate any factions except the official parties. This would result in shutting out such a probably-free spender as the du-Pont backed Liberty League and throwing away good cash.

The unpaid Democratic radio bill still reminding the industry of the 1932 campaign is expected to be all washed up before the 1936 tiff opens officially. The Republicans have wiped up their radio indebtedness, having an actual surplus at present, while the New Deal organization has just collected enough money to wipe the slate clean.

A decision to carry only out-and-out political oratory has been reached by Columbia, resulting in shutting off the CBS web a current Republican series of dramatizations of important events in U.S. history. Columbia expects to stick to this policy through the campaign, but NBC so far has not seen fit to follow suit.

Censorship charges were again hurled at the National Broadcasting Co. and Columbia Broadcasting System Monday (13) by the Republican National Committee following the ban on dramatizations Networks take the position fictionized political propaganda is irresponsible and not based on solid facts.

Chairman Henry P. Fletcher accused the radio industry of discriminating between friends and foes of President Roosevelt. Fletcher asserted that 'the attitude you have taken is affected and perhaps involuntarily controlled by the political party in power which regulates the issuance of your licenses.'

The refusal of the two chains to sell time before the campaign officially opens next summer and their decision not to permit political propaganda to be aired through the medium of dramatizations were termed of major importance from the standpoint of freedom of the air. Fletcher said that the excuse for turning down the proposed skits is 'almost funny.'

Kicking vigorously because the G. O. P. dramatizations cannot be aired, Fletcher declared in his letter to Paley that 'the use of what you are pleased to call your 'editorial judgment'—amounts in practice to censorship.'

Refusal of both NBC and CBS to accept the Republican party's 'Liberty at the Crossroads' commercial, has resulted in the G.O.P.'s acquisition of a spread over WGN, Chicago Tribune station, for a series of Tuesday eve programs. First of these started last night. Was a platter job, also bearing the title 'Liberty at the Crossroads.'

Half-hour episode dealt with the alleged 'evils' of the processing tax and the mounting public debt via a conversation between man and wife over a Windy City breakfast table. Wife handled the processing tax matter by stating that she was serving Polish bacon because it was cheaper than American bacon from Chicago's own famed stockyards. Rest of the program in a similar insinuative vein.

Second stanza, slated for the 21st from 9:30 to 10 p. m. E. S. T., will see the end of the platter stuff, and the substitution of a live talent show piped in from New York over the Mutual web's wires. Times Square studio has been leased for the broadcast. WOR, New York, and other Mutual web members, however, will not air the show. Is for WGN alone.

Latter station is the only one so far under G.O.P. contract. Expected, however, that the Republicans will try to acquire time on a number of other outlets. Party recently had World Broadcasting cut a series of discs, and these apparently are to be placed in the future.

In letting the Republican biz go, the webs forfeited a nice chunk of coin from the reputedly solvent anti New Dealers. As a sample of what might have been, Thomas G. Sabin, radio chief, advised CBS that he had the following in mind: (1) a half hour weekly stanza over the basic; (2) further biz for the supplementaries, and (3) a series of spot announcements giving time, weather and other reports.

Write Buffalo Air Celeb Into Fiction as Hero

Buffalo, Jan. 14.

Dramatization of an established radio personality is script being prepared by John Turner for Buffalo Broadcasting Corp. being built around Roger Baker, whose air sports column is oldest in country. Sketch will be about Baker and a kid he makes his pal, touching on big-time sports events along way.

Plenty of heart-throb boke in opening. Plan to have kid lying in hospital, slowly dying because of no interest in living. Arrival of his radio idol, Roger Baker, with autographed baseball hypos his interest, so he gets well in a hurry and—presto! they're fast friends.

Howard Moffet, recent graduate of University of Canada, added to the announcing staff at WINS, New York.

Hormel Traveling Unit On 8-Station Network

St. Paul, Jan. 14.

Geo. A. Hormel & Co.'s ' A Night in Old Mexico,' stage show which though handled through WCCO's Artists Bureau has since its inception last September been strictly theatre, starting Monday (20) goes on a CBS split network of eight midwest stations, originating at WCCO, Austin (Minn.) packing company's show, though touring through Iowa currently, will air every Monday (7:00-7:30 P. M.) from the Minneapolis studio.

Program will not carry the Old Mex tag on the ether, however, but will be billed 'Juan Haldrigo and His Americano Marimba band.' 'Haldrigo' is really Jake Heidrick, former first violinist with the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra who passed up his 1935-36 contract with that group in order to tred the boards.

New Hormel setup means discontinuance of the twice-weekly studio chili party, 15-minute periods after which Hormel chili was served in generous portions to the studio audience (250 capacity). New stint will feature Mexican and Spanish melodies, and modern American tunes dished up with Spic flavor. There'll be a male trio. Don Tuttle is soloist. Four marimbas will be featured.

Although there are 30 in the Old Mexico company now playing Iowa, only the musickers and warblers will hurry in to WCCO every Monday night, thus not making the travel item as large as it might first appear. From now on unit is booked every night but Mondays, when the cast will mark time till next day for the broadcasting group's return.

Scripps-Howard Puts New Life, Personalities Into WNOX, Knoxville

Knoxville, Jan. 14.

WNOX has undergone extensive face-lifting since Continental Radio Corp., Scripps-Howard subsidiary, took over the reins.

Broadcasting now 19 hours per day, instead of 15 as before. Beginning this week, it's from 5.30 a. m. to 1 a. m. The wavelength was changed from 550 to 1010 for technical reasons.

R. B. Westergaard, formerly of Iowa Broadcasting System, is acting station and commercial manager. James C. Hanrahan, Continental vice-president and also from the Iowa group, is spending much time in Knoxville nursing the new baby. John Mayo, formerly of Columbia and NBC program staff, is handling same stuff here. Richard Peters, once of Washington News and Cleveland Press, handles radio and newspaper promotion.

Plenty of new studio, office and transmitter equipment going in, with brand new rate card coming out tomorrow (15). After much jamming, they're installing a new phone system, handling 18 times as many calls. Co-operation with Knoxville News-Sentinel, local S-H paper, working nicely, with huge radio column in daily.

No Scandinavian?

WBN.', Bronx, catering to foreign listening public mostly, is having a special 'Music Goes Round and Around' hour on Thursday night (16) at 7 p.m. EST, with the ditty to be sung in Yiddish, Italian, Spanish, Hungarian, German, Polish and Greek so as to satisfy its particular audience.

Management decided on this special stunt after the requests began piling up.

Contented Workers

Indianapolis, Jan. 14.

If other factories follow the lead of Eli Lilly and Company, radio may be forced to alter audience surveys for daytime. Bruce Childs, a departmental superintendent of Lillys, has had radios installed in every branch of his bailiwick so that workers may be entertained while on the job.

Childs claims that the monotony is relieved in this manner, and more production is achieved, with fewer errors. Several types of rest periods were tried before it was ascertained that radio was the best.

2ND THOUGHTS ON BOWES INCIDENT

Salt Lake City, Jan. 14.

Salt Lake City, often touchy where local pride is involved, did not like the form of 'apology' adopted by Major Bowes in belatedly presenting Chester Hill, Salt Lake City music student, on the Chase & Sanborn amateur program. Through a misunderstanding of some sort Hill had been expected —by his home towners—on the program dedicated to Salt Lake City but instead came on a week later with Bowes asking over the air, 'Where were you last week?' as if to suggest that Hill's failure to show up had been due to absence or neglect by Hill.

While the matter might seem a bit of a teapot tempest to outsiders Salt Lake City took the whole affair seriously. A great deal of publicity followed the first Sunday when Hill failed to appear and when the next week he did get a chance local citizenry reacted unfavorably to the attitude of the impresario. It was felt that the explanation should have been given directly by Bowes and not implied through the asking of a question (which Hill did not answer on the air).

Frank S. Cundiff, general manager of the Mountain States Telephone Company, was outspoken in resentment for the way in which the original explanation had put the blame on the local phone company for the 'home town boy slighted' incident. An agreement between the J. Walter Thompson advertising agency and the American Telephone & Telegraph company covering the manner of handling telephone voting was apparently not known locally, or at least never made clear.

Understanding with the agency was that at no time would it permit the appearance of talent from the same city where the polling was taking place. It has been anticipated by the phone company that the local exchanges would be swamped with so many calls for the hometown boy or girl that the police and fire departments and hospitals would be cut off from emergency service.

Race Hatred Legislation Proposed by Politician

Albany, Jan. 11.

Radio speakers and owners of broadcasting stations would be restricted under a bill introduced in the Legislature by Senator Jacob Schwartzwald, Brooklyn, Democrat. He proposes to eliminate expressions of hatred against any group because of race, color or religion. Schwartzwald's bill also calls for punishment for violators by a fine not to exceed $5 000 or a jail sentence of 90 days to three years or both. Prosecution would not be possible unless two or more persons heard a speaker after remarks which come under the proposed ban.

Practically all radio stations already exercise rigid censorship along these very lines.

LONGER LICENSE NOT YET RIPE

Anning S. Prall Tells Congressional Committee of Limitations Upon F.C.C. Authority to Keep Stations in Line

NEW LAWS DUE?

Washington, Jan. 14.

Possibility of new legislation to penalize broadcasters guilty of airing offensive programs was seen last week in disclosure by the House Appropriations Committee that Chairman Anning S. Prall, of the Federal Communications Commission, favors the idea of suspending stations which carry objectionable advertising and low-grade programs.

Simultaneously, the Commish in its first annual report revealed that formal action was taken against 152 individual stations in the 1934-35 clean-up campaign while Prall's testimony disclosed that the Commish at the present moment is pondering 300 charges against approximately 100 stations.

Blasting one-quarter of all broadcasters for operating 'poor stations' which cause program trouble, Prall told the House committee recently that he is opposed to long-term licenses until the industry has put its house in order and, furthermore, he believes that if the F.C.C. were authorized to suspend licenses the program situation could be cleaned up speedily and effectively.

'If we had the right to suspend a station for a week or 10 days or a month, in my judgment that would stop more of this bad programming and other violations than anything else, but we have no such power,' Commish head advised legislators.

On the question of extending license periods, Prall declared that three-quarters of the industry behaves satisfactorily. He added, however, that 'I think it is the opinion of the Commission that until we succeed in bringing about a very great improvement in the standards of the programming that the six-month period should be left as it is. Otherwise, if we had 90% of the stations as careful in their selection of programs and continuities as perhaps three-quarters of them are now there would be no reason why we could not give them a year's license.'

A sharp rise in the number of squawks filed with the Commish was pointed out in the annual report, which disclosed that the airing of false and misleading advertising is the chief source of trouble. The report of the legal division declared that formal action was taken in regard to 226 separate objectionable programs during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1935, while informal adjustment was made in the case of 'a much larger number of complaints.'

Explaining that the Commish has no control over programs, Chairman Prall, prodded by Representatives Chester Bolton, of Ohio, and Richard B. Wigglesworth, of Massachutts, Republicans, told the House committee that under existing circumstances 'the only thing' the Commish can do to prevent objectionable broadcasting is to revoke licenses.

NEW YORK RADIO PARADE

By Nellie Revell

Maybe the Gong Is Just a Myth

Executives of Swift Company, with a program airing over NBC, had themselves a dinner one night last week. For laughs they desired a Major Bowes gong to ring on the after-dinner speechmakers. So contacted the agency of their radio program which agency is also representative for the Major Bowes program, namely the J. Walter Thompson agency. Climaxed when Ray Weber of Swift called CBS and asked for a Major Bowes-type gong. CBS delivered a gong with CBS in nice big white letters, gong used that night at the banquet.

Ford Program Stunt

Ford Motors will have a merchandising stunt in operation shortly. Gag is in cooperation with the Fred Waring organization. Listeners to program will be asked if they want pictures of the Waring outfit, either singly or group. When requests for pix arrive, the request and pix is sent to Ford dealer nearest letter writer. Local Ford salesman delivers pix and how about a sample ride? With Waring band taking to road for next two months for a series of p.a.'s the final details will be completed and tested.

WMCA's Contract For Salesmen

Salesmen at WMCA are working under a new contract. In one clause they agree to abide by all station regulations, past, present and future. Another paragraph has them waiving claim to commission on renewals of programs after they are no longer with station. And of course there is a week-to-week clause. Entire contract situation arrived after a salesman no longer with station claimed a commission on a program renewals.

'March of Time' Squawks

'March of Time' program gets plenty of squawks from listeners. At present the State Department is raising Hail Mary about claimed undue emphasis on the Yellow Peril angle. Another recent squawk came from Governor Clyde Herring of Iowa. He squawked about the program mentioning the burning of Supreme Court judges in effigy over the AAA decision. According to airing Iowa State U did burning in effigy. But reprimand claimed that Iowa State College, not under control of the State, did the effigy-burning.

New Set-Up of CBS Prog. Dept.

Program, commercial program and production departments at CBS have been merged into one unit under title of Program Dept. New set-up lines up thus: James Burke handling program info; Fred Bethel is Director of Music with Davidson Taylor and Phil Cohan and Miss Singleton as assistants; Len Hole heads Program Sales which will act as liason between program and sales departments; Max Wiley is continuity editor (censor) he and Earl McGill being under Courtenay Savage, who now handles scripts, both commercial and sustaining. Shirley Ward now heads the casting dept. John Carlile is head of production with Don Ball as assistant and Ernie Bush as assistant to Ball. No more production men. All will be known as directors; associate directors or assistant directors. Entire set-up housed on 18th floor.

Radio As Tracker-Downer

Phil Lord's new 'Gang Busters' program for Colgate and Palmolive Shaving Creams will use a stunt at tail end of program. These last few minutes will be given to announcements of identification orders and clues and rewards on wanted criminals. Answers are to be forwarded to proper authorities. Strange the' it may seem the coppers expect to uncover a few leads by this maneuver.

$80 For 15 Min. 6 Times a Week

To meet the competition of other independent local outlets WMCA is lining up a Dance Parade of recordings to run until five ayem. Dickering with sponsors and offering a 15-minute show for $80 a week. All station wants is enough to cover the nut. Deal with sponsors is that entire set-up is cold unless station has 20 of spots sold.

Pay To Hear Advertising?

Coca-Cola is dickering with the local phone company for price on deal, whereby Coca-Cola installs its own robot machine and gives subscribers correct time and a slogan on the product at the same time. Soda firm is sponsoring same gadget in seven cities in South at present time. Closest to New York they have come is Wilmington Delaware. At present Atlanta, Ga., handles 15,000 of these phone calls daily. Robot works with records and voice feeding time and slogan is that of Mildred Linn, radio actress, who competed for job with 36 others at NBC last year. Unmentioned whether or not the subscriber gets charged for call. With the commercial angle mebbe these calls will be free?

ONE LESS JOB

Hungarian Director Criticized For Too Many Jobs

Budapest, Jan. 8.

Arpad Odry, for years director of plays broadcast by Hungarian Broadcasting Co., has resigned unexpectedly.

Probable reason is that Odry realized general feeling of resentment at his holding half a dozen well-paid jobs in state-controlled concerns, such as being a member and a director of National theatre, headmaster and professor at State Stage academy and director of Radio, as well as figuring very frequently on programs. Evidently he did not care to be subject to further attacks on account of this overlapping of jobs.

According to another version, Odry is candidate for managership of National Theatre if Antal Nemeth gives it up.

Radio director's post will probably be filled by Bela Naday.

KSTP Sets Up Complete Merchandizing Dept. Under Ray C. Jenkins

With Ray C. Jenkins, former manager of St. Louis' KSD, in charge, KSTP has organized a complete radio sales promotion and merchandising services for radio clients. Services offered include standard market data; mail publicity, under which announcements are mailed within the station's trade area to a specific list of names or to an entire business classification, as requested by the client; posters, linking product and program time, to be placed in stores carrying the advertised merchandise.

Headquarters for out-of-town sales and ad execs requiring temporary office facilities in the Twin Cities will be provided. In fact, according to KSTP's plans, station will do practically everything for the client but take his pooch for a walk.

John H. MacDonald has joined the accounting division in the treasurer's office at NBC. He comes from Trade-Ways, Inc., marketing and management counsel, which did a year and a half survey of the network. David Rosenblum, who, as executive v.p. of Trade-Ways, directed the survey, is now treasurer and a v.p. of NBC.

Another shift in the NBC personnel last week was the resignation of Stuart Sprague from the network's legal staff to go into private practice and the assignment to the vacancy of Harold Myers. Latter was formerly in RCA Victor's law department.

Singing Laundryman

Baltimore, Jan. 14.

Joseph Archer, operator of Archer's Laundry, burg's largest duds drenching concern, has weekly (Sunday) series of broadcasts plugging his firm on WFBR. The laundarer heads his own program, handling top spot in a singing role, and further drills the ensemble which backgrounds his work.

Gives self big billing, 'Joe Archer, Your Bosom Friend' being the official tag over broadcasts. And Joe's younger brother acts as the advertising agency.

Lincoln Newscasting Is Altered by New Status

Lincoln, Jan. 14.

Associated Press is now serving stations KFAB and KFOR here as well as KOIL, Omaha, since the recent 50% sale to the Lincoln newspapers, Lincoln Star and State Journal. The stations previously were subscribers to Trans-Radio news, since during the fight days, all the leased wires were controlled by the papers.

Although Trans-Radio is still on the books, it may be cancelled by giving 30 days notice, believed soon to happen. In the meantime, publishers and radio execs are dickering for an additional wire, either International News Service, or United Press. The latter is being used by WOW, Omaha, which may or may not be the reason for its ultimate sale here, depending on how much the locals want to cut in on Omaha. Newspapers are now running complete station programs daily.

Larry Hall, radio editor in the fight days, now has an assistant, Bruce Nicoll, for the sheets.

SHOWMANSHIP ARGUMENT

Rival Salesmen Prove It Does or Doesn't Matter

Indianapolis, Jan. 14.

Salesmen for WIRE now go armed with clippings from VARIETY which give it independent station showmanship honors over utility-owned WFBM.

WFBM salesmen carry rebuttals in the form of data to educate client on the difference between showmanship and station coverage and audience response.

Denver, Jan. 14.

Final period of all hockey games being played at the Mammoth Gardens ice rinks here, is being broadcast by station KFEL-KVOD.

IN HUNGARY THEY HAVE IDEAS, TOO

Budapest, Dec. 29.

Hungarian Broadcasting Co. now expects all air performers to sign an agreement to the effect that they have no objection to wax records being taken of their radio performances, and broadcast again whenever the management wishes, against a payment of only 10% of their usual fees to performers.

Air soloists are outraged, since this means that within a few months the company can make a collection of records that will enable them to make up whole programs of canned music and dispense with performers altogether if they choose. Management, however, insists on this paragraph of the contract. Broadcasting being a state monopoly, artists can do nothing against it.

State of New Mexico Talks Purchase of Station KOB

Albuquerque, N. Mex., Jan. 14.

State department heads have recommended state's purchase of radio station KOB now being operated by Albuquerque Publishing Co.

Apparently this is climax of fight of Gov. Clyde Tingley to wrest control of station (10,000 watts) from publisher of the Albuquerque Journal, who took station when on its heels and saved license.

Report by H. A. Engle, Madison, Wis., expert hired by state to make survey of feasibility of operating station, estimates cost of increasing power to 25,000 watts at $30,000.

WWJ's Auxiliary

Detroit, Jan. 14.

With an eye to television and facsimile, WWJ started this week erection of a 100-watt ultra-high frequency experimental station on top of town's tallest building, the 43-story Penobscot. Call letters of test transmitter, okayed last Friday (10) by F. C. C., will be W8XWJ and will be in operation around Feb. 1.

For present, signal of station will be sent out of wave of 9.48 meters, 31,600 kilocycles, or 31.6 megacycles. Because trend is toward still higher frequencies, WWJ applied for and was granted three channels of still higher frequencies, which will permit further experimentation as soon as receivers capable of tuning in on the high frequencies are available.

Meanwhile, the Detroit News, which operates WWJ, will show listeners how to build or where to obtain television sets.

In and Out at WJBK

Detroit, Jan. 14.

Lester Mitchell, formerly of WXYZ, has replaced Harold Hubert on announcing staff at WJBK. Mary Coughlin, 'Lady of the Evening' for several years at WJBK, leaves next week.

The Kentucky Corncrackers, consisting of two musicians besides Gernert Case, the Kentucky Mountaineer, also have been let out, due to loss of Reading Clothing Co. contract for hillbilly ork.

Meanwhile, WJBK has signed Kroger Grocery and Baking Co. to a renewed 13-week contract for another series of one-hour morning programs, consisting of time signals, music and lists of grocery items; R. G. Dun for daily 15-minute programs featuring Billy Repaid's newcasts, during which hockey tickets are given away; Ford Motor Co., four announcements daily, and Chevrolet Motor, five recorded 'Musical Moments' per week.

WHDH Stays as Is

Boston, Jan. 14.

Recurrent report in Boston radio circles that WHDH would move from its present location at the Hotel Touraine are quelled by the announcement that the management intends to remain in its present quarters, and that general repairs would be started shortly.

Offices and studios will all be done over and air-conditioned.

High Frequency for Locals

Washington, Jan. 14.

Use of extremely high frequencies, above 30 megacycles, may permit a substantial increase in the number of broadcasting stations and prove an ideal way of rendering additional service to thickly-settled metropolitan areas, Federal Communications Commission hinted in its annual report last week.

Declining to make any specific predictions about results of experiments now under way with high frequencies and super-power, Dr. C. B. Jolliffe, former commish chief engineer, suggested that the very high frequencies not being used commercially at present may provide a means of supplying strictly local service to any number of centers of population with frequency assignments duplicated at relatively low mileage separations. Exploitation of these channels is being retarded, however, by lack of broadcast receivers capable of picking up stations operating in these bands, engineer said.

Rotary Luncheon Cut Off Air; Kids Switch From Okayed Song List

Syracuse, Jan. 14.

Effects of Warner Brothers' radio ban on its copyrighted music struck in Syracuse Jan. 2 when WFBL (Col) interrupted a Rotary Club luncheon broadcast in the Onondaga Hotel and finally cut it off the air altogether.

Failure of the singers, a group of juveniles presenting a program arranged by the Rotarians' international service committee, to stick to their previously approved numbers led to the interruption and subsequent discontinuance, WFBL explained.

On the first departure from the approved list, the station filled in with electrical transcriptions, hoping that the group would return to the original program. But as unscheduled numbers continued, WFBL abruptly ended the broadcast and joined the Columbia network.

Cast, Writer, Work Gratis to Keep 'Couple' Strip on WGN as Sustainer

Chicago, Jan. 14.

With Holland Furnace dropping the sponsorship of 'Couple Next Door,' script show on WGN, Chicago Tribune station, the program will continue as a sustaining strip.

Author and cast will work for nothing in the hope that the program will pick up another client through Blackett-Sample-Hummert, agency which handled the original spotting of the program. Show has been on locally and drew yelps from Holland dealers in other territories, squawking that Chicago dealers were being favored.

On the Knuckles

Knoxville, Jan. 14.

Unhappy over the stiff radio competition, The Knoxville Journal has taken to straight digs at press-radio reports.

Whenever a local news bulletin errs in accuracy, a little squib in the following morning edition points it out in a none-too-polite way.

This analysis contains only facts about the area in which WLW sells the products of ONE advertiser--no duplication, no "lumping".

It is prepared to answer any advertiser's most important question: "Can you influence buyers to purchase my product?"

Resent 'Windy City'

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Radio stations are hearing not only from sponsors with Chicago interests, but also from merchants and industrialists who do not use the air, about references to the town as the 'Windy City.'

"Windy City' was first applied to Chicago in derision of the propaganda for the Columbian Exposition, 45 years ago, and at the time expressed resentment of other large American cities, especially Philadelphia, at the town's self-laudation.

Outstanding Stunts

LAVA AUTOGRAPH
KGMB, HONOLULU

CITY COUNCIL ON WAX
WSAI, CINCINNATI

Autographed by Lava
Honolulu.

KGMB, which sends a weekly sustainer to CBS entitled 'Hawaii Calls,' evolved a trick stunt for mainlanders who hear the program. Web Edwards, manager of the station, announced that listeners who send in a card will get it back after it has been scorched in the lava of Mauna Loa, famed Hawaiian volcano. Latter has recently erupted and the lava has cooled down enough at the base of the mountainside to be approached by sure-footed guides. Sackfuls of mail rolling in.

Another KGMB stunts has been to send field equipment up the volcano to an 8,000-ft. elevation and describing the lava flow.

City Council on Wax
Cincinnati.

New councilmanic set-up, with Republicans and Charterites split four-four and an independent holding balance of power, has created more public interest than any other political situation in years. Council meetings, here every Monday afternoon, are broadcast by WCPO and WSAI to appease present curiosity spell.

WSAI recorded the proceedings and rebroadcast them that night. Running time of 105 minutes was reduced to 40 minutes by elimination of uninteresting phases through medium of holding a wax rehearsal and cueing cut-outs. Brief periods to allow for needle shifting were filled in with ad libbing by Joe Ries, WSAI commentator.

All of the councilmen, informed of the transcription stunt, listened in on the mechanical program and, along with others, complimented the station for its double handling of the powwow.

Jimmie Alderman did the announcing on the original pick-up and Fritz Witte served as contactor during the meeting.

Tarzan Beats His Chest
Dayton.

Local milk dealers and producers sponsoring a 'Tarzan of the Apes' stanza over WHIO, recently made a tie-up with showing of the film, 'The New Adventures of Tarzan.' Was designed as a kids' stunt, admission to the theatre being a milk bottle cap. Publicity given both pic and radio program via 60,000 handbills.

Resultantly 15,000 moppets put in an appearance, jamming up the streets and necessitating a call for 15 extra-duty cops. Instead of one performance, as contemplated, three had to be given.

Kids later routed to WHIO where they signed membership cards in a 'Tarzan' club. Kept 11 clerks busy for four hours.

A Contest at 5:30 A. M.!
St. Louis.

In competition with 15 old time fiddlers from Missouri and Illinois, Earl Joslin, of DuQuoin, Ill., sawed his way to victory in a contest conducted on Early Birds program over KWK. Each fiddler played as seconds of his choice of 'Turkey in the Straw,' 'Chicken Reel' or Arkansas Traveler.' Judging was done exclusively by KWK listeners and Joslin polled 130 of the 1,108 votes received. Early Birds runs daily 5:30 to 7:00 a.m. Charles Stokey is m. c.

Federal Housing Tie-In Baltimore.

WFBR took a booth at the Federal Housing Administration show held last week in the Armory; show was first of sort the Government is sponsoring in key cities throughout country and proved successful, playing to around 7,000 gazers daily at two bits admish.

Nancy Turner, of station staff, aired daily from exhibit, having as guests prominent Balto matrons spilling their ideas on model homes, furnishings and child upbringing.

Paid to Keep Still Richmond, Va.

Xmas stunts are completely in mothballs now that the holiday season is over, but WRVA is still talking attention to its charity drive program which resulted in liberal newspaper publicity in a city where the papers generally make an orphan of radio.

Charity drive in Richmond this year began as a conjoint venture by the papers, but didn't pan out any too well. WRVA was then called in to give the bandwagon a push. Station cooked up an inane version of an amateur show, performers in which numbered some of the city's outstanding civic and political leaders. Money-getting hook was that listeners paid to hear someone perform, or—conversely—paid to hear them keep quiet.

Typical of the dizzy situations developing in the show was that a listener offered $25 to hear the city's Democratic chairman make a Republican speech. Immediately the local Republican leader—fearful of what the Democrat might say—offered another $25 to have his opponent shut up.

Dailies rode the thing sky high.

Uncle Tom's Quackdoodle
St. Paul.

With requests for bids coming in at the rate of 200 a day, Thomas Dunning Rishworth, KSTP's Uncle Tom, is going to have to extend his Saturday morning theatre parties for the kids.

Each letter, which sets forth a good deed and thus wins the writer a ticket to the party, usually contains the names of three kids and three more good deeds, so Tom's really getting about 600 a day.

Professional talent has now been added to the usual picture offerings at Uncle Tom's parties. Most recent featured Yoshita Japs and Henry Gordien, magician. Parties are held every other Saturday at the St. Paul (RKO) Orpheum; following Saturdays at the Minneapolis (Singer) Orpheum. He manages to sandwich in once a month parties for offspring of the blue bloods at the Women's City club, burg's ultra fashionable spot.

At the last party Gordien put the kids in stitches when he pulled a live duck out of a hat and presented him as Quackdoodle. Quackdoodle is featured daily on Tom's Children's Hour program, and is supposedly a very bright duck which can ask and answer questions.

Secret of this talking duck has never been let out of the bag. Tom won't tell even his best friends.

KFRO Toots Its Horn
Longview, Tex.

KFRO, local 100-watter, has issued a brochure giving data on its market, together with a short history of itself in brief, snappy form.

Historical phase of the pamphlet harps on the fact that Longview is oil territory and is thus subject to booms. Market data concerns seven surrounding counties and is replete with information on retail sales and outlets, radio homes, auto registrations, etc. Is labeled 'The Story of KFRO and Its Market,' and is bound in a size convenient for regulation filing.

Radio Auctions
Waterbury, Vt.

WDEV has evolved its own version of the 'radio auction' stunt, and some 60 merchants here and in neighboring towns are co-operating and displaying signs in their shop windows.

Stunt works as follows: Whenever a customer makes a spot cash purchase in any of the co-operating stores, the merchant gives him an amount of 'auction money' corresponding to the cash he laid out. This fiat 'money' can then be used by the customer in bidding on articles put up for sale on the program. First article on the block was a $150 vacuum cleaner, which went to the highest bid received via the mails.

Programs slated to run every Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoon for five weeks.

Selling Hubby Via The Mrs.
Rochester, N. Y.

Knopf Clothing Co. convinced of practicability of selling man's clothes by sales talks to wives. Radio program, Bob Pierce & Co. over WHAM, is spotted at 8:30 a.m. when men are not at home.

Plugs stress importance of clothes in success and pride of wives in appearance of their men folks.

5-Way Amateur Tie-in Seattle.

Amateur stunt being launched here labeled 'search for singers' contest. Was evolved by Marty Young of the Seattle Recording studios (electrical transcription outfit), and will conjointly plug the Orpheum theatre, Trianon ballroom, New Hungerford hotel, station KJR, and the Seattle Recording studios.

Procedure of the stunt is to audition a number of femme singers, who will eventually be presented at the ballroom in groups of four. Popular applause here will pick a quartet of semi-finalists. Recordings of their voices will then be made and broadcast over KJR, audience vote determining the final winner. Orpheum theatre gets its plug in that the singers will warble songs from pix playing there. Hungerford hotel's cut is in being judge of the air votes.

Winner gets a loving cup presented by the theatre and a professional engagement at the Trianon.

College Rhythm

The first of a series of articles on collegiate likes and dislikes as regards modern dance music and dance bands.

The writers, staff members of publications at their respective schools, have been asked by VARIETY to give the opinion of the student body as a whole rather than pass personal judgment. Neither has VARIETY given further instruction as to what was to be said or how. These articles appear as the undergraduates have written them, with the expressed opinions being their own.

VARIETY publishes the series to give music men and band leaders a cross-section of current undergraduate opinion on dance music and bands with the hope that it will be both informative and instructive. For what the college group has to say about dance music is deemed important in the trade.

PRINCETON

By Duncan MacDonald, 2d, '36
(Daily 'Princetonian')

Despite the fact that it is a most lugubrious condition, it is nevertheless true that the majority of students at Princeton are woefully lacking in any kind of real education in regard to jazz and modern dance music. It is difficult to ascertain with any amount of precision the attitude of the 'average' Princeton student toward music of this sort, but perhaps if we select a mythical group of 100 students and divide them according to their probable interest and knowledge of the subject, we can gain a more accurate idea of the situation.

Of this imaginary 100 then, approximately 25 can be classified as knowing and caring very little about such music. These would include those hide-bound adherents of the classics, who would consider it a flagrant example of lese majeste to even think of listening to anything but the works of the old masters. Others in this same category are those individuals who just don't give a damn about this type of music, and spend an entire evening at a dance without being in the least bit conscious whether the music is being furnished by Xavier Cugat and his 'Torrid Ten or' by Duke Ellington and his Waltz Kings.

In the next group you'd find, say 69 men who are interested to a certain extent in dance music and are conversant with the elementary facts thereof. They can usually tell you, for instance, that they think Jan Garber's not so hot, and that Glen Grey swings it. They listen to radio programs with a fair amount of selectivity, and take the girls to New York hotels which feature the music instead of the food or floor show. This codger is about the average Princeton student in regard to dance music. He can distinguish nine times out of ten the music of Wayne King from that of Benny Goodman, yet were he asked about 'Bix,' he would doubtlessly answer he didn't know her address.

Out of the remaining six there would be about five who are really jazz enthusiasts and sincere lovers of swing music. A representative of this group is indeed a rare bird, but what he lacks in numbers he more than makes up for in his enthusiasm and devotion to the subject.

Finally, and with tears in our eyes we make this public—approximately one of every hundred is an ardent admirer of Clyde McCoy's 'Sugar Blues' plucked right off the cob. It is lamentable that a college with an intelligent student body—or perhaps would-be intelligent student body—has within its ranks partisans of this type of horrific cacophony. These lads belong in none of the above three groups—they are merely sui generis.

3-Year Round-up

Turning now to the records sales—perhaps one of the best indices for judging the orchestras and types of music preferred at Princeton. Generally speaking, 1934 might be called 'Glen Gray Year', 1935-Ray Noble Year' and this season all present indications will probably be 'Benny Goodman Year'.

During 1933-34 Princeton University was listed under two addresses—Princeton, N. J., and care of the Essex House, New York City. In great droves—like Homer's Greeks—they nightly besieged the Colonnades. Students, professors, janitors and night watchmen, all intent on hearing the stomping rhythms of the superbly drilled Casa Loma orchestra. Their records sold like wildfire, and their radio programs—despite Walter O'Keefe—were listened to with almost religious devotion.

Then, the local music store began to feature the records of Ray Noble's English orchestra, and soon these creations, done with great sophistication and elegance, won the favor of every phonograph owner on the campus. Noble's records were distinctive—in arrangement, execution, and recording, and their recpetion at Princeton was one of great enthusiasm. Princetonians, however, did not know enough about music to realise that his American band was woefully inferior to his English group, and accordingly his personal reception over here was almost as great as had been the success of his English records. After several months, though, it became generally accepted that the Noble of America was far removed from the Noble of England, and consequently his record sales have been showing a noticeable decline in recent weeks.

Toward the beginning of last summer Benny Goodman recorded 'Always', and Princetonians were almost immediately impressed by the rhythmic swing of the band, and the technical excellence of execution. His other records, too, sold well but Goodman never received the publicity he should have gotten. He never really became known around the campus until very recently when more of his recordings were released, and his broadcasts given a place on a national hook-up. The students began to realize that here at last was a white band which played with feeling, inspiration and extraordinary skill. Accordingly he began to rapidly displace Noble and Gray in popularity. According to latest reports his records are leading all sales around the campus.

Other recording bands who have enjoyed popularity during the past few years are Paul Whiteman's horde, Hal Kemp's fidgity group, and Eddie Duchin. Concerning the latter, however, even the most enthusiastic supporters of Il Duchin are beginning to be oppressed by the singularly drear monotony of his mechanical piano.

Louis Armstrong's old records sold well, but the Princeton populace never knew enough about real jazz to appreciate Ellington, and his records have never been in great demand here. Ozzie Nelson and the old Dorsey Brothers' platters know good sales, but Isham Jones has comparatively few admirers.

Among the newer artists whose records are selling well are Teddy Wilson—that most peerless of all swing pianists—Tommy Dorsey, and the genial Mike Reilly and his wrought-up horn. Guy Lombardo and his arch rival, January Garber, are slipping daily in local popularity. Three years ago the Lombardi were among the leaders, but now more and more their vapid, nickelodeon-like tunes are losing favor at this school.

As To Living

There is also an increasing interest in 'swing music', due mainly to Benny Goodman. The Onyx Club with Mike Reilly and Eddy Farley, the Famous Door with Wingy Mannone and Teddy Wilson, and the Hickory House with Red Norvo, all swing shrines, are becoming increasingly popular with Princeton men. Any weekend night will always see groups of students from ole Nassau enjoying the torrid music which emanates from these spots.

As to university proms, during the last three years the following bands have been heard here: Fess Williams, Larry Funk, Red Nichols, Joe Haymes, Tommy Dorsey, Isham Jones, Eddie Duchin, Claude Hopkins and Glen Gray. With the exception of Gray and Duchin these orchestras, for the most part, do not represent typical undergraduate tastes but were signed from all appearances to satisfy individual preferences of members of the Prom Committee, or because attractive rates were offered.

Jitters

Ray Noble's theme song on the Coca-Cola program, 'The Very Thought of You,' was yanked because it was in the Warner catalog. So he substituted another song, 'By the Fireside.' Noble wrote both songs.

Second number was yanked by NBC in a jittery last-minute decision just before a broadcast because network thought it was 'too similar' to 'The Very Thought of You.' This was straightened out later.

MPPA REJECTS LOWE PROPOSAL

C. St. John Lowe, head of Canadian Music Sales, found out last week that the Music Publisers Protective Association of the U. S., as an organization, is opposed to making special concessions to foreign distributors of sheet music. Lowe had proposed that current pop releases be sold to him at a price which would allow him to sell to the Woolworth stores in Canada for 16½c a copy for the syndicate to dispose of sheet music at 25c.

Publishers committee which met last week to consider Lowe's proposal held that MPPA could not as an association commit itself to a policy that would permit a foreign distrib to buy music for less than it was being sold to American jobbers and retailers. By making a special price differential for Lowe, American sheet music would be retailed in Canada for 40% to 60% less than that asked on the American market.

Lowe for some time has had an exclusive tieup with the Woolworth stores in Canada for the disposal of reprints and folios. With a view to expanding this affiliation to include copyrighted music, Lowe asked the MPPA to co-operate with him in a plan which would give the syndicate stores a chance to sell such music for a quarter. On this side of the border the chain outlets ask anywhere from 35c to 45c a copy for current releases.

Few Musicians Listed In Big Coin Brackets; 2 Pubs Over $15,000

Washington, Jan. 14.

Dave Rubinoff, in his capacity as President of Rubinoff Orchestras, Inc., received a salary of $47,725 during 1934, while Philip Rubinoff, secretary and treasurer of the firm, was paid $17,631, according to salary report made to Congress last week by the Treasury Department.

Few musicians were included in the bulky document which contained lowdown on earnings of some 18,000 individuals paid more than $15,000. None of the reports indicated amount paid radio entertainers while the few musicians who were included in the list were registered on the basis of income from films. Paramount report, for example, listed a number of composers and song writers, as well as Bing Crosby, Duke Ellington and Guy Lombardo.

Report for the CBS artist bureau listed only two names, only one of them a performer, while NBC supplied even less info about earnings of its talent. CBS paid Ralph J. Wonders, manager, $15,450 and Howard Barlow, listed as 'artist,' $15,700.

Crosby's earnings aggregated more than $190,000, including $104,499 from Bing Crosby, Ltd., and an additional $88,499 from Crosby Productions, Inc.

Duke Ellington, Inc., received $18,249 from Paramount and Guy Lombardo was paid $35,000 by the same producer. These figures included compensation for the members of the two bands.

Few music publishers were included in list of firms paying salaries in excess of $15,000. Robbins Music Co. reported that John J. Robbins was paid $21,600 during 1931, while Marks Music Co. revealed that Edward B. Marks received $15,600 the same year.

ASCAP Action Against Unlicensed Stations and Warner Infringement Suit Barrage Due This Week

Current week is expected to find the entire performing rights tangle brought to a head. American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers will be faced with the problem of taking drastic action against broadcasters who have failed to apply for new licenses, following the deadline set for Jan. 15 (today), while the filing of wholesale infringement suits against New York stations, which had been postponed from last week because of Herman Starr's absence in St. Louis, will serve as Warner Bros.' opening barrage in the legal crossfire.

Following a special meeting of the ASCAP board of directors Friday (9) wires went out to 390 stations informing them that they had until today (Wednesday) to let the Society know whether they proposed to signature a new five-year agreement under the same terms that prevailed before the WB exit. Starr, as prez of the WB group, wrote to the Society the same day demanding that it immediately give notice to all ASCAP licensees in writing that Harms, Witmark, T. B. Harms, Remick and New World had withdrawn their catalogs from ASCAP as of Dec. 31, 1935.

Starr's letter declared that although the withdrawal had taken effect on that date, the Society had ignored the action and failed to make formal notification of it to the ASCAP licensees. Warner letter stated that if its demand were not immediately carried out every officer, director and member of ASCAP would be held accountable for any damages which may result from this neglect to the WB group. Copy of the Starr communication was also sent to every publisher and writer member of the Society.

ASCAP's telegram to the 390 stations asserted that if the Society did not hear from them by Jan. 15 they would be considered infringers, if they continued to broadcast Society controlled copyrights, and be held to strict accountability for all such performances dating from Jan. 1, 1936. These stations had on Dec. 30 been granted permission to go on using the ASCAP repertory until further notice, and it is the Society's contention that whether these stations renew their contract or otherwise they are still liable financially to ASCAP for the ASCAP compositions which had been used from Jan. 1 on.

Refusing Transcripters

During the ASCAP meeting on Friday it was also decided to refuse to meet the demand of transcription manufacturers that performing licenses be granted them direct for commercial recordings turned out before Jan. 1. Argument advanced by these manufacturers is that they are the innocent victims of the fight between performing rights owners and broadcasters, and there is no reason for impeding or tying up the business of transcription makers as long as they are willing to shoulder all the music costs. Impression current in legal circles is that the question that this situation projects may have far-reaching repercussions, since it involves interference with interstate commerce. ASCAP directors have taken the position that they will not license anyone but the actual user, and that, anyway, the transcription manufacturers were aware of the fact that any recording licenses they took out prior to Jan. 1, 1935, were good only up to that date.

Because of the interstate commerce implications Warner had two weeks previously issued performing right clearances to all WB music recorded for commercial purposes prior to Jan. 1, with the permission applying to stations whether they had or had not obtained Warner licenses. WB release, however, contained the provision that Warner reserved the right to fix a reasonable fee for these commercial discs by Oct. 1, 1936. The release was not applied to recordings contained in the various sustaining library services.

Separate catalogs listing the compositions controlled by each of its publishing firms will be distributed by WB to its licensees beginning Jan. 21. Starr declared that only copyrights which Warner was certain about were included in these lists, and additional data concerning the works it controlled would be relayed to licensees as soon as the assignments, about which there is some question, have been checked thoroughly by the WB lawyers.

Baltimore, Jan. 14.

Only the indie WCBM of the four Balto broadcasters has to date signed contract with Warners for song releases controlled by firm. Station hancocked one of those short term three-month pacts.

Outside fold remain WBAL, NBC blue band outlet; WCAO, local CBS cog, and WFBR, NBC red.

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.

Warner Brothers operates a music counter at Gimbel Brothers' department store here and sells only its own music. But since WB split from ASCAP, the Gimbel-owned station WIP can't play WB tunes until contract is signed. Studio and music counter in in same building.

WB'S $1,000 PER WEEK FOR AIR CHECKING

Aside from its regular payroll, it's costing Warner Bros. about $1,000 a week to check on copyright infringements over the air. Most intensive and comprehensive phase of the checking is carried on in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, while moderately close tab is maintained in cities where there are stations owned and operated by NBC and CBS.

Employees in the New York and branch offices of the Warner publishing firms spend a goodly portion of their time on sleuth assignments before their loudspeakers as a supplement to the services of organized checking bureaus. Major part of the hotel and nite clubs checking is being done by the contacteers remaining on the WB professional staffs.

FISCHER'S NEW SHOW SAILS FOR NEW YORK

Cliff Fischer sails with his new French nitery revue from Paris today (15), arriving in New York Jan. 21. French Casino will bow in the new show Jan. 29, after closing down a few days. This makes the third new show for the Broadway spot.

Current show shifts into the French Casino, Miami, which L. F. Blumenthal and Jack Shapiro built as a winter adjunct.

Heyman Freelancing

Eddie Heyman, under Warner Bros. contract with Hoagy Carmichael, asked for and got his release as a WB staff writer and is now freelancing. He's placed a flock of new songs around in collaboration with Oscar Levant, Vee Lawnhurst and Johnny Green, all composers. Heyman is a lyricist.

While he was under WB contract, Harms (a Warners subsid) published most of Heyman's songs, but his ASCAP sympathies caused him to ask for a contractual release. Carmichael still has six months to go under his WB pact.

Walter Kane Set

Walter Kane, who for six years was gen. mgr. of the Max Mayer Music Co. (formerly Richmond-Mayer), has taken over operation of the Myrex Co., a mail order house. Kane plans to conduct a general music and information business. Myrex Co. has been practically inactive since the acquisition of Leo Feist, Inc., by Radio Music, Inc., an NBC subsid, six years ago.

Kane before coming with Richmond-Mayer spent 25 years with the Crown Music Co.

Night Club Reviews

NIXON CAFE
(PITTSBURGH)

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14.

While most of downtown nite spots are figuring out where their next payroll's coming from, Nixon goes on and on getting a respectable share of what's around, attracting a mob that's had the Nixon habit for years and snaring most of the burg's big spenders. Big long bar in outer room, also filled comfortably with tables, attracting nice play, which has been another factor in site's early 1936 boom.

Nixon's Tony Conforti used to go in only for couple of specialty acts, mostly local product, but this season he's doing things on a bigger scale. Jack Pomeroy had the floor show concession here for first part of year, but Conforti has since switched to Ernie Young (Chicago) and first of Young's efforts rings bell nicely.

Most attractive feature of current entertainment are Dorothy Byton girls, eight of 'em. They're a corking ensemble, each a specialist, and tear up the floor in an acrobatic routine. Girls don't let up for a moment and have three other routines.

M.c. is Don Tranger, who plays the sax and clarinet simultaneously, at same time breaking into Russian dance. Another first rate night club novelty, and Tranger also performs his m.c. duties with a pleasant self-effacement. Dance team of Johnny and Eleanor, couple of good looking youngsters who should go places, encompass tap, typical ballroom and rumba routines in three different spots, all well handled, and likewise do single bits, boy particularly registering with an Astaire-like ease. Blonde Harriett Norris is a good saleslady of songs and with enough on the ball and a wide enough repertoire to put her in solid with the sober lads as well as the others.

Show last almost an hour. Two nightly, at dinner and midnight.

MAYER'S NIGHT CLUB
(MADRID)

Madrid, Dec. 27.

Astute young Egon Mayer gave Madrid its society liquor dispensary when he opened the swank 'Bakanik' ('exquisite') several years ago. Success of this thirst quencher for Spain's counts, marquises and duchesses encouraged him to try his hand at aristocratic nitery biz. And he's come through equally big.

Mayer's Night Club is located two blocks from 'Bakanik.' It's piped as a club in order to maintain its exclusiveness. Following the old American speakeasy style, customers must have cards, but the members can bring guests. Operator hopes this system will encourage many members of the younger society crowd who avoid the other hotspots because they don't like elbow-rubbing with the hoi polloi. Opening night proved the season's top social event.

Spot is supposed to resemble the interior of a Spanish galleon. It's a small, compact, shipshape-looking bit with nothing Spanish about it. Walls are boarded all the way up and ceiling crossed by beams. Piano and drum which provide the syncopation are on a small raised platform facing the dancing square. Indirect lighting and maritime decorations contribute to the atmosphere. Bar at end of the room is on a platform overlooking the floor so the lone eagles can sip and gaze and sigh. A ship's wheel on the bar platform is atmosphere for those who feel nautical.

A puller in itself, this French-style boit has another winner in Jimmy Campbell, who handles the piano assignment. Young Canadian has been in Europe for the past seven years, once teaming with Binnie Barnes, and makes the keys do tricks. He turns out sparkling tunes, swaying with rhythm and swing, in an outstanding way. With only a drummer to help, Campbell meets the most exacting musical demands easily.

Whisky, sherry or cocktails cost $1.10; good cognac, two bucks, and French champagne, $10 and up. No cover or minimum charge. Nitery opens at 11 p.m. Average closing time since the inauguration has been 7:30 a.m.

PLAZA CAFE
(PITTSBURGH)

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14.

For years one of downtown belt's hottest niteries, with particular appeal to stay-up-lates, Plaza got off on wrong foot this season and only now is showing signs of profitable revival. Spot started the wave of girlie shows locality, with the dames doubling between the floor and at the tables with the big spenders, but through managerial disputes early this fall permitted other spots to corner the jump.

Tangles cleared up several weeks ago, with Etzi Covato, one of owners, returning with his band and John Maganotti in charge again of the restaurant end and hosting.

Show's one of the peppiest to hit town in some time and has a lot of eye-appeal for the sort of trade spot wants and gets. Brian McDonald, a Pittsburgher and veteran of flock of Broadway musicomedies and revues, back in town again as m.c., doing a near-perfect job and then whamming 'em with his vocal specialties, smartly selected to show off his lusty pipes.

Chorus of eight girls has looks, they're nicely costumed and, what's more, can dance, a phenomenon around here. The femme sock is an exotic brunet who bills herself simply as Carmen. Sells a refined hula kooch with plenty of class, uncorking the sock previously reserved for the fanners but without any of the latters' coy to-do.

Three Yates Sisters, trio of cute looking tap dancers, patterned after the original Three Queens, and a sure-fire nite club bet, with Corbett and Triano (girl is formerly of Corbett Sisters and a striking blonde) contributing a couple of nifty ballroom routines. Mary Martin, songstress of the torchy school, and Jean Haziet, toe-tap dancer, round out the principals. Three shows nightly and last one, caught after 3 a.m., didn't let up a moment.

Covato's music has quite a following in itself, an additional help, with drinks and food reasonable enough to encourage all types of clientele.

CHEZ HARRY PILCER
(PARIS)

Paris, Jan. 4.

Four American acts and one young dance sensation from Buenos Aires provide the fare in Harry Pilcer's current floor show, and the Yank ex-hoofer can still say he has the best entertainment in a non-dress dancery in Paris.

In fact, for the post-holiday season, when local nite spots have a habit of folding, Pilcer's place is doing good biz. Answer is Pilcer himself—his personality as a host, his hard work to see that the guests have a good time, his American floor shows, which are so outstanding that his place is a sort of center for Paris booking agents interested in American acts, and his good music—Fred Adison (French) for jazz and Rafael Canaro for tangos.

Outstanding among Pilcer's current Yank numbers is Franklyn D'Amore, with Jack Lane, fast and hard knockabout act, also playing at the A.B.C. here. Parisians love to see these boys slam each other on the floor—that's the favorite type of American act right now.

Mildred Colette, formerly of the sister act, shows some highgrade hoofing, and the Three Samuels click with their naval-officer comedy dance. They've learned something that passes for French military commands for the number, and this gives the audience a little added humor.

Argentinian is Rafael Garcia, billed as a dancer from the Theatre Colon in Buenos Aires, and what that boy is doing hoofing in a Paris dancery is a mystery. In the way of leaps and McCoy ballet work he shows more than you can see here anywhere else off the concert or opera stage, and he can be compared with the best of them even in the top spots. But he's not highbrow—his number here is tied right up with jazz and comports flashy though harmonious steps and movements. He shows that he can do the type of entertainment a nitery needs. Finishes with a two and a half minute toe tap that is hard to beat. Said not to have worked in New York or London yet.
Stern.

Among Casualties

Among New York nitery casualties is the Sert (formal) room in the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, with the biz to be concentrated in the informal Empire room. This means that Ramon and Renita, slated to open there Feb. 1, will not do so.

Peppy d'Albrew has bowed out of the Trocadero, and Morton Downey, who is also financially interested, is continuing the spot on his own with himself as the attraction. D'Ivons, dancers, hold over. Pancho orchestra has gone to Florida.

'Rounders' Nix H'wood

Offer of six weeks at the Hollywood, Broadway restaurant, for Ed Farley and Mike Reilly, writers of 'The Music Goes 'Round and Around,' was turned down last week by the pair's management, Rockwell-O'Keefe. Bid called for $1,500 a week.

Primarily responsible for the nixing were picture negotiations that will take them out to the Coast for either Metro or Paramount.

Det. Band Switches

Detroit, Jan. 14.

Charles Dornberger's band moves into the Book-Cadillac this week, replacing Will Osborne. Don Zullo band now at Saks Cafe, taking over stand of Gene Regis, who has taken his orchestra to Florida for engagement.

Billy Carr returns this week as m.c. at Oriole Terrace, where Art Jarrett and Leanor Holm hold sway. Al Segal is heading new revue at Eastern Star Cafe.

RAINBOW INN BURNS

Lynchburg, Jan. 14.

Rainbow Inn on Boonsboro road, burned to the ground last week and came near cremating the manager, Carl Musgrove, and two others who were sleeping in an adjoining building. They were saved by neighbors who chopped down the doors of the blazing clubhouse.

J. Carl (Big Boy) Vinson, the proprietor, is serving a jail term for violating the state ABC laws by serving over-the-counter drinks.

Fritzel-Jacobsen Split?

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Mike Fritzel and Joey Jacobsen, co-operators of the Chez Paree here, are reported splitting.

They have been associated with this nitery since its opening three years ago.

In the Niteries

Cugat Goes Ambi

Xavier Cugat becomes an ambi-maestro tomorrow (Thursday) in the Empire (informal) room of the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria when he heads both the tango-rumba combo and a straight dance band. Heretofore Cugat was solely identified as a tango maestro, alternating with Henry King's combo in the Sert (formal) room.

When Cugat switches into the Empire room he displaces the Freddy Martin orchestra.

Cugat will stand on the podium and alternate between both bands. Carmen Cugat and Jimmy Ray will be the respective vocalists with the Spanish and the American orchestras.

Music Notes

Josef Pasternack set at Columbia to supe and direct music for the next Grace Moore pic. He served as Miss Moore's conductor on her recent concert tour.

Frankie Carle, now leading his own orchestra at Edgewood Inn, Albany, after years as pianist with McEnelly's and Mal Hallett's bands, has a WGY Schenectady wire.

Wendell Lorang's first pop song composition, 'Why Wait?,' lyrics by Sparty Nardone, has been accepted by T. B. Harms Co. for publication.

Georgs Simon, former radio contact for Harms, Inc., has moved to Irving Berlin's headquarters in same capacity.

Abe Meyer dickering for English office to do musical scoring in London.

Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed will dish up numbers for Metro's 'Broadway Melody of 1937.'

Abe Meyer to do score of 'The Show Goes On' in collaboration with Hugo Reisenfeld.

Borris Morros scoring Walter Wanger's 'Trail of the Lonesome Pine.'

SUE LUCAS OVER SONG

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14.

Nick Lucas last week obtained order from Judge McVicar in U. S. District court directing two Canonsburg (Pa.) composers to show cause why they should not file a more specific claim in recent $100,000 damage suit they lodged against him. They are Frank Staslo and Ralph Anthony.

Charges were made claiming Lucas failed to keep his part of an agreement to publicize their tune, 'When Your Road Leads My Way.' They say he contracted to get the song printed and sold on a 50-50 basis.

Eaton Boys are the newest addition to the Blue Room entertainment outlay at the Hotel Lincoln, N. Y. Style of repartee is more or less new to the spot, as for the past few months, only Isham Jones' dansapation and dance teams have been the fare. Barker trio also in for incidental harmony and music between orchestra numbers.

Walnut Room of the Bismarck Hotel, Chicago, trying a new angle by presenting a miniature opera as part of its floor show. Originated by Leonard Keller, whose orchestra has held the bandstand for the past year.

Monday (13) night in the N. Y. class Russian niteries was a big occasion, falling on the Russian (Greek Orthodox) new year's. The Caucausian Eagle, the swank Malsonette Russe, et al. made it a gala turn-out for the 'white' Russian contingent in N. Y.

Plenty swingo is Cliff Allen at Leon & Eddie's, working as a team with Billie Hayward. Latter is the songstress who's done so much disking with Teddy Wilson's swing orc for Brunswick, and she sells a pop in person just as well. But Allen, at the ivories, gives out keyboard manipulation like nobody's business, and tibbing in the best Waller-Armstrong manner, with a generous molar exhibition by both. Their version of 'This Is My Last Affair' is among their tops.

Dario and Diane, after 14 weeks at the Hotel Weylin, New York, during three of which they doubled into the Club Versailles and one (last week) into the New Montmartre, N. Y., are headed for a southern vacation before returning to the Rainbow Room in Radio City, Jan. 24.

Diane is already in Nassau, where her husband is managing a hotel, and Dario is motoring to Miami for a rest. He will leave his car south as D & D are slated for a Florida winter engagement after the Rainbow Room where they're set for four weeks.

Joe Moon and Melvin Pahl are handling duo-piano chores at Barbizon-Plaza in the cocktail lounge. Team also plays in Sunday Nights at Nine series at the hostelry.

Jack Mills has obtained the publication rights to the score of the Minsky production, 'Perfect 36,' which opens at the Million Dollar Pier, Miami, Jan. 24. Writers involved are Francis K. Shuman, Allan Roberts and Jules Lowman.

Bryson-Conney band, out of Farm, White Plains, now working Holland-American West Indies cruises.

Uptown Lowdown

Swing craze has hit the Kit Kat Club on 55th Street, N. Y. Both the Buck and Bubbles team and the Six Spirits of Rhythm swing out at this spot after their theatre work. Vocalist Edith Wilson plenty okay, backed by Bobby Hargrave's seven piece jamsters. This band, with a top sax section composed of Field, Smith and Paine, will bear watching. Smith on tenor is head-lined with Wheeler trumpeting, while rhythm section of Godley, Woods and Sinclair beat it out. Even 'Tiger Rag' sounds okay due to sax scoring. Payoff arrives when Buck and Bubbles do their stuff, backed by the Six Spirits, and accompanied by Hargrave's bunch who get so excited they can't keep still.

Air Waves

Airing from Newark, Tommy Dorsey's ork scored a bull's eye with a smart arrangement of 'Sugar Foot Stomp.' Sid Stoneburg, clarienetist, turns in some very fine work with Edith Wright on vocal one of the few okay hot canaries.

Isham Jones at last letting Pianist Howard Smith cut loose. Full solo on a well arranged version of 'Honeysuckle Rose' tops. Tenor Saxie Mansfield having a few off days lately, but Tom Macy and Russ Gennett coming through.

Joe Venuti, as guest-star on Crosby's Kraft hour, let the jitterbugs down by going sweet. Jimmy Dorsey is becoming a composer, laying aside the clarinet to feature his own alto work on these numbers. The Four Blackbirds, with the usual set-up of three men and a girl, vocalizing plenty okay, with the exception of the trumpet imitation which the Mills brothers still do better.

Swing Defined

For the jam-hams to puzzle over, a definition of swing. A band swings when its collective improvisation is rhythmically integrated. Leading jazz experts, John Hammond and Hughes Panassie, must at least half agree, since they each furnished two of the four important words. A dictionary is advised.

Waxings

On Victor, Benny Goodman's signature song, 'Goodbye,' has been released; a composition of the ace arranger, Gordon Jenkins, and a modernistic tune that should sell. Following this comes one of Ray Noble's rare swing discs, 'Dinah,' and 'Bugle Call Rag.' Bud Freeman, tenor with Noble, suggested the double-time rhythm on 'Dinah,' during his chorus, which should send the fans. The held over 'Bounding Rhythm' by Adrian's Tap Room Gang is Wingy Mannone's last minute opus, after Rollin had run out of titles. The band is Wingy's with Adrian playing bass-sax and vibraphone, Danbridge on vocal.

On Brunswick, Louis Prima's 'I've Got My Fingers Crossed,' and 'I'm Shooting High,' is poor. But Prima's trumpet playing has improved greatly. This band needs a little originality in arranging, and less unaccompanied solo work. The Putney Dandridge discs on Vocalion, entitled 'You Hit the Spot,' 'You Took My Breath Away,' 'No Other One,' and 'A Little Bit Independent,' are still among the tops but use too much commercial vocalizing. The personnel includes Macy, Cole, Clark, Moncur, and an unknown pianist.

On Decca, Louis Armstrong has connected with a surefire hit for swing fans entitled 'Old Man Mose.' Louis' vocal is outstanding. Riley-Farley reached a new low in 'Wabash Blues,' but redeemed themselves on 'Blue Clarinet Stomp,' Slatts Long turning in the crack clarinet work. Jimmy Lunceford's version of Ellington's 'Rhapsody Jr,' and 'Bird of Paradise' is competent but the compositions are choppy.

Downey Seeking Tighter Tax on Music in S. A.

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Plans to have United States methods of collecting music royalties in South America and also to increase such excises are under way, according to Wallace Downey, owner of the largest music publishing concern in Argentine and Brazil, who is now in Hollywood seeing studio music reps.

Downey, also rep of the Robbins, Berlin and Famous music companies in his land, wants mandatory rules forcing all public places to pay their share of the music tax. About 60% of the music consumed in S. A. is from American catalogs, but collection agencies are only able to collect for rights from radio stations and a few of the top casinos and theatres, he says.

There are more than 100 radio stations in Argentina, Brazil and Paraguay, but collections are only about 2% of what was anticipated when the societies put in a rule such as the one enforced by the American Society of Authors, Composers & Publishers, Downey says.

There is practically no regulation of theatre seat tax for music there, due to competition of American films with S. A. product.

Argentina and Brazil picture producers are increasing their output, according to Downey, and 14 companies made 36 films last year with an average negative cost of $40,000, U. S. coin. Unless these producers can be made to see the advantages in taxing theatres for music, American firms cannot impose one, he says.

KYSER'S LEAVE

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14.

Kay Kayser gets three weeks' leave of absence from William Penn hotel starting Wednesday (23) to fulfill flock of college one-nighters lined up for him by MCA. He'll be replaced here during that time by Art Kassell, coming on from Cincinnati.

Upon his return to William Penn the middle of February, Kyser will be set until summer at least.

Jack Hughes steps into the news broadcasting role at KFRC, San Francisco, replacing John Nesbit.

Fischer and New Casino Troupe Enroute to N. Y.

Paris, Jan. 14.

Clifford C. Fischer is sailing from here tomorrow (15) for New York with the new 'Folies de Femmes' revue for the French Casino on Broadway.

In New York he and Georgie Hale will line up an American chorus line for his local spot, the Ambassadeurs.

Also set for the new 'Folies de Femmes' show at the Broadway French Casino are Estelle and Le Roy, Cilly Feindt's horse act, 10 Argentine Ladies (accordions), Andree Lorraine (Miss Paris 1935) and the Jack Denny orchestra, holding over as the main combo. Vincent Travers from Philadelphia is the alternate combo in Carl Hoff's spot. Latter started on the Lucky Strike program last week, succeeding Al Goodman.

For the Miami French Casino, an alternate combo to Emerson Gill's orchestra is still being lined up. Gloria Gilbert from the 'Folies Bergeres' (first Casino revue) is being added to the show being sent south, replacing Marietta and Rudi, dancers, who are returning to Paris. Jack Lear and Carle Erbe will exploit the Florida venture and Monte Proser has been handed a new deal with a 60% upping in his contract.

Networks Ban Whiteman Using 'Rhapsody,' Although Warners OK It

Paine's Long Title

John G. Paine, of the Music Publishers Protective Association last week was elected chairman of the Council for the Co-Ordination of Industrial Co-Operation. Purpose of the council is to aid small industries and their employees in finding solutions for the problems of fair trade practices, stabilized employment, minimum rates of pay and hours of labor, government competition of private industry and modification of the anti-trust laws.

It was also put up to the council to determine what legislative action can be proposed for the simplification of business conduct in the United States and thereby give the small mercantilist a better break against his competitors.

Empire State Bldg. Denies Nitery Deal

Any deal for a nitery in the Empire State Building, New York, has been nixed by the management, which still wants to operate tallest building on a conservative policy. However, one thing they are interested in is installing a modern health center, with swimming pool and gymnastic facilities. Pool would be located in a floor below street level, with sun roof, courts, etc., on a top floor.

Reports have been around several times concerning the probability of an elaborate dine and dance spot being opened, but latest one circulated in past week was denied by the Empire State management.

2 Strikes

St. Louis, Jan. 14.

Andrew McKinney, trumpet player in the Ambassador theatre orchestra, filed suit for divorce from his wife, Marguerite, whom he had previously divorced and remarried. They met when he was playing in another house and she was member of stage ensemble.

After 10 years of married life, couple were divorced in April last year and remarried last November, separating for second time Dec. 10. McKinney charged his wife was 'quarrelsome and jealous.'

DeMarcos' Band

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Music Corporation of America is planning a setup with the DeMarco ballroom team similar to the dance band arrangement of Veloz and Yolanda, who carry their own orchestra directed by Shep Fields.

DeMarcos come into the Mayfair Room of the Blackstone next week and will be billed over the air as the DeMarcos and their orchestra directed by Al Kavelin.

While Warner Bros. is willing to permit Paul Whiteman to continue using George Gershwin's 'Rhapsody in Blue' as his theme song, the networks now refuse to okay it. Warners doesn't consider the 'Rhapsody' a pop song, but a musical work, and respects the affinity between the composer and the maestro in this particular effort.

Gershwin states that as time goes on and he, along with other composers, may find that they are deprived of a sufficient number of public performances, that a test case will have to result in order to interpret the 'small rights' to popular music. The songwriters claim a 50% ownership in these 'small rights,' along with the publisher, and hence, it is alleged, WB hasn't the legal right to 100% withhold their music from the networks.

Legit Angle

Gershwin, as a production (legit) composer, also argues that legit managers will enter the fray when realizing that the WB control of the music through their sundry music publishing subsidiaries (Harms, Inc., T. B. Harms Co., Witmarks, Remicks, et al.) also stifles the popularization assets of show tunes.

As regards 'Rhapsody,' Whiteman never paid a fee for its use, although others have paid from $10 and $15 per performance and up to $25 and $50. When Gershwin's 'An American in Paris' becomes a Radio City Music Hall production under Von Grona, for example, in two weeks, that constitutes a grand right and the Hall pays the composer a fee of $250 for the week's rights.

Gershwin is among the composers who only latterly are reserving all their rights for self-control. Victor Herbert alone had the vision and only because of a circumstance whereby he leased to Harms, Inc., the printing rights alone to his works. Harms wanted Herbert so badly (he had long been with Witmarks, which, incidentally, is likewise a WB subsid) that the composer was able to dictate stringent terms on some of his own works. Since then many a name composer has controlled all rights, but in the main the cream of the yesteryear operetta and musical comedy hits are under WB copyright control and, accordingly, restricted.

Inside Stuff—Music

Fats Waller presented a 'Swing musicale' last Thursday (9) at the Hotel Warwick, N. Y., playing many of his own compositions as examples of the new marked style of music. In between numbers, the keyboard manipulator answered questions. Twentieth Century-Fox sponsored the gathering, in conjunction with 'King of Burlesque' in which Waller is spotted.

Dr. William Grocz, composer of 'Isle of Capri' and 'Red Sails in the Sunset,' is an expatriated German, now settled in England. The tunesmith has Anglicized his name to Hugh Williams, reversing his Wilhelm Grocz, and translating the German Grocz (which means large or huge) into Hugh. 'Capri' and 'Red Sails' are significent in being wide international hits, attaining same popularity in America after being first issued in Great Britain.

Last year was parody season for 'You're the Top' out of 'Anything Goes'; this year it's 'The Music Goes Round and Round,' ranging from humorous embellishments to off-color comedy in the niteries.

One of those long embarrassing moments was experienced by the Smith-Siverson orchestra playing at the Collegiate club in the Masonic Temple, Rochester. Sax Smith arrived five minutes late with the announcement he couldn't find the music. He disappeared for another search, leaving Charles Siverson to pick numbers the 25-piece band could play from memory. It was nearly an hour before a number of orchestrations were found with which to finish the evening's program. Next day the missing music turned up at the Genesee Valley club, where it had been left by mistake after the orchestra played a New Year's party.

Eddie Cantor brought the WB-ASCAP situation out into the open in his last Sunday's broadcast by stating that at this point he would have done a song from his 'Strike Me Pink' filmusical opening at Radio City Music Hall Jan. 16, but that since it's restricted he'd do a song from a competitive musical picture, 'Collegiate.'

Par Building Booking Office to Include Partnership Houses; See 20 Weeks for Freeman-Kalcheim

Starting Feb. 7 with the acquisition of Loew's, Montreal, and Shea's Hippodrome, Toronto, Paramount puts into action its plan to bring all stage show theatres operated by partners and subsidiaries into its own Artists Booking Office in New York for their show buying. Addition of these theatres, which would give Par's booking office at least another 20 weeks in constant and now 'n' then playing time, would make ABO the top vaudeville booking office in the country.

Charles J. Freeman, who with Harry Kalcheim comprises the ABO's booking staff in N. Y., will buy the shows for Montreal and Canada. These theatres are operated by Famous Players-Canadian.

Till Feb. 7 the houses will continue being booked by Lawrence Golde, of the William Morris agency. There will be no change in policy when Freeman takes them over, Harry Anger continues as stager of the presentation shows in both Montreal and Toronto.

Par eventually expects to bring in every affiliated theatre using stage shows, even if only occasionally, into the ABO. This will also include the FP—Can houses now playing $150-a-day Cushman units, but that will not be accomplished until a setup is arranged in N. Y.

South and Midwest

Wilby-Kincey theatres in the south, Katz-Feld (indie) houses in the midwest and the Comerford houses in Pennsylvania are also expected to buy their shows through the ABO instead of booking through their own or outside buyers. Interstate in the southwest is already being booked by Freeman.

With negotiations with the other partners still in the talking stage, there's no exact estimate available the amount of playing time the ABO will add to its books, but 20 weeks is a conservative estimate, especially for units. Circuit figures that the ABO, with greater purchasing power, can get a better break on talent and salaries than the theatres can get individually and on the outside.

Toronto and Montreal have been using moderate-priced shows, garnished by a line of girls, scenery and costumes by Anger, who goes to Canada from New York weekly to stage the presentations. Shows were recently switched in Toronto from the Hipp to the Imperial, the FP-Can deluxer, but were returned to the Hipp a couple of weeks ago when the Imperial proved too large for that type of presentation.

4 PRODUCERS FRAME UNITS ON COAST

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.

Units to play the west are being readied here by Ben Irons of Wilbur Cushman productions of Dallas, Dwight Pebble from Chicago, Emil Glucksman, one-time RKO exec, and Charles Dalton, Coast producer.

Irons and Dalton are framing shows on short budgets, probably to stay within $1,000. Glucksman and Pebble outfits will budget around $2,000.

Glucksman unit, with Bert Gordon, Cliff Ball, Buddy Doyle and the Babe Eagan femme band of 12 pieces and line of 12 girls, is expected to be ready within two weeks. Bud Murray is staging. Unit is tentatively set to open at the Strand, Long Beach, with Jean Melkiejohn agenting.

Bowes' Am Act Repeats In Pitt., but Without Unit

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14.

Quick decision brought Major Bowes' Gold Medal Boys' band, in last week's amateur unit at the Stanley, back to Warners deluxer for second successive stanza to bolster current show. They are all local boys.

Gold Medalers were already packed to leave for Philadelphia to join another Bowes unit when Harry Kalmine, WB's zone manager, arranged to insert youngsters into presentation at last minute. As result, their Bowes' tour will begin week later.

George Jaffe to Try Vaude at Harris, Pitt.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14.

George Jaffe, veteran burlesque impresario, who recently disposed of his Variety to Izzy Hirst and Independent wheel, is set to make another stab at show business, but this time with vaude and pictures. He's just leased old Harris theatre on Diamond street and getting it into shape to open Feb. 1.

House, originally keystone of old Harris theatrical fortunes, was disposed of among other Harris holding to Warners back in 1929. Warners tried operating it for time, both with vaude and straight pictures, but no dice. Circuit closed it couple years ago and it's been shuttered since then.

Lukas Settles

Detroit, Jan. 14.

Paul Lukas settled for $75 last week a $500 damage suit brought against him by Jack Marvin, local actor, who claimed Lukas fired him the first day after hiring him at $75 per week to appear in Lukas' skit at the Michigan last week and in Cleveland this week.

Lukas declared that Marvin, who appeared on stage as a butler, 'forgot his two lines.'

REVELERS FOR PAR

The Revelers, radio quartet, go into vaude again.

Open for Paramount at the Metropolitan, Boston, week of Feb. 7.

Burns and Allen's unit plays Loew's State on Broadway the week of Jan. 24 in place of the proposed Sophie Tucker-Belle Baker combination show. Latter was cancelled when Miss Baker, now in Miami, claimed illness. Miss Tucker would not accept a postponement because of previous commitment to open at the Hollywood Country Club, Miami, Feb. 6.

B. & A. play Boston next week (17) prior to the State. They're due at the Paramount studio in Hollywood March 1, and won't accept any more eastern dates after the State, but may play San Francisco and Los Angeles in February. State salary will be $10,000 net.

At the Chicago, Chicago, last week the B. & A. unit grossed $50,100, which gave it a $1,500 share of the split figure, in addition to its $10,000 guarantee. Instead of pocketing the extra money, the name team spread it around the show, giving each of the supporting acts $100 extra. William Morris office, which books the show, relinquished its share of commissions on the extra money.

Besides Burns and Allen, unit's cast holds Ben Blue, Stone and Vernon, Cardini, Gene Marvey and Jack Renard.

English Vaude's Code of Honor, 'Please May I Steal Your Act?'

London, Jan. 5.

There seems to be a greater sense of comradeship between the local vaudevillians and the American importations.

Formerly, as soon as an act came with something new, acts flocked to the Palladium or Holborn Empire to study every bit of business. Result was a flock of duplicates, some better and some worse—mostly worse.

Nowadays, the would-be copyists actually call on the acts, introduce themselves, and ask to be allowed to 'copy' the act. Their alibi is generally that the act will be copped anyway, so they might as well be first in the field.

The Four Franks, for instance, have actually been approached by would-be stealers for the music that accompanies their comedy business. When told this was specially written, they expressed surprise that Papa Franks would not part with the music.

Another act came to Joe Jackson and told him they had his act down pat with the exception of the sliding shoes. Wanted to know where they could purchase a pair.

Walter 'Dare' Wahl, who was brought over as a special attraction for the Drury Lane theatre pantomime, 'Jack and the Beanstalk,' following everything on the bill, found to his dismay that some of his original bits had already been lifted by Douglas Wakefield and Billy Nelson, two local comics, and they were in the same pantomime, and doing his stuff ahead of him. Wahl had to change his act around a few minutes before going on, to protect himself.

Tops of the whole bunch is an English boy named Al Burnett. He went to America and has just returned. His tag line now is 'The Bad Boy from a Good Family,' which has been used by Phil Baker for a decade. His other bits are traceable to Lou Holtz, Ted Healy, Bob Hope, Ken Murray, and Milton Berle. Lad is getting a lot of work. With such a galaxy of material he should.

Newark Mosque Has Close Shave; Money Troubles

Money troubles threatened to stymie John L. McCurdy and Henry (NVA) Chesterfield's combination vaudeville-film-dancing policy try at the Mosque theatre-ballroom yesterday (Tuesday), with the house opening after schedule and Fanchon & Marco's booking office notifying the management that the new bill slated to open today (Wednesday) will not be delivered unless at least half a week's salary for all the acts is put up in the advance. Yesterday evening, at last reports, the operators were endeavoring to obtain additional financial backing in order to keep the project going.

Yesterday's first show was delayed until 3 p.m., at which time the doors were opened with the union crew in the pit and backstage, along with the vaudeville acts and the Tom Dorsey band in the ballroom agreeing to take their chances on the final day's gross. House had managed to pay off almost in full up to Monday night (13).

Acts on the show, headlined by Estelle Taylor, and all booked by F. & M. with exception of the headliner, were Sid Marion and Olive Sibley, Keith Clarke, Pat Henning, and Variety Gambols (7). Roger Wolfe Kahn's band was to have opened in the ballroom today.

Mosque opened Christmas Day with its stage shows and independent films, plus the free hoofing at 40c. top, later raised to 55c. It had a profitable $18,000 first week, but fell off thereafter.

Pending adjustment by McCurdy and Chesterfield one way or the other, the Prudential Life Insurance Co., which controls the house, is letting the occupants stay rent-free, from accounts.

Hostesses Out

Buffalo, Jan. 14.

A ban against hostesses in Erie County restaurants was issued by the Erie County ABC Board this week.

Berlin Here, Lauds 'Music Goes Round'

Dubbing 'The Music Goes Round and Round' as the inspirational song of the era, a natural, and a personal one, Irving Berlin passed in Chicago to do honor to Red Hodgson, the author-star. Berlin arrived from New York, where he wrote the music for the Music Box Revue that left on the Chief to view the premiere of Hodgson's show.

RKO Staging $11,000 'Sketchbook' Unit, Paying Carroll $2,250 Weekly Royalty

RKO last week bought the rights to Earl Carroll's 'Sketchbook,' which lasted six months on Broadway last year, and is practically producing a condensed version of the revue for a guaranteed two weeks and options for 10 more in its own theatres. Circuit's booking office is reported paying Carroll $2,250 for each week it used 'Sketchbook,' the money going for the rights to the title, material, songs, costumes and scenery.

RKO will charge the $2,250 against the show in each theatre it plays, taking it out of the $10,000 to $11,000 net 'Sketchbook' will cost each house. Theatres will also have to pay the Simon Agency, which agented the deal, its 5% commission.

Condensed 'Sketchbook,' with Ken Murray topping a cast of around 40 people, opens at Keith's, Boston, tomorrow (Thursday) and then goes to the Palace, Cleveland. Show was the idea of Charles Koerner, RKO's New England divisional manager. Besides Murray, cast includes Milton Charleston, Sybil Bowman, Sassafras, Dale Winthrop, Betty Brite, and 25 girls.

Besides 'Sketchbook,' RKO last week also set Carroll's 'Vanities,' but this is a direct buy as a Carroll production at $10,000 net. Opens at Milton Feld's Indiana, Indianapolis, Friday (17), then goes to RKO's Downtown, Detroit, Jan. 24. Will get further time from the circuit in the midwest, including Akron and Youngstown.

This show contains 50 people, with Billy House, Buster West and Lucille Page as toppers. There's 28 girls with this condensed version, 'Vanities' playing its last date as a full-size revue at the Cass, Detroit, where it wound up a two weeks' stay Saturday (11).

Another outside attraction set by RKO is the floor show out of the Mayfair Casino, Cleveland, which opens at the Palace in that town Friday (17), and Eddie Duchin's orchestra, which opens June 4 in Boston and then plays Cleveland, Chicago and Detroit.

Mayfair show, without names, is getting $5,500 net, while Duchin will get $8,500 net weekly. Simon office also set these deals.

'Sketchbook' will be RKO's first unit production effort for its own theatres in about four years.

Kemp's Ork to Follow Casa Loma at Par, N. Y.

Hal Kemp's orchestra and the Yacht Club Boys have been booked for the Paramount, N. Y., to open either Friday (17), or Jan. 24 with 'Collegiate' (Par). Opening date depends on whether 'Rose of Rancho,' current, will be held an extra week. Kempt-Yacht Club Boys show goes in at $3,000.

Also booked for the Par for some date in March is Fred Waring's orchestra. Figure is reported $10,000 instead of the $12,500 originally asked by Waring last fall when house was planning to go into a stage show policy.

Kavanaugh in 'Follies,' His Contract Settled

Stan Kavanaugh, comedy juggler who had accepted a two week settlement from the Schuberts on an unfulfilled run-of-play contract in an unnamed musical this season, now has agreed to drop the matter to go into 'the Shuberts' 'Ziegfeld Follies.'

Kavanaugh, who's currently at the Fox, Detroit, joins 'Follies' in Philadelphia Friday (17). Revue opened there yesterday (Tuesday). Settlement was effected by I. Robert Broder, attorney for Kavanaugh, after the latter demanded that the contract be fulfilled.

Harry Carroll Stricken

Harry Carroll was rushed to Mt. Sinai hospital, N. Y., last week, suffering from a ruptured bladder. He was reported Monday (13) to be resting comfortably.

He had been working on the new tunes for the Palladium (old Casino de Paree) vaude-nitery show, N. Y., when stricken. His collaborator, Mitchell Parrish, completed the lyrics.

NON-BOWES AM BOBS UP AS PRO

Detroit, Jan. 14.

Jack Baker, nee Jimmy O'Day, professional radio singer, was yanked after the second performance of his opening date at the Michigan Theatre last week-end with Bowes Unit Number Four. Major Bowes was quoted as 'distressed' that any member of one of his units should be discovered by the world at large not to be an amateur. Matter received prominent space in two local newspapers, the Times and the News.

Following the gesture of yanking Baker from association with simon pures he returned the next day appearing at the Michigan as a singer with the orchestra but segregated from the children of destiny discovered by Major Bowes.

Under his original billing as Jimmy O'Day the singer appeared on WJBK and was sponsored by Kroger Grocery.

Fan Dance Ruckus Nixes Minn.'s Entire WPA Relief Project

Minneapolis, Jan. 14.

Because of the Ruby Bae incident and the 'unfavorable publicity' resulting from it, the WPA has decided to drop the entire Minnesota Federal theatre project No. 1.

The trouble commenced with the engagement for one of the CCC camp shows of Miss Bae, fan dancer, whose performance had caused a raid on a local nitery a short time ago. In the CCC show she was to have done her 'fan dance' wearing a full-length gown.

Along with WPA's announcement of the show's project's abandonment came the resignation of Prof. A. Dale Riley, of the U. of M.'s dramatic department, as state administrator of the relief theatre setup. WPA officials said that people already engaged and organized into road units will be transferred to other federal work.

Shilling Case Postponed

Trial of Bill Shilling, New York agent, on charges of operating an unlicensed employment agency, was again postponed in Special Sessions last Thursday (9). New date is Jan. 30.

Shilling matter will probably not come up in court until the new licensing legislation agreed upon by the agents' associations and Commissioner Paul Moss is passed upon by the city's Board of Aldermen.

Penner Unit Asks $9,000

Joe Penner, whose last vaude salary solo was $10,000 plus a percentage, is being offered in a unit to the booking offices in New York at $9,000 net. Penner is currently on the Coast, under contract to Paramount.

No stage bookings for the unit have been set so far.

$150-DAY UNITS AND WHAT JUMPS

Actors Double in Brass, Pump Tires and Drive the Truck—5 Nights Out of 13 In Bed — It Takes Nerve

$60 HEADLINERS

By Barney Oldfield

Lincoln, Jan. 14.

New hinterland vaudeville, the unit variety, has taken over this town as one of its key spots. Five years ago Lincoln was among the last of the two-a-day stands; today it is sometimes a last stand. Five years ago the weekly stage show scale was in the neighborhood of $2,300; today it's about $220 a day. Normally a three-day stop, the Orpheum here is now the focal point of units venturing west across the Mississippi, and the price for 18 to 22 people is $135 per day net.

Once considered a breach of etiquette and a bad rep to have draws on the b.o. before the date was finished were uncommon. Now it's almost common practice for the unit manager to wire ahead for money to get him out of the town he's in, in order to make the next date. Once, too, an act would beef at the thought of more than 200 miles in one jump, but today it's a relief anywhere under 500 miles. Once by pullman, they now draw straws to see who has to drive the truck. One guy in each car is assigned to keep a sleepy eye on the road map and lay the course.

Those unit managers who are striving to make money plan their shows with a salary list of between $90 and $100 daily. Sold by the booking office for $150. But $15 commish is deducted, leaving him between $35 and $45 to put in his pocket in lieu of future percentage dates and to keep gas, oil and tires upon three to five cars used in transporting the opus. Some managers pay the salary for every day played, whether the date is percentage or not, but they are the exception. Usually the acts take their losses, too.

Although towns booked on the circuit may be close together, the route is seldom played that way. Jumps are from the farthest town to the farthest town, sometimes with a day off, but frequently overnight to a 2:30 p. m. mat, a one-day stand, whence the process is repeated when night comes again. For this reason hotel bills are seldom figured as much expense. A picture of this is seen in a unit manager's statement here recently that he'd been out

Commercial Bally Shows Open Big Outlet for Acts and Bands; Long Routes, but Short Jumps

Chicago, Jan. 14.

As ad bally goes more and more show biz, performers are finding themselves suddenly with longer routes than they've known in years. Several nite club units on tour under liquor company sponsorship have put in more than a year of consecutive work; several units for commercial and mercantile organizations have been out for six and seven months.

It's a sure envelope every week whether or not the show itself makes money since the commercial bally pays the bills, easy jumps within the distribution area of the company and, what's most important, a long route.

Latest company going for this type of commercial ad bally is Ford, which has swung over in a large way to show biz since that company got its feet wet in the radio end of the profesh. Firm has now signatured Jose Manzanares and South American band for a long tour of the Ford key cities.

By the Year

Besides hitting the ether each week for a 30-minute plug every Sunday, the band will be on exhibition at Ford showrooms in the key centers of the country. Orchestra is now playing the Ford showrooms in the Drake hotel and is routed for a consecutive tour of four months already. Orchestra members all belong to the Los Angeles Musicians Union.

Other companies which have recently jumped into this field of show biz are Standard Oil of New York, Standard Oil of Indiana, Atlantic & Pacific Tea Stores, Hormel Packing, Green River Beverage, Schenley's Liquor Company, Marshall Field & Co. Schenley's went on the nut in a big way for a 'Night of Champions' show at the Coliseum here, even bringing in fistic chief James J. Braddock to make an appearance. In this show Schenley's made its appeal strictly to the male element of the population, but is now readying a new theatrical enterprise which will grab off the femme audience.

Ad bally of this sort has crept into the regular legit, vaude and pictures with much pro and con comment. 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) drew plenty of adverse comment in Chicago and around the midwest because of its long flash for Conoco gasoline in a scene at a gas station. Both Schenley's and Pabst beer have worked out tie-ins for plugs in two legit shows.

And as far as vaude is concerned it's become the rare radio entertainer who fails to mention the sponsor when making a personal appearance. Ben Bernie had a huge picture of a can of Pabst Malt as his backdrop when playing here; Burns & Allen mention Campbell's Soup on their personal appearance dates in theatres. Even radio stations have gone for this type of stage bally, the latest in this territory being radio station WBBM, which is backing, with plugging on its transmitter, a vaude unit tagged 'Around the Town With WBBM.'

That Vode Touch

With the cruise biz now an integral part of variety booking, George Beatty reports the Mauretania is changing to a split-week.

MOSS MYSTERY AGENT CONFAB

Three agents whose names Licenso Commissioner Paul Moss would not divulge, late last week discussed with him the proposed new legislation for licensing of all New York's theatrical reps. Report is that they objected to licensing as employment agencies under any kind of a law, old or new.

According to Moss, opinions of the three agents on the matter were mixed. Moss asked them to study the proposed legislation further and see him again after they've given the matter more thought. The Commissioner added that all three reps were at the meeting a couple of months ago of the Loew, RKO and Independent agents' associations when the new law was okayed for submission to the N. Y. Board of Aldermen.

New legislation was proposed by Moss after the agents, as a body, claimed that they would not accept licensing without court battles under the existing General Business Law. Separate statute for agents only is scheduled to go before the Aldermen in a few weeks.

WARFIELD DROPS SHOWS AND 60 EMPLOYEES

San Francisco, Jan. 14.

Between 60 and 70 people, representing stagehands, musicians, performers, ushers, etc., will be clipped from the Warfield theatre payroll Thursday (16) when the house drops stage shows for a straight picture policy.

Theatre has been the No. 1 stage show house on the Coast, consistently playing the most expensive talent available.

Rumored RKO Booking Office Changes Denied by Blumberg; Up to Swope

Reports of an impending shakeup in personnel of the RKO vaudeville booking office were spiked yesterday (Monday) by Nate Blumberg who, in the absence of Major Leslie Thompson, who is ill, declared that no changes are contemplated. It had been reported that the present RKO booking staff, consisting of Bill Howard and Danny Freundlich, would be changed, along with the bringing in of an outsider to head the department.

The rumors were to the effect that the new RKO president, Leo Spitz, had ordered the booking office reorganization. According to Blumberg, any changes would not be up to Spitz, but up to Herbert Bayard Swope, who, as chairman of the board of Keith-Albee-Orpheum, is the top executive over the booking office, which is a K-A-O subsidiary on Coast.

Hilton Sis. Find Selves In Red, Quit $135 Dates

Lincoln, Jan. 14.

Hilton Sisters (Siamese) Revue, 20-people unit, cancelled its Wilbur Cushman circuit bookings, as all units on that time net is $135 per day.

Show had a home-office, company manager and advance man, result being that there was no money left for the talent.

COWAN'S BOWES O. O.

Rubey Cowan of NBC'c artist bureau left for the Coast Sunday (12).

Trip is chiefly to straighten out bookings of Bowes' amateur units

Howard on Unit Hunt

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Bill Howard, RKO eastern vaude booker, dropped into town on one of his periodical ut.it-ogling visits.

Took a gander at the Veloz and Yolanda unit at the Chicago 'Cocoanut Grove Revels,' and stopped off in Dayton for a look at 'Bring on the Dames.'

ROBOT BOOKED

The Robot turn brought over from England recently by parties outside of show business as a possible attraction on this side, opens at the Mosque, Newark, today (Wednesday) for six days.

It's the automaton's first regular vaude date on this side.

NEW ACTS

RED HODGSON
Comedy Singing
8 Mins.; One
Chicago, Chicago

Cinch attraction right now, from the angle of the click of Hodgson's novelty tune, 'Music Goes 'Round and Around.' Hodgson as a personal appearance magnet is as big as the song, as was evidenced by his reception on the mere mention of the song here and the way he brought a flat halt to the show after he had concluded his act.

Hodgson is a performer wise to the audience, having had plenty of experience in vaude and with the Earl Burtnett orchestra. Holding his act to five minutes here, he delivered five minutes of good comedy. He enters and goes right into the song, but is stopped by the orchestra leader, who tells him to stand aside while the band plays the tune. Leader gives him an orange, which he tears apart and stuffs into his mouth, rind and all. When his mouth is stuffed, the orchestra leader asked him to go into his song.

Hodgson gets rid of the orange without being particularly noticeable, and then, with a French horn, sings 'Music' with appropriate explanatory gestures. Ties up the show, and then into an encore with the audience asked to join in.

Gold.

RAY, PRINCE & CLARK
Songs, Cimedy, Dancing
14 mins.; One
G. O. H., N. Y.

Three lads, dressed in tails, go through a routine of songs, burlesques, tapping and ad-libbing of the type prevalent in the smaller 52nd St. nighteries.

Open with the ad-libbing, which is faintly reminiscent of the innocuous pleasantries of the erstwhile 'Three Doctors' of radio. Thence they wander into a burlesque of a trinle-header fan dance (with pieces of newspapers for fans) which represents the best laugh-getter of the lot. Conclude with 'Music Goes Round and Round' and a deal of so-so tapping.

Material only mildly effective, but the lads make a good attempt at selling what they have to sell. Running time pretty long and the act needs tightening.

Spotted here in the trey.

ELTON RICH REVELS (5)
Dancing
10 mins.; Full
G. O. H., N. Y.

Opens straight but into comedy after the preliminary motions. Timing fair, and the burlesque, making a passable bid for laughs, holds things together via a madcap pace. Spotted here as closer but would serve equally well at either end of a bill.

Ensemble is composed of three lads, attired in tails, plus two blondes. After taking the stage with a routine tap number, two of the boys and the smaller of the blondes proceed into a caricature of an adagio dance. This number starts out slowly, but gradually evolves into such strenuous clowning that a dummy has to be inserted for the blonde. A dizzy series of cartwheels by the other blonde paves the way for this portion of the routine.

Fourth lad tops it off with a short acrobatic tap which is woven around one showy contorlion trick.

BILLY AMES
Imitations
8 mins.; One
G. O. H., N. Y.

Ames' takeoffs, numbering half a dozen, are of well known radio characters—Winchell, Father Coughlin, Roy Atwell, Al Smith and Durante. Delivers them through a mike, imitating only the voice in the first four instances. In the case of Smith and Durante he adds makeup to complete the characterization.

Material appears to be fairly authentic excerpts from the speeches, scripts, etc., of the personnages in question. Rattles this stuff off with fidelity. Good reception here. Fails to build himself up between numbers, however, the chatter being a bit saggy in these spots.

Spotted in the deuce on a four-part bill at this 23rd St. house.

ALLEN, EDWARDS AND REIS
Comedy, Dancing
12 Mins.; One
G. O. H., N. Y.

Mixed trio in one of those chattery acts that starts off like water dripping from a faucet, but picks up momentum before allotted time expires. Lyrics of a comedy song put it over, not the singing of male duo.

In the dancing department everything is soft shoe, and not too impressive, although smooth. Highlight is interpolation of a 'strange interlude' sequence wherein the trio act their thoughts, which culminates in rough house tactics all around. Got some laughs and a heavy hand when departing.

CHRYSIS DE LA GRANGE
Aerialist
10 Mins.
Fox, Detroit

Put into the Fox, which has a very high ceiling, by MCA as a test, this sturdy Parisian lass proves she can stand four-a-day on the ropes and still give her best.

Climbing a rope hanging out over pit, she cuts numerous 'impossible' capers, hanging from both foot and hand, and ending with a whirl. Ascends fully clothed and strips to tights.

Not billed in house's ads, but given big play by local critics.

JIM WONG TROUPE (5)
Acrobatic
8 Mins.; Three
G. O. H., N. Y.

This collection of pretzel-bending Orientals display remarkable physical elasticity. Their nimbleness and wiry strength leaves audience gasping. Each is a No. 1 twister. Feats seen are by no mean banal.

Outstander is a tap dance by one boy standing on a single gam with its mate wrapped around his back. Contortions during plate twirling on bamboo rods are also neatly executed.

Unit Review

FADS AND FANCIES
(ORPHEUM, LINCOLN)
Lincoln, Jan. 10.

Nowhere on the Wilbur Cushman time is there a man who can make a good girl show with as few femmes as can Ed Gardner. 'Fads and Fancies' is his No. 2 opus, better than his 'Sirens in Satin.' His 'Passing Parade' is soon to come in here and a fourth is in process of formation at this time. In 'Fads' Gardner has the best set of dolls seen yet in this grade of unit, and there's a string of novelty turns to round it out for any audience.

Wardrobe is good, likewise the musical background, Jimmy Read's 42d Streeters. Sets are okay. Though carrying only five girls, 'Fads' stretches them out. There isn't a chorus routine in the entire layout. Introduction is via dance specialties; Jeanne Dore, a Spanish number; Cleo Coree, on toe; Myla Carroll, hula; and Dean and Dale, who are hot on trumpet and sax, and do a little flash terp. All this happens with Read fronting the band and changing instruments and pace alike to new femme entrants.

First novelty turn is the Gabby Bros., who juggle. Start with a series of hat tricks and to the inevitable Indian clubs, which they wield in fine fashion. Dean and Dale in their musical sequence and Myla Carroll, in a near nude veil flutter, are repeats, then emsee Tommy Seymour sings for some laughs.

Miss Coree, snappy acrobatic dancer, is strong in the next spot, her stunts showing finish and grace. Then a band number which features Read at the electric guitar, a musical innovation which should be a strong punch for this time. Got a fine hand on it here. The best of the novelties on the 'Fads' routine is Harry Sykes, cyclist. He is a semi-comic peddler, with some difficult work. Rated the mitts, and clears the way for Jeanne Dore in a hot-cha step or two. She's a comely brunet with plenty of sparkle.

Tom Gabby of the brothers brings out a pup for a few tricks, all good, and the headline act, South and Bell, blackface, is one of the few of its kind to make an impression here in the past two seasons. Gags went over and the applause was good. Several bits of material blue. Normal act in this spot is Murdock and Mayo, out because the former threw a muscle in his leg. Is to go back in after this date.

'Fads' is a first rank unit on this circuit. At any rate, if the billboards say 'beauties' they won't be lying, which is something to think about when exploiting.

Timed at barely short of 50 minutes. Barney.

15 YEARS AGO
(From VARIETY and Clipper)

Olympic, down on 14th street, revived Amateur Night and helped biz. Pro-amateurs in those days, too.

Comparison of theatre costs over 1918-'19 showed a big up in two years. Railroad fares were up 70% and costumes 250 to 300%. Salary increases from 55 to 250% and trucking cost three times as much as two years before. Extra stage hands up from $1.25 night to $3.50 out on the road and everything else in proportion.

George Tyler offered to guarantee $100,000 gross on a production of 'Erminie' with Francis Wilson and De Wolf Hopper.

Shuberts finally decided to lay off vaudeville, at least for a time. Loaded up with heavy contracts and looking for an out.

Dime museum was netting $2,000 a week in Phila., but it didn't hold the pace. In the old Bingham hotel building.

Loew theatre in Nashville permitted the public backstage during performances. Commercial hook-up with a store.

Sells Floto show passed from ownership of Denver Post owners up to Muggivan-Ballard interests. Tammen & Bonfils were tired of show biz.

Acts were playing the Keith time without definite salary until value of act could be appraised. If one rated more pay it got the arrearage.

Yiddish stage was in a slump with only about one fourth of the actors working.

Vaudeville Managers Protective Association issuing labels for theatrical baggage. To insure special attention from the railroads. Baggage smashers didn't believe in signs.

Picture producers announced 'real plays' would supplant the 'mush' to which the public was objecting.

Famous Players opened its Long Island studios. Carried a $650,000 mortgage.

Famous Players in a reciprocal agreement with UFA following sensational success of 'Passion.' Never very important.

Clipper reported 163 shows in N. Y. in 1920. Of these 115 were dramas and 59 were comedy or farce. There were 24 musicals. In all about $5,000,000 had been invested. 50 of the total were flops.

50 YEARS AGO
(From Clipper)

James Owen O'Connor, who sometimes played Shakespeare behind a net, was starting out. Advertised he paid half salary during rehearsal. Took half his ad space to reproduce a letter telling him the mantle of the late John McCullough had fallen on his shoulders. It didn't fit.

Blondin, the ropewalker, advertised from London for a backer for a farewell American tour. Using his own name of Jean Francois Gravelet.

In London, Can., the local manager was pinched for distributing allegedly indecent picture cards for a variety show. Merchants who displayed posters also received summonses.

Man suing the Lyceum, Chicago, wanted $10,000 because they ran him to the police station when he kicked at not being given the reserved seat he had purchased.

Modjeska opened at the Star to a big welcome, but they did not care for her leading man, E. H. Vanderfelt, specially imported from England.

Musical Union in N. Y. wanted to fire Theodore Thomas and his orchestra of 60 because he had a foreign oboist. He and his band had previously been fined on the same account.

Jack Dempsey (the original fighter of that name,) joined the ranks of statue posers. Headlining in the museums.

Dramatic co. was building business with giveaways. Holders of downstair seats had a chance to get a gold watch or a pair of diamond earrings. Balcony people had a silver watch hung up. Nothing for the gallery.

Washington, Ark., opened a new 400 seat theatre. Railroads ran excursions at one-fourth the regular rates. The manager, who also ran the chief saloon, fed the audience of 450 after the show and welcomed the company on its arrival with a brass band. Regular red letter affair.

Boston dime museum gagged that its lioness was sick and being treated by a vet. Made an act of the daily administration of the medicine. Drew crowds.

Denman Thompson was readying his 'The Old Homestead.' To open before the season ended f. a tryout.

Equity Members Form 90% of WPA Theatre Payroll; Drive to Force Amateurs, Non-Professionals, Out

One finding of the reclassification board which is checking up on professionals in the Works Progress Administration's theatre project in New York is that 90% of the legits on the payroll are, or were, members of Equity. Balance are being investigated, but the indications are that few are incorrectly in the casts of relief shows.

Equity, which did much of the preliminary work culminating in governmental aid through the WPA set-up, takes the position that the federal theatre project should engage only players of experience in the relief shows. Association is backed by the administrators, who on various occasions have pointed out that the project is intended for professionals only, and not for amateurs. It is likely that junior players, those with less than two years' experience, will be removed from the projects' shows, although not necessarily dropped from the payroll. They are to be placed with other WPA projects.

Of the 2,[illegible] people in the New York theatre project's payroll about 1,000 are vaudevillians and some of the latter are in legit casts. Recently several applications for membership in Equity from persons who, it was felt, aimed to get jobs in the federal relief shows, were rejected. These

New Haven Starts

New Haven, Jan. 14.

WPA theatre project is slated to get underway here at the Lincoln next week. Preliminary activities have already started under direction of Gertrude Dondero, supervisor for the state.

Auditions for applicants were held today (14), audition board being Alexander Dean, Yale Drama School, Day Tuttle, director of Mt. Kisco summer players and Julia Tuthill, Hartford Times drama ed.

Walter Bradley Klavun, Mary Hone and Charles Atkin, members of the Theatre of Eleven, Inc., stock group operators of the Lincoln prior to subsidization by WPA, are being held over for the new setup.

Herb Munson Heads Troupers on Coast

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Herbert Munson has been elected prez of the Troupers' Club. Other officers are: Beatrice Wood, vice-president; Adabelle Driver, secretary; Louise DeVarney, treasurer, and Ed Kimball, chaplain.

Members of the board of directors are Charles French, Lydia Knott, Truly Shattuck, Betty Young, Charles Schaffer, Charles Thurston and Rose Murphy. L. E. Behymer was voted grand trouper and Cora Shattuck was appointed publicity head.

Troupers reported gain in funds of $1,365 over last year.

Epsteins Revising 'Stars' For Theatre Guild Prod.

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Julius J. and Phil Epstein left here by plane yesterday (Mon.) for New York to work with Theresa Helburn of the Theatre Guild on revisions of their play 'And Stars Remain,' which the Guild has optioned.

Julius is on a leave of absence from Warners, while Phil has just completed 'Don't Bet on Love' for Radio.

Reading Budget

Reading, Jan. 14.

A federal allotment of $41,129.66 to employ 73 unemployed actors has been granted this city by the Works Progress Administration. Working under Jasper Deeter, of the Hedgerow Players, in suburban theatre near Philadelphia, the Reading-Berks project is being directed by H. A. Archibald.

Shows will be presented in various city and county theatres under auspices of federal recreational and educational organizations.

'Professionals Only'

Fort Wayne, Jan. 14.

Bessie Baldwin, legit actress of 20 years back, who's been handling WPA dramatic activities in Allen County for the past month, will get an assistant. New worker will teach English, as many adults who turn up for Miss Baldwin's sessions can't speak the language yet.

WPA Road Tours Okayed; $3 a Day Expense Grant

Washington has opened the way for the touring of relief shows under the Works Progress Administration theatre project, okaying the allowance of $3 per day expenses to players, in addition to $103.40 per month wages. Allowance money ruling is likely to revive Eddie Dowling's plan to tour musicals, comedies and vaudeville shows, which has lain dormant for several months.

Although the touring end will be administered by the New York regional office, Hallie Flanagan, federal project's head, will be in charge of the first show sent out. It is a biographical play about Jefferson Davis and will be toured through the South.

Claimed that if the tour is successful other plays will be toured out of Chicago and Los Angeles.

The Davis piece is stated to have been written by the suggestion of John McGee, who authored a book on Davis and who is a little theatre director. First stand out for the show is Chapel Hill, N. C., a center for the little theatre movement.

Dowling was expected to confer with Mrs. Flanagan early this week with the idea of getting his project started. Understood she was opposed to the Dowling plan until the $3 per day allowance was ruled on, it being figured that actors would not be able to support themselves on the road without expense money.

It was announced this week by the WPA theatre project in New York that four plays had been selected to be presented around a circuit of Long Island and Westchester towns by relief units. Plays are: 'The Old Maid,' 'Valley Forge,' 'Criminal at Large' and 'Post Road.'

ANDREWS TO HANDLE WPA'S ADMISH COIN

Lyle D. Andrews has been engaged to handle the receipts from admissions to the WPA theatre project shows, due to get started in New York within two weeks. Post has been given the title of 'agent-cashier.' Andrews will supervise the box offices of the four WPA-leased theatres within the show zone. He was formerly owner-operator of the Vanderbilt theatre, also producing some shows.

For some of the WPA relief shows there will be reserved seat sections. There will also be scrip and other types of tickets used.

Albuquerque Little Theatre on WPA Coin

Albuquerque, N. M., Jan. 14.

After much wailing and gnashing of teeth, approval of a Little Theatre building with WPA funds has been secured and construction on a 640-seat house started here.

Since it was started five years ago by Kathryn Kennedy O'Connor and Irene Fisher, a group has been plugging for the house. Outfit has presented 27 plays since its start, rehearsing all night at times in the Kimo Theatre after film performances. House will be of mission style architecture.

6 SHOWS OUT

Six Broadway shows are definitely on the exit list, including two of last week's arrivals. 'Porgy and Bess,' colored cast musical, withdraws from the Alvin next Saturday. It did not earn back its production outlay, but the Theatre Guild is expectant of turning a profit with road dates. 'Porgy' is in its 15th week.

'PORGY AND BESS'

Opened Oct. 10, 1935. No show in recent years received such coverage as the George Gershwin operetta got from the daily dramatic and music critics. Nearly all the notices were raves as fulsome as the coverage. Gabriel (American) said it was 'a delightful libretto, an opera abundant of lovelinsse, picturesqunesc, pathos, humor, charm,' Anderson (Journal), though seeing the production as 'brilliant,' said, however, 'I found two-thirds of it mi dull.'

Variety (Abel) said: 'Besides being highly significant contribution to the American theatre, it is also box office.'

'Tapestry in Gray' will fold at the Shubert Thursday (16), at which time it will have played three weeks. Production for drama was costly and show ends in deep red.

'TAPESTRY IN GRAY'

Opened Dec. 27, 1935. With the exception of one, Lockridge (Sun), all the first-stringers nixed Martin Flavin's latest. Hammond (Tribune) said the 'whole thing seemed to me to be a waste of author, actors, scenery and audience.'

Variety (Kauf) said: 'Sort of dummy play—never anything more than puppets strutting the stage.'

'O Evening Star' was withdrawn from the Empire last Saturday after playing four days. Drew weak press. Also a costly production which drew weak notices.

'O EVENING STAR'

Opened Jan. 8, 1936. Opinions were mixed on this one, but the assenting votes were not strong. Those in favor placed the chances of Zoe Akins' drama on Marie Dressler strictly on possible femme matinee trade. Those who voted 'nay,' however, did so politely.

Speaking of the central character, Anderson (Journal) claimed 'it should be a grand and heartrending story and it is a pity that Miss Akins hasn't written it.'

'Truly Valiant' failed to relight after the opening performance at the 49th Street last Thursday (9). It was heavily panned.

'TRULY VALIANT'

Opened Jan. 9, 1936. Emulating the early season's 'Satellite,' 'Truly Valiant' gave up after its premiere performance. First-stringers' pans were most caustic, Atkinson (Times) saying 'the actors were the most valiant sufferers in the house.'

Gabriel (American) said it was 'among the season's worst.'

'The Taming of the Shrew' will go to the road from the Guild after this week for several dates. Business was excellent throughout the 16-week engagement and could have stayed longer. Averaged $17,000 weekly most of the way.

'Ghosts' will leave the Morosco for the road Saturday. Revival won high praise when recently arriving at the Empire. Played five weeks in all, which was more than originally planned.

Inside Stuff—Legit

Margaret Perry and Burgess (Buzz) Meredith, married last Friday (10), met but recently, although both have been in legit for seasons. Groom attended the marriage of Margalo Gillmore to Robert Ross early in November and was introduced to Miss Perry at the home of Laurence Riley ('Personal Appearance'). Honeymoon will be delayed because Meredith is in 'Winterset,' Beck, N. Y. Miss Perry attracted attention when she jumped into the lead of 'Strictly Dishonorable' which her mother, Antoinette Perry, staged. That was a few seasons ago. Last year she was in 'Ceiling Zero'.

The Chicago showing of 'Squaring the Circle,' a quick flop there, was backed by Dr. Adolph Raboff, New York dentist. He secured the show with Dmitri Ostrov, its stager, on a royalty basis from Edmunds, Inc., which produced it on Broadway. Latter group includes Julius Stone, who is operating the Lyceum, Spencer Bettleheim and Otto Diehl, who are on the staff of the Music Box.

Proposed to recast 'Circle' with people selected from the Chicago and New York companies and send it on tour.

Withdrawal of Hilda Spong from 'One Good Year', Fulton, N. Y., came after she expressed dislike over lines recently added to script. She refused to handle the new dialog and handed in her notice.

Miss Spong conducts a dramatic school in the midtown district.

Letter from Bill O'Donnell to Phil Guyran, manager of the late Leo Newman's ticket agency on Broadway, has been framed and hung on the wall. It expresses his regard for Newman in ticket men's jargon.

Leontine Sagan, who has directed a number of plays in London, was brought over here by Harry Moses to direct 'O Evening Star' which opened and closed at the Empire, N. Y., last week. Miss Sagan was recommended by Zoe Atkins, 'Star's' author.

Miss Sagan staged 'Maedchen in Uniform' (play) in London, and as a picture in Germany. She also directed 'Vicky,' but did not see this London premiere because of sailing for the Adkins play.

Baltimore, where Ed Wynn premieres his first production in which he is not cast, 'Light Behind the Shadow,' at Ford's week of Jan. 20, is having its first taste of a show using teaser advance ballyhoo in years. Charley Washburn has plastered town with one-sheets using Ed Wynn's name, but with no title or theatre mention.

Teasers spotted over town five days before newspaper ads appeared.

Laurence Schwab has returned to Miami Beach and will remain there until April. He is then due in St. Louis to prepare for his second season there as director of the Municipal Light Opera season. Richard Berger will again be Schwab's aide.

Charles Bochert, who agented 'Sketch Book' during its fall engagement at the Winter Garden and Majestic, N. Y., was bitten on the finger by John Shubert's dog about the time the revue folded mid-December. Infection imperilled his right arm and he was not discharged by doctors until last week.

Henry Miller planed to Palm Beach in his own craft Saturday (11). He will return next week and is due to sail for London, Jan. 25.

Coast reports were that the manager would visit Hollywood to advise on the picturization of 'Libel' which he is presenting at the Miller, N. Y.

Matty Zimmerman, general manager of the Public Service Ticket Agency, one of the Leblang enterprises, has moved his office into the quarters formerly occupied by the late Joe Leblang.

Minneapolis, Jan. 14.

A sample of the wild and wooly road show routing now in evidence is furnished by 'Three Men On a Horst.'

After playing in Minneapolis and St. Paul the show goes to Duluth. Then it jumps back through the Twin Cities to reach Eau Claire, Wis., for a one-night stand. This is followed by a one-night stand in Rochester, Minn., and to reach there the company for a third time doubles back through the Twin Cities.

9 LITTLE THEATRES IN N. Y. LIBRARIES

There are now nine little theatres established in branch public libraries in the more congested parts of the City of New York. All were built by emergency relief workers within the past two years and are now under the direction of the WPA federal theatre project. Most recently completed is the 'community stage' in the basement of the Hamilton Fish branch, East Houston street. Proscenium has a width of 35 feet, stage depth being 12 feet.

In addition to amateur presentations, under the direction of library staffs principally, there is chamber music, monthly 'sings' and other types of concerts. Previously plays done by the reading and drama clubs were presented on crude platforms. Other little theatres in libraries are at the West 135th street branch, Harlem branch, Muhlenberg branch, Aquilar branch, Hudson Park branch, George Bruce branch, Woodstock branch, and Fort Washington branch.

School Board Ban Turns Amateurs Into Profesh

Washington, Jan. 14.

Local school board reared its censorial hind leg this week and kicked the premiere of 'Benevolent Blackmail,' local play, off the schedule of the Roosevelt High School Auditorium. Show was set for Jan. 21.

Play is the work of Morgan Baker, conductor of federal employes' column in the Washington Post, and deals with a newspaper columnist who lands a seat in the U. S. Senate through threatening to expose a job-juggling congressman.

Show, which is being put on by local amateurs and semi-pros, has gained courage through the publicity and will open Feb. 4 at Wardman Park theatre for an indefinite run.

Reinhardt, Directing 'Road,' Is Show By Himself; Knows, Plays Every Part

By Wolfe Kaufman

Professor Max Reinhardt was busy. On the stage of the Adelphi theatre were a series of rough, plain boards—mock standins for the five-level stages under construction at the Manhattan Opera House. Back of, ahead of, behind, and around the boards were strung 100 odd actors. On one side of the stage a piano was doing yeoman service. In the audience a motley group of watchers of various rank and import. In the fifth row of the orchestra, in exact center and atop four seats, was a sort of desk clotted with papers, scripts, notes. A rehearsal of 'The Eternal Road' was on and Professor Reinhardt was directing it.

And when the Professor directs a spectacle, it is something to watch and hear.

He has only two actual directorial assistants on this show, Heinz Herold and Francisco von Mendelssohn. They are his shadows, his interpreters, his disciplinarians. Von Mendelssohn has been with Reinhardt before, many times. He is Reinhardt's right hand. Herold is the Professor's left.

Every line, every move, every slightest inflection is worked over by the Professor on his own. He doesn't pass up as much as a breath. He works with each actor on each scene.

'Like this,' he says. 'Watch me.'

And he acts out the scene that is so important. It is, it seems, only a line. Then the same with another actor—for a word.

He knows all the lines. He acts all the parts.

The actors may be good—but that doesn't interest him. They are good to the extent to which they can reenact his interpretations. He doesn't give them the clues, nor even the outlines—he gives them the entire scenario.

$450,000 Nut to Date

Finally, he seems to have enough. He whispers to his left hand. Herold scrambles off backstage. He whispers to his right hand. Von Mendelssohn precedes him to his desk. Press agent number one whispers in the VARIETY mugg's ear: 'The show's cost $450,000 so far.'

'Oh, yeah?' says the mugg, watching the Professor.

Suddenly Van Mendelssohn shouts, 'Angels, over here. Jacob and Joseph center. Let's have it all, please.'

The rehearsal's on again. Benjamin Zermach is doing the dances. He's watching. Franz Werfel wrote the play. He's watching. Ludwig Lewisohn adapted it into English. He can't watch. He has to stay out of New York. Alimony trouble.

On stage the whole first act is being run through. There's Sam Jaffee, the mocker. There's Rosamund Pinchot. Jacob Ben Ami.

'Nein, nein, nein,' wails the Professor. Everything stops. He talks to his left hand. There's a conference. The act starts again. Now there will be no interruption. Now it'll go through all the way. The Professor seats himself at his desk. Van Mendelssohn is at his right. Herold at his left. Werfel behind him. Next to Werfel, Helene Thimig, who has a part in the play, the part of Ruth. She is really, of course, Mrs. Reinhardt, so she can sit close and make comments. All of them have notebooks. All of them are writing all the time. On stage the play proceeds.

Press agent number two tells the mugg that there will be about 350 actors in the show altogether. The principals are rehearsing at the Adelphi. The dancers are rehearsing at the Manhattan Theatre. The orchestra is rehearsing at Liederkranz Hall. The Manhattan Opera House is being torn down and rebuilt by Virgil Bel Geddes.

'Von onfang,' the Professor had said. From the beginning. That's what they're doing. Silence through the house. Kurt Weill, the composer of the score, is sitting two rows behind Reinhardt. He doesn't take notes.

On stage, the actors work. Samuel Goldenberg, Isidor Cashier, Marc Schweid, Thomas Chalmers, Miriam Elyas (the last of the Habima troupe), Joseph Macaulay, Walter Eillott, Lotte Lenya.

Some of the actors wear praying shawls. A scene is over and an-

GERSHWIN EXPECTS

Thinks His 'Porgy' Will Join the Met Rep Next Season

George Gershwin states that he expects his 'Porgy and Bess' to wind up in the repertory of the Metropolitan Opera Co. next season and to be done by a Caucasian cast, against the Negro background, possibly with Lawrence Tibbett. Gershwin, considering the 16 weeks that 'Porgy and Bess' will have stayed at the Alvin on Broadway when it closes Saturday, expresses gratification.

The Theatre Guild and Gershwin anticipate getting a profit from the road tour of 'Porgy,' although they haven't gotten their production back from the Broadway run.

To Build Theatre Near Washington For Banned Plays

Washington, Jan. 14.

Crushing defeat on the floor of the House of a bill to amend the Capital child labor laws and permit children on professional stages has led Steve Cochrane, manager of the National theatre, town's only legit, to erect a summer theatre just across the D. C. line in Maryland, where he will play shows barred here.

Cochrane has been leader in the fight to amend the laws here for years. Rep. Mary T. Norton, chairman of the House District Committee, introduced the bill after a hearing in which everybody possible endorsed it. Congressmen, however, killed it on the floor by a vote of 227 to 68.

New theatre would be a 1,000-seater, only 15 minutes by auto from the center of town. It would be put up on the grouds of Griffith Farms, suburban eatery operated by Tom O'Donnell. O'Donnell and Cochrane are in on the theatre deal together.

New venture will not interfere with the annual season of the National Theatre Players, also run by Cochrane, which will get in 10 weeks before the country place opens, about June 1. Plan to bring in inexpensive roadshows of plays banned in the District, or produce them with stock groups.

EQUITY CONCESSIONS ON 'PORGY,' 'MULBERRY'

Equity made two concessions to managers last week, with the idea of continuing one play on Broadway and sending another to the road.

Theatre Guild asked one week's lay-off for 'Porgy and Bess,' which will close at the Alvin, N. Y., Saturday 18). Show is booked into Philadelphia Jan. 27. Because the colored musical has operated in the red for the past several weeks, permission to be dark next week was granted.

'Moon Over Mulberry Street,' which closed last week, resumed Monday (13) at the 44th Street, Equity waiving its eight-week rule. Usually, when a show is withdrawn, it is not permitted to reopen in New York or the road within that period. There is a new management set-up for 'Mulberry,' one reason the concession was made. Play is slated for an indefinite engagement with Leblang backing.

Portland Likes Bard

Portland, Ore., Jan. 14.

For the first time in years a legitimate road attraction is extending its Portland engagement.

Old Globe Theatre players and their streamlined Shakespeare are to remain an added three days, making their stay here 11 days, instead of the sight originally scheduled.

New Version

Baltimore, Jan. 14.

Arousing comment is an ad appearing in the papers here Sunday (12), which read: 'Refined student, interested in drama and music, will drive your car to theatre in exchange for tickets.'

'HOUR' FOR CHI NOW UP TO SHUMLIN

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Afternoon dailies broke out in front-page headlines Jan. 9 to state categorically that Barnet Hodes, head of the city's law department, had 'decided' that 'The Children's Hour' would not be permitted in performance here, his 'decision' being based on reading of play. Issuance of the statement was credited to Thoda Cocroft, resident representative of American Theatre Society. Miss Cocroft was quoted as adding some personal indignation to the effect that adult playgoers, meaning A. T. S. subscribers, might be regarded as knowing better than the Mayor what they would like to see in the theatre.

Asked about the 'decision,' Counsellor Hodes stated he had read a printed copy of the play by request of Rollo Timponi, manager of the Erlanger, and had then said that, if ever called upon for a legal opinion by the Mayor, he would prefer to see the prompt-book.

'I don't know Miss Cocroft, have never met her, and have had no communication of any kind with her,' he added. 'I'm not the city's censor of plays, but simply its lawyer, and have no interest in 'The Children's Hour' save that of giving my opinion, when asked, as to legality. Moreover, the Mayor could not, I'm sure, undertake to ban any play until after it had been acted at least once in the city.

'As matters stand now, this play is in the producer's own lap, as any play would be.'

Jones Gets Vanderbilt, N.Y., but Must Move His Own Show, 'Mulatto' Out

Martin Jones is now owner of the Vanderbilt theatre, N. Y., having taken title last Friday (10). But he was forced to move his show 'Mulatto' from that house to the Golden as notice had been served to exit before Jones secured possession of the Vanderbilt, where 'Granite' was booked. Latter opened Monday.

Jones was plenty steamed over the situation and, after 'Granite' premiered doubtfully, there was talk of moving 'Mulatto' back to the Vanderbilt. It is the first show on his own for the young showman, although he was silently interested in several Earl Carroll attractions.

Vanderbilt has been bank-owned for two seasons, being operated for the Drydock Savings by Alfred E. Aarons and Harry Somers, who also operate the National for the same institution.

'Granite' was presented by Charles Hammerslough, a stock broker, who was formerly interested in some of the Klaw and Erlanger attractions. He gave the English drama a summer tryout some seasons ago.

Howard Says Drama Guild Eager To Keep Film Money in Stagers

SETS RECORD

New Golden Show Has Practically 100% Old-Timer Cast and Crew

John Golden has set some sort of record in casting 'Three Wise Fools,' which, with but two exceptions has have veteran players. That takes in the 80-year-old star William Gillette and includes the company manager, Walton Bradford, formerly g.m. for George Tyler.

Weight for age in support takes in Charles Coburn, James Kirkwood, Brandon Tynan, Isabelle Irving, Sidney Booth and John Blair. Two young players are Mary Rogers and William Post.

Addison Pitt is the stager of 'Fools,' which opened on tour in Newark Monday. With its name cast, it is mentioned for a Broadway engagement.

Leblang's Battle Vs. Cheap Ducats; 'Mulberry' Buy-In

Battle to wipe out cheap ducats on Broadway has been started by the Public Service Ticket office, which is the Leblang cut rate outfit. Specializes on half price theatre tickets, but wants to stamp out the practice of selling 'passes' accompanied by a 'service charge.'

First move by Leblang's is to guarantee 'Moon Over Mulberry Street,' a play which closed a week ago at the 44th Street theatre but which resumed at the same house Monday (13). Show had been eking out a run by means of the 40c gag. Stipulation in the contract is that no tickets shall be sold at the box office at a lower price than is charged at Leblang's.

In addition to the Leblang move in the case of 'Mulberry' the 40 centers, of which there are several on the list now, face claims from the collector of internal revenue. Latter declares that the full tax is collectable on all bargain tickets—that is, if the box office scale lists $3.30 as the top all tickets at that price which are sold for 40 or 55c should be accompanied by the 10% admissions tax. That means that the box office should have collected 80c instead of 55c. Claim against 'Mulberry' is said to be around $6,000. Show, however, is under new management and whether the claim tax can be collected from the defunct corporation is in doubt.

Originally there were 10 'backers' of 'Mulberry.' One gave a check to Leblang's recently in order to meet the payroll. Check bounced, there being no account in the bank. Fellow was arrested, but when he then said he wished to repay the ticket agency, the magistrate consented to drop the charge. Because of the incident there was some surprise that Leblang's entered into the present deal.

Nagel in 'Forest' Lead on Coast

Los Angeles, Jan. 14.

Coast production of 'Petrified Forest' has been put into rehearsal here by Henry Duffy, preparatory to its opening in San Francisco Jan. 19.

Conrad Nagel plays the Leslie Howard role, with Milburn Stone also set.

Just Hanging Around

Equity last week upheld the claim of Shea and Raymond, male comedy team in 'Scandals,' that they held a run of the play contract with George White. Contract was originally for two weeks and White attempted to cancel the act last Friday (10), but the team exhibited a letter from White picking up an option for the run of the revue.

As a result, team is still on the show's payroll, but haven't appeared on the stage since Friday. They're backstage at every show, but don't work.

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Dramatists' Guild and its members are anxious to keep motion picture money in the legitimate theater and hope the film companies will expand their production activities in financing new plays.

Stories that the dramatists want the basic agreement with stage producers re-written so that playwrights obtain all moneys from film rights to play is without foundation. Such an idea has never occurred to the dramatists and part of the object of revisions in the contract is to keep and further encourage studios to back play production.

These definite statements were made by Sidney Howard, president of the Dramatists' Guild, who is at Metro writing the screen play for Sinclair Lewis' 'It Can't Happen Here.' He stated further that there is no idea of changing the present arrangement whereby stage producer and dramatist of a play equally split revenue from disposal of the film rights to the piece.

Howard said that revisions in the basic contract for another five-year stretch starting March 1 are being made to clear up previous ambiguities in the agreement which proved confusing both to the managers and playwrights. Attorneys for the managers and Guild are now working on a re-write of the agreement in New York.

One of the major points to be considered is the complications over English presentation rights to stage property. Conditions in London, where the English managers have theatres tied up for their own attractions, has created a situation which puts a heavy burden on American managers who wish to stage their plays in London. Discussion is on for contract revision which will tend to extend to the producer the co-operation of dramatists on English presentations.

It is learned that the new agreement will contain a new minimum advance which must be paid by manager to playwright, besides new stipulation on the maximum length of time elapsing between option and opening of play. Minimum advance provision will be taken in to eliminate the practice of sharpshooting managers nabbing prospective plays on option and then attempting to interest film backing on staging the property. Such options, of which there have been many during the past year, sometimes tie up the playwright and prevent his placing his piece elsewhere for immediate production.

ONLY 2 STOCK COS. IN ALL U. S.

There are only two stock companies in the entire country, according to an Equity check-up. Last winter at this time there were half a dozen, which was then considered a new low in the stock field.

Equity blames the decline of stock on picture people. Claimed that exhibitor interests are so strong that the average stock manager is unable to operate, either sharing terms or rentals being placed so high that stock can not play to a profit.

It was expected that stock would be included in the Works Progress Administration's relief theatre project, but no such plans are known to have been considered. While there are a number of WPA units enacting familiar plays, relief shows are not regarded as stock.

Only known extant stocks are being operated at the Copley, Boston, by Mary Young and John Craig, Jr. and at Miami by Raymond Moore.

Lambs Sue on Taxes

Washington, Jan. 14.

The Lambs Club last week asked the Supreme Court to compel repayment of disputed taxes aggregating $101,121.

Petition asserted the organization, taxed as a 'social' institution, is predominantly interested in the professional life of the membership, which embraces individuals wrapped up in the promotion of drama and the theatre.

Plays on Broadway

MID-WEST

Drama in three acts presented at the Booth, N. Y., Jan. 7, '36, by the Shuberts; written by James Hagan; staged by Mellville Burke; $3.30 top.

Beulah Zanhiser	Jean Adair
Hilda Zanhiser	Bernadine Hayes
Tooteboy Zanhi	Van Heflin
Reverend Carr	Frank Wilcox
C. D. Aker	Cliff Hicks
Jim Meed	Edgar Nelson
Luke Zanhiser	Curtis Cooksey
Fred Zanhiser	Don Dillaway
Bigwash Rowell	John Alexander
Jipiwreed Bandy	Walter Baldwin
Roy Meeker	David Byrne
Ed Hendee	Eugene Keith
Doc Tanner	Dodson Mitchell
Lee Bragg	Richard Taber

As a reminder of the devastating drought and dust storms which tortured the people on the plains of the middlewest last year, this drama is effective, aided by the playing of its well chosen cast. But as popular drama it is distinctly doubtful.

'Mid West' is interesting as to story, yet audience-exacting in that it demands long periods of quiet attention. Author was cognizant of that, as indicated by working in of laughs here and there.

Play is enacted in front of the farmhouse of upstanding Luke Zanhiser, and his clear-headed wife, Beulah. Their two sons are mature, Fred wed to Hilda, a city girl who never could get used to farm life, and Tooteboy, who is a problem. He had attended college and returned as a Communist, tirading against government autocracy. He had fallen in with two reds who had been railroaded out of San Francisco after fomenting trouble there.

Tooteboy inflames the farmhands of a neighbor and also the men on his father's place. They make demands for double pay and go on strike, disregarding the kindnesses of Luke in the past. Zanhiser is warned by friends that the people of the district have threatened to lynch those sewing the seed of revolt and that it would be best for his son to desist.

Tooteboy and the other agitators are taken at the point of guns and there is a 'necktie party.' Boy had been told by his parents to leave the county, but he refused. Grief of the father and mother in the good last act is well simulated. The other son, his wife and babe depart for Detroit, he to make a fresh start there.

Land is parched to powdery dust, the chickens die in the heat, so do the cattle, except for the few head taken east by the government. The old people are stony broke, but the land is theirs and there they will stay.

Then, at the finale, comes the rain.

There is some criticism of the federal restrictions on farming, which is another political aspect of the play and, while it may take in too much territory, that section of the country attracted much attention during last summer's long arid stretch.

Curtis Cooksey as Luke, and Jean Adair as his wife, are excellent and there are other good performances, including Bernadine Hayes as the young wife, Dodson Mitchell as the doctor, and Van Helfin as Tooteboy.

'Mid-West,' despite its good points, has a theme too thickly spread with trouble for the average playgoer. Ibee.

People at the auction, studio personnel, etc.—Sara Floyd, Myrtle Ross, Quina Bilotti, Carrie Weller, Emily Draper, Virginia Reson, Annette Robinson, Jenny Mac, Maxine Marlowe, Eda Elliott, George Lambert, Joe Fields, Earl Talbot, Richard Ogden, Larry Williams, Al Fields, Patterson Breene.

Latest play about Hollywood is sentimentally concerned with the success of one of its stars, unmistakably the late Marie Dressler. It was fairly well received by first nighters but seemed limited in appeal.

'Star' is an atmospheric play given to emotionalism, and in that direction it is effective. Perhaps the central character is on the stage too much, but mainly trouble is that Zoe Akins provides too little opportunity for comedy. Just once does the pace change, and that is a noisy studio scene.

Play is not supposed to be biographic but Marie Dressler did climb to the heights in pictures after being washed up on Broadway, broke and growing old. So does Amy Bellaire of the play, whose well adorned home on Riverside Drive is being sold at auction to satisfy creditors at the prolog.

A woman friend, Agnes Jessey, has Amy as a house guest in her Hollywood home shortly thereafter. But meeting the celebs doesn't get the stage belle of other days into pictures. Going on her own in cheap lodgings and giving lessons in acting on the side, she decides to try for an extra part and joins the mob outside the gates of a studio. An actress goes hoarse from repeats and Amy is given a chance, injecting comedy where none was suspected.

That is the start of Amy Bellaire's rise in filmdom, the final scene of act two. At the close, her director and producer are begging her to consider scripts when she has been ordered on vacation by her doctor. That is similar to the Dressler tradition, but the gaiety and good humor of the departed star are missing. Instead there is heavy sentimentality, Amy receiving white violets and a gift from her former admirer-producer at the hands of his son, who, it is presumed, is her son, too.

Jobyna Howland, who hasn't been around for some time, and who is comparable in age to the character she portrays, took the curtain calls as a friendly tribute, tears streaming down her face. Formerly Miss Howland had a flair for comedy parts, such as in 'The Gold Diggers,' some 15 years ago. Her performance now as the sentimental Amy is something different, a woman who is anything but a comedienne.

Play calls for quite a variety of bits but running through most of the scenes are Frank Conroy as a flashy picture director and Merle Maddern as Amy's best friend. Smaller parts stand out as played by Whitney Bourne, Ethel Intropidi, Edward Emerson (making one appearance as Strassberg, big shot producer), Hans Hansen, James Todd and Eddie Albert.

There are 29 speaking parts and 17 extra people. Ibee.

GRANITE

Drama in three acts presented at the Vanderbilt, N. Y., Jan. 13, '36, by Charles Hammerslough; written by Clemence Dane; staged by producer; $2.75 top.

Penny Holt	Phyllis Welch
Jordan Morris	Len D. Hollister
Judith	Mary Morris
Prosper	Byron McGrath
Nameless Man	Robert H. Gordon
Clergyman	Jack Sonnes

'Granite' is another drama loaded with misery. It stands no more chance than others of the kind of recent arrival.

Fact that it is a one set show with a short cast may explain the why of its presentation. That lure has fooled many an aspiring showman. Another reason may be the fact that Clemence Dane authored it. However, the play was presented in London 10 years ago and didn't get to first base there either.

Dated more than 100 years ago, the play does not give much indication of the people of the period. It is set on the granite rock known as Lunday Island off the coast of England. There, Jordan Morris lives alone with his wife, Judith, save for their half grown girl Penny. He is a hard man and there is no affection between the couple. Ostensibly a farmer, his real racket is to lure ships by means of false lights and gather goods that wash ashore from the wrecks.

Penurious people with not a grain of humanity, such characters cannot be expected to have audience sympathy. Story develops when Jordan's half brother, Prosper, arrives. He is half owner of the farm and demands that Jordan put his house in order. A nameless man washed ashore is taken in by the wife. She grudgingly gives him sustenance and in return he promises to fetch and carry, to be her servant and swears to kill any man who hurts her.

When Jordan grips Judith's wrist and bruises her the fellow, who is supposed to be looney, takes a gun and shoots Jordan in the back as he stands at the brink of the 200 foot cliff that overlooks the sea.

Previously Prosper and Judith had started an affair. The half brother goes to England, returning in five months with a parson. Judith and Prosper are happy in a fashion, but after a year trouble starts when he fires the handyman. Because of their secret she pleads for the man and the order is rescinded. However, in a tiff, the new husband, too, grips the woman's wrist and she cries out in pain. He is promptly stalked on the cliff by the killer and tossed in the drink.

It is unknown who is now master and he calmly tells the woman they will live together, sending the kid away. He partially identifies himself by saying that he had leaped overboard from a convict ship, which is good enough reason why he does not want to return to England.

Listening to a whining woman through most of a play, is too tough on the customers but that is what Mary Morris is called on to do. Play has been done previously here by amateurs and that seems to be where it belongs. Direction is faulty, but that doesn't make much difference. Ibee.

TRULY VALIANT

Drama in three acts presented at the 49th Street theatre, N. Y., Jan. 9, '36, by Gustav Blum; written by Irving Stone; staged by the producer.

Esa Cranby	Ian MacLaren
Martha Cranby	Martha Mayo
Dale Cranby	Alan Handley
Berne Bowen	Margot Stevenson

Author of this piece wrote a best seller novel not long ago and that may have tricked Gustav Blum into believing that Irving Stone also wrote a winning play in 'Truly Valiant.' No explanation, however, can change the rating of the piece, among the new lows of the season.

Four persons and one set. It could have been a money getter if good, but that is merely theory. Story is set within the living room of a professor in economics out on the coast. There is mention of a rift some years previous between the man and his wife, although they seem to be a well suited couple. However, that is the explanation of professor's affair with a girl who is working her way through college.

Son of the professor falls in love with the lass and, being offered a berth in St. Louis, proposes marriage, though she is to have a baby. There are several ideas about what to do about it. After all exhibit anguish the youngsters exit for the parson and the train, while the wife sticks to aid the professor finish his great book on economics.

First nighters seemed to think they were taking it on the chin and audibly protested by giggling over lines. Ibee.

RICE INCOME TAX BATTLE IN COURT

Albany, Jan. 14.

Court of Appeals is considering arguments on behalf of Elmer Rice, who is fighting a state tax of $3,231.85 levied on royalties for 1929, '30 and '31.

State contends it has a right to collect the money on royalties amounting to $121,818.38 received by Rice in the three years. This claim is based on a decision of the United States Supreme Court to that effect, handed down in May, 1932.

Rice, however, argues that the decision was not retroactive and that up to May, 1932, royalties on copyright articles were subject only to federal tax.

Loop Legit Box Office Slides; 'Maid' $12,000; 'Great Waltz' $28,000

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Strange things happened to the legit houses last week, with the box-offices taking it on the downbeat generally. Went on the downbeat despite the fact that the town was packed with miscellaneous mercantile conventionites. Two items which might account for the slide-off are: the reaction from the hotcha New Years' week and the snow and blizzard conditions of the early part of the session. That the weather is a reason and not an alibi was seen in the perk of box-office bustle towards the end of the week, with sell-outs taking the place of the empty pews of Monday and Tuesday.

All grosses slipped. 'Great Waltz' fell off sharply in the early days of the week, but perked strongly at the finish, selling out on Saturday matinee and night, which means a take of approximately $9,000 on the day. Show has cut its Sunday performance in order to evade the payment of the additional one-eighth to the cast. At its present pace the musical figures to stick in town eight to 10 weeks.

'Anything Goes' also clipped a show off its schedule, eliminating the Wednesday matinee. Musical is showing fine evening strength, however, and has little to worry about on that score.

Week-end brought the conclusion of scheduled runs to 'Old Maid' and the Ruth Draper one-woman show. 'Maid' finished three excellent weeks under the American Theatre Society banner, while Miss Draper drew two weeks of fine carriage trade for her first appearance in the loop in six years. 'Squaring the Circle' failed to open Monday (13) after two weak sessions.

Estimates for Last Week

'Anything Goes,' Grand (1,200; $3.30) (4th wee).—Now doing eight performances a week. Slid somewhat last session to $21,000, a bit disappointing after its strong getaway.

'Great Waltz,' Auditorium (3,700; $2.75) (3d week).—Also clipped to eight shows weekly. Got a couple of bad shoves by weak business during the early days of the week, which held the gross down sharply to $28,000 for the stanza. Figuring on at least eight-week stay here.

'Old Maid,' Erlanger (1,200; $2.75).—Closed here on Saturday (8) after good three-week subscription gallop to $12,000 for its final nip-up. Next play in will be Nazimova in 'Ghosts,'

'Personal Appearance,' Harris (1,000; $2.75) (4th week).—Slumped with the general toboggan of the loop. Around $8,500 last week.

'Squaring the Circle,' Blackstone (1,000; $2.20)—Had difficulty last week on general weak conditions and tough competition. Off to $5,000. Failed to reopen Monday (13).

Ruth Draper, Selwyn (1,000; $2.20).—Had a good fortnight. Touched $5,000 for the final gallop.

HEAVY ADVANCE SALE ON 'ROAD' IN PITTS.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14.

Advance sale for 'Tobacco Road,' which opened last night (13) at the Nixon has hit around $14,000, a record figure over the week-end, with every indication that will do twice that, or pretty close to absolute capacity, at $2 top. Not in a long time has a play worked up as much excitement around town. First night had 100 standees in.

Catholic press has been pretty bitter against 'Road' during the last couple of weeks, with both police and Mayor McNair being besieged by requests for interference. Authorities, however, indicated they wouldn't step in unless absolutely necessary.

Last night was a complete sell-out, with plenty of standees, flock of buyers unwilling to miss anything and not taking a chance of running into deletions later in week. Next week is being held open by both the show and house, everything pointing to a h.o. It'll be the first time in years a straight play has had two weeks here.

Nixon was dark last week, with nothing definitely booked in to follow, although 'Porgy and Bess' is expected early in February as the third subscription offering of ATS.

'Larger Than Life,' comedy by Joseph Schrank, goes into rehearsal for Crosby Gaige shortly.

'Lend Me Your Ears,' comedy of rural politics by Lewis Beach and Philip Wood, due for a February opening under banner of Charles Harris.

COHAN $9,000, FAIR

Cleveland Just Doesn't Seem to Care Much for Legit

Cleveland, Jan. 14.

Legit theatre season here will wind up behind the eight-ball, judging by poor returns of the Hanna's previous plays and now the rather discouraging reception given George M. Cohan's 'Dear Old Darling,' which drew only a fair $9,000 for the week.

Being the only legit house remaining in Cleveland, with all cricks whooping the show up, the figure was particularly disappointing to William Blair, manager, who used extra ad space. Slushy weather didn't help; neither did the fact that a rival film house put on the flickerized 'Ah Wilderness' (MG) same week, ballyhooing it as Cohan's best play.

Next play for the Hanna is 'Personal Appearance,' due Jan. 27, which should give the natives time to recuperate from holiday expenses. Nazimova in 'Ghosts' follows during the second week of February.

Estimates for Last Week

'Dear Old Darling' (Hanna; 1,435; $2.50 top). A good Cohan show. Below-par gross of $9,000 not an accurate criterion; it's an off-season, with not enough dramas or musicals being booked regularly to make 'em play-conscious here.

'FROME' $8,500 IN PHILLY, BIG

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.

It was proved rather conclusively last week that Philly legit patrons will turn out, in numbers, for a try-out if they like the price scale and if there are any names in it.

Max Gordon brought his latest tryout production, 'Ethan Frome,' to the Garrick last week and it marched right into real business. A grand set of notices helped; so, probably, did the fact that the management took extra advertising in the dailies. Names of Pauline Lord, Ruth Gordon and Raymond Massey also meant something, but the fact that, with it all, only a $2 top was charged, likely is the real answer. Biz picked up steadily and reached virtual sell-out proportions by Friday with $8,500 reported—big at the scale. Second week ought to be even better.

Chestnut and Forrest were both dark last week and 'I Want a Policeman,' on its second full week at the Broad, where it played two weeks and a half, fell off badly to only $5,500.

'The Black Pit,' leftist piece put on by the New Theatre outfit here had negligible takings in its second week at the Erlanger with a $1.50 top and most seats at 30 and 50c.

Forrest relights tonight (Tuesday) with the 'Follies,' in for a fortnight's stay. Chestnut reopens next Monday with William Gillette in the John Golden revival of 'Three Wise Fools,' also for two weeks. First two performances have been taken over by the Philadelphia Forum. 'Porgy and Bess' comes to the Forrest on Jan. 27, with Walter Hampden's 'Cyrano' revival due on Feb. 10 at the Garrick.

Following the two weeks of 'Ethan Frome,' that house gets a single week of 'The Fortune Teller,' Victor Herbert operetta done by the Little Opera Company, another local group. Erlanger goes into pix on Jan. 30.

Estimates for Last Week

'Ethan Frome' (Garrick, 1st week). Great notices and growing attendance; $8,500 at $2 top, big. Second week ought to be very big, too.

'Black Pit' (Erlanger, 2d week). Trade union backing but got negligible takings at $1.50 top and lots of 30 and 50c seats. House goes into pix on Jan. 30.

'I Want a Policeman' (Broad, 3d week). Two and a half weeks in all. Last six days weren't so forte. Maybe $5,000.

Lincoln's Single

Lincoln, Jan. 14.

Shortest legit season in years is due here this year. Only one show is on the books and it's the prize winning 'Old Maid' starring Judith Anderson and Helen Menken, which is skedded at the Liberty Jan. 27 for a mat and eve showing.

Liberty is a 1,400-seat house and normally runs second run films.

'Night' $15,000, S. F.

San Francisco, Jan. 14.

'Night of January 16th,' A. H. Woods, coast production at the Geary, had it all its own way last week, being the only legit open. Second week drew a nifty approximate $15,000 into the b.o. same as first week.

'Dodsworth arrives Thursday (16) to give opposition at the Curran, next door to the Geary. 'Petrified Forest' with Conrad Nagle is being readied for the Frisco by Henry Duffy.

'Old Maid' and 'Children's Hour' are also skedded as road show attractions.

'FOLLIES' $20,000 2D WEEK, HUB

Boston, Jan. 14.

Town has quieted down after the boom holiday week and last week found only 'Three Men on a Horse' at the Plymouth, 'Ziegfeld Follies' closing a two-week engagement at the Opera House, and 'Ceiling Zero' completing a third week at the Copley.

'Follies' led the group, although a sharp swerve was noted in the take, as compared with the opening week.

Immediate future looks fairly bright, with Lunt and Fontanne coming to the Colonial for two weeks with 'Shrew,' starting Jan. 20. Same night will find Cornelia Otis Skinner opening a week of repertoire at the Shubert.

Walter Hampden is coming to the Shubert Jan. 27 with 'Cyrano,' and he will probably be followed by William Gillette in 'Three Wise Fools.'

Another opening will be 'End of Summer,' new S. N. Behrman play, starring Ina Claire, skedded to unfold at the Colonial Feb. 3.

Estimates for Last Week

'Ziegfeld Follies' (Opera House, $3.30, 2nd week).—Underwent some radical revision here, with some good results, but intake sagged on final week to $20,000.

'Three Men on a Horse' (Plymouth, $2.75, 10th week). Felt the pinch of post-holiday b.r. tightening and lopped off to $9,000, which is still oke.

'VANITIES' OKE $15,000 2D WEEK IN DETROIT

Detroit, Jan. 14.

Following two bang-up sessions with Earl Carroll's 'Vanities,' the Cass Theatre this week is housing George M. Cohan's new play, 'Dear Old Darling,' which opened Monday (13) before a good-sized audience. Given an extensive circus-like exploitation for the past several weeks, 'Darling' should hit high-level coin.

Last week's take on 'Vanities' was a reported $15,000 for eight performances. First session of nine shows, aided by high-price New Year's Eve performances, exceeded $20,000, terrific, topping everything so far this season. Exploitation on 'Vanities' was very intensive and extensive. Revue now to be a unit.

'Personal Appearance' is booked for the Cass starting Jan. 19. The Wilson, Detroit's only other legit, is still dark. Theatre Guild's 'Porgy and Bess' may come in Feb. 10 prior to Chicago.

Estimate for Last Week

'Vanities' (Cass; 1,400; $2.75)—Held over after a big $20,000 first session, show continued to get an extra lot of publicity and drew a nifty $15,000 for eight performances last week. 'Dear Old Darling' opened Monday (13) at $2.75 top.

'Goes' Notice Up

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Two weeks' closing notice was posted last night for 'Anything Goes.' Company proposed to take a 25% salary cut in order to prolong the loop engagement and is awaiting word from the show's producer, Vinton Freedley, whether okay.

As originally planned, the limited tour of 'Goes' is to terminate here because of the February release date for the picture version. Flim, however, cannot be exhibited locally during the run of the stage show.

FINAL CURTAIN

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Jan. 14.

The Majestic, one time leading legit house here, will be razed under a municipal decree as being unsafe. Was erected in 1908.

Musicals Off in Post-Holiday Drop; 'Regina' Leads Dramas with $23,200

Post-holiday reaction was not uniform along Broadway last week. It was expected that the legits would dive after New Year's week. Some did, but there were more big grosses recorded and several of the intermediate successes got as much as during the holiday going.

The musicals were more affected than the straight play hits. Drop was more severe with 'Jumbo,' which fell off nearly 50% at the Hippodrome takings being around $45,000. 'Jubilee' held up better than the others at $31,000 and 'Scandals' showed strength and approximated $28,000 on its first normal week.

'Victoria Regina' was established as the new dramatic leader, with takings of $23,200 for its first eight performance week. 'Boy Meets Girl' was a strong runner-up with $19,500, topping 'First Lady,' which got $18,800, 'Boy' having boosted its ticket prices. 'Dead End' again was around $16,000, while 'Pride and Prejudice' slipped to $15,500.

'Parnell' and 'Night of January 16' held the holiday pace, while 'May Wine,' a non-chorus musical, perked.

'Taming of the Shrew,' in its final week at the Guild, should be up among the leaders. 'Porgy and Bess,' Alvin, also winding up, was drawing heavy trade early this week, too. Other closings are 'Evening Star,' taken off at the Empire after four days; 'Truly Valiant,' which lasted only one night at the 49th Street, and 'Tapestry in Gray,' folding on Thursday (16). 'Mid-West,' Booth, is the sole survivor of three entrants last week and it got a mixed press, with indications doubtful.

Coming next week: 'Ethan Frome,' National; Illustrators' Show, 48th Street; 'The Puritan,' Belmont. 'Julie The Great' is a possibility.

Estimates for Last Week

'A Room in Red and White,' 46th Street (CD-1,375-$3.30). Presented by Dwight D. Wiman and George Kondolf; written by Roy Hargrave; slated to open Saturday (18).

'At Home Abroad,' Winter Garden (18th week) (R-1,493-$4.40). After another week will move to the Majestic, 'Follies' coming here; 'Abroad' doing fairly well after excellent start; $28,000 estimated.

'Boy Meets Girl,' Cort (8th week) (C-1,059-$3.85). No post-holiday reaction for smash, paced around $19,500, which is capacity at new scale, boosted from $3.30.

'Children's Hour,' Elliot (61st week) (D-1,000-$3.30). Still making goodly profit and engagement indefinite; last week's takings around $7,500.

'Dead End,' Belasco (12th week) (D-1,000-$3.30). Agency demand not so strong, but box office line always present and better than $16,000 registered last week.

'First Lady,' Music Box (8th week) (C-1,000-$3.30). Very little under capacity last week for standout comedy, and the gross was $18,800.

'Granite,' Vanderbilt (1st week) (D-804-$3.30). Presented by Charles R. Hammerslough; written by Clemence Dane; originally produced in London in 1926; opened Monday.

'Hell Freezes Over,' Ritz (3rd week) (D-918-$3.30). All sorts of cut-rates but not much money; takings estimated around $4,000; not sure after this week.

'I Want a Policeman,' Lyceum (1st week) (D-957-$3.30). Presented by Francis Curtis and Richard Myers; written by Rufus King and Milton Lazarus; opened Tuesday.

'Jubilee,' Imperial (14th week) (M-1,468-$4.40). Post-holiday reaction among musicals more than straight show hits, but approximately $31,000 here was big last week.

'Jumbo,' Hippodrome (9th week) (M-4,327-$4.40). Nose-dived last week as expected, after big coin of New Year's; estimated around $45,000.

'Libel,' Henry Miller (5th week) (D-944-$3.30). Showed strength, grossing as much as New Year's week, which had an increased 'eve' scale; $10,500 indicates English meller will stick.

'May Wine,' St. James (7th week) (M-1,520-$3.85). Picked up smartly at week-end and expected to make a go of it; estimated at $14,000 or better.

'Mid-West,' Booth (2nd week) (D-704-$3.30). Opened last mid-week and drew divided press; fair trade thereafter; better line this week.

'Mulatto,' Golden (13th week) D-1,150-$2.75). Moved here from the Vanderbilt Monday; mixed cast drama using cut rates of various types but low gross; under $2,500.

'Night of Jan. 16,' Ambassador (18th week) (D-1,156-$2.75). Holding to very good money and now looks set into the spring; last week close to $10,000.

'O Evening Star,' Empire. Withdrawn Saturday after four nights; drew a weak press.

'One Good Year,' Fulton (8th week) (C-913-$3.30). Claimed to be making some money; with cut rate aid, business around $5,000 last week for one set comedy.

'Parnell,' Barrymore (10th week) (D-1,096-$3.30). As good last week as during New Year's period and should go through winter; around $10,000.

'Paradise Lost,' Longacre (6th week) (D-1,019-$3.30). The party show; all kinds of groups, mostly going for balcony; around $6,000 weekly, which may get it by.

'Porgy and Bess,' Alvin (15th week) (M-1,355-$3.30). Final week; lays off next week, then plays Philadelphia; under $20,000; not enough for musical of kind.

'Pride and Prejudice,' Plymouth (11th week) (D-1,036-$3.30). Eased off more than other leaders last week; with takings around $15,500, however, goodly profit.

'Russet Mantle,' Masque (1st week) (C-700-$3.30). Presented by Jerome Mayer and Murray Jay Queen; written by Lynn Riggs; opens Thursday (16).

'Scandals,' New Amsterdam (4th week) (R-1,717-$4.40). Figured to have clicked and well up in the money last week, with takings around $28,000.

'Taming of the Shrew,' Guild (16th week) (CD-941-$3.30). Final week; could remain longer but road dates imperative; paced around $15,000; house probably dark until next month, then getting 'End of Summer.'

'Tapestry in Gray,' Shubert (C-1,325-$3.30). Will close after Thursday (16) night's performance; will have played three weeks, which gives management participation in picture rights coin.

'Three Men on a Horse,' Playhouse (51st week) (C-869-$3.30). Long run laugh show continues to turn weekly profit; last week estimated around $11,000 mark.

'Tobacco Road,' Forrest (111th week). (C-1,017-$1.65). Should last through season; now in third year and still making money; around $9,000.

'Truly Valiant,' 49th Street. Taken off after premiere; severely panned.

'Victoria Regina,' Broadhurst (4th week) (CD-1,118-$3.30). New dramatic leader; three matinees (no Tuesday night performances because of broadcasts); first full normal week $23,200; capacity all shows.

'Winterset,' Beck (17th week) (D-1,214-$3.30). Should stick through winter; despite moving in and out the Beck, business holds to profit; over $10,000 last week.

Other Attractions

'Ghosts,' Morosco; Ibsen revival again goes to the road after this week.

'Let Freedom Ring,' Civic Rep theatre; well spotted on 14th street; top goes up to $1.50 from $1 this week.

$7,000 FOR 'LETTY,' L. A.; PIX TRY PLAYS

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Approximately 11,000 dribbed and drabbed into the El Capitan's b. o. last week for Charlotte Greenwood's 'Waiting for Letty,' Southern California's lone legit holdout. This is the show's third week. Should stay three more.

Nothing of importance in the legit field hits here until 'Dodsworth' at the tail end of this month. Meanwhile the Fox-West Coast will attempt to revive legit and kill double bills with condensed versions of plays.

'P. A.' $9,000, D. C.

Washington, Jan. 14.

'Personal Appearance' wound up its week at the National here Saturday with approximately $9,000, which was oke considering the cast had no stars and most of the smart crowd had seen the show on Broadway.

Current attraction is Alex Yokel's new one, 'Julie the Great.' Opening was set up from Monday to tonight (14) because of installation of heavy scenery.

'Vanities' Folds

'Vanities' closed as a road show in Detroit Saturday (11) and is being converted into a unit for picture and vaude house bookings. Revue toured the south, then worked north through the Mississippi valley.

In unit form, 'Vanities' is being rehearsed this week in Indianapolis.

German Dilemma: Don't Want Modern Operettas and Can't Use Old Ones

Berlin, Jan. 5.

Popularity of modern operettas and musical plays is way below that of classical productions, according to an official of Reichs Theatre Chamber. Experience of recent years, including the period before the Nazi regime, shows that for a safe long run it's still the old classical operetta that catches the public's fancy.

When Oscar Hammerstein II came to Berlin a score of years ago to produce 'Rose-Marie' at the Admirals Palace, he wanted to show the Berlin directors what is what in the musical comedy market. And he succeeded, only in the other direction. Loss on the play during its Berlin run was staggering.

Modern musical plays produced here in grand style before 1933 were mostly built around a star, such as Richard Tauber or Lily Massary or Gitta Alpar. 'Ball at the Savoy,' featuring Miss Alpar, did beautifully for the Rotter Brothers, then the big moguls in Berlin's theatrical market, controlling seven large houses. What the 'modern' Lehar production, 'Frederike,' with Tauber and Kaethe Dorsch leading, brought in financially, was spent on another Lehar operetta, 'Land of Smiles,' which came out on the wrong side of the ledger. 'Victoria and Her Hussar' and 'The World Is Beautiful,' both were termed fine productions, but no money makers.

So German producers of today have to look to the classical operetta of years ago, such as 'The Bat,' 'The Merry Widow,' 'The Bird Dealer' and 'Frau Luna.' Fancy salaries are out, anyway, and so are Jewish composers, Jewish actors, and Jewish producers.

With so much boosting of the classical operetta, Offenbach's 'Orpheus' and his 'Tales of Hoffman' would be ideal, as would Oscar Straus' 'Waltz Dream' and Leo Fall's catchy tunes. But the Aryan laws forcibly changed the map of Germany's theatrical market.

Operetta-minded Germany is still waiting for a new Oscar Straus, Jacques Offenbach, Leo Fall, Paul Abraham, Jean Gilbert-Winterfeld, etc. And in the meantime, nothing.

Legit, Vaude Troupes For Russe Provinces

As a first step in its plan to feed the hinterland flesh shows, the Soviet has launched two troupes in the province of Leningrad to play the outlying districts and huge collective farms wherever possible. Repertoire includes operettas, comedies and some vaudeville.

Companies are staffed with experienced actors and musicians as well as freshly graduated students of Thespis.

Moscow province is also slated for a similar treat as soon as the outfit can be assembled.

NEW ANZAC UNIT

is and Moore Head Bill Lined Up for Neil in London

London, Jan. 5.

Frank Neil's new unit for the Tivoli in Melbourne, Australia, has just been lined up by Harry Hilling, who represents Neil here.

Show will comprise Sammy Lewis and Patti Moore, originally brought over for the Piccadilly theatre here; Yvette Rugel, the Three Bonos, Decca and Decca and the Geddes Brothers, latter two local acts. Besides the bill will have Johnny McGregor and Bobby Kerrigan, down there from England with the last show.

Company, which is due to open about the end of March, sails Feb. 14, having a 10 weeks' guarantee with options.

Mex National Reopens

Mexico City Jan. 14.

Palace of Fine Arts (National theatre) is scheduled to reopen on Jan. 16 with a gala function after having been closed for repairs during several weeks.

Mexico Remains Adamant Against Ticket Specs

Mexico City, Jan. 14.

Specs got another wallop here when the senate nixed a proposition to make legal the peddling of amusement tickets by organizing hawkers into co-ops, bonding each seller for $1,500, licensing each with federal government and limiting their slice to 10% over the ducats' face value.

Solons decided that ticket speculation is prejudicial to public interests in any form.

Bill to make local anti-spec law national is pending in congress.

BERLIN VAUDE SANS NATIVE COMEDY

Berlin, Jan. 6.

Any foreigner here the first time marvels how vaude still carries on in the Fatherland, inasmuch as bills of from 10 to 12 acts consist to the largest extent of acrobatic exhibitions and dancing. Whatever comedy of note is offered hails from the United States.

Reason for the almost total absence of comedy is that native talent, such as offered by the late Otto Reutter and Robert Steidl, has no more field to develop. Reutter, earning $2,000 per week in his time and considered the safest draw in vaude, was a comedian of rare ability. Yet, under changed conditions as they are today, he would probably have to starve if he had to depend on vaude for a living, because his political songs would either land him in a concentration camp or in an asylum.

Comedians going in for politics today in Germany would soon become tragedians. Any attempt in this direction, if merely mentioning names, is suicide.

Such native comedians as still grace the boards go in for hokum and, if it's real hoke, they own their theatres themselves, as illustrated by Eric Carow and Wilhelm Bendow.

Painful attempts of native actors to solve this acute problem has done a lot to encourage managers to import foreign talent. No artificial camouflage can fool audiences today any more, with the Hollywood flickers just around the corner at 20c a throw.

Coward-Lawrence Single Actors Get Lukewarm Nod, but Biz Sure

London, Jan. 14.

Two sets of three one-acters by Noel Coward, starring himself and Gertrude Lawrence, opened at the Phoenix Thursday (9) and last night (13), respectively. The first set was not well received but the second won warm praise. Engagement is limited to 12 weeks, with capacity practically assured due to Coward's local popularity.

Robert Donat opened in an anti-war propaganda play last night (13) at Southport, titled 'Red Night.' It was splendidly received despite having a tragic ending.

Trahan Lands

London, Jan. 14.

Al Trahan, with Yukona Cameron, opened at the Holborn Empire on the new bill, after a fortnight at the Alhambra, Paris. It is his first London date in four years and, despite the fact he's following another piano act, is the laughing hit of the bill.

George Robey in a new act, is below his usual standard.

Business is far under that of last week, when Will Mahoney headlined.

Tait Goes Back

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Carrying the stage rights to 'Three Men On a Horse' and 'Anything Goes,' E. J. Tait, head of the Williamson-Tait theatres in Australia, has sailed for home.

Plans to put the two into production immediately on his arrival down under.

PARIS HOLIDAY BIZ VERY GOOD

Paris, Jan. 5.

Holiday period, climaxed by New Year's eve, was a bonanza for Paris theatres and niteries. Even weak legit shows drew coin on the two big nights, Christmas eve and New Year's eve, and the danceries raked it in. Only film exhibs are kicking that they didn't get their share.

Some of the record Christmas eve takes in legit houses were at the Chatelet, with spectacle-operetta 'Sun of Mexico'; Theatre de Paris, with Marcel Achard's comedy, starring Raimu, 'Coconut'; Marigny, with Edouard Bourdet's historical pageant play, 'Margot'; Gymnase, with Henry Bernstein's 'Heart'; Bouffes Parisiens, with Max Dearly farce, 'Popinod'; and the tiny Vieux Colombier, with 'Elizabeth.'

In the niteries, $10 was a normal supper price with champagne extra.

Vaude houses did three shows on both big days, with plenty biz. Film theatres did all right Christmas and New Year's, but the slump in between was so bad that it cut total grosses seriously.

Melbourne Legit Oke

Melbourne, Dec. 24.

Williamson-Tait will produce 'Yes, Madam,' with Freddy Foss, next. 'Desert Song' finishes this week after a short revival season.

W-T will also revive 'Paul Jones' for a run try at a later date. 'White Horse Inn' will be shown in New Zealand by W-T starting Dec. 26, while the big concert attraction next year will be Richard Crooks.

Ernest Roll[illegible] just completed a run with 'Fla[illegible] Desire' and will probably mo[illegible]ow to Sydney for a spell. [illegible] done fairly well here o[illegible] few weeks.

'Fritzi' is described as a Parisian musical play, and the time is given as the present. Yet resort is had to the Can-Can and other attempts at entertainment of a vintage not of the moment.

'Fritzi' is not unlike 'Kiki,' bears some resemblance to 'Vicky,' and at times goes back to 'Mimi.' The locale is Paris, and everybody speaks straight English except Fritzi herself, who affects a polyglot dialect not readily recognizable.

She lives in a cellar and has gathered about her a bunch of boys of the street, supporting them by hanging around cafes and picking up the residue of discarded cigarettes. In addition, she doesn't hesitate to steal things. While in a shop, she picks up a pie addressed to a prominent theatre manager. Manager visits the cellar, accompanied by a gendarme. Fritzi sings to him, and he gives her a card to [illegible]is stage manager to put her in his [illegible] production.

[illegible]ding lady proves unsatisfac[illegible]t the dress rehearsal, and [illegible]er tells Fritzi to jump in at a [illegible]nt's notice and replace her. [illegible]n the manager takes Fritzi to [illegible]pper and to his flat, where she [illegible]s provided with alluring negligee and an enormous couch, augmented by champagne, and when the manager retires to his own room to make ready for the night, she locks the door between them and remains a good girl.

At the end of the evening, when Fritzi has returned to her cellar, he follows her there and proposes marriage.

Some of the music is tuneful, and there is a funny burlesque number called 'My Lord, the Carriage Waits.'

Rosalinde Fuller, in the name part, is more vigorous than sympathetic, and Ivan Wilmot as the manager is far from attractive. Probably the strongest hit is scored by Leslie French, a light comedian who sings and dances amusingly.

A reasonably talented company handle the supporting roles, and the production and costuming are better than average.

Piece is not likely to enjoy any extended stay in the West End.

LE TEMOIN

('The Witness')

Paris, Dec. 30.

Three act play by Steve Passeur, presented by Paulette Pax and Lucien Beer at the Oeuvre, Paris.

Stephane	Rachel Berendt
Solange	Marguerite Cavadaski
Valerie	Sonia Batchoff
Violette	Danielle-Lory
La Plaideuse	Emmy Gullies
Odette	Denise Javelet
Jose	Fernand Fabre
Gregoire	J.-H. Chambois
Daniel	Lefevre-Bel
Edouard	Paul Paulet

New Passeur piece is full of strange psychology and overdrawn characters.

Single set represents entrance hall of a provincial hotel, where man (Fernand Fabre) has a date with his mistress (Sonia Batchoff). He's greeted by the hotel keeper (Rachel Berendt) a widow, who falls in love with him at first sight. Then his mistress arrives, and after a quarrel because he won't let her come to the small town in which he lives with his wife and children, she commits suicide.

Rest of show consists of the man's determination to follow the girl in suicide, and fight of the hotel woman, who loves him, to prevent it. She makes him, but this is merely a postponement, his suicide being the show's denouement.

Play is not as morbid as it sounds in a brief summary, but is nevertheless packed with an atmosphere of strangeness. Doesn't seem to be the click which has been expected of Passeur for several years.

Acting is of high Paris standard, particularly that of Mlle. Berendt, who returns from a long run in London—she plays in English as well as French. Sonia Batchoff is a newcomer with promise.

Paris Fetes (Sh! It's Tourist Bait) Will Even Include Some Baseball

Paris, Jan.

Heavy list of entertainments is planned for the official Fetes de Paris, to be held next spring from April 23 to July 15 in an attempt to attract tourists back to this town.

Passion Play in front of Notre Dame, with the Cathedral floodlighted and the organ playing, will be repeated. This was about the only successful feature of last season's Fetes de Paris, which failed as a tourist draw.

Festival in honor of Moliere will be given in the courtyard of the Louvre Palace, with cooperation of stage and film celebs. Only outfit that has not been asked to contribute to this demonstration is the Comedie Francaise, which Moliere founded and which gives the most authentic representations of his plays. Just one of those Paris slip-ups.

Other events scheduled are a Wagner festival at the Opera, May 12 to 14, with a troupe from Bayreuth; presentations of Mozart's 'Don Giovanni' and of 'Fidelio' by an orchestra and troupe from Salzburg, and a French music festival.

Also a polo match between Argentina and Chile in the Bois de Boulogne, football and baseball games, a Russian ballet season, a ball in the Place des Vosges, picturesque downtown square; a radio festival in which Sacha Guitry will take part, a military band contest, and a flock of just plain celebrations.

Piccadilly Folds In London After 11 Weeks in Red

London, Jan. 14.

Piccadilly theatre here closed after 12 weeks, 11 of which were in the red, of a vaudeville policy which drew mainly on American talent for headliners. House was operated by Charles Olore and Alfred Esdolle.

With the exception of the opening week, when it showed a profit of $1,000, the Piccadilly lost an average of $1,000 weekly.

Leddy & Smith and the Simon agencies in New York stated that the sudden closing of the Piccadilly didn't affect either very much. These offices set most of the American talent into the theatre since it opened.

Simon agency had no acts set to go over, nor any there now, while Leddy & Smith agented Hal Menken, who was to have opened at the theatre last Monday (6). Office claims it has received no word from Menken, though feels that the performer's labor permit will protect him for payment of his contract in England.

American acts going over usually played two weeks at the Piccadilly and two at the Alhambra, Paris, on one contract.

Beatty for Mayfair

London, Jan. 5.

George Beatty has been signed to play the Mayfair hotel cabaret.

Henry Sherek is lining up an all American cabaret show for the occasion, which will include, besides Beatty, Harriett Hutchins and Mary Raye and Naldi. Raye is of the former Raye, Ellis and Le Rue, and Naldi was with Howell and Harger.

La Revue de la Chair

('Flesh Revue')

Paris, Jan. 1.

Revue in two acts (50 scenes) presentes at Concert Mayol, Paris, by Andre Denis and Paul Lefebvre. Written by Listone, Emile Codey and Farelli; staged by Edmond Carlus; dances by Georges Zenga; English line by Gladys Randall; costumes, Armoent and Zanel. Stars Hilda Brown.

Colored America again comes to the front of a Paris show. Hilda Brown here does some of the stuff that Josephine Baker brought to Paris some nine years ago, but without quite as much pep. She's not played up as an American, however, but as a Creole, which in France means a native of the French colonies.

Besides Miss Brown, show depends on nudism and French comedy of a fairly low calibre. Outstanding among the nude dancers is Lorna Rode, who manages to conceal her nudity vial long blond hair, far more modestly than the French girls in the show. Also an oriental dancer billed as Floryane, who does effective exotic grimaces and gestures.

Rest of show is ordinary, but will get by for the baldhead trade.

Chi Opera Chorister Turns Impresario, Does Capacity in Rockford

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Jean Baptiste DeKeyser, a chorus man of Chi City Opera, has friends in Rockford, Ill. When last month City Opera shut down with salaries unpaid, DeKeyser got in touch with the town, which had not heard opera in 15 years, and obtained assurance that his friends would organize a paid audience if he provided a show. He banded some of the paid-by-the-week routineers of the City Opera, persuaded Rosalinda Morini to lend a hand as prima donna, rehearsed 'Rigoletto' under a sub-contractor, and gave the opera Jan. 8 to a sold-out house, calling his venture the Chicago Opera. All concerned got some money from the gamble.

Now DeKeyser talks of going back next month to give 'Carmen,' and of organizing a middlewest circuit.

Chicago Tuning Up

By Frederick Donaghey

Eric DeLamarter, who since '17 has been associate conductor of the Chicago Symphony, is so ill that Conductor Stock postponed his vacation by a week and is conducting the concerts of Jan. 14-16-17-18. Hamilton Harty comes as guest-conductor for Jan. 23-24-28, by which time, it is expected DeLamarter will be able to take over pending Dr. Stock's return. DeLamarter was for some years drama-critic of the Inter-Ocean, retired in '14 by merger with the Record-Herald, and served for a time as music-critic of the former and of the Tribune. He was concert-conductor at Ravinia Opera for years. He is heavily represented in the repertoire of the Chicago Symphony as a composer.

Mina Hager, Chicago contralto at one time under Campanini a member of the Chicago Opera, is soloist of the Jan. 14 concert by the Symphony with John Alden Carpenter, another Chicagoan devoted to music represented in her contribution by 'Gitanjali,' his setting of some poems by Tagore, the Hindu aesthete.

Having in the 10 years since the orchestra was founded allowed special privileges on wage-scales and such to the Chicago Woman's Symphony, the musicians' union is now insisting that the organization is of age, and that it pay attention to some of the rules and regulations of the Chicago Federation. The orchestra for 10 years has been depending for revenues for overhead on gifts, sponsored series of concerts, and window-sales. So, 75 sponsors are asked to give $30 apiece to carry the player's fees for remaining concerts of this season's schedule, with 25 of those so far solicited having promised to help. Each sponsor's $30 will take care of one player's fees, there being 75 players and the whole sum required being $2,250. The union is not insisting that the players be paid the same scale as the men of the Chicago Symphony, but requires that salaries be guaranteed. The women gave their third concert of the season Jan. 12, in the Studebaker, with Olga Valentine's ballet as an extra.

The group of 11 well-knowns who set out in December to find responsible guarantors of $100,000 for a six-weeks season of opera next season, expect to call it a day by the end of the month and disband, saying: 'If Chicago can't insure a season for that sum, it's silly to worry whether or not there's to be a 1936 opera-season. Men and women who were expected to give $1,000 apiece said they would give $100, the same men and women who are horrified when told there may be no opera and then grimly ask what's become of the Chicago spirit. They were so used to letting George do it,— that they think another George should happen along with a load of what they call Chicago spirit. We will try until the end of the month; but just now we have in sight $22,000.'

Liederkranz Society Sued

Reading, Pa., Jan. 14.

George D. Haage, who for many years has presented stars of opera and concert locally, has brought suit for $1,350 against the Reading Liederkranz, German singing society, to recover salary alleged due him as its musical director.

Haage has served the organization for many years.

Met's Balto Fold-Up

Baltimore, Jan. 14.

Metropolitan Opera will close its '35-'36 season with a three-day stand in Balto, April 2-3-4. Productions will be 'Carmen' (Rosa Ponselle), 'Tristan and Isolde' (Kirsten Flagstad and Lauritz Melchior), and 'La Boheme' (Lucrezia Bori, Lawrence Tibbett and either Giovanni Martinelli or Nino Martini). Met comes here after its week in Boston, starting March 21.

Deemed fitting that the final performance the Met gives this season should be the one in which Lucrezia Bori has announced will signal her retirement after 28 consecutive seasons with the outfit.

DETROIT SENDING 3 OPERAS TO CHICAGO

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Thaddeus Wronski, impresario of the Detroit Opera, here to fix dates and terms for an after-Easter visit of his company in repertoire of three operas. Two will be novelties in Chicago—'The Dybbuk' and Prince Igor,' old stuff in the Met but never placed in repertoire of Chicago Opera. 'Aida' will be third opera, with Rosa Raisa in title-part. She will have title-part in 'The Dybbuk,' also. Plan to include 'La Traviata' in rep, with Lucrezia Bori, of the Met, and a star tenor, has been dropped.

Concert dates not yet decided. Wronski wishes to come in mid-April; but time he desires is held by San Carlo Opera and Monte Carlo Ballet, both returns. Expectation is that, if Fortune Gallo refuses to push back into May, Detroit venture will go into first half of April.

ROYAL OPERA HOUSE GA-GA ON NOVELTY

Rome, Jan. 3.

Stage sets used in the production of 'Iris' which was the opening night attraction at the Royal Opera House in Rome actually and literally presented a novel angle. In both the first act, which was laid in a Japanese landscape, and the second act, which took place in the interior of a Japanese brothel, the scenery was tilted toward the audience. The plane of the stage was inclined at a considerable angle, so that all the actors' motions had to take place up or down the slope instead of on a level, and 'upstage' meant a lot more than usually.

In the first set, the house and the bridge spanning the river were designed at angles corresponding to the tilt of the whole set, so that the audience, even the part of it that is used to the worm's eye view, got a bird's eye view of both, being treated to a good look at the roof of the house, and a good guess as to whether the bridge would come toppling over the footlights most any moment or not.

In the brothel scene, the furniture was adapted in the same angular way; and when the drapes at the rear (and top) of the stage were drawn aside and the crowd appeared in back and above the interior, the audience shared the nice sensation of being menaced by the crowd with the little Japanese girl who was being exhibited.

Sets were after designs by Nicola Benois, but with important artistic modifications and technical adaptations by Pericle Ansaldo.

Reinhardt

other starts. The dance troupe romps on before the men with the praying shawls can quite get off. Some of the legs show. It seems sacrilege.

Doesn't Mince Gestures

Isaac Van Grove, who directs the orchestra, is singing some of the parts. Ben Cutler, who leads a jazz band at the Shelton hotel, is handling a small part; he's an angel. Press agent number three wants to know how the VARIETY mugg likes it. Just at that moment Reinhardt puts his fingers to his nose in an expressive gesture.

Paul Denis has a small part. He is really the son of the late Cantor Rosenblatt. He doesn't want anyone to know. He wants to make his way on his own.

Von Mendelssohn is jotting down notes. Herold is jotting down notes. Helene Thimig is jotting down notes. Reinhardt is holding his head.

On stage Abraham (Macaulay) is offering his son in sacrifice to God. The child screams. He is a boy out of the 'Dead End' cast. It is gripping. Reinhardt weeps. Mrs. Reinhardt wipes a tear from her eyes.

A moment later another scene. Sam Jaffee is scoffing. Reinhardt is laughing. Mrs. Reinhardt is laughing.

Press agent number four asks the mugg not to forget to mention that Malcolm Lamar and Harry Beatty are handling the technical end of rebuilding the old theatre on 34th St.

'How many press agents are there anyway?'

No one seems to know. A half-dozen or so. Joseph Brainin is in charge. Or Ann Silver is in charge. They each have several assistants.

The show is scheduled to open the last week of January. It's been postponed twice. It may be postponed again a couple of times. After all, rebuilding a theatre. . .!

Finally the first act is over.

'Wie lang?' asks the professor.

'Sixty-seven minutes,' he is told.

'Fine,' he smiles. Now, Kinder!' They're his children.

Everyone on stage again. The Professor is in center stage. The entire cast surrounds him. All the copious notes are brought forth. Gone over one by one. The Professor explains them.

You said, in YOUR soul,' Abraham. That's not the way. I want you to say 'in your SOUL.'

Abraham repeats it. 'In your SOUL.'

On to the next note. On into the night.

Concerts, Ballets at Jones Beach; Barge as Stage, 5,000 25c Seats

Deal is on for a season of high class concerts to be presented in the open-air at Zach's Bay, Jones Beach, N. Y., next summer. Long Island State Park Commission is contacting various metropolitan agencies on the idea of supplying Grade A talent during the hot months. Presentations would be given on the floating pier, anchored permanently a short ways out from the shore, with total seating capacity (on land) of 10,000 seats.

Besides singers, plans include broadcasting, ballets, pageants, symphonies, and other offerings adapted to such purses. There would be 5,000 seats free to patrons with the remaining half sold at a quarter. Last year WPA talent appeared at the resort, but officials want class fare for the coming season starting in June.

One idea under consideration is to move symphonies and other attractions which are done at Lewisohn Stadium in Manhattan out to the beach for repeat performances. Added appearances would double work for those pacted for such dates and would add prestige to the play spot itself. Commission would like nightly shows or at least four times a week. B. L. Van Schaink is handling preliminary negotiations.

7,000 SEATS SOLD OUT

Seattle Goes Big for $1.50 Top Piano Recital

Seattle, Jan. 14.

Folks here will put out dough for ace attractions. This is again proven this week with sellout of 7,000 seats at Civic aude for Percy Grainger, Australian pianist-composer, who got record crowd at concert last night. Pop prices prevailed, 50c to $2.50, with gross close to $7,000. Mail order biz was great, being 80%, and sellout was chalked up almost week in advance of date.

Capacity biz also greeted Ballet Russe at Music Hall, sponsored by Ladies' Musical Club. This 2,300-seater was packed two nights and at mat, with take range 50c to $2.50.

CHI OPERA LACKED A THEATRE LICENSE

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Annual check-up by bureau having charge of theatre licenses finds that none was asked for, paid or issued to Civic Opera House for 1935, although big theatre was in occasional use for miscellaneous offerings and for five weeks housed season of Chicago Opera. Argument in rebuttal by building-managers is that opera house is a not-for-profit venture, although point is not provided for in city ordinance.

That Civil Theatre, in same building, lacked 1935 license was discovered when owners of 'Tobacco Road' sought to lease house after Mayor Kelly closed play in Selwyn. However, Standard Oil, as importer of Jack Hylton's radio-show, is taking care of license for theatre, which seats fewer than 1,000.

WPA

people were willing to pay $50 initiation plus half a year's dues in order to secure the $103.50 monthly from the government.

Deny Arty Charge

Claim that the project's shows are being framed along little theatre lines is refuted. It is admitted that little theatre managements are at the head of the shows, but the casts are professional and so are those assigned to act as company managers, while the press department is also culled from the ranks of show business. A number of people formerly prominent on Broadway are known to be in the project's New York set-up.

Last week Elmer Rice, regional director, added a fourth house close to the theatre zone to be used for WPA shows. It is the former Princess, on 39th street, which is under lease to Labor Stage, a unionist group sanctioned by the American Federation of Labor. The 299-seater will be ready for use on Feb. 1 but Labor Stage has not formed a playing organization, nor has it found the type of play for which it was formed—dramas favoring the cause of unionism. Other WPA-leased theatres in Manhattan are the Biltmore, Manhattan and Daly's.

Deal between WPA and Labor Stage calls for sharing the receipts 50-50, the admission scale to be 50c. top. Labor reserves the right to select the plays which the WPA will present at the house, to be renamed.

One unit known as the Theatre Workshop has Cleon Throckmorton in charge. It is located at 455 Tenth avenue (35th street), where settings and costumes are designed and made. At these quarters 'The Eternal Wanderer' was tried out early this week by the Yiddish drama group. Another unit known as the Yiddish intimate theatre is readying a number of playlets.

Dervish Technique Studied by Dancer

Belgrade, Jan. 3.

Tashamira, U. S. dancer now here, is studying Dervish prayer-dances with the idea of taking them back to New York after her present tour. She's been visiting some of the old Dervish monasteries in Skelpje near here, to get first-hand sfanis on the ancient rituals.

Dancer lived here until she was nine years old, when her family moved to America. This spring she embarks on a tour of the Balkan states, with a single appearance scheduled in Paris, before leaving for the other side. Her return here was marked with success as natives are keen on dancing, either classical or modern.

Using the Air

Following the earlier and fairly extensive practice of newspapers and magazines in using radio to gain readers and prestige, trade papers are now also starting to use broadcasting. Roy Dickinson, head man at Printer's Ink, is a leading spirit in a contemplated program over WOR, New York, in which four advertising trade papers in periods of six weeks each will conduct a once-weekly quarter hour devoted to trade gossip of their field.

Advertising and Selling, Advertising Age and Tide are the others lined up by WOR according to seniority. Program will start later this month.

Drug World and American Druggist, owned by Hearst, are already conducting a three-a-week half hour program over WINS, New York. Ed Flynn is master of ceremonies with lots of music sandwiched in. Trade gossip plus oddities of the drug and medicine world and its history constitute the pattern of the program.

Board of Governors: Wilmer Cronin, of Aberdeen; I. E. Jones, of Salisbury; and James Curley, of Laurel.

'Round 'n 'Round'

until Columbia won out. Max Winslow wired for the rights to the forthcoming Columbia-Harry Richman filmusical, 'Rolling Along' and the filmusical will now be retitled and rescored after the pop song. Metro made a screen test of Mike Farley-Eddy Riley, as well as a bid for the boys' song with an eye to the 1937 'Broadway Melody.' Paramount was also hot on it.

Personals

Farley-Riley and their Onyx Club (N.Y.) Boys (swing combo), are currently at the Paramount on Broadway, doubling from the nitery. Eddie Cantor has the songwriting band leaders also slated for a radio commercial.

In the background of 'Music Goes Round and Round' is Red Hodgson, who is the accredited co-author of the song. He first introduced the phrase as an ad lib obligato while working as trumpet player with the late Earl Burnett's orchestra around Chicago. In the choruses of 'Dinah' Hodgson would ad lib, 'The Music Goes Round and Round.' Farley and Riley developed and embellished the present version as currently constituted and Santly-Joy is splitting the royalties three-ways equally.

Hodgson is personal-appearancing around Chi now, upping from $60 a week to $600, and the Farley-Riley boys, besides their Decca recordings, etc., are likewise coming into the fancy money. Rockwell is currently working on the idea of uniting the trio.

'Round and Round' is already the subject of a legal claim by the National Songwriters League, 503 Grand street, Jersey City, of which Louis A. Gorlan is president, and V. Ray Grobholz, executive secretary.

Select Music's attorney, J. T. Abeles, has the claim from the League that it published a Ford's Model T. Joke Book and that included therein is a verse about 'the wheels go round and round; you press the pedal down; whoa-ho-ho; way down below-below-below,' etc., all tending to allege lyric similarity.

Abeles has also a claim against the Chicago Evening American for allegedly printing the entire chorus without permission. The American printed a story on Red Hodgson, Chi boy, hence the lyric reprint.

Campbell-Connelly by blanket contract has 'Round' for England but the song has created unusual demands for the Select Music catalog for other countries. Francis, Day & Hunter has taken it for France and Ralph S. Peer, Inc. (Southern Music Co.) has acquired the Mexican, Argentine and Brazilian publication rights.

French Sunday Paper

Sunday newspaper idea has at last invaded France. Paris Soir, evening sheet with the largest circulation in the country, is publishing on Saturday nights (with a Sunday date) two simultaneous editions, one just like all the weekday papers and the other, called Paris Soir Dimanche, containing eight pages of features as well as regular news. Readers can have either edition they want, but the one including the features costs twice much as the other.

Features are closely imitated from American and English Sunday newspapers, and for the most part are actually translated or adapted from English. Comic strip idea is not entirely adopted, but a page of humorous cartoons is used weekly, each time by a different artist. Women's features are conspicuously played up, and 'Advice to the Lovelorn' is included. Also a page of kid stuff.

Fiction and Films

By WOLFE KAUFMAN

Stearns Is Back

Harold Stearns was once called the 'white hope of American intellectuals.' He was once editor of the old Dial. He was on the old Dramatic Mirror, catching shows, writing about the theatre. He published several books, primarily 'Liberalism in America,' which brought forth a lot of comment and attention. Then he went to Paris. Everyone in Paris who visited the Latin Quarter's bars knew Stearns or knew about Stearns. For a time he was Peter Pickem, handicapper of the Paris Chicago Tribune. For a while he corresponded for American papers. Most of the time he did nothing.

Now Stearns is back in America and has gone back energetically to writing. His newest is 'The Street I Know' (Furman; $2.75), and it is delightful reading. It is Stearns' autobiography, and packs a lot of punch. Some of the show biz reminiscences of the old days are splendid, despite the fact that Searns is still a comparatively young man. There are some understatements, and a lot of omissions, which, had they been included, would have made it an outstanding tome. Even as is, however, it's revealing. Beyond the meat for thought it contains, it is an example of fine, flowing language such as is seldom seen these days.

Dangerous Ground

One of the outstanding of the newer school of writers, James Gould Cozzen, hits the bell once more with his newest novel, 'Men and Brethren' (Harcourt - Brace; $2.50). It deals in an unusual way with an unusual subject, and there will be those who will be offended by it, but one thing is certain: it is impossible to doubt the sincerity and the clarity of the style and the telling.

Story is of the difficult time an intelligent preacher is having. Everyone's troubles are piled on him and he has to straighten everyone out. He narrowly escapes getting himself into a series of jams by preaching and practicing worldly cures for worldly ills, rather than sticking to strict orthodoxy. It's a dangerous subject that could easily have turned to pulp-luridness, but is so carefully and intelligently handled by Cozzens as to avoid anything of the sort.

Not for films.

Hatch Arrives

Eric Hatch has been slowly but definitely climbing for some time. He is described by his publishers as the American Wodehouse, which hasn't been such a bad selling point. It can be dropped now. Hatch won't need it any more. His newest book, 'My Man Godfrey' (Little-Brown; $2) is such a funny piece on its own as to make his name a cinch for sales.

It's a constantly moving action yarn with loads of funny situations and fine dialog. Should make a very good film, too.

Too Old

'The Far Princess,' an old and little-known (in America) play by Edmonde Rostand, is now brought out in a new translation by John Heard (Bruce Humphries; $1.50).

It is a bit difficult to understand the publication of this play at this time. It was written for Sarah Bernhardt, and performed by her. Undoubtedly, in those days, it was fine and beautiful and meaningful. Today, it is hardly likely to interest anyone in the U. S.

Roch. Daily's Newsreel

Rochester, N. Y., Democrat Chronicle has bought a motion picture outfit including sound equipment to revive local newsreels as promotion. Three years ago the newspaper tried it with hired equipment, dubbing in description and sound effects after the actual shooting.

Roy Elliott, night city editor and news broadcaster, will be narrator for the new series, which will be furnished to the RKO Palace in Rochester and all nabe houses.

George Barker

George Russell Barker, 66, Beverly Hills, Cal., newspaper publisher, died there Jan. 6. He recently sold the Beverly Hills Citizen to Will Rogers, Jr.

Deceased published paper at Sand Point, Idaho, for 18 years and during his residence there served a term as Lieutenant-Governor of the State. His widow and a daughter survive. Burial in Glendale, Cal.

Going Places

By Cecelia Ager

What's Going On?

Strange pic, 'Sylvia Scarlett.' Sets the hausfraus puzzling what's going on here. But what of it? Katharine Hepburn, as irritating as interesting; Natalie Paley, good old Iris March. Only Dennie Moore, of the femmes in the cast, keeps her head midst the preciousness. Miss Moore is direct: she just wants a man, any man.

And, though the wardrobe's not important—for 'Sylvia Scarlett' is a 'quaint' thing, all sensitive whimsy and such—it had to have two designers to dope it out. Muriel King to continue the established Hepburn silhouette—bulk across the shoulders, sleekness about the ribs and waist, full flaring skirt; Bernard Newman, to devise Miss Paley's motoring costume—beige tweed suit, belted, patch-pocketed, bound in the black velvet that lines the casually swinging, matching three-quarters length cape. Miss Moore's costumes not credited. What Miss Moore, dame of simple instinct wears, doesn't count.

There's a deal of impishness for Miss Hepburn to put over, which she doesn't; a deal of grace, and delicacy, and a evascent charm, which she does. It's a role with a lot of gamut in it, and two coiffures. One's curly.

So That's What It Is

Mr. Leonidoff himself explained, very patiently, that the wiggly painted set against which the ballet corps are wax flowers in this week's show at the Music Hall, is really a Paisley shawl. Wax flowers are Victorian, Mr. Leonidoff said. Paisley shawls are Victorian, he said, nor was there any reproof in the way he said the two things, one right after the other.

Well, then it's a Paisley shawl that stretches the height and breadth of the Music Hall stage, ominous in its brownish coloring and the tentacles of its epic pattern. But it doesn't scare the girls of the ballet corps out of their well learned routines, and they prance about, after they've scampered down the spiral stairway hidden in the flowery sculpturet set piece, and others of them have torn themselves away from the Dresden china candlesticks that flank it, scamper about on a wave of applause that always bursts when anything on the Music Hall stage comes to life.

As shepherdesses they cavort, the paniers of their skirts made of white net ruffles, the skirts themselves of white chiffon, yes, quite transparent, with pink silk roses appliqued on, and on their sleeves too, and on their sheperdess hats, the whole stage picture accurately stuffy, since stuffiness is Victorian, too.

'The Cake Walk,' which is the Rockettes' assignment for the week, is clear and bright, done with spirit before a set that's either a swank modern apartment house or, more probably, an old southern manse. But first Hilda Eckler and partner, who is costumed with the Continental touch in white pants, green tails and magenta-pink sleeves, do their own cake-walk fantasy, very artistic and cultured. Now the Rockettes, and they look very swell. Those of them who're supposed to be boys wear black tights, those permitted to stay girls, long, sheer, black silk stockings, not, when they get going, too long.

Jean Grows Up

Something happened to Jean Parker in London and 'The Ghost Goes West,' something some of the folks in this country figured had better happen pretty darn soon if they were going to have to see her again. Either she was going to grow up, and in so doing, kick out some of that soft sweetness of hers, or else. But she did, and now that she's come home in 'The Ghost Goes West,' they're going to take her back, even gladly.

She grew up so nicely, indeed, that when she makes her entrance in the picture, the musical score plays jazz and it's not at all incongruous. Also, she seems to play a pretty good game of ping pong on the ship, looks good in her white shorts and dark blouse doing it, so that when later, she's all in white net ruffles, flowers in her hair, and moonbeams, as of yore, well, she's earned it. Gentle, yes, and docile still, but now somehow it fits.

The picture's own wistful charm is a match for Miss Parker's; it lends her some humor from its own vast store, and so Miss Parker's goodness and virtue is kept in its place.

She's Back

It is sweet to meet again, after these long, sensible years, the screen heroine who is half panther, half domestic little kitten, talks in an exotic accent and says 'me' when she should say 'I'. Until Lupe Velez turned up this very week in 'The Morals of Marcus,' there hasn't been a good one around since Mary Pickford was adorable in 'Kiki.'

Miss Velez is like a hunk of lavender and old lace, catapulting about, scratching herself, cuddling, ogling, pouting, snuggling. Her pride in her bosom, her conscientious care that it be photographed from all possible overhead angles; the international decolletage of her costume—of the same sweeping precariousness whether she be waif in Syrian harem or schoolgirl in London's Mayfair, is as dulcet in mood and period as Willie Howard's lovely quartet from 'Rigoletto.' While the rest of the world has been changing, restlessly probing for new techniques for allure, Miss Velez has remained steadfast; to her own self she's been true. So Lupe's an old fashioned girl today, and her work has the old school charm.

It is interesting to note in 'The Morals of Marcus' that sure enough, the ladies in eastern harems dress like acrobatic dancers in floor shows. They wear snug little trunks under their filmsy harem trousers. Since Miss Velez has a penchant for standing before roaring fireplaces in her night clothes, she wears trunks with her nightgowns as well.

'The Morals of Marcus' has Adrianne Allen, too, who is a villainess in the story though the cruel photography and haphazard clothes she's submitted to can't make her look it. Her voice is much too kind and good, her manner much too unquenchably sympathetic.

A New Screamer

If Frances Drake doesn't watch out she's going to be the new Fay Wray of the horror pictures. She's got invaluable equipment for the task; eyes large and wide and good at staring, a fine scream, a voice that slides down to the dull tones of despair with ease, a graceful way of seizing a black velvet mantle and after flinging it about her brave shoulders, stalking out into stormy nights, and a nice, trim look in African jungles. In fact, Miss Drake is simply magnificent in jungles. Take her in the jungle that goes with 'The Invisible Ray.'

There, it's plain from the listless way Miss Drake fans herself, it's very hot. Miss Drake doesn't like it at all; she's miserable. So her face shines with perspiration, which shine is very becoming and very chic—the new 'moist make-up'—and meanwhile her long bob remains fluffy, her white culotte skirt and short sleeved blouse stays fresh and her disposition even. All that happens to Miss Drake in horror picture jungles, therefore, is a flattering shine. That makes her ideal.

Beulah Bondi, in 'The Invisible Ray' too, is another ideal horror picture character, the one who doesn't believe it, who says tush-tush, who looks a little bit odd yet essentially dignified. Miss Bondi can handle the the works. Indeed, she's a whiz at the odd yet dignified test, for she's a big game hunter in 'The Invisible Ray,' prowls about in shorts and sun helmet and carries a rifle, and even so, looks like if she and a tiger ever met, the tiger would be the first to run.

Violet Kemble Cooper, the spectral one, the one of the fateful voice, is okay too. So sincere about her work, in fact, she's willing to hide her own fresh blondeness behind the bloodless make-up and ashen pallor of an enigmatic old matriarch, who's blind to boot.

voting interest in his corporations and continue as manager.

Cooper said he plans to turn over to the foundation his interests in the Lincoln Theatre Corp., the J. H. Cooper Enterprises of Colorado, Criterion Theatre Corp. and the Regal Theatres, both of Oklahoma.

In addition, Cooper will build two new theatres, one at Bartlesville, Okla., the other at Ardmore, Okla., and all profits from these theatres will be turned to the children's farms. He is at present building a theatre in Oklahoma City, making 10 he operates here, and the same goes for the new house as well as the others.

Cooper, independently wealthy, came to this country from Poland as a boy and went through Ellis Island with the equivalent of 10c. in his pocket. He now lives in New York. A widower, he has a five-year-old son.

Cooper has turned over to E. N. Van Horne, Lincoln banker, $100,000 as an initial grant for the foundation. Van Horne is named treasurer. Cooper will be president of the foundation, with Sam Waugh of Lincoln as secretary.

Trustees are S. R. Kent, president of 20th Century-Fox; A. C. Keough, general legal counsel of Paramount Pictures; Charles Stuart, J. C. Seacrest and J. E. Miller. Edgar S. Vaught, federal judge for the western district of Oklahoma, and J. H. Everest, prominent Oklahoma City attorney and Cooper's legal counsel, will be asked to serve as trustees.

Cooper has bought a 640-acre tract on the Connecticut-New York state line, an estate originally developed by J. C. Morgan, on which is a large English style mansion, and this is expected to serve as the first of the farms for the 'deserving destitute youngsters.' Cooper will pick children from the curbstones on which he used to sit when he first came to New York from Europe.

Spitz-RKO

ferred shares is in public hands. Meehan owns most of the KAO preferred, or around 40%, and RKO owns around 33⅓%. RKO, however, owns all of the KAO common.

There is an even division of the KAO Board between RKO and the Meehan interests, with Herbert Bayard Swope, chairman and neutral boss of the KAO operating setup. Swope is understood to hold a contract which runs until September, next.

For the present Spitz is not a member of the KAO board, nor does he hold any executive title in KAO.

The entire RKO circuit of directly owned and affiliated houses numbers around 100.

KAO situation, however, is one which could be ironed out following RKO's own reorganization, as it is a matter mostly between Meehan and RKO. RKO's directly controlled theatre operating subsidiary is Stadium theatres which is estimated to have control of around 25 of the RKO affiliated houses.

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

After digesting RKO matters here for two weeks with Sam Briskin, new production head, Leo Spitz, company prez, was scheduled to quit the Coast by tonight (Tues.) for New York, where company reorganization plans will be taken up. Spitz will return here around Feb. 10.

John Hertz (Lehman Bros.) and Floyd Odlum (Atlas), both interested in RKO financing, talked with Spitz while here, but studio reorganization was not discussed. Odlum spent last week-end at San Francisco, but never went near the RKO lot while here.

Briskin, after a week's conferences with Radio execs, has okayed the production of five features immediately. First to get under way will be 'Puzzle of the Briar Pipe.' Others include 'Fugitive Gold,' with Richard Dix. Louis King will direct from the screen play by Tom Lennon, Louis Stevens and Ferdinand Reyher. Starting date of Feb. 15 set for Katharine Hepburn's 'Mary of Scotland.' Dudley Nichols scripted from the Maxwell Anderson play. John Ford will direct.

Fourth okay went to 'Witness Chair' for Ann Harding with the star postponing her European trip to get the picture out of the way. 'One for Two,' by James Edward Grant, winds up the quintet scheduled for production.

Among the Women

By The Skirt

Best dressed woman of the week:
SOPHIE TUCKER
House of Morgan—Night Club

Perfect for Soph

House of Morgan might have been built to order for Sophie Tucker. It is just the right capacity for her. A Tuesday night crowd kept Soph on her feet for a long time.

Most informal was her dress of a heavy silver lame, made in coat fashion with a belt. Four glass buttons match a velvet scarf of dubonnett shade. Intricate is a fold of silver and velvet wound around Soph's blonde hair. Two huge diamond clips hold the scarf in place.

Miss Swarthout Impresses

Gladys Swarthout comes to the screen unfortunately in a film version of 'Rose of the Rancho,' an outdated story. Miss Swarthout, looking like Gloria Vanderbilt, before she parted with her familiar headdress, is a real find for pictures. A real story should be found for this charming young woman to offset the bad impression of 'Rancho.'

Costuming of the picture of Spanish origin is flattering to most anyone, and particularly to Miss Swarthout. The full ruffled skirts with the high comb and lace mantillas are lovely. Disguised as a boy in black velvet bandit outfit, her slim figure is one of the new star's assets.

Another Redhead

'Riffraff' at the Capitol reveals a new Jean Harlow. Gone are the platinum locks. She is Hattie, redhead, a daughter of the waterfront. It's a wig Miss Harlow is wearing, but it would take an expert to detect it.

Clothes as a rule don't go with waterfront pictures, but Miss Harlow manages to wear a few regulars. One white satin evening frocks is frilled around the neckline, forming a bolero. There are prints and checks and a cheap assortment of coats and caps. Una Merkel is also inexpensively dressed, suiting the slum atmosphere. In a dancehall Miss Merkel weara a print chiffon.

No Records

The State won't hang up any records this week. It must be pretty tough following those two past weeks, the Harry Richman and Eddie Sullivan shows. Nevertheless the bill this week is by no means bad, with Emil Boreo headlining.

Yacopis Troupe starts proceedings with the men as bullfighters in white and gold and red capes lined in yellow. The one woman of the troupe wears white satin pajamas embroidered in grape design of red.

Three X sisters, a redhead, a blonde and a brunet, dress exactly alike. Dresses are of white crepe with tops of brilliants.

Blanche Calloway leads her grey coustumed band in a green and red print. The dress, cut V both front and back, has a sash of cloudy blue.

Rialto's Chiller

The new Rialto theatre on 42nd street should prove a gold mine, according to the crowds trying to get in last Saturday (11). But it will have to show better pictures than 'The Case of Dr. Crespi' with Eric VonStroheim. A harrowing tale of burying a man alive. Harriet Russell, a newcomer, doesn't impress here. As the wife of the buried man she shows but two costumes, one a coat dress trimmed with mink with small hat and a mourning out . Geraldine Kay looks well in nurse costume and is also seen in a simple cloth frock.

Lupe's British Film

At the Globe theatre Lupe Velez is starring in an English picture called 'The Morals of Marcus'. Miss Velez is discovered aboard ship in satin pajamas and then in a series of well made frocks, the most prominent being an evening gown of a combination of black and white satin.

Adrienne Allen looks well in a caped frock with wide fur bandings.

Plays on Broadway

MID-WEST

Drama in three acts presented at the Booth, N. Y., Jan. 7, '36, by the Shuberts; written by James Hagan; staged by Melliville Burke; $3.30 top.

Beulah Zanhiser ..... Jean Adair
Hilda Zanhiser ..... Bernadine Hayes
Tooteboy Zanhiser ..... Van Heflin
Reverend Carr ..... Frank Wilcox
C. D. Aker ..... Cliff Hicks
Jim Meed ..... Edgar Nelson
Luke Zanhiser ..... Curtis Cooksey
Fred Zanhiser ..... Don Dillaway
Skywash Rowell ..... John Alexander
Jimweed Bandy ..... Walter Baldwin
Roy Meeker ..... David Byrne
Ed Hendee ..... Eugene Keith
Doc Tanner ..... Dodson Mitchell
Lee Bragg ..... Richard Taber

As a reminder of the devastating drought and dust storms which tortured the people on the plains of the middlewest last year, this drama is effective, aided by the playing of its well chosen cast. But as popular drama it is distinctly doubtful.

'Mid West' is interesting as to story, yet audience-exacting in that it demands long periods of quiet attention. Author was cognizant of that, as indicated by working in of laughs here and there.

Play is enacted in front of the farmhouse of upstanding Luke Zanhiser, and his clear-headed wife, Beulah. Their two sons are mature, Fred wed to Hilda, a city girl who never could get used to farm life, and Tooteboy, who is a problem. He had attended college and returned as a Communist, tirading against government autocracy. He had fallen in with two reds who had been railroaded out of San Francisco after fomenting trouble there.

Tooteboy inflames the farmhands of a neighbor and also the men on his father's place. They make demands for double pay and go on strike, disregarding the kindnesses of Luke in the past. Zanhiser is warned by friends that the people of the district have threatened to lynch those sewing the seed of revolt and that it would be best for his son to desist.

Tooteboy and the other agitators are taken at the point of guns and there is a 'necktie party.' Boy had been told by his parents to leave the county, but he refused. Grief of the father and mother in the good last act is well simulated. The other son, his wife and babe depart for Detroit, he to make a fresh start there.

Land is parched to powdery dust, the chickens die in the heat, so do the cattle, except for the few head taken east by the government. The old people are stony broke, but the land is theirs and there they will stay.

Then, comes the rain.

There is some criticism of the federal restrictions on farming, which is another political aspect of the play and, while it may take in too much territory, that section of the country attracted much attention during last summer's long arid stretch.

Curtis Cooksey as Luke, and Jean Adair as his wife, are excellent and there are other good performances, including Bernadine Hayes as the young wife, Dodson Mitchell as the doctor, and Van Helfin as Tooteboy.

'Mid-West,' despite its good points, has a theme too thickly spread with trouble for the average playgoer. Ibee.

Latest play about Hollywood is sentimentally concerned with the success of one of its stars, unmistakably the late Marie Dressler. It was fairly well received by first nighters but seemed limited in appeal.

'Star' is an atmospheric play given to emotionalism, and in that direction it is effective. Perhaps the central character is on the stage too much, but mainly trouble is that Zoe Akins provides too little opportunity for comedy. Just once does the pace change, and that is a noisy studio scene.

Play is not supposed be biographic but Marie Dressler did climb to the heights in pictures after being washed up on Broadway, broke and growing old. So does Amy Bellaire of the play, whose well adorned home on Riverside Drive is being sold at auction to satisfy creditors at the prolog.

A woman friend, Agnes Jessey, has Amy as a house guest in her Hollywood home shortly thereafter. But meeting the celebs doesn't get the stage belle of other days into pictures. Going on her own in cheap lodgings and giving lessons in acting on the side, she decides to try for an extra part and joins the mob outside the gates of a studio. An actress goes hoarse from repeats, and Amy is given a chance, injecting comedy where none was suspected.

That is the start of Amy Bellaire's rise in filmdom, the final scene of act two. At the close, her director and producer are begging her to consider scripts when she has been ordered on vacation by her doctor. That is similar to the Dressler tradition, but the gaiety and good humor of the departed star are missing. Instead there is heavy sentimentality, Amy receiving white violets and a gift from her former admirer-producer at the hands of his son, who, it is presumed, is her son, too.

Jobyna Howland, who hasn't been around for some time, and who is comparable in age to the character she portrays, took the curtain calls as a friendly tribute, tears streaming down her face. Formerly Miss Howland had a flair for comedy parts, such as in 'The Gold Diggers,' some 15 years ago. Her performance now as the sentimental Amy is something different, a woman who is anything but a comedienne.

Play calls for quite a variety of bits but running through most of the scenes are Frank Conroy as a flashy picture director and Merle Maddern as Amy's best friend. Smaller parts stand out as played by Whitney Bourne, Ethel Intropidi, Edward Emerson (making one appearance as Strassberg, big shot producer), Hans Hansen, James Todd and Eddie Albert.

There are 29 speaking parts and 17 extra people. Ibee.

GRANITE

Drama in three acts presented at the Vanderbilt, N. Y., Jan. 13, '36, by Charles Hammerslough; written by Clemence Dane; staged by producer; $2.75 top.

Penny Holt ..... Phyllis Welch
Jordan Morris ..... Lee D. Hollister
Judith ..... Mary Morris
Prosper ..... Byron McGrath
Nameless Man ..... Robert H. Gordon
Clergyman ..... Jack Sonnes

'Granite' is another drama loaded with misery. It stands no more chance than others of the kind of recent arrival.

Fact that it is a one set show with a short cast may explain the why of its presentation. That lure has fooled many an aspiring showman. Another reason may be the fact that Clemence Dane authored it. However, the play was presented in London 10 years ago and didn't get to first base there either.

Dated more than 100 years ago, the play does not give much indication of the people of the period. It is set on the granite rock known as Lunday Island off the coast of England. There, Jordan Morris lives alone with his wife, Judith, save for their half grown girl Penny. He is a hard man and there is no affection between the couple. Ostensibly a farmer, his real racket is to lure ships by means of false lights and gather goods that wash ashore from the wrecks.

Penurious people with not a grain of humanity, such characters cannot be expected to have audience sympathy. Story develops, when Jordan's half brother, Prosper, arrives. He is half owner of the farm and demands that Jordan put his house in order. A nameless man washed ashore is taken in by the wife. She grudgingly gives him sustenance and in return he promises to fetch and carry, to be her servant and swears to kill any man who hurts her.

When Jordan grips Judith's wrist and bruises her the fellow, who is supposed to be looney, takes a gun and shoots Jordan in the back as he stands at the brink of the 200 foot cliff that overlooks the sea.

Previously Prosper and Judith had started an affair. The half brother goes to England, returning in five months with a parson. Judith and Prosper are happy in a fashion, but after a year trouble starts when he fires the handyman. Because of their secret she pleads for the man and the order is rescinded. However, in a tiff, the new husband, too, grips the woman's wrist and she cries out in pain. He is promptly stalked on the cliff by the killer and tossed in the drink.

It is unknown who is now master and he calmly tells the woman they will live together, sending the kid away. He partially identifies himself by saying that he had leaped overboard from a convict ship, which is good enough reason why he does not want to return to England.

Listening to a whining woman through most of a play is too tough on the customers but that is what Mary Morris is called on to do. Play has been done previously here by amateurs and that seems to be where it belongs. Direction is faulty, but that doesn't make much difference. Ibee.

TRULY VALIANT

Drama in three acts presented at the 49th Street theatre, N. Y., Jan. 9, '36, by Gustav Blum; written by Irving Stone; staged by the producer.

Esa Cranby ..... Ian MacLaren
Martha Cranby ..... Martha Mayo
Dale Cranby ..... Alan Handley
Berne Bowen ..... got Stevenson

Author of this piece wrote a best seller novel not long ago and that may have tricked Gustav Blum into believing that Irving Stone also wrote a winning play in 'Truly Valiant.' No explanation, however, can change the rating of the piece, among the new lows of the season.

Four persons and one set. It could have been a money getter if good, but that is merely theory. Story is set within the living room of a professor in economics out on the coast. There is mention of a rift some years previous between the man and his wife, although they seem to be a well suited couple. However, that is the explanation of professor's affair with a girl who is working her way through college.

Son of the professor falls in love with the lass and, being offered a berth in St. Louis, proposes marriage, though she is to have a baby. There are several ideas about what to do about it. After all exhibit anguish the youngsters exit for the parson and the train, while the wife sticks to aid the professor finish his great book on economics.

First nighters seemed to think they were taking it on the chin and audibly protested by giggling over lines. Ibee.

RICE INCOME TAX BATTLE IN COURT

Albany, Jan. 14.

Court of Appeals is considering arguments on behalf of Imer Rice, who is fighting a state tax of $3,231.85 levied on royalties for 1929, '30 and '31.

State contends it has a right to collect the money on royalties amounting to $121,818.38 received by Rice in the three years. This claim is based on a decision of the United States Supreme Court to that effect, handed down in May, 1932.

Rice, however, argues that the decision was not retroactive and that up to May, 1932, royalties on copyright articles were subject only to federal tax.

Loop Legit Box Office Slides; 'Maid' $12,000; 'Great Waltz' $28,000

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Strange things happened to the legit houses last week, with the box-offices taking it on the downbeat generally. Went on the downbeat despite the fact that the town was packed with miscellaneous mercantile conventionites. Two items which might account for the slide-off are: the reaction from the hotcha New Years' week and the snow and blizzard conditions of the early part of the session. That the weather is a reason and not an alibi was seen in the perk of box-office bustle towards the end of the week, with sell-outs taking the place of the empty pews of Monday and Tuesday.

All grosses slipped. 'Great Waltz' fell off sharply in the early days of the week, but perked strongly at the finish, selling out on Saturday matinee and night, which means a take of approximately $9,000 on the day. Show has cut its Sunday performance in order to evade the payment of the additional one-eighth to the cast. At its present pace the musical figures to stick in town eight to 10 weeks.

'Anything Goes' also clipped a show off its schedule, eliminating the Wednesday matinee. Musical is showing fine evening strength, however, and has little to worry about on that score.

Week-end brought the conclusion of scheduled runs to 'Old Maid' and the Ruth Draper one-woman show. 'Maid' finished three excellent weeks under the American Theatre Society banner, while Miss Draper drew two weeks of fine carriage trade for her first appearance in the loop in six years. 'Squaring the Circle' failed to open Monday (13) after two weak sessions.

Estimates for Last Week

'Anything Goes,' Grand (1,200; $3.30) (4th wee).—Now doing eight performances a week. Slid somewhat last session to $21,000, a bit disappointing after its strong getaway.

'Great Waltz,' Auditorium (3,700; $2.75) (3d week).—Also clipped to eight shows weekly. Got a couple of bad shoves by weak business during the early days of the week, which held the gross down sharply to $28,000 for the stanza. Figuring on at least eight-week stay here.

'Old Maid,' Erlanger (1,200; $2.75). —Closed here on Saturday (8) after good three-week subscription galley to $12,000 for its final nip-up. Next play in will be Nazimova in 'Ghosts.'

'Personal Appearance,' Harris (1,000; $2.75) (4th week).—Slumped with the general toboggan of the loop. Around $8,500 last week.

'Squaring the Circle,' Blackstone (1,000; $2.20)—Had difficulty last week, on general weak conditions and tough competition. Off to $3,000. Failed to reopen Monday (13).

Ruth Draper, Selwyn (1,000; $2.20).—Had a good fortnight. Touched $5,000 for the final gallop.

HEAVY ADVANCE SALE ON 'ROAD' IN PITTS.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 14.

Advance sale for 'Tobacco Road,' which opened last night (13) at the Nixon has hit around $14,000, a record figure over the week-end, with every indication that will do twice that, or pretty close to absolute capacity, at $2 top. Not in a long time has a play worked up as much excitement around town. First night had 100 standees in.

Catholic press has been pretty bitter against 'Road' during the last couple of weeks, with both police and Mayor McNair being besieged by requests for interference. Authorities, however, indicated they wouldn't step in unless absolutely necessary.

Last night was a complete sell-out, with plenty of standees, flock of buyers unwilling to miss anything and not taking a chance of running into deletions later in week. Next week is being held open by both the show and house, everything pointing to a h.o. It'll be the first time in years a str ight play has had two weeks here.

Nixon was dark last week, with nothing definitely booked in to follow, although 'Porgy and Bess' is expected early in February as the third subscription offering of AT'S.

'Larger Than Life,' comedy by Joseph Schrank, goes into rehearsal for Crosby Gaige shortly.

'Lend Me Your Ears,' comedy of rural politics by Lewis Beach and Philip Wood, due for a February opening under banner of Charles Harris.

COHAN $9,000, FAIR

Cleveland Just Doesn't Seem to Care Much for Legit

Cleveland, Jan. 14.

Legit theatre season here will wind up behind the eight-ball, judging by poor returns of the Hanna's previous plays and now the rather discouraging reception given George M. Cohan's 'Dear Old Darling,' which drew only a fair $9,000 for the week.

Being the only legit house remaining in Cleveland, with all cricks whooping the show up, the figure was particularly disappointing to William Blair, manager, who used extra ad space. Slushy weather didn't help; neither did the fact that a rival film house put on the flickerized 'Ah Wilderness' (MG) same week, ballyhooing it as Cohan's best play.

Next play for the Hanna is 'Personal Appearance,' due Jan. 27, which should give the natives time to recuperate from holiday expenses. Nazimova in 'Ghosts' follows during the second week of February.

Estimates for Last Week

'Dear Old Darling' (Hanna; 1,435; $2.50 top). A good Cohan show. Below-par gross of $9,000 not an accurate criterion; it's an off-season, with not enough dramas or musicals being booked regularly to make 'em play-conscious here.

'FROME' $8,500 IN PHILLY, BIG

Philadelphia, Jan. 14.

It was proved rather conclusively last week that Philly legit patrons will turn out, in numbers, for a try-out if they like the price scale and if there are any names in it.

Max Gordon brought his latest tryout production, 'Ethan Frome,' to the Garrick last week and it marched right into real business. A grand set of notices helped; so, probably, did the fact that the management took extra advertising in the dailies. Names of Pauline Lord, Ruth Gordon and Raymond Massey also meant something, but the fact that, with it all, only a $2 top was charged, likely is the real answer. Biz picked up steadily and reached virtual sell-out proportions by Friday with $8,500 reported—big at the scale. Second week ought to be even better.

Chestnut and Forrest were both dark last week and 'I Want a Policeman,' on its second full week at the Broad, where it played two weeks and a half, fell off badly to only $5,500.

'The Black Pit,' leftist piece put on by the New Theatre outfit here had negligible takings in its second week at the Erlanger with a $1.50 top and most seats at 30 and 50c.

Forrest relights tonight (Tuesday) with the 'Follies,' in for a fortnight's stay. Chestnut reopens next Monday with William Gillette in the John Golden revival of 'Three Wise Fools,' also for two weeks. First two performances have been taken over by the Philadelphia Forum. 'Porgy and Bess' comes to the Forrest on Jan. 27, with Walter Hampden's 'Cyrano' revival due on Feb. 10 at the Garrick.

Following the two weeks of 'Ethan Frome,' that house gets a single week of 'The Fortune Teller,' Victor Herbert operetta done by the Little Opera Company, another local group. Erlanger goes into pix on Jan. 30.

Estimates for Last Week

'Ethan Frome' (Garrick, 1st week). Great notices and growing attendance; $8,500 at $2 top, big. Second week ought to be very big, too.

'Black Pit' (Erlanger, 2d week). Trade union backing but got negligible takings at $1.50 top and lots of 30 and 50c seats. House goes into pix on Jan. 30.

'I Want a Policeman' (Broad, 3d week). Two and a half weeks in all. Last six days weren't so forte. Maybe $5,000.

Lincoln's Single

Lincoln, Jan. 14.

Shortest legit season in years is due here this year. Only one show is on the books and it's the prize winning 'Old Maid' starring Judith Anderson and Helen Menken, which is skedded at the Liberty Jan. 27 for a mat and eve showing.

Liberty is a 1,400-seat house and normally runs second run films.

'Night' $15,000, S. F.

San Francisco, Jan. 14.

'Night of January 16th,' A. H. Woods, coast production at the Geary, had it all its own way last week, being the only legit open. Second week drew a nifty approximate $15,000 into the b.o. same as first week.

'Dodsworth arrives Thursday (16) to give opposition at the Curran, next door to the Geary. 'Petrified Forest' with Conrad Nagle is being readied for the Frisco by Henry Duffy.

'Old Maid' and 'Children's Hour' are also skedded as road show attractions.

'FOLLIES' $20,000 2D WEEK, HUB

Boston, Jan. 14.

Town has quieted down after the boom holiday week and last week found only 'Three Men on a Horse' at the Plymouth, 'Ziegfeld Follies' closing a two-week engagement at the Opera House, and 'Celling Zero' completing a third week at the Copley.

'Follies' led the group, although a sharp swerve was noted in the take, as compared with the opening week.

Immediate future looks fairly bright, with Lunt and Fontanne coming to the Colonial for two weeks with 'Shrew,' starting Jan. 20. Same night will find Cornelia Otis Skinner opening a week of repertoire at the Shubert.

Walter Hampden is coming to the Shubert Jan. 27 with 'Cyrano,' and he will probably be followed by William Gillette in 'Three Wise Fools.'

Another opening will be 'End of Summer,' new S. N. Behrman play, starring Ina Claire, skedded to unfold at the Colonial Feb. 3.

Estimates for Last Week

'Ziegfeld Follies' (Opera House, $3.30, 2nd week)—Underwent some radical revision here, with some good results, but intake sagged on final week to $20,000.

'Three Men on a Horse' (Plymouth, $2.75, 10th week). Felt the pinch of post-holiday b.r. tightening and lopped off to $9,000, which is still 'oke.

'VANITIES' OKE $15,000 2D WEEK IN DETROIT

Detroit, Jan. 14.

Following two bang-up sessions with Earl Carroll's 'Vanities,' the Cass Theatre this week is housing George M. Cohan's new play, 'Dear Old Darling,' which opened Monday (13) before a good-sized audience. Given an extensive circus-like exploitation for the past several weeks, 'Darling' should hit high-level coin.

Last week's take on 'Vanities' was a reported $15,000 for eight performances. First session of nine shows, aided by high-price New Year's Eve performances, exceeded $20,000, terrific, topping everything so far this season. Exploitation on 'Vanities' was very intensive and extensive. Revue now to be a unit.

'Personal Appearance' is booked for the Cass starting Jan. 19. The Wilson, Detroit's only other legit, is still dark. Theatre Guild's 'Porgy and Bess' may come in Feb. 10 prior to Chicago.

Estimate for Last Week

'Vanities' (Cass; 1,400; $2.75)—Held over after a big $20,000 first session, show continued to get an extra lot of publicity and drew a nifty $15,000 for eight performances last week. 'Dear Old Darling' opened Monday (13) at $2.75 top.

'Goes' Notice Up

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Two weeks' closing notice was posted last night for 'Anything Goes.' Company proposed to take a 25% salary cut in order to prolong the loop engagement and is awaiting word from the show's producer, Vinton Freedley, whether okay.

As originally planned, the limited tour of 'Goes' is to terminate here because of the February release date for the picture version. Film, however, cannot be exhibited locally during the run of the stage show.

FINAL CURTAIN

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Jan. 14.

The Majestic, one time leading legit house here, will be razed under a municipal decree as being unsafe. Was erected in 1908.

Musicals Off in Post-Holiday Drop; 'Regina' Leads Dramas with $23,200

Post-holi reaction was not uniform along Broadway last week. It was expected that the legits would dive after New Year's week. Some did, but there were more big grosses recorded and several of the intermediate successes got as much as during the holiday going.

The musicals were more affected than the straight play hits. Drop was more severe with 'Jumbo,' which fell off nearly 50% at the Hippodrome takings being around $45,000. 'Jubilee' held up better than the others at $31,000 and 'Scandals' showed strength and approximated $28,000 on its first normal week.

'Victoria Regina' was established as the new dramatic leader, with takings of $23,200 for its first eight performance week. 'Boy Meets Girl' was a strong runner-up with $19,500, toppling 'First Lady,' which got $18,800, 'Boy' having boosted its ticket prices. 'Dead End' again was around $16,000, while 'Pride and Prejudice' slipped to $15,500.

'Libel,' 'Parnell' and 'Night of January 16' held the holiday pace, while 'May Wine,' non-chorus musical, perked.

'Taming of the Shrew,' in its final week at the Guild, should be up among the leaders. 'Porgy and Bess,' Alvin, also winding up, was drawing heavy trade early this week, too. Other closings are 'Evening Star,' taken off at the Empire after four days; 'Truly Valiant,' which lasted only one night at the 49th Street, and 'Tapestry in Gray,' folding on Thursday (16). 'Mid-West,' Booth, is the sole survivor of three entrants last week and it got a mixed press, with indications doubtful.

Coming next week: 'Ethan Frome,' National; Illustrators' Show, 48th Street; 'The Puritan,' Belmont. 'Julie The Great' is a possibility.

Estimates for Last Week

'A Room in Red and White,' 46th Street (CD-1,375-$3.30). Presented by Dwight D. Wiman and George Kondolf; written by Roy Hargrave; slated to open Saturday (18).

'At Home Abroad,' Winter Garden (18th week) (R-1,493-$4.40). After another week will move to the Majestic, 'Follies' coming here; 'Abroad' doing fairly well after excellent start; $28,000 estimated.

'Boy Meets Girl,' Cort (8th week) (C-1,059-$3.85). No post-holiday reaction for smash, paced around $19,500, which is capacity at new scale, boosted from $3.30.

'Children's Hour,' Elliot (61st week) (D-1,000-$3.30). Still making goodly profit and engagement indefinite; last week's takings around $7,500.

'Dead End,' Belasco (12th week) (D-1,000-$3.30). Agency demand not so strong, but box office line always present and better than $16,000 registered last week.

'First Lady,' Music Box (8th week) (C-1,000-$3.30). Very little under capacity last week for standout comedy, and the gross was $18,800.

'Granite,' Vanderbilt (1st week) (D-804-$3.30). Presented by Charles R. Hammerslough; written by Clemence Dane; originally produced in London in 1926; opened Monday.

'Hell Freezes Over,' Ritz (3rd week) (D-918-$3.30). All sorts of cut-rates but not much money; takings estimated around $4,000; not sure after this week.

'I Want a Policeman,' Lyceum (1st week) (D-957-$3.30). Presented by Francis Curtis and Richard Myers; written by Rufus King and Milton Lazarus; opened Tuesday.

'Jubilee,' Imperial (14th week) (M-1,468-$4.40). Post-holiday reaction among musicals more than straight show hits, but approximately $31,000 here was big last week.

'Jumbo,' Hippodrome (9th week) (M-4,327-$4.40). Nose-dived last week as expected, after big coin of New Year's; estimated around $45,000.

'Libel,' Henry Miller (5th week) (D-944-$3.30). Showed strength, grossing as much as New Year's week, which had an increased 'eve' scale; $10,500 indicates English melier will stick.

'May Wine,' St. James (7th week) (M-1,520-$3.85). Picked up smartly at week-end and expected to make a go of it; estimated at $14,000 or better.

'Mid-West,' Booth (2nd week) (D-704-$3.30). Opened last mid-week and drew divided press; fair trade thereafter; better line this week.

'Mulatto,' Golden (13th week) D-1,150-$2.75). Moved here from the Vanderbilt Monday; mixed cast drama using cut rates of various types but low gross; under $2,500.

'Night of Jan. 16,' Ambassador (18th week) (D-1,156-$2.75). Holding to very good money and now looks set into the spring; last week close to $10,000.

'O Evening Star,' Empire. Withdrawn Saturday after four nights; drew a weak press.

'One Good Year,' Fulton (8th week) (C-913-$3.30). Claimed to be making some money; with cut rate aid, business around $5,000 last week for one set comedy.

'Parnell,' Barrymore (10th week) (D-1,096-$3.30). As good last week as during New Year's period and should go through winter; around $10,000.

'Paradise Lost,' Longacre (6th week) (D-1,019-$3.30). The party show; all kinds of groups, mostly going for balcony; around $6,000 weekly, which may get it by.

'Porgy and Bess,' Alvin (15th week) (M-1,355-$3.30). Final week; lays off next week, then plays Philadelphia; under $20,000; not enough for musical of kind.

'Pride and Prejudice,' Plymouth (11th week) (D-1,036-$3.30). Eased off more than other leaders last week; with takings around $15,500, however, goodly profit.

'Russet Mantle,' Masque (1st week) (C-700-$3.30). Presented by Jerome Mayer and Murray Jay Queen; written by Lynn Riggs; opens Thursday (16).

'Scandals,' New Amsterdam (4th week) (R-1,717-$4.40). Figured to have clicked and well up in the money last week, with takings around $28,000.

'Taming of the Shrew,' Guild (16th week) (CD-941-$3.30). Final week; could remain longer but road dates imperative; paced around $15,000; house probably dark until next month, then getting 'End of Summer.'

'Tapestry in Gray,' Shubert (C-1,325-$3.30). Will close after Thursday (16) night's performance; will have played three weeks, which gives management participation in picture rights coin.

'Tobacco Road,' Forrest (111th week) (C-1,017-$1.65). Should last through season; now in third year and still making money; around $9,000.

'Truly Valiant,' 49th Street. Taken off after premiere; severely panned.

'Victoria Regina,' Broadhurst (4th week) (CD-1,118-$3.30). New dramatic leader; three matinees (no Tuesday night performances because of broadcasts); first full normal week $23,200; capacity all shows.

Other Attractions

'Ghosts,' Morosco; Ibsen revival again goes to the road after this week.

'Let Freedom Ring,' Civic Rep theatre; well spotted on 14th street; top goes up to $1.50 from $1 this week.

$7,000 FOR 'LETTY,' L. A.; PIX TRY PLAYS

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Approximately 11,000 dribbed and drabbed into the El Capitan's b. o. last week for Charlotte Greenwood's 'Waiting for Letty,' Southern California's lone legit holdout. This is the show's third week. Should stay three more.

Nothing of importance in the legit field hits here until 'Dodsworth' at the tail end of this month. Meanwhile the Fox-West Coast will attempt to revive legit and kill double bills with condensed versions of plays.

'P. A.' $9,000, D. C.

Washington, Jan. 14.

'Personal Appearance' wound up its week at the National here Saturday with approximately $9,000, which was oke considering the cast had no stars and most of the smart crowd had seen the show on Broadway.

Current attraction is Alex Yokel's new one, 'Julie the Great.' Opening was set up from Monday to tonight (14), because of installation of heavy scenery.

'Vanities' Folds

'Vanities' closed as a road show in Detroit Saturday (11) and is being converted into a unit for picture and vaude house bookings. Revue toured the south, then worked north through the Mississippi valley.

In unit form, 'Vanities' is being rehearsed this week in Indianapolis.

German Dilemma: Don't Want Modern Operettas and Can't Use Old Ones

Berli , Jan. 5.

Popularity of modern operettas and musical plays is way below that of classical productions, according to an official of Reichs Theatre Chamber. Experience of recent years, including the period before the Nazi regime, shows that for a safe long run it's still the old classical operetta that catches the public's fancy.

When Oscar Hammerstein II came to Berlin a score of years ago to produce 'Rose-Marie' at the Admirals Palace, he wanted to show the Berlin directors what is what in the musical comedy market. And he succeeded, only in the other direction. Loss on the play during its Berlin run was staggering.

Modern musical plays produced here in grand style before 1933 were mostly built around a star, such as Richard Tauber or Lily Massary or Gitta Alpar. 'Ball at the Savoy,' featuring Miss Alpar, did beautif ly for the Rotter Brothers, then i big moguls in Berlin's theatrical market, controlling seven large houses. What the 'modern' Lehar production, 'Frederike,' with Tauber and Kaethe Dorsch leading, brought in financially, was spent on another Lehar operetta, 'Land of Smiles,' which came on the wrong side of the ledger. 'Victoria and Her Hussar' and 'The World Is Beautiful,' both were termed fine productions, but no money makers.

German producers of today have to look to the classical operetta of years ago, such as 'The Bat,' 'The Merry Widow,' 'The Bird Dealer' and 'Frau Luna.' Fancy salaries are out, anyway, and so are Jewish composers, Jewish actors, and Jewish producers.

With so much boosting of the classical operetta, Offenbach's 'Orpheus' and his 'Tales of Hoffman' would be ideal, as would Oscar Straus' 'Waltz Dream' and Leo Fall's catchy tunes. But the Aryan laws forcibly changed the map of Germany's theatrical market.

Operetta-minded Germany is still waiting for a new Oscar Straus, Jacques Offenbach, Leo Fall, Paul Abraham, Jean Gilbert-Winterfeld, etc. And in the meantime, nothing.

Company, which is due to open about the end of March, sails Feb. 14, having a 10 weeks' guarantee with options.

Mek National Reopens

Mexico City Jan. 14.

Palace of Fine Arts (National theatre) is scheduled to reopen on Jan. 16 with a gala function after having been closed for repairs during several weeks.

Mexico Remains Adamant Against Ticket Specs

Mexico City, Jan. 14.

Specs got another wallop here when the senate nixed a proposition to make legal the peddling of amusement tickets by organizing hawkers into co-ops, bonding each seller for $1,500, licensing each with federal government and limiting their slice to 10% over the ductas' face value.

Solons decided that ticket speculation is prejudicial to public interests in any form.

Bill to make local anti-spec law national is pending in congress.

BERLIN VAUDE SANS NATIVE COMEDY

, Jan. 6.

Any foreigner here the first time marvels how vaude still carries on in the Fatherland, inasmuch as bills of from 10 to 12 acts consist to the largest extent of acrobatic exhibitions and dancing. Whatever comedy of note is offered hails from the United States.

Reason for the almost total absence of comedy is that native talent, such as offered by the late Otto Reutter and Robert Steidl, has no more field to develop. Reutter, earning $2,000 per week in his time and considered the safest draw in vaude, was a comedian of rare ability. Yet, under changed conditions as they are today, he would probably have to starve if he had to depend on vaude for a living, because his political songs would either land him in a concentration camp or in an asylum.

Comedians going in for politics today in Germany would soon become tragedians. Any attempt in this direction, if merely mentioning names, is suici

Such native comedians as still grace the boards go in for hokum and, if it's real hoke, they own their theatres themselves, as illustrated by Eric Carow and Wilhelm Bendow.

Painful attempts of native actors to solve this acute problem has done a lot to encourage managers to import foreign talent. No artificial camouflage can fool audiences today any more, with the Hollywood flickers just around the corner at 20c a throw.

Coward-Lawrence Single Actors Get Lukewarm Nod, but Biz Sure

London, Jan. 14.

Two sets of three one-acters by Noel Coward, starring himself and Gertrude Lawrence, opened at the Phoenix Thursday (9) and last night (13), respectively. The first set was not well received but the second won warm praise. Engagement is limited to 12 weeks, with capacity practically assured due to Coward's local popularity.

Robert Donat opened in an anti-war propaganda play last night (13) at Southport, titled 'Red Night.' It was splendidly received despite having a tragic ending.

Trahan Lands

London, Jan. 14.

Al Trahan, with Yukona Cameron, opened at the Holborn Empire on the new bill, after a fortnight at the Alhambra, Paris. It is his first London date in four years and, despite the fact he's following another piano act, is the laughing hit of the bill.

George Robey in a new act, is below his usual standard.

Business is far under that of last week, when Will Mahoney headlined.

Tait Goes Back

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

Carrying the stage rights to 'Three Men On a Horse' and 'Anything Goes,' E. J. Tait, head of the Williamson-Tait theatres in Australia, has sailed for home.

Plans to put the two into production immediately his arrival down under.

PARIS HOLIDAY BIZ VERY GOOD

Paris, Jan. 5.

Holiday period, climaxed by New Year's eve, was a bonanza for Paris theatres and niteries. Even weak legit shows drew coin on the two big nights, Christmas eve and New Year's eve, and the danceries raked it in. Only film exhibs are kicking that they didn't get their share.

Some of the record Christmas eve takes in legit houses were at the Chatelet, with spectacle-operetta 'Sun of Mexico'; Theatre de Paris, with Marcel Achard's comedy, starring Raimu, 'Coconut'; Marigny, with Edouard Bourdet's historical pageant play, 'Margot'; Gymnase, with Henry Bernstein's 'Heart'; Bouffes Parisiens, with Max Dearly farce, 'Popinod'; and the tiny Vieux Colombier, with 'Elizabeth.'

In the niteries, $10 was a normal supper price with champagne extra.

Vaude houses did three shows on both big days, with plenty biz. Film theatres did all right Christmas and New Year's, but the slump in between was so bad that it cut total grosses seriously.

Melbourne Legit Oke

Melbourne, Dec. 24.

Williamson-Tait will produce 'Yes, Madam,' with Freddy Foss, next. 'Desert Song' finishes this week after a short revival season.

W-T will also revive 'Paul Jones' for a run try at a later date. 'White Horse Inn' will be shown in New Zealand by W-T starting Dec. 26, while the big concert attraction next year will be Richard Crooks.

Ernest Rolls has just completed a run with 'Flame of Desire' and will probably move the show to Sydney for a spell. Legit has done fairly well here over the past few weeks.

'Fritzi' is described as a Parisian musical play, and the time is given as the present. Yet resort is had to the Can-Can and other attempts at entertainment of a vintage not of the moment.

'Fritzi' is not unlike 'Kiki,' bears some resemblance to 'Vicky,' and at times goes back to 'Mimi.' The locale is Paris, and everybody speaks straight English except Fritzi herself, who affects a polyglot dialect not readily recognizable.

She lives in a cellar and has gathered about her a bunch of boys of the street, supporting them by hanging around cafes and picking up the residue of discarded cigarettes. In addition, she doesn't hesitate to steal things. While in a shop, she picks up a pie addressed to a prominent theatre manager. Manager visits the cellar, accompanied by a gendarme. Fritzi sings to him, and he gives her a card to his stage manager to put her in his new production.

Leading lady proves unsatisfactory at the dress rehearsal, and manager tells Fritzi to jump in at a moment's notice and replace her. Then the manager takes Fritzi to supper and to his flat, where she is provided with alluring negligee and an enormous couch, augmented by champagne, and when the manager retires to his own room to make ready for the night, she locks the door between them and remains a good girl.

At the end of the evening, when Fritzi has returned to her cellar, he follows her there and proposes marriage.

Some of the music is tuneful, and there is a funny burlesque number called 'My Lord, the Carriage Waits.'

Rosalinde Fuller, in the name part, is more vigorous than sympathetic, and Ivan Wilmot as the manager is far from attractive. Probably the strongest hit is scored by Leslie French, a light comedian who sings and dances amusingly.

A reasonably talented company handle the supporting roles, and the production and costuming are better than average.

Piece is not likely to enjoy any extended stay in the West End.

LE TEMOIN

('The Witness')

Paris, Dec. 30.

Three act play by Steve Passeur, presented by Paulette Tax and Lucien Beer at the Oeuvre, Paris.

Stephane	Rachel Berendt
Solange	Marguerite Cavadaski
Valerie	Sonia Batcheff
Violette	Danielle-Lory
La Plaideuse	Emmy Guiltes
Odette	Denise Javelet
Jose	Fernand Fabre
Grecoire	J.-H. Chambois
Daniel	Lefevre-Bel
Edouard	Paul Paulet

New Passeur piece is full of strange psychology and overdrawn characters.

Single set represents entrance hall of a provincial hotel, where man (Fernand Fabre) has a date with his mistress (Sonia Batchoff). He's greeted by the hotel keeper (Rachel Berendt) a widow, who falls in love with him at first sight. Then his mistress arrives, and after a quarrel because he won't let her come to the small town in which he lives with his wife and children, she commits suicide.

Rest of show consists of the man's determination to follow the girl in suicide, and fight of the hotel woman, who loves him, to prevent it. She makes him, but this is merely a postponement, his suicide being the show's denouement.

Play is not as morbid as it sounds in a brief summary, but is nevertheless packed with an atmosphere of strangeness. Doesn't seem to be the click which has been expected of Passeur for several years.

Acting is of high Paris standard, particularly that of Mlle. Berendt, who returns from a long run in London—she plays in English as well as French. Sonia Batcheff is a newcomer with promise. Stern.

Paris Fetes (Sh! It's Tourist Bait) Will Even Include Some Baseball

Paris, Jan.

Heavy list of entertainments is planned for the official Fetes de Paris, to be held next spring from April 28 to July 15 in an attempt to attract tourists back this town.

Passion Play in front of Notre Dame, with the Cathedral floodlighted and the organ playing, be repeated. This was about the only successful feature of last season's Fetes de Paris, which failed as a tourist draw.

Festival in honor of Moliere will be given in the courtyard of the Louvre Palace, with cooperation of stage and film celebs. Only outfit that has not been asked to contribute to this demonstration is the Comedie Francaise, which Moliere founded and which gives the most authentic representations of plays. Just one of those slip-ups.

Other events scheduled are a Wagner festival at the Opera, May 12 to 14, with a troupe from Bayreuth; presentations of Mozart's 'Don Giovanni' and of 'Fidelio' by an orchestra and troupe from Salzburg, and a French music festival.

Also a polo match between Argentina and Chile in the Bois de Boulogne, footbell and baseball games, a Russian ballet season, a ball in the Place des Vosges, picturesque downtown square; a radio festival in which Sacha Guitry will take part, a military band contest, and a flock of just plain celebrations.

A. Cherniavsky Named To Head Empire Exhib

Johannesburg, Dec. 26.

Piccadilly Folds In London After 11 Weeks in Red

London, Jan. 14.

Piccadilly theatre here closed after 12 weeks, 11 of which were in the red, of a vaudeville policy which drew mainly on American talent for headliners. House was operated by Charles Clore and Alfred Esdoile.

With the exception of the opening week, when it showed a profit of $1,000, the Piccadilly lost an average of $1,000 weekly.

Leddy & Smith and the Simon agencies in New York stated that the sudden closing of the Piccadilly didn't affect either very much. These offices set most of the American talent into the theatre since it opened.

Simon agency had no acts set to go over, nor any there now, while Leddy & Smith agented Hal Menken, who was to have opened at the theatre last Monday (6). Office claims it has received no word from Menken, though feels that the performer's labor permit will protect him for payment of his contract in England.

American acts going over usually played two weeks at the Piccadilly and two at the Alhambra, Paris, on one contract.

Beatty for Mayfair

London, Jan. 5.

George Beatty has been signed to play the Mayfair hotel cabaret.

Henry Sherek is lining up an American cabaret show for the occasion, which will include, besides Beatty, Harriett Hutchins and Mary Raye and Naldi. Raye is of the former Raye, Ellis and Le Rue, and Naldi was with Howell and Harger.

La Revue de la Chair

('Flesh Revue')

Paris, Jan. 1.

Revue in two acts (50 scenes) presented at Concert Mayol, Paris, by Andre Denis and Paul Lefebvre. Written by Listore, Emile Codey and Farelli; staged by Edmond Carlus; dances by Georges Zenga; English line by Gladys Randall; costumes, Aumont and Zanel. Stars Hilda Brown.

Colored America again comes to the front of a Paris show. Hilda Brown here does some of the stuff that Josephine Baker brought to Paris some nine years ago, but without quite as much pep. She's not played up as an American, however, but as a Creole, which in France means a native of the French colonies.

Besides Miss Brown, show depends on nudism and French comedy of a fairly low calibre. Outstanding among the nude dancers is Lorna Rode, who manages to conceal her nudity vial long blond hair, far more modestly than the French girls in the show. Also an oriental dancer billed as Fioryane, who does effective exotic grimaces and gestures.

Rest of show is ordinary, but will get by for the baldhead trade.

Chi Opera Chorister Turns Impresario, Does Capacity in Rockford

Chicago.

Jean Baptiste DeKeyser, a chorus man of Chi City Opera, has friends in Rockford, Ill. When last month City Opera shut down with salaries unpaid, DeKeyser got in touch with the town, which had not heard opera in 15 years, and obtained assurance that his friends would organize a paid audience if he provided a show. He banded some of the paid-by-the-week routineers of the City Opera, persuaded Rosalinda Morini to lend a hand as prima donna, rehearsed 'Rigolette' under a sub-contractor, and gave the opera Jan. 8 to a sold-out house, calling his venture the Chicago Opera. All concerned got some money from the gamble.

Now DeKeyser talks of going back next month to give 'Carmen,' and of organizing a middlewest circuit.

Chicago Tuning Up

By Frederick Donaghey

Eric DeLamarter, who since '17 has been associate conductor of the Chicago Symphony, is so ill that Conductor Stock postponed his vacation by a week and is conducting the concerts of Jan. 14-16-17-18. Hamilton Harty comes as guest-conductor for Jan. 23-24-28, by which time, it is expected DeLamarter will be able to take over pending Dr. Stock's return. DeLamarter was for some years drama-critic of the Inter-Ocean, retired in '14 by merger with the Record-Herald, and served for a time as music-critic of the former and of the Tribune. He was concert-conductor at Ravinia Opera for years. He is heavily represented in the repertoire of the Chicago Symphony as a composer.

Mina Hager, Chicago contralto at one time under Campanini a member of the Chicago Opera, is soloist of the Jan. 14 concert by the Symphony with John Alden Carpenter, another Chicagoan devoted to music represented in her contribution by 'Gitanjali,' his setting of some poems by Tagore, the Hindu aesthete.

Having in the 10 years since the orchestra was founded allowed special privileges on wage-scales and such to the Chicago Woman's Symphony, the musicians' union is now insisting that the organization is of age, and that it pay attention to some of the rules and regulations of the Chicago Federation. The orchestra for 10 years has been depending for revenues for overhead on gifts, sponsored series of concerts, and window-sales. So, 75 sponsors are asked to give $30 apiece to carry the player's fees for remaining concerts of this season's schedule, with 25 of those so far solicited having promised to help. Each sponsor's $30 will take care of one player's fees, there being 75 players and the whole sum required being $2,250. The union is not insisting that the players be paid the same scale as the men of the Chicago Symphony, but requires that salaries be guaranteed. The women gave their third concert of the season Jan. 12, in the Studebaker, with Olga Valentine's ballet as an extra.

The group of 11 well-knowns who set out in December to find responsible guarantors of $100,000 for a six-weeks season of opera next season, expect to call it a day by the end of the month and disband, saying: 'If Chicago can't insure a season for that sum, it's silly to worry whether or not there's to be a 1936 opera-season. Men and women who were expected to give $1,000 apiece said they would give $100, the same men and women who are horrified when told there may be no opera and then grimly ask what's become of the Chicago spirit. They were so used to letting George do it,— that they think another George should happen along with a load of what they call Chicago spirit. We will try until the end of the month: but just now we have in sight $22,000.'

Liederkranz Society Sued

Reading, Pa., Jan. 14.

Haage has served the organization for many years.

Met's Balto Fold-Up

Baltimore, Jan. 14.

Metropolitan Opera will close its '35-'36 season with a three-day stand in Balto, April 2-3-4. Productions will be 'Carmen' (Rosa Ponselle), 'Tristan and Isolde' (Kirsten Flagstad and Lauritz Melchior), and 'La Boheme' (Lucrezia Bori, Lawrence Tibbett and either Giovanni Martinelli or Nino Martini). Met comes here after its week in Boston, starting March 21.

Deemed fitting that the final performance the Met gives this season should be the one in which Lucrezia Bori has announced will signal her retirement after 28 consecutive seasons with the outfit.

DETROIT SENDING 3 OPERAS TO CHICAGO

Chicago, Jan.

Thaddeus Wronski, impresario of the Detroit Opera, here to fix dates and terms for an after-Easter visit of his company in repertoire of three operas. Two will be novelties in Chicago—'The Dybbuk' and Prince Igor,' old stuff in the Met but never placed in repertoire of Chicago Opera. 'Aida' will be third opera, with Rosa Raisa in title-part. She will have title-part in 'The Dybbuk,' also. Plan to include 'La Traviata' in rep, with Lucrezia Bori, of the Met, and a star tenor, has been dropped.

Concert dates not yet decided. Wronski wishes to come in mid-April; but time he desires is held by San Carlo Opera and Monte Carlo Ballet, both returns. Expectation is that, if Fortune Gallo refuses to push back into May, Detroit venture will go into first half of April.

ROYAL OPERA HOUSE GA-GA ON NOVELTY

Rome, Jan. 3.

Stage sets used in the production of 'Iris' which was the opening night attraction at the Royal Opera House in Rome actually and literally presented a novel angle. In both the first act, which was laid in a Japanese lan , and the second act, which took place in the interior of a Japanese brothel, the scenery was tilted toward audience. The plane of the stage was inclined at a considerable angle, so that all the actors' motions had to take place up or down the slope instead of on a level, and 'upstage' meant a lot more than usually.

In the first set, the house and the bridge spanning the river were designed at angles corresponding to the tilt of the whole set, so that the audience, even the part of it that is used to the worm's eye view, got a bird's eye view of both, being treated to a good look at the roof of the house, and a good guess as to whether the bridge would come toppling over the footlights most any moment or not.

In the brothel scene, the furniture was adapted in the same angular way; and when the drapes at the rear (and top) of the stage were drawn aside and the crowd appeared in back and above the interior, the audience shared the nice sensation of being menaced by the crowd with the little Japanese girl who was being exhibited.

Sets were after designs by Nicola Benois, but with important artistic modifications and technical adaptations by Pericle Ansaldo.

Reinhardt

other starts. The dance troupe romps on before the men with the praying shawls can quite get off. Some of the legs show. It seems sacrilege.

Doesn't Mince Gestures

Isaac Van Grove, who directs the orchestr , is singing some of the parts. Ben Cutler, who leads a jazz band at the Shelton hotel, is handling a small part; he's an angel. Press agent number three wants to know how the VARIETY mugg likes it. Just at that moment Reinhardt puts his fingers to his nose in an expressive gesture.

Paul Denis has a small part. He is really the son of the late Cantor Rosenblatt. He doesn't want anyone to know. He wants to make his way on his own.

Von Mendelssohn is jotting down notes. Herold is jotting down notes. Helene Thimig is jotting down notes. Reinhardt is holding his head.

On stage Abraham (Macaulay) is offering his son in sacrifice to God. The child screams. He is a boy out of the 'Dead End' cast. It is gripping. Reinhardt weeps. Mrs. Reinhardt wipes a tear from her eyes.

A moment later another scene. Sam Jaffee is scoffing. Reinhardt is laughing. Mrs. Reinhardt is laughing.

Press agent number four asks the mugg not to forget to mention that Malcolm Lamar and Harry Beatty are handling the technical end of rebuilding the old theatre on 34th St.

'How many press agents are there anyway?'

No one seems to know. A half-dozen or so. Joseph Brainin is in charge. Or Ann Silver is in charge. They each have several assistants.

The show is scheduled to open the last week of January. It's been postponed twice. It may be postponed again a couple of times. After all, rebuilding a theatre . . !

Finally the first act is over.

'Wie lang?' asks the professor.

'Sixty-seven minutes,' he is told.

'Fine,' he smiles. Now, Kinder!' They're his children.

Everyone on stage again. The Professor is in center stage. The entire cast surrounds him. All the copious notes are brought forth. Gone over one by one. The Professr explains them.

You said, in YOUR soul,' Abraham. That's not the way. I want you to say 'in your SOUL.'

Abraham repeats it. 'In your SOUL.'

On to the next note. On into the night.

Concerts, Ballets at Jones Beach; Barge as Stage, 5,000 25c Seats

Deal is on for a season of high class concerts to be presented in the open-air at Zach's Bay, Jones Beach, N. Y., next summer. Long Island State Park Commission is contacting various metropolitan agencies on the idea of supplying Grade A talent during the hot months. Presentations would be given on the floating pier, anchored permanently a short ways out from the shore, with total seating capacity (on land) of 10,000 seats.

Besides singers, plans include broadcasting, ballets, pageants, symphonies, and other offerings adapted to such purses. There would be 5,000 seats free to patrons with the remaining half sold at a quarter. Last year WPA talent appeared at the resort, but officials want class fare for the coming season starting in June.

One idea under consideration is to move symphonies and other attractions which are done at Lewisohn Stadium in Manhattan out to the beach for repeat performances. Added appearances would double work for those pacted for such dates and would add prestige to the play spot itself. Commission would like nightly shows or at least four times a week. B. L. Van Schaink is handling preliminary negotiations.

7,000 SEATS SOLD OUT

Pop prices prevailed, 50c to $1.50, with gross close to $7,000. Mail order biz was great, being 80%, and sellout was chalked up almost week in advance of date.

Capacity biz also greeted Ballet Russe at Music Hall, sponsored by Ladies' Musical Club. This 2,300-seater was packed two nights and at mat, with take range 50c to $2.50.

CHI OPERA LACKED A THEATRE LICENSE

Chicago, Jan. 14.

Annual check-up by bureau having charge of theatre licenses finds that none was asked for, paid or issued to Civic Opera House for 1935, although big theatre was in occasional use for miscellaneous offerings and for five weeks housed season of Chicago Opera. Argument in rebuttal by building-managers is that opera house is a not-for-profit venture, although point is not provided for in city ordinance.

That Civil Theatre, in same building, lacked 1935 license was discovered when owners of 'Tobacco Road' sought to lease house after Mayor Kelly closed play in Selwyn. However, Standard Oil, as importer of Jack Hylton's radio-show, is taking care of license for theatre, which seats fewer than 1,000.

people were willing to pay $50 initiation plus half a year's dues in order to secure the $103.50 monthly from the government.

Deny Arty Charge

Claim that the project's shows are being framed along little theatre lines is refuted. It is admitted that little theatre managements are at the head of the shows, but the casts are professional and so are those assigned to act as company managers, while the press department is also culled from the ranks of show business. A number of people formerly prominent on Broadway are known to be in the project's New York set-up.

Last week Elmer Rice, regional director, added a fourth house close to the theatre zone to be used for WPA shows. It is the former Princess, on 39th street, which is under lease to Labor Stage, a unionist group sanctioned by the American Federation of Labor. The 299-seater will be ready for use on Feb. 1 but Labor Stage has not formed a playing organization, nor has it found the type of plays for which it was formed—dramas favoring the cause of unionism. Other WPA-leased theatres in Manhattan are the Biltmore, Manhattan and Daly's.

Deal between WPA and Labor Stage calls for sharing the receipts 50-50, the admission scale to be 50c. top. Labor reserves the right to select the plays which the WPA will present at the house, to be renamed.

One unit known as the Theatre Workshop has Cleon Throckmorton in charge. It is located at 455 Tenth avenue (35th street), where settings and costumes are designed and made. At these quarters 'The Eternal Wanderer' was tried out early this week by the Yiddish drama group. Another unit known as the Yiddish Intimate theatre is readying a number of playlets.

Dervish Technique Studied by Dancer

Belgrade, Jan.

Tashamira, U. S. dancer now here, is studying Dervish prayer-dances with the idea of taking them back to New York after her present tour. She's been visiting some of the old Dervish monasteries in Skelpje near here, to get first-hand slants on the ancient rituals.

Dancer lived here until she was nine years old, when her family moved to America. This spring she embarks on a tour of the Balkan states, with a single appearance scheduled in Paris, before leaving for the other side. Her return here was marked with success as natives are keen on dancing, either classical or modern.

Using the Air

Following the earlier and fairly extensive practice of newspapers and magazines in using radio to gain readers and prestige, trade papers are now also starting to use broadcasting. Roy Dickinson, head man at Printer's Ink, is a leading spirit in a contemplated program over WOR, New York, in which four advertising trade papers in periods of six weeks each will conduct a once-weekly quarter hour devoted to trade gossip of their field.

Advertising and Selling, Advertising Age and Tide are the others lined up by WOR according to seniority. Program will start later this month.

Drug World and American Druggist, owned by Hearst, are already conducting a three-a-week half hour program over WINS, New York. Ed Flynn is master of ceremonies with lots of music sandwiched in. Trade gossip plus oddities of the drug and medicine world and its history constitute the pattern of the program.

Harry Carr, 58, author, world traveler and Los Angeles Times columnist, died in L. A. Jan. 10 of a heart attack. His four published works include 'Old Mother Mexico,' 'The West till Is Wild,' 'Riding the Tiger' and 'Los Angeles, City of Dreams.' In His last 'Lancer' column for the Times he wrote, 'death cuts down the famous by threes in Hollywood —Thelma Todd, John Gilbert and Quien Sabe?'

His widow, a son and daughter survive.

until Columbia won out. Max Winslow wired for the rights to the forthcoming Columbia-Harry Richman filmusical, 'Rolling Along' and the filmusical will now be retitled and rescored after the pop song. Metro made a screen test of Mike Farley-Eddy Riley, as well as a bid for the boys' song with an eye to the 1937 'Broadway Melody.' mount was also hot on it.

Personals

Farley-Riley and their Onyx Club (N.Y.) Boys (swing combo), are currently at the Paramount on Broadway, doubling from the nitery. Eddie Cantor has the songwriting band leaders also slated for a radio commercial.

In the background of 'Music Goes Round and Round' is Red Hodgson, who is the accredited co-author of the song. He first introduced the phrase as an ad lib obligato while working as trumpet player with the late Earl Burnett's orchestra around Chicago. In the choruses of 'Dinah' Hodgson would ad lib, 'The Music Goes Round and Round.' Farley and Riley developed and embellished the present version as currently constituted and Santly-Joy is splitting the royalties three-ways equally.

Hodgson is personal-appearancing around Chi now, upping from $60 a week to $600, and the Farley-Riley boys, besides their Decca recordings, etc., are likewise coming into the fancy money. Rockwell is currently working on the idea of uniting the trio.

'Round and Round' is already the subject of a legal claim by the National Songwriters League, 503 Grand street, Jersey City, of which Louis A. Gorlan is president, and V. Ray Grobholz, executive secretary.

Select Music's attorney, J. T. Abeles, has the claim from the League that it published a Ford's Model T. Joke Book and that included therein is a verse about 'the wheels go round and round; you press the pedal down; whoa-ho-ho; way down below-below-below,' etc., all tending to allege lyric similarity.

Abeles has also a claim against the Chicago Evening American for allegedly printing the entire chorus without permission. The American printed a story on Red Hodgson, Chi boy, hence the lyric reprint.

Campbell-Connelly by blanket contract has 'Round' for England but the song has created unusual demands for the Select Music catalog for other countries. Francis, Day & Hunter has taken it for France and Ralph S. Peer, Inc. (Southern Music Co.) has acquired the Mexican, Argentine and Brazilian publication rights.

French Sunday Paper

Sunday newspaper idea has at last invaded France. Paris Soir, evening sheet with the largest circulation in the country, is publishing on Saturday nights (with a Sunday date) two simultaneous editions, one just like all the weekday papers and the other, called Paris Soir Dimanche, containing eight pages of features as well as regular news. Readers can have either edition they want, but the one including the features costs twice as much as the other.

Features are closely imitated from American and English Sunday newspapers, and for the most part are actually translated or adapted from English. Comic strip idea is not entirely adopted, but a page of humorous cartoons is used weekly, each time by a different artist. Women's features are conspicuously played up, and 'Advice to the Lovelorn' is included. Also a page of kid stuff.

Fiction and Films

By WOLFE KAUFMAN

Stearns Is Back

Harold Stearns was once called the 'white hope of American intellectuals.' He was once editor of the old Dial. He was on the old Dramatic Mirror, catching shows, writing about the theatre. He published several books, primarily 'Liberalism in America,' which brought forth a lot of comment and attention. Then he went to Paris. Everyone in Paris who visited the Latin Quarter's bars knew Stearns or knew about Stearns. For a time he was Peter Pickem, handicapper of the Paris Chicago Tribune. For a while he corresponded for American papers. Most of the time he did nothing.

Now Stearns is back in America and has gone back energetically to writing. His newest is 'The Street I Know' (Furman; $2.75), and it is delightful reading. It is Stearns' autobiography, and packs a lot of punch. Some of the show biz reminiscences of the old days are splendid, despite the fact that Searns is still a comparatively young man. There are some understatements, and a lot of omissions, which, had they been included, would have made it an outstanding tome. Even as is, however, it's revealing. Beyond the meat for thought it contains, it is an example of fine, flowing language such as is seldom seen these days.

Dangerous Ground

One of the outstanding of the newer school of writers, James Gould Cozzen, hits the bell once more with his newest novel, 'Men and Brethren' (Harcourt - Brace; $2.50). It deals in an unusual way with an unusual subject, and there will be those who will be offended by it, but one thing is certain: it is impossible to doubt the sincerity and the clarity of the style and the telling.

Story is of the difficult time an intelligent preacher is having. Everyone's troubles are piled on him and he has to straighten everyone out. He narrowly escapes getting himself into a series of jams by preaching and practicing worldly cures for worldly ills, rather than sticking to strict orthodoxy. It's a dangerous subject that could easily have turned to pulp luridness, but is so carefully and intelligently handled by Cozzens as to avoid anything of the sort.

Not for films.

Hatch Arrives

Eric Hatch has been slowly but definitely climbing for some time. He is described by his publishers as the American Wodehouse, which hasn't been such a bad selling point. It can be dropped now. Hatch won't need it any more. His newest book, 'My Man Godfrey' (Little-Brown; $2) is such a funny piece on its own as to make his name a cinch for sales.

It's a constantly moving action yarn with loads of funny situations and fine dialog. Should make a very good film, too.

Too Old

'The Far Princess,' an old and little-known (in America) play by Edmonde Rostand, is now brought out in a new translation by John Heard (Bruce Humphries; $1.50).

It is a bit difficult to understand the publication of this play at this time. It was written for Sarah Bernhardt, and performed by her. Undoubtedly, in those days, it was fine and beautiful and meaningful. Today, it is hardly likely to interest anyone in the U. S.

George Barker Dead

Deceased published paper at San Point, Idaho, for 18 years and during his residence there served a term as Lieutenant-Governor of the State. His widow and a daughter survive. Burial in Glendale, Cal.

Going Places

By Cecelia Ager

What's Going On?

Strange pic, 'Sylvia Scarlett.' Sets the hausfraus puzzling what's going on here. But what of it? Katharine Hepburn, as irritating as interesting; Natalie Paley, good old Iris March. Only Dennie Moore, of the femmes in the cast, keeps her head midst the preciousness. Miss Moore is direct: she just wants a man, any man.

And, though the wardrobe's not important—for 'Sylvia Scarlett' is a 'quaint' thing, all sensitive whimsy and such—it had to have two designers to dope it out. Muriel King to continue the established Hepburn silhouette—bulk across the shoulders, sleekness about the ribs and waist, full flaring skirt; Bernard Newman, to devise Miss Paley's motoring costume—beige tweed suit, belted, patch-pocketed, bound in the black velvet that lines the casually swinging, matching three-quarters length cape. Miss Moore's costumes not credited. What Miss Moore, dame of simple instinct wears, doesn't count.

There's a deal of impishness for Miss Hepburn to put over, which she doesn't; and a deal of grace, and delicacy, and a evascent charm, which she does. It's a role with a lot of gamut in it, and two coiffures. One's curly.

So That's What It Is

Mr. Leonidoff himself explained, very patiently, that the wiggly painted set against which the ballet corps are wax flowers in this week's show at the Music Hall, is really a Paisley shawl. Wax flowers are Victorian, Mr. Leonidoff said. Paisley shawls are Victorian, he said, nor was there any reproof in the way he said the two things, one right after the other.

Well, then it's a Paisley shawl that stretches the height and breadth of the Music Hall stage, ominous in its brownish coloring and the tentacles of its epic pattern. But it doesn't scare the girls of the ballet corps out of their well learned routines, and they prance about, after they've scampered down the spiral stairway hidden in the flowery sculpturet set piece, and others of them have torn themselves away from the Dresden china candlesticks that flank it, scamper about on a wave of applause that always bursts when anything on the Music Hall stage comes to life.

As shepherdesses they cavort, the paniers of their skirts made of white net ruffles, the skirts themselves of white chiffon, yes, quite transparent, with pink silk roses appliqued on, and on their sleeves too, and on their sheperdess hats, the whole stage picture accurately stuffy, since stuffiness is Victorian, too.

'The Cake Walk,' which is the Rockettes' assignment for the week, is clear and bright, done with spirit before a set that's either a swank modern apartment house or, more probably, an old southern manse. But first Hilda Eckler and partner, who is costumed with the Continental touch in white pants, green tails and magenta-pink sleeves, do their own cake-walk fantasy, very artistic and cultured. Now the Rockettes, and they look very swell. Those of them who're supposed to be boys wear black tights, those permitted to stay girls, long, sheer, black silk stockings, not, when they get going, too long.

Jean Grows Up

Something happened to Jean Parker in London and 'The Ghost Goes West,' something some of the folks in this country—figured had better happen pretty darn soon if they were going to have to see her again. Either she was going to grow up, and in so doing, kick out some of that soft sweetness of hers, or else. But she did, and now that she's come home in 'The Ghost Goes West,' they're going to take her back, even gladly.

She grew up so nicely, indeed, that when she makes her entrance in the picture, the musical score plays jazz and it's not at all incongruous. Also, she seems to play a pretty good game of ping pong on the ship, looks good in her white shorts and dark blouse doing it, so that when later, she's all in white net ruffles, flowers in her hair, and moonbeams, as of yore, well, she's earned it. Gentle, yes, and docile still, but now somehow it fits.

The picture's own wistful charm is a match for Miss Parker's; it lends her some humor from its own vast store, and so Miss Parker's goodness and virtue is kept in its place.

She's Back

It is sweet to meet again, after these long, sensible years, the screen heroine who is half panther, half domestic little kitten, talks in an exotic accent and says 'me' when she should say 'I'. Until Lupe Velez turned up this very week in 'The Morals of Marcus,' there hasn't been a good one around since Mary Pickford was adorable in 'Kiki.'

Miss Velez is like a hunk of lavender and old lace, catapulting about, scratching herself, cuddling, ogling, pouting, snuggling. Her pride in her bosom, her conscientious care that it be photographed from all possible overhead angles, the international decolletage of her costume—of the same sweeping precariousness whether she be waif in Syrian harem or schoolgirl in London's Mayfair, is as dulcet in mood and period as Willie Howard's lovely quartet from 'Rigoletto.' While the rest of the world has been changing, restlessly probing for new techniques for allure, Miss Velez has remained steadfast; to her own self she's been true. So Lupe's an old fashioned girl today, and her work has the old school charm.

It is interesting to note in 'The Morals of Marcus' that sure enough, the ladies in eastern harems dress like acrobatic dancers in floor shows. They wear snug little trunks under their filmsy harem trousers. Since Miss Velez has a penchant for standing before roaring fireplaces in her night clothes, she wears trunks with her nightgowns as well.

'The Morals of Marcus' has Adrianne Allen, too, who is a villainess in the story though the cruel photography and haphazard clothes she's submitted to can't make her look it. Her voice is much too kind and good, her manner much too unquenchably sympathetic.

A New Screamer

If Frances Drake doesn't watch out she's going to be the new Fay Wray of the horror pictures. She's got invaluable equipment for the task: eyes large and wide and good at staring, a fine scream, a voice that slides down to the dull tones of despair with ease, a graceful way of seizing a black velvet mantle and after flinging it about her brave shoulders, stalking out into stormy nights, and a nice, trim look in African jungles. In fact, Miss Drake is simply magnificent in jungles. Take her in the jungle that goes with 'The Invisible Ray.'

There, it's plain from the listless way Miss Drake fans herself, it's very hot. Miss Drake doesn't like it at all; she's miserable. So her face shines with perspiration, which shine is very becoming and very chic—the new 'moist make-up'—and meanwhile her long bob remains fluffy, her white culotte skirt and short sleeved blouse stays fresh and her disposition even. All that happens to Miss Drake in horror picture jungles, therefore, is a flattering shine. That makes her ideal.

Beulah Bondi, in 'The Invisible Ray' too, is another ideal horror picture character, the one who doesn't believe it, who says tush-tush, who looks a little bit odd yet essentially dignified. Miss Bondi can handle the works. Indeed, she's a whiz at the odd yet dignified test, for she's a big game hunter in 'The Invisible Ray,' prowls about in shorts and sun helmet and carries a rifle, and even so, looks like if she and a tiger ever met, the tiger would be the first to run.

Violet Kemble Cooper, the spectral one, the one of the fateful voice, is okay too. So sincere about her work, in fact, she's willing to hide her own fresh blondeness behind the bloodless make-up and ashen pallor of an enigmatic old matriarch, who's blind to boot.

voting interest in his corporations and continue as manager.

Cooper said he plans to turn over to the foundation his interests in the Lincoln Theatre Corp., the J. H. Cooper Enterprises of Colorado, Criterion Theatre Corp. and the Regal Theatres, both of Oklahoma.

In addition, Cooper will build two new theatres, one at Barlesville, Okla., the other at Ardmore, Okla., and all profits from these theatres will be turned to the children's farms. He is at present building a theatre in Oklahoma City, making 10 he operates here, and the same goes for the new house as well as the others.

Cooper, independently wealthy, came to this country from Poland as a boy and went through Ellis Island with the equivalent of 10c. in his pocket. He now lives in New York. A widower, he has a five-year-old son.

Cooper has turned over to E. N. Van Horne, Lincoln banker, $100,000 as an initial grant for the foundation. Van Horne is named treasurer. Cooper will be president of the foundation, with Sam Waugh of Lincoln as secretary.

Trustees are S. R. Kent, president of 20th Century-Fox; A. C. Keough, general legal counsel of Paramount Pictures; Charles Stuart, J. C. Seacrest and J. E. Miller. Edgar S. Vaught, federal judge for the western district of Oklahoma, and J. H. Everest, prominent Oklahoma City attorney and Cooper's legal counsel, will be asked to serve as trustees.

Cooper has bought a 640-acre tract on the Connecticut-New York state line, an estate originally developed by J. C. Morgan, on which is a large English style mansion, and this is expected to serve as the first of the farms for the 'deserving destitute youngsters.' Cooper will pick children from the curbstones on which he used to sit when he first came to New York from Europe.

Spitz-RKO

ferred shares is in public hands. Meehan owns most of the KAO preferred, or around 40%, and RKO owns around 33⅓%. RKO, however, owns all of the KAO common.

There is an even division of the KAO Board between RKO and the Meehan interests, with Herbert Bayard Swope, chairman and neutral boss of the KAO operating setup. Swope is understood to hold a contract which runs until September, next.

For the present Spitz is not a member of the KAO board, nor does he hold any executive title in KAO.

The entire RKO circuit of directly owned and affiliated houses numbers around 100.

KAO situation, however, is one which could be ironed out following RKO's own reorganization, as it is a matter mostly between Meehan and RKO. RKO's directly controlled theatre operating subsidiary is Stadium theatres which is estimated to have control of around 25 of the RKO affiliated houses.

Hollywood, Jan. 14.

After digesting RKO matters here for two weeks with Sam Briskin, new production head, Leo Spitz, company prez, was scheduled to quit the Coast by tonight (Tues.) for New York, where company reorganization plans will be taken up. Spitz will return here around Feb. 10.

John Hertz (Lehman Bros.) and Floyd Odlum (Atlas), both interested in RKO financing, talked with Spitz while here, but studio reorganization was not discussed. Odlum spent last week-end at San Francisco, but never went near the RKO lot while here.

Briskin, after a week's conferences with Radio execs, has okayed the production of five features immediately. First to get under way will be 'Puzzle of the Briar Pipe.' Others include 'Fugitive Gold,' with Richard Dix. Louis King will direct from the screen play by Tom Lennon, Louis Stevens and Ferdinand Reyher. Starting date of Feb. 15 set for Katharine Hepburn's 'Mary of Scotland.' Dudley Nichols scripted from the Maxwell Anderson play. John Ford will direct.

Fourth okay went to 'Witness Chair' for Ann Harding with the star postponing her European trip to get the picture out of the way. 'One for Two,' by James Edward Grant, winds up the quintet scheduled for production.

Among the Women

By The Skirt

Best dressed woman of the week:
SOPHIE TUCKER
House of Morgan—Night Club

Perfect for Soph

House of Morgan might have been built to order for Sophie Tucker. It is just the right capacity for her. A Tuesday night crowd kept Soph on her feet for a long time.

Most informal was her dress of a heavy silver lame, made in coat fashion with a belt. Four glass buttons match a velvet scarf of dubonnett shade. Intricate is a fold of silver and velvet wound around Soph's blonde hair. Two huge diamond clips hold the scarf in place.

Miss Swarthout Impresses

ladys Swarthout comes to the screen unfortunately in a film version of 'Rose of the Rancho,' an outdated story. Miss Swarthout, looking like Gloria Vanderbilt, before she parted with her familiar headdress, is a real find for pictures. A real story should be found for this charming young woman to offset the bad impression of 'Rancho.'

Costuming of the picture of Spanish origin is flattering to most anyone, and particularly to Miss Swarthout. The full ruffled skirts with the high comb and lace mantillas are lovely. Disguised as a boy in black velvet bandit outfit, her slim figure is one of the new star's assets.

Another Redhead

iffraff', at the Capitol reveals a new Jean Harlow. Gone are the platinum locks. She is Hattie, redhead, a daughter of the waterfront. It's a wig Miss Harlow is wearing, but it would take an expert to detect it.

Clothes as a rule don't go with waterfront pictures, but Miss Harlow manages to wear a few regulars. One white satin evening frocks is frilled around the neckline, forming a bolero. There are prints and checks and a cheap assortment of coats and caps. Una Merkel is also inexpensively dressed, suiting the slum atmosphere. In a dancehall Miss Merkel wears a print chi

No Records

The State won't hang up any records this week. It must be pretty tough following those two past weeks, the Harry Richman and Eddie Sullivan shows. Nevertheless the bill this week is by no means bad, with Emil Boreo headlining.

Yacopis Troupe starts proceedings with the men as bullfighters in white and gold and red capes lined in yellow. The one woman of the troupe wears white satin pajamas embroidered in grape design of red.

Three X sisters, a redhead, a blonde and a brunet, dress exactly all Dresses are of white crepe with tops of brilliants.

Blanche Calloway leads her grey coustumed band in a green and red print. The dress, cut V both front and back, has a sash of cloudy blue.

Rialto's Chiller

The new Rialto theatre on 42nd street should prove a gold mine, according to the crowds trying to get in last Saturday (11). But it will have to show better pictures than 'The Case of Dr. Crespi' with Eric VonStroheim. A harrowing tale of burying a man alive. Harriet Russell, a newcomer, doesn't impress here. As the wife of the buried man she shows but two costumes, one a coat dress trimmed with mink with small hat and a mourning outfit. Geraldine Kay looks well in nurse costume and is also seen in a simple cloth frock.

Lupe's British Film

At the Globe theatre Lupe Velez is starring in an English picture called 'The Morals of Marcus'. Miss Velez is discovered aboard ship in satin pajamas and then in a series of well made frocks, the most prominent being an evening gown of a combination of black and white satin.

Adrienne Allen looks well in a caped frock with wide fur bandings.

Melies, which uses acrobats from the Folies Bergere (Paris) of that year, and dancers from the Theatre du Chatelet (Paris), with imaginative effects created in much the same fashion as cooked up for Sunday supplement thrillers. Second is 'Queen Elizabeth' (1911), with Sarah Bernhardt using her own company, and filmed in strict legit style, but somewhat more subtle in acting than any of the preceding releases.

'Execution of Mary, Queen of Scots' (1894), produced by the Edison company, and directed by William Heiss, was the first to be shown, more of a peep show than anything else, employing magician's black velvet box for the actual head-chopping bit. Runs only two minutes. 'Wash Day Troubles' (1895), directed by Edmund Kuhn, is the first included in the survey to make use of a slapstick gag, this time when a youngster knocks over a wash-tub full of water and clothes. It, too, runs only a brief spell. Mrs. Edmund Kuhn is listed in the short cast.

'Trip to the Moon' uses close-ups, trick fadeouts, and a certain touch of fantastic comedy for the first time. Also a series of tableaux vivants, then popular in stage revues, were injected into the weird tale, to heighten scenes. Moon figures are knocked off the screen by the central character (played by Melies himself), disapearing in a smoke cloud. Imagination is interesting, and follows a central thread. Backdrops are in illusionary design and are not too foreign to those used in blood-curdlers of present day. End of the film is missing. It was lost in storage, but there's enough shown to hold interest okay. This was the first ambitious trick-film produced.

'The Great Train Robbery' (1903), now a classic in film history, has been viewed by various groups before. It was produced by the Edison company, directed by Edwin S. Porter, with George Barnes, Bronco Billy (George M.) Anderson, A. C. Abadie and Marie Murray among the listed, and G. M. Anderson, (Broncho Billy) as an extra. It fits in snugly with this collection. Much of it is crude, though situations do pile up on each other in regulation order.

'Faust' (1905) produced by Pathe, employs color in the dramatic entrances and exits of Mephisto character. Part of this film is also absent. Visions, to show what the characters were thinking, make their first appearance in this one.

Sarah's Prop Fall

'Queen Elizabeth' (1911), directed by Louis Mercanton, and acquired by Adolph Zukor on his first rental venture, looks like a holiday for the Divine Sarah. Leads are introduced singly before the story starts, and afterward. The actress comes forward for a curtain bow by herself. Acting is heavy and stilted, though Lou Tellegen's restraint and nonchalant gestures are prominent. Subtitles are used to mould the jump scenes together. Death scene gets a laugh, as it has the famed actress flopping forward on a pile of pillows, neatly arranged beforehand.

Next series is scheduled for Feb. 4, and covers years from 1912-1914. Such pictures as 'New York Hat' (Biograph) to 'A Fool There Was' (Fox) are to be shown then. Methodical filing of films under one roof, provides industry with a clearing house for its noteworthy productions.

Strippers Will Peel For Frisco Jury and SRO Court Expected

San Francisco, Jan. 14.

Together with Jack Little and Harry Tenenberg, comedians, and Robt. Straehle, manager, the strippers pleaded 'not guilty' to charges of conducting a lewd and indecent show at the Liberty theatre in the Italian quarter and demanded a trial by jury. According to arresting officers, the Misses Dupree and Carlos climaxed their turn by dancing in the nude.

OBITUARIES

JOHN GILBERT

John Gilbert, 38, one of the first victims of talking pictures, died in is Hollywood home, Jan. 9, of a heart attack. A pulmotor and adrenalin injections were resorted to without avail. He had been ill only for a day, and was under the care of a nurse when the stroke came. Since his last divorce he had been living alone in his home in the Bel Air district. Marlene Dietrich, who has been his companion at nite clubs and social engagements, reported that he had been suffering for the past six months, but attributed it to indigestion. He suffered a collapse about six weeks ago while in the swimming pool of his home.

Gilbert came into prominence almost overnight for his work in 'The Big Parade,' but it was as the opposite to Greta Garbo that he won a reputation that still endures. Their love scenes were regarded as the apex of emotional acting and their joint appearances were invariably enormous grosses.

Then came the talking picture. Gilbert lacked the microphone voice, his natural tones recording as an approach to a falsetto, but it was the dialog which primarily worsted him. Dialog writing had not been fully studied and scripters failed to realize that the impassioned love scenes of the silent pictures became silly when done into speech. When his first picture had been finished, he begged Metro to destroy it, offering to do another without salary, but it went to the screen and audiences roared with laughter at the flowery language, spoken in a high-pitched voice. Gilbert read the handwriting on the wall and dropped out for a time. He made other talking versions in an attempt to come back and at Garbo's request he was given the lead in 'Queen Christina,' but it was no use. Dialog writing had improved, but he was unable to pitch his voice in the right key. He also tried direction, but without success.

JACK POWELL AND FAMILY

Born of actor parents, Gilbert made his debut when only one-year-old, appearing in an Eddie Foy play. As he grew older he took up acting as his profession, breaking away to try his hand at salesmanship. He went over to pictures and played with varying success until the production of 'The Big Parade,' his start being made at the Ince studio.

Among his outstanding hits in addition to 'Parade' were in 'He Who Gets Slapped,' 'The Merry Widow,' 'Flesh and the Devil,' 'A Woman of Affairs' ('The Green Hat') and 'Desert Nights.'

He was married to Olivia Burwell (1917), and in turn to Leatrice Joy (1923), who bore him a daughter, to Ina Claire (1929) and to Virginia Bruce (same year), who also presented him with a daughter, Miss Bruce divorced him in 1934. His family name was Pringle. His father, John Pringle, well known as a stock actor, died in 1929, while working as a film extra.

Cremation following Episcopal services in Beverly Hills Jan. 11.

THEODORE A. METZ

Theodore August Metz, 87, died in the Montefiore hospital, New York, Jan. 12. He had been a patient there since Dec. 18. He was best known as the composer of 'There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight,' the outstanding Spanish-American war song, but he was the composer of much popular music and asserted that the old timer 'With All Her Faults I Love Her Still' was taken from an air he had composed in Germany 10 years before. He was orchestra leader in several theatres and during the days of minstrelsy was a popular minstrel leader with Primrose and West. McIntyre and Heath and others. 'Hot Time' was written as a march while on tour, the title being suggested by Jim McIntyre as the train on which they were traveling passed a station, Hot Time, at which a negro cabin was seen to be afire. This was in 1886. Ten years later he retired from the road and opened an office in New York. He bought from Joe Hayden a set of lyrics to fit his march and copyrighted the whole. It dragged for a couple of years but came into fame almost overnight when America went to war.

Metz came to America in 1879 and obtained a job in a pharmacy at 2 a week. Stopping into a Williamsburg saloon for a glass of beer, he saw a violin on the piano. His playing attracted such a crowd that the saloonkeeper offered him $18 a week, and he went out of the drug business on th spot. His work brought him steadily upward until in 1884 he was leader at the old National theatre, on the Bowery. He shortly went over to the minstrels until that began to fail.

Funeral services were held Tuesday (4).

ANDRE SENNWALD

Andre Sennwald, 28, motion picture critic for the New York Times, was killed Jan. 12, by gas poisoning in his pent house atop 670 West End avenue. The initial police report brought a verdict of death by gas poisoning 'pending further investigation probably suicidal.' An explosion, believed to have been caused by a spark from th electric refrigerator, so completely wrecked the place that definite results could not be arrived at. It was generally believed, however, that he had turned on the fumes in the gas stove with the intent to kill himself. He had been a sufferer from insomnia, and was worried over the threatened loss of his eyesight through irritis. No other reason can be ascribed since the critic was well liked at the office and knew he was presently to receive an increase in salary.

He is survived by his widow, the former Yvonne Beaudry, his parents and three brothers.

Funeral services were held Tuesday (14).

Men thought film was to be used for recruiting propaganda and went wild when they learned they had hoofed it 100 miles in a press stunt. It was released only about four years ago, and was then too dated to get over.

Meantime Bryson had reinstated himself in the good graces of the public and did excellent work. About three years ago he was let out by Universal and sued the company for wrongful dismissal, losing the suit.

He scored his earlier success in musical comedy, notably '1492' and was popular in vaudeville as Favor and Sinclair, the latter being Edith Sinclair, his wife. Vaude in Sticks for 13 days and his hotel rooms had cost $7. He had been in bed five nights, and the remainder of the time was pushing the buggy over moonlit prairies hunting the next stand.

On Days '

On days off the unit band, usually seven or eight men, will comb the village and play a dance, or a joint to pick up nickels. Always claim they are union aggregations and getting paid scale, but that's obviously out, traveling scale, or resident scale even, being too heavy to carry.

Contrary to reports better wages, the top price for any so-called headliner is around $00 on the week; teams get $40 to $50; a novelty single (the most frequent call) $35, or $50 if he has a wife and kid to carry props, doubling wardrobe mistress and errand boy; chorus girls range between $15 and $22, varying on how many times doubling back in specialties. Some units get the girls free, with fond mamas footing bills so daughter may get 'experience.' When a call goes out for an act or musician, he is often called upon 'to double in brass, tires and as mechanic,' which is versatility even today. Pay is per day, a few units considering six a complete week.

Quantities of iron nerve it takes to embark on these turkey tours. Double and triple trouble is common. Reports on the shows filter into the booking office. For instance, one town reports the comic bad. By the time the word gets back to the unit it's in a new town, the comic clicking, and maybe the dance team gets the freeze. Orders are to cancel the comic. The next burg has a wire waiting to cancel the dance team and bring the comic back into the show. As a consequence, a troupe frequently carries as many as three people who are constantly being hired and fired.

Then, since contracts read for '18 or more people,' if there should happen to be less people on the stage when the local manager catches it, he wants to dock. Often, too, a show is completely reorganized between towns and the balloon dancer turns out to be a skating act, and the others are equally foreign to the advance stories.

The Owl Spasm

Most towns of more than two-day stands do four-a-day once or twice during the date. Some towns start with a midnight show just ahead of the scheduled opening day. If the opening day is three shows, and the midnighter doesn't begin until the early morning minutes, managements try to call it a four-show day and not pay off for the rush to do the owl spasm.

Stranding is not uncommon. An eight-girl line was stranded here a few months ago and had to polish their thumbs to get home to St. Louis, 500 miles away. While here the manager was flat for money, so he made a deal with a hamburger joint whereby girls could charge no more than five hamburgers and three bottles of soda a day apiece, which he settled for at the end of the engagement. Another practice is to stick the whole show in hotel and cafe and make a run for it. If police intervene as happened here, the unit boss prostrates himself before the law, saying he hasn't enough money and it's a long jump out of town. The hotel is glad to get anything, settles for half or a third, and the cafe, too. Another way to show a profit.

Once trunks might have been held but limited carrying facilities have eliminated any degree of luggage today. Wardrobe is seldom taken to the hotel and immediately after the last show it is loaded into the truck, which drives off. The unit, if pressed, stalls until it's on the way. If the hotel held their personal effects, the individual total would probably be a clean brassiere, toothbrush and some slightly used sox, which is no asset.

Even though cases as described spring up, there are a great many of the shows which get by honestly, even if operation is from hunger. It is estimated that about 1,000 performers are working and living by units of this turkey type. This is making a labor outlet for stage hands in more than 240 theatres west of the Mississippi, and at the convention of the American Federation of Musicians in New Orleans, rules were laid for standby bands. In a great many towns from six to eight men are paid full stand-by and are augmented with the unit bands if the unit is carrying enough band uniforms to tog everybody. This type show biz has brought flesh back into houses which had given it up forever, and has opened theatres to vaude which hitherto found the cost prohibitive.

Lush, as always, is the most frequent nerve quieter. For some unknown reason, very few of the unit managers are reported at season's end in asylums. But their insanity is lasting, they always bring out a show to buck it again next year.

St. Louis Trial

in absence of representatives of other defendant corps.

Point was scored by defense at the morning session when Judge Molyneaux upheld the objection of Frederick H. Wood, WB attorney, to testimony of J. M. Ulmer, Cleveland attorney, relative conference held with WB execs and his partner, B. G. Gordon at Warners' New York office in August, 1933. Wood objected on grounds that at this time Starr was not serving in his capacity as WB exec on a matter concerning the problem in St. Louis. Judge Molyneaux said he would listen to Starr's alleged statements for purpose of perfecting records, in event government appeals, and for his own guidance should subsequent events in trial change his present opinion.

Ulmer said he had been invited to New York by WB execs to discuss a Wheeling, W. Va., troubl , and Starr told him he had better accept Warners' proposition as there was no one else to deal with. Ulmer reiterated previous testimony of alleged threats made by Starr of how his company knew how to handle situations similar to the one in t, Louis and had their own means of obtaining possession of properties.

Wood refused to examine Ulmer, declaring it would be necessary to reopen the entire Wheeling difficulty and it was not purpose of defense to bring the Wheeling case into the St. Louis situation. Gordon was conceded to give corroborative testimony, by agreement by both sides, although Judge Molyneaux's rulings were excepted to by Walter L. Rice of government counsel.

Hardy Rebuked

U. S. Attorney Hardy was rebuked by Judge Molyneaux during arguments over admissability of Ulmer's testimony when he accused wood of using same tactics he employed in cri inal case by trying to confuse court. Judge Molyneaux remarked that the court was well able to rule on each point raised and determine what testimony to accept and what to reject. He further stated that Wood had not raised one objection or point of law that was not well taken and concluded his remarks by saying, 'I think your criticism is unjustified.' Hardy took his seat blushing.

By another stipulation, agreed on to speed up case, testimony of Clarence D. Hill, Col. Joseph Garrison, U; Ben E. Reingold, 20th; Hall Walsh, Vita; Maurice Schweitzer, Par; and Robert Taylor, office manager of RKO, was incorporated in Hill's testimony. After explaining mechanics of distribution of pix, Hill testified that his company is now selling contracts for 1936-37 season and already had three under consideration. This is regarded as favorable to defense, as government contended in criminal case that it was unusual for RKO and Par to make commitments to WB in March, 1934. Hill testified that usually an exhibitor checks up on available product before purchasing theatre or leasing it.

Last witness of day was Clarence M. Turley, former business associate of Skouras Bros. in reorganization of the Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres. He told of argument between Herman Starr and Spyros Skouras in Chicago in February, 1934, when Starr, believing Skouras had obtained the three houses, congratulated him only to learn that bondholders' committee had accepted Allen Snyder's lease and that F&M would probably manage the theatres. Starr, according to Turley, said WB had been mistreated and given a raw deal in St. Louis; that everyone had been taken care of but WB which held some bonds, and WB would insist on being paid and intended to keep its position, even if compelled to show first run features for 10c., and that Skouras would find himself in the middle of a fight.

Judge Molyneaux refused to uphold Wood's motion to strike out Turley's testimony on the same ground given against Ulmer's statements.

Cross-Examination

Cross-examined by former U. S. Senator Jim Reed, Turley said Par and WB pictures had been shown in three St. Louis houses after Skouras Super-Theatres Corp. has been evicted by landlord and during subsequent receivership that preceded reorganization of properties. He revealed that between May 11, 1932, and July 20, 1933, Central Theatres Corp., in which he was interested with George Skouras, had lost $80,000, on the three houses, although they paid only $3,550 per week rental as against $9,656 originally paid by the Skouras company. He said F&M started a price war after obtaining the St. Louis theatres in late 1933 by showing two feature pictures and stage show for 25c. and 40c. When F&M took over the Fox in January, 1934, war was stopped. Turley testified that the Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central houses did not cut prices along with St. Louis, but suffered b.o. losses during the war.

Dysart Wi

Dysart finished his direct testimony in abbreviated session held Saturday morning (11). He followed closely to testimony he gave in criminal case, relating various conferences held by bondholders' committee and officers of various defendant companies and others prior to time committee accepted terms of Allen L. Snyder. Dysart called attention to differences between contract closed with Snyder and others, and said Snyder proposal fixed a definite weekly rental for the three houses, while the WB proposition based the rental on the earnings of the houses.

Questioned Hardy, Dysart named Hermann Starr, v.p. of WB; Gradwell Sears, western and southern sales manager for same company, and Sam B. Jeffries, local attorney for WB, as those who sat in some of the conferences. Dysart testified Starr declared WB did not propose to be shunted out of St. Louis and would lease, if necessary, theatres here in which to exhibit its pics.

Repeating previous testimony, Dysart reiterated that former Mayor Frederick H. Kreismann, member of the committee, said at this meeting that he was tired of listening to threats made by WB and he recommended the committee accept the Snyder bid, which was done.

Former Senator Reed took up the cross-examination of Dysart for WB and was still hammering away trying to gain some admissions favorable to his client when court adjourned until Monday (13), when trial went into second week.

With consent of attorneys for both sides, Dysart, who is yet to be examined by counsel for Par and RKO, was excused until Jan. 19 when he said he had accepted an invitation of former Secretary of War Dwight Davis, donor of Davis tennis championship cup and former St. Louisian, to hunt quail at Davis' winter home in Florida. Dysart promised Judge Molyneaux he would be prepared to return to St. Louis on 24-hour notice if and when needed.

The only smile in the case so far occurred Saturday when Dysart forgot to bring his spectacles to court. He was having difficulty reading some documents when William R. Gentry, of defense counsel, offered his. They didn't suit Dysart's eyes Reed remarked they were probably too young for Dysart. Reed is 71. Finally, Jacob M. Lashly, counsel for RKO, discovered he had two pairs of Pittsburghs, and one pair tendered Dysart was just what he was looking for. Lashly reminded Dysart to return them when court adjourned.

Testimony began late Friday (10) when Thomas N. Dysart, pres. St. Louis Chamber of Commerce and head of the corporations that own the Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres, and former chairman of the Bondholders' Protective Committee for those properties, prior to their reorganization following foreclosure proceedings in July, 1934.

Bar Witnesses

All witnesses in the criminal case were permitted to remain in the courtroom while testimony was given but on Friday (10), Russell Hardy, head of the Gov't. counsel, requested Judge Molyneaux to bar all witnesses which would have included Abel Thomas Cary and Sam B. Jeffries, attorneys connected with defense. Judge Molyneaux declined to be that severe and announced that all except the two attorneys would be excused from the room. Several newspapermen and representatives of trade journals, here as witnesses, and also in their official capacity, appealed to Hardy to exclude them from his request. He refused and several of the muggs appealed to former Judge James A. Reed, one of WB counsel, who came to the rescue and informed Judge Molyneaux of the situation. The jurist modified his order to permit the pencil-slingers to remain in courtroom. Other witnesses had choice of remaining in small witness room or cool their heels in corridor outside of courtroom. Most availed themselves of the corridor.

Apparently Hardy's move was made in reference to charge of Louis Phillips, of Par counsel, at conclusion of his statement Thursday (9) in which he said Par declined to do business with Harry Arthur or any of his associates because it knew it was innocent of conspiracy charge and could have been indicted only through perjured testimony. In making request that witnesses be barred, Hardy told court he was so doing because testimony at former trial was questioned.

Dysart's testimony Friday was perfunctory. He identified himself and Allen L. Snyder who obtained leases on three houses from Bondholders' Protective Committee after foreclosure sale. Hardy questioned him about proposals submitted to committee by Snyder, Laurence Stern & Co., Chicago, on behalf of Skouras Bros. and various proposals by Warner Bros. All of these proposals were read to court, those of Warners being read in their entirety; the others in brief.

WB's Poi

Warner Bros. won a victory, just before Hardy's request for barring witnesses, when it protested against request of Arthur's attorney, E. L. Wilkinson, to quash subpoenas duces tecum for leases, agreements, contracts, film leases, etc., held by Eden Theatre Co., lessee of Fox theatre; the St. Louis Ambassador Theatre Co. (lessee of Ambassador theatre), and the St. Louis-Missouri Theatre Co., lessee of the Missouri.

In overruling Wilkinson's request, Judge Molyneaux announced he would use his discretion in what he would permit to be used from the various documents and he did not want to be annoyed by unnecessary delays if some question arose that would be answered by the various records. While such documents were awaiting use, Judge Molyneaux assured Wilkinson they would not be subject to inspection by defense.

Reed attempted, at end of Friday session, to have case continued until Monday (13) as he wanted to visit a sister who is ill in Kansas City but Judge Molyneaux announced a two-hour session would be held Saturday (11) as he is anxious to finish the case as quickly as possible.

Opening statements were made Thursday (9) and Friday (10) when hearing of testimony actually got under way. At opening of session Russell Hardy, head G-man for the prosecution, told the court he expected to prove by his witnesses, several in addition to those who took the stand in the anti-trust proceedings, that the defendant companies had conspired to deprive the local houses (Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres), F&M owned and operated, of necessary films, in an attempt to regain control of the theatres, and that F&M interests have lost heavily as result of the alleged restraint of trade in interstate commerce in pictures.

Former Senator James A. Reed, one of leading counsel for WB, denied any conspiracy existed. He said his clients were forced to open Shubert-Rialto and Orpheum theatres and leased Par and RKO films to exhibit here with their own films after WB lost an equity on the three houses and was being forced out of the exhibition business in St. Louis. Instead of being co-conspirators, Reed declared, the three major defendant companies were rivals, fighting each other all over the country.

Louis Phillips, counsel for Par, asserted in his statement to Judge Molyneaux, that his client has been wrongfully indicted and was never a part of any conspiracy. He inferred that indictments were based on testimony that was inaccurate and given in attempt to force Par to sell its product to F&M houses.

Jacob M. Lashly, St. Louis, associated with Fred C. Leisure of New York as counsel for RKO was the last attorney to make a statement to the court. He reiterated his client's innocence and asserted it had no part in any conspiracy but used business judgment in selling its product to a satisfactory and prompt paying customer.

Salt Lake Seeks Affluent Angel to Sponsor Speed Race on Salt Flats

Salt Lake City, Jan. 14.

As soon as an angel with $15,000 pops up, don't be surprised if several fine necks are snapped here in the next year or so in an effort to boost Sir Malcolm Campbell's land speed record of 301 m.p.h.

That's the talk at all the local chamber of commerce weekly luncheons. The boosters haven't been eating very well ever since Daytona Beach, la., made public that a check for 10 G's would go to the first dare-devil who goes better than Sir Malcolm's mark speedway.

All that is holding up the proceedings here is the little matter of the 15 grand. The c. of c. boys can easily raise the dough, but aren't shuffling very energetically until they hear from speedsters, genuine and phoney, who are willing to try their luck on the Bonneville salt flats located 100 miles from here.

Unexpectedly the Monday (6) luncheon was turned into an exciting affair. The secretary of the club received word from two Los Angeles speedsters who are planning building a car that will run 350 miles an hour. The coast, Mercury-minded, hope to break the titled Englishman's record.

The car will have two 12-cylinder closed engines, supercharged and can develop 4,000 horsepower. It will weigh four tons, be 30 feet long in the streamlined style, with a four-wheel drive. The boys claim that they have found an angel to back the construction and hope to have their first fling sometime in May.

Meanwhile an angel with $15,000 is wanted in Salt Lake. A couple of smart showmen could make a li le mint if the event comes up to expectation. Anyway, angels are pretty scarce in these parts—especially w'th 15 grand!

Canton, O., Jan. 14.

Canton Shrine Trumdrum, which has sponsored an indoor circus the past two years, has abandoned plans for a similar event scheduled for late this month.

CENSORS POUNCE ON LEGIT

Series of Concert Picture Shorts Starring Paderewski, Elman, Kreisler

Paris, Jan. 12.

World's biggest name musicians, including Paderewski, Fritz Kreisler, Mischa Elman and a dozen others, are collaborating with a new French organization, Compagnie des Grands Artistes Internationaux, in making musical film shorts of concert caliber.

Founded by a group of capitalists from Lyons, wealthy silk center, company is headed by Jacques Thibaud, top French violinist, and films are made under musical supervision of Emile Vuillermoz, leading local music critic and composer. More than a dozen films, none running more than four minutes, have already been shot at Paramount Joinville studios.

Pictures are being brought out cautiously and almost secretly for tryouts. VARIETY witnessed a confidential preview at the Edouard VII, where three shorts were run off for the people who had worked on them. Quality of sound, coordination of pictures with music and general artistic and entertainment value were unprecedented.

At the same time two of the shorts were slipped into local theatres, without any announcement, gain-

WMCA'S AIR BALLY FOR A PIECE OF A LEGIT

Shuberts and Donald Flamm of radio station WMCA, New York, have entered into an unusual tieup for exploitation of 'Midwest,' legit show current at the Booth, N. Y. Station has undertaken to boost the legit on the air in every way it can and give it a mention at least once daily. Flamm, in return, gets a share of the take, over and above the reaking point.

First indication of the tieup was a lobby broadcast, with Harry Hershfield, station's air columnist, asking folks how they enjoyed the piece. Next day was a broadcast from backstage, etc. Producers pay nothing for either the time or production outlay.

Drama may close Saturday (25) after but three weeks.

He does admit, however, that when you push the last valve down the music seems to go down and 'round, below, below—but 'that's not scientifically correct.'

King George's Death Kayoes All British Show Biz; 12 Legits Cancel

London, Jan. 21.

Death of King George V is causing the biggest show slump in years here, and there will probably be a long stretch of official court mourning. General reckoning is that lower floor business in legit will be about 75% below normal for four months at least.

Until after the funeral, in about 10 days, show business will be virtually non-existent all around despite the fact that theatres and cinemas will close for only one day officially.

Most exhibs and theatre owners anticipate deadline business until after the funeral when films, being regarded as informal entertainment over here, should return to near average.

N. Y. Dailies Talk Upped Rates for Comm'l Ads Using Show Biz Tieups

Business managers of the New York daily newspapers are reported contemplating a mutual agreement affecting theatrical tieups in strictly commercial ad copy. Possibility, in the event an agreement is reached, is that commercial copy containing the titles of shows, pictures, radio programs or other amusement enterprises will be placed under the regular theatrical rate, which averages about 25% higher than the commercial line charge.

Opinion of several ad heads, from accounts, is that store or business copy plugging an entertainment ceases to be orthodox commercial advertising and comes under the general heading of amusements.

Understood commercial copy mentioning only the name of a star or players without plugging a show title will not come under the ban. An agreement of this sort would limit picture company and other theatrical tie-up stuff to star plugging only, unless merchants would be willing to go for the higher theatre rate.

'Dishonored Lady' Authors Win Out on Appeal Vs. M-G Over 'Letty Lynton'; Far-Reaching Decision

In a decision which reversed the ruling of the lower tribunal, the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals last week ruled that the Metro production, 'Letty Lynton,' was an infringement on Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes' Broadway play of five seasons ago, 'Dishonored Lady.' Higher court ordered that a decree for damages and an accounting, together with an injunction, be issued in favor of 'Lady's' authors. 'Lynton' was released in 1932.

Finding of the Circuit Court did not involve any new issues of law but was based strictly on the many similarities that the judges averred they observed in a comparison of the picture with the Sheldon-Barnes script. The decision, which was written by Judge Learned Hand, reviewed in detail not only the plots of the picture and the stage play, but also the Mrs. Lowndes novel of the same title as the film, upon which Metro contended its version had been founded. It was the opinion of the three judges of the higher court that the picture followed the dramatic significance umber o' the more important scenes in the play almost to the letter' and that 'enough substantial parts were lifted' to substantiate the plaintiffs' charge of piracy.

Even though, the decision stated, much of the picture owes nothing to the play, and that some of the pic was plainly drawn from the novel, no plagiarist can excuse the wrong by showing how much of his work he did not pirate.

'We cannot avoid,' wrote Judge Hand, 'the conviction that if the picture was not an infringement of the play, there can be none short of taking the dialog.'

Judge Hand's Opinion

In a previous section of the opinion the court stated that it has often decided that a play may be pirated without using the dialog. Expatiating on this theme, Judge Hand's opinion continues, 'Were it not so, there could be no piracy of a pantomime, where there cannot be any dialog; yet nobody would deny to a pantomime the name of drama. The play is the sequence of the confluence of all dramatic means, bound together in an inseparable unity; it may often be most effectively pirated by leaving out the speech, for which a substitute can be found, which keeps the whole dramatic meaning. That, as it appears to us, is exactly what the defendants have done here.'

Sheldon and Miss Barnes had brought their suit originally in the Federal Court in Manhattan. This tribunal had dismissed the action, holding that as far as Metro had used the play it had taken only what the law allowed, that is, those general themes, motives or ideas in which there could be no copyright.

In commenting on Metro's denial of piracy, the circuit court recalled that the producer had on two occasions negotiated for the purchase of the screen rights to 'Lady' and that even after the Hays office had interposed an objection to its use, on immorality grounds, the picture company considered the authors' proposition, made in the spring of 1931, to sell for $30,000. These latter negotiations, the opinion pointed out, also proved futile because the play continued to be objectionable and eventually Metro called off the deal.

Mrs. Lowndes' novel, related the decision, was suggested to Irving Thalberg in July, 1931, and again the following November, and in the subsequent month the Metro producing chief bought the rights. Work on 'Letty Lynton' began early in December, 1931.

Similarities Traced

After tracing the similarities of characterizations, settings and major incidents between 'Lady' and Metro's 'Lynton,' Judge Hand wrote that the anti-climax of the latter was so close to the stage play as to make it the very 'essence of the co-authors' expression, the very voice with which they speak.'

Judge Hand's findings take recognition of Metro's defense that it had, like the stage play's authors drawn on the poison case of Madeleine

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Mitchell Davis, local attorney, is now exchanging letters with Columbian Pictures on behalf of his client, 'Red' Hodgson, co-writer of 'Music Goes 'Round and Around.' Davis is insisting that Columbia also use Hodgson in the picture they propose making with Mike Riley and Eddie Farley, other writers of the hit song.

Davis claims that Columbia is unfair in its present plan to use only Riley and Farley and that the elimination of Hodgson would result in financial injury to Hodgson.

WILL MAHONEY

The Evening Dispatch, England, said: "Will Mahoney is possibly the nearest thing to a one-man entertainment the contemporary music-hall has to offer. His talents are so unlimited, and his range so all-embracing, that his presence on the stage is a guarantee of effective work and a prophecy of a happy sequel. Nothing misses fire, and no 'business' is allowed to proceed to a point that would leave the audience sated."

Pic Talent Sees London as Cure For the Jitters

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.

Hollywood's jittery attitude over unsettled production conditions and the customary seasonal lull has a flock of writers, producers and directors peering Londonward for a place to light.

Those seeking jobs abroad see in them a temporary escape. All claim they would welcome a chance to get out of Hollywood until things have been straightened out, particularly at three major studios—or until rumors have died down.

Hollywood's attitude is always jumpy at this season, but this year it seems to have increased materially.

Rene Clair Meets the Press; Sees U. S. Audiences, but No 'Gangstairs'

By WOLFE KAUFMAN

Rene Clair came to New York, he says, with three ideas. He wanted to meet an American 'reportair' in the flesh; he wanted to see some American 'gangstairs' in real life; and he wanted to watch American audiences reacting to his films.

He is ready to sail back. He met the 'reportairs' and won't talk how he feels on that; he has discovered sorrowfully that there are no gangstaires to be seen (at least not, his United Artists' press reps assured him, by a gentlemanly United Artists director) and as to audiences, he watched two of them at the Rivoli. He's going to watch some more. Maybe he can still find out.

Clair is the French director who has been raved about by the New York critics for years but who hasn't ever been in Hollywood. He never wanted to go—before this, he says. For the future? Well, he has to make two more films for Korda, in London, first, and that will probably take at least a year or two. And after that, who knows? He thinks, though, he says, that he will be ready for Hollywood, then. He will know enough about the English language, then. He wouldn't want, he says, to find himself in Hollywood with the chance that he might not understand a word or two here and there. He's heard about Hollywood.

How It's Done

His current film at the Rivoli, N. Y., is 'Ghost Goes West,' his first film in the English language. It wasn't, he says, too difficult to make it in English because Alex Korda ('a great producer, that man') left him pretty completely alone. Clair got his story and figured it out and wrote it into a complete French scenario, he says. Then he showed it to Robert Sherwood, he says, and Sherwood took it away and brought him back an English scenario. Then Clair sat down with the scenario and a dictionary and fixed it according to his own light. Then Sherwood went away again and wrote it again. And so it went until it was finished. 'And, after that,' says Clair, 'it was easy.'

There were a lot of trade paper reporters present when he was explaining this, and they didn't make things any too happy for him.

One of them wanted to know which American films he liked best. He didn't know. He thought 'The Informer' was pretty good. Better than any United Artists pictures last year? He ducked that playful one easily. He didn't see all the United Artists pictures last year. He was making one himself.

The reporters were still playful. Which American actress did he like best? He really couldn't say. He thought Katharine Hepburn was pretty good. Did he want her for his next picture? He couldn't say; he hasn't even a scenario for his next picture yet; he doesn't begin casting until then.

Did he think French pictures would ever be any good? Well, of course, some, he thought, have already been 'good.' He made a few himself.

'But are they doing anything now?'

He was on to the game now;

'Music Goes Round and Round' is so much in the air that this piece of business usually fetches an impromptu snatch of the chorus, audibly, from the audience.

'Show Boat's' Tough Film Breaks

Came in Middle of Talkers and Had to Be Remade — Now the Radio Stymie

'Show Boat,' originally purchased for use in silent picture form from Edna Ferber, probably will be released by Universal within the next three months without any current benefits that might have been derived from broadcasting its tunes over national radio networks, due to the Warner Bros.-ASCAP situation.

That's the final slap that U has taken in connection with the history of this story. Company was making it as a silent and was about half through production when talking pix arrived and forced Universal to halt shooting. It was remade with sound and some dialog, with two tunes that were popular, in Ziegfeld stage production.

Previous to that the company, after getting rights to the Ferber novel, had to dicker with Florenz Ziegfeld because of his stage production rights. Finally reached terms and U planned to use prolog which would include foreword by Ziegfeld.

PIX SCOUTING CAMPUSES

Songstress' Free Concert in Moore's; Ethel Merman Demonstrates Ideas

By CECELIA AGER

One of the nice things about interviewing Ethel Merman is the fact that she loves to talk about show biz, and since show biz to her is tied up with songs, soon she is talking about songs, and since it's simpler for her to explain what she means about songs by singing them, that's what she does, very softly over a plate of vegetable soup at Moore's, and when she sings 'ta-ta-ta-TA' that means the trumpets, she says, and then she goes on to the forte finish, and the whole thing is very swell.

She was singing a few of the songs in 'Strike Me Pink' this time, for it was an interview arranged by the lads of the U. A. publicity staff, but she could be induced not to neglect the songs in 'Anything Goes' as well, for she's very fond of the songs in 'Anything Goes,' too. She is so fond of 'You're the Top' in it, for instance, that when, soon after the show opened in Boston, Cole Porter sought to incorporate in the lyrics topical references to the news of the day, she told him quite plainly, 'I'm not going to go out and gum up my lyrics just because somebody did something,' and she didn't.

It was bad enough, for Boston, she had to change the beautiful line; 'One look at you and I get hot pants' to 'one look at you and I get that way,' but she was solaced by the thought that when the show got to New York, thank goodness, hot pants would be in.

Has No Faves

Miss Merman is crazy about both pictures, 'Strike Me Pink' and 'Anything Goes,' and she thinks it's very nice that they're going to be released, the one soon after the other, for that keeps her in the limelight, she says, which is the very place she feels a person in show biz ought to be. That's the reason she likes to be on the radio, too; it keeps your voice from coast to coast, the limelight, though she doesn't go for the guest program idea. You're on and off in a trice, and maybe it was a bad program. So they're apt to say, wasn't Merman bad? No, when she's on the radio she wants to be on her own program.

She's learned a lot since she was a little punk starting out in show biz, she says. She's learned a lot because in show biz, she says, there's so much to know and so much to find out that eventually you just do. Now she's not afraid of anything. When they asked her if she'd wear a costume made of peacock feathers for the pic 'Anything Goes,' she said, why not; she's never been in a spot to turn down peacock feathers before, so why should she get haughty now?

No Over-Mikeing

he's learned about pictures that you can't put as much 'ungh' in them—there's nothing worse than over-acting in pics, she says—so she calms down. Same for the radio. She lowers her numbers two keys for the mike. She's learned that in pics, the less make-up, the better; that they fool around until they find the way to make you look as good as you can. It's their job to make me look good,' she says, and she leaves it up to them. 'I wouldn't

NEW INCUBATING TALENT SOURCE

Hollywood Booneing Undergrad Theaps for Cinematic Possibilities—Broadway, Radio and Everything Else Already Thoroughly Fine-Combed

RAH-RAH BUSH LEAGUE

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Talent scouts and agents for film studios are still confronted with the problem of securing new talent for pictures. With vaude, burlesque and the legit road a thing of the past, only New York, the little theatres and radio present possibilities for new faces. Of late, studios have turned an eye toward the college dramatic groups for embryonic actors who might be developed for the screen.

Ben Piazza, Paramount's talent Boone, recently returned from a trip through the northwest and south where he contacted the college dramatic groups at Texas Christian, Southern Methodist, Louisiana, Tulane, California, Stanford, Santa Clara, USC and others.

Arrival of a picture executive at the schools was of considerable interest to the students but of little to the faculty. Students interested in dramatics all evidenced enthusiasm for the screen, but in most cases had little real talent to offer. With the exception of one or two of the A colleges, amateur dramatics is considered a necessary evil, a sort of something to keep the students away from poolrooms and dancehalls.

Foresee Coin

Students, however, feel that perhaps more attention to the dramatic end of their education might be profitable because of the multiplicity of doctors, lawyers, engineers and other professional grads turned out with diplomas and hope.

Direction of plays for the college thespians is usually entrusted to some prof who has a leaning for the drama, but knows little else about the mechanics. Campus players are usually presented under severe difficulties. Picture scouts who see them can form little opinion as to their possibilities outside of looks.

To several schools recently have come former stock directors who are trying to tie up with the drama groups. So far none has landed jobs, but the idea is good. These former professionals, most of them now in search for jobs, could give the college boys and girls the fundamentals of acting.

As far as the little theatres are

Writers Complain Vs. Milk Toast Treatment of Shoot 'Em Up Pix

Hollywood, Jan.

Concocting of mystery, action and other screen stories wherein lawlessness is a component factor has become a major problem to writers. Due to Hays office restrictions and the impossibility of getting anything which smacks of gangdom or attempts to beat the law past the British censors, writers find most avenues of maintaining interest in these stories closed to their typewriters.

In Radio's 'Muss 'Em Up,' main plot factor of the story is a kidnap. Nothing pertaining to the snatch can be shown. Characters in the picture refer to the job but the action surrounding the actual kidnaping and capture of the criminals had to be deleted. Result is that the picture chronicles the efforts of the police but the coppers can only talk about what they're doing. Paramount's 'Womantrap' is up against the same problem.

Writers assigned to such stories find it almost impossible to concoct a smooth running yarn that will hold interest. Audiences expect a good share of action in any picture of this type, find the new crop lacking in thrills.

Workings of criminals, their efforts to outwit the law, closeup of their activities, anything that might attempt to show the innerworkings of crime are taboo. In all must be done in dialog and writers complain that most dialog lacks the active interest of a machine gun.

ST. LOUIS CIVIL TRIAL DRAGS INTO 3d WEEK; GOV'T TO WIND UP BY FRIDAY

Anti-Trust Charges Against Warners, Par and RKO Proceeding Even Tenor—Legal Skirmishes—Both Fanchon and Marco on Stand, Also Partington

St. Louis,

It's expected that the Government will wind up its prosecution against Warner Bros., Paramount and RKO, and respective officers, by the end of this week. The equity (civil) case trial, after loss to the Department of Justice of the criminal proceedings, has been a dull, legal affair thus far, the third week of trial.

Prosecuting U. S. attorney Hardy and defense counsel Jim (former U. S. Senator) Reed and Frederick Wood, et. al., have argued back and forth on motions, for the legal record, with Judge Molyneaux brooking little delay, however.

Both Mrs. Fanchon Wolff Simon and Marco Wolff, heads of Fnachon & Marco, Inc., whose Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres are the crux of the legal action, along with Jack Partington, another officer of F&M. have testified, among others.

Judge Joseph W. Molyneaux today ruled that the testimony of J. M. Ulmer and B. D. Gordon, Cleveland, attorneys, would be admitted tentatively evidence. Ulmer, several days ago testified that Herman Starr, v.p. of WB, at a conference they had in New York relative to the Wheeling, West Va., theatre trouble, similar to St. Louis mixup, made certain declarations. Gordon did not testify as stipulation agreed his testimony would be identical with Ulmer's.

It had been contended that while conversations between Ulmer, Gordon and Starr did not directly touch on the St. Louis situation and were not made in furtherance of alleged conspiracy here, it did show the state of Starr's mind and that WB later did things Starr said they would do and had done in similar situations elsewhere, Government counsel insisted that conversation was admissable on grounds that Starr made statement as per corporate transaction and within scope of his authority for his company and in furtherance of Wheeling situation. Frederick Wood, of the defense counsel, bitterly fought admission of evidence, citing sundry legal authorities, including one from U. S. Supreme Court. Arguments lasted until the court closed late today.

Fanchon on the Stand

What was an otherwise drab day in court was enlivened a bit by appearance of Mrs. Fanchon Wolff Simon on the stand. Her efforts to tell of conversations with Adolph Zukor in the summer of 1934 in an effort to get pictures for the St. Louis houses, were frustrated by the defense and sustained by the court, which ruled that the Government's attorney, Hardy, had not laid the proper groundwork for questioning along this line.

Louis Phillips, counsel for Par, maintained that at time mentioned Par was in hands of bankruptcy trustees who had given George J. Schaefer, then general manager, and Neil Agnew, gen. sales manager, sole authority to represent the company in picture deals. Last Friday, Marco Wolff was permitted to tell of his vain efforts to obtain ictures from Zukor.

Mrs. Simon was llowed to tell of her life history; her rise from the winner of a Los Angeles newspaper scholarship to a high place in theatrical world. But few questions were asked her on cross-examination. Her brother, examined by Phillips, was unable to fix the exact time he discussed case with the Government men, Harry Arthur and various counsel for government. He said inside facts of case were first related to him in New York in July, 1934, by Arthur and from what he was told he believed Fanchon & Marco were entitled to a 25-year franchise for Par pictures formerly held by Skouras Bros.' Super Theatre Corp. Wolff admitted not making a definite inquiry to obtain real facts.

Various records, etc., bearing on operation of Shubert-Rialto and Orpheum theatres were explained by W. Stewart McDonald, asst. treas. of WB Pictures, Inc., and General Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., who followed Wolff to stand. Defense objections to questions touching on profit or loss of such operations by WB were sustained by court. Hardy fought bitterly to get in this evidence asserting it would support government's contention that operation of houses by WB was not bona fide transaction but that General Theatrical Enterprises, Inc., was a 'fighting corporation' just as Standard Oil Co. had set up so-called independent companies to operate at loss and drive competitors out of business. State income tax payments, based on receipts of two houses, were likewise barred by court.

Court will later decide hether to accept evidence of rental payments by Par and RKO films by WB as strenuously objected to this evidence.

Harry Koplar and Arthur personally appeared in court this morning, producing records of Famous Amus. Co., sought defense counsel.

Mike Marco on Stand

Marco Wolff, exec. v.-p. of Fanchon & Marco, was called to the stand Friday (17) after Jack Partington, who had undergone a grilling cross-examination that lasted until noon, was excused. Wolff detailed each step in his career which, at one time, reached the point where he and his sister employed 6,000 to 8,000 actors, musicians and stagehands. He told of the transition from stage shows to operation of theatres beginning with operation of the old Roxy, N. Y. Wolff said it was at the suggestion of Nora Bayes that he and his sister incorporated under the name of Fanchon & Marco in 1927.

Reaching point in issue, Wolff testified of a conference he had with George J. Schaefer, former v.-p. of Par, in L. A. in June, 1934, relative to his attempt to obtain Par films for St. Louis houses.

Asked why he leased St. Louis theatre, Wolff said he did so with understanding that F&M had a long term franchise for WB and Par pictures. Wolff told of other meetings with Adolph Zukor. He said he asked Zukor, as one of big leaders in industry, to save 'us little fellows

Mooney Starts Jail Sentence Same Day His MG Pic Opens on B'way

Martin Mooney, the N. Y. American reporter who authored Metro's picture 'Exclusive Story,' was unable to attend the New York premiere at the Capitol Friday (17) for the very good reason he was whiling away his time in the jailhouse.

At about the same time the picture was first flashed on the New York screen, Mooney was appearing before Judge Otto A. Rosalsky in Manhattan General Sessions Court for committment to prison for 30 days and to pay a fine of $250 for contempt of court. It required but a few minutes for the Court to send the former reporter on his way. In fact it was done so quickly Mooney left the courtroom in a daze.

Last May, after he had written a series of articles dealing with the 'policy racket' in N. Y. city for the American, Mooney was summoned before the N. Y. rand Jury and asked to reveal the source of his information. He refused on the ground that his information was privileged and also that he did not 'want to be a squealer.' Judge Morris Koenig directed him to answer the jurors' questions. He stubbornly declined and was adjudged in contempt of court. The sentence imposed was 30 days and $250 fine.

The case was taken to the appellate division of the N. Y. supreme court which upheld Judge Koenig's decision. His attorneys then appealed to the State Court of Appeals. On Jan. 7 the highest court in the State upheld the sentence.

Meanwhile, Mooney had been free under bail and had spent the time in Hollywood working on his picture. His attorneys wired him to come back and serve his sentence. He arrived in N. Y. Monday (13), and through arrangement with the District Attorney he surrendered Friday (17). Why he selected the same day his picture was to be shown to begin serving the sentence was not explained. It certainly was a psychological time from a press agent's point of view.

The Mooney case has aroused considerable discussion among newspapermen as well as attorneys. The laws of some States absolve reporters from prosecution for refusing to divulge the source of their information while most of the others compel them to do so. New York is among the latter states although many well-known attorneys have upheld the newspaperman's stand in the matter. Shortly after Mooney's arrest a bill tending to shield the reporter was introduced in legislature. It is still pending.

N. Y.'s Juice Eclipse Dents Nabe Cinemas, Doesn't Affect Legit

Short circuit occurring at the Hell Gate power plant of the New York Edison Co. Jan. 15 had its effect on N. Y. show business. Operation of entire chains of midtown nabe houses as well as indies, restaurants, hotels, traffic, electrified transportation and home radio reception in upper Manhattan, Bronx and Westchester was interrupted because of the current failure. Estimates on cash losses are figured to run into fancy coin in view of theatre refunds, wasted ether advertising and loss of patrons in other branches touched.

Broadway itself suffered slight inconvenience. Several larger houses received flickering lights for a few minutes because of the drain but no material damage, however. Most of discomfort was confined to section between 60th and 129th streets in Manhattan. District is predominantly residential and therefore accommodates profusion of neighborhood theatres. Neither of the radio nets was greatly inconvenienced by the accident. Columbia Broadcasting was not touched at all. NBC's auxilliary battery plant went into automatic operation at first flurry and continued for a short while until normalcy was restored. Program broadcasting continued uninterrupted but studios were forced to work with improvised lights during momentary inking.

Heavy Nabe Losses

Theatre chains suffered greatest losses. RKO lost about one entire show in seven houses during the 10-hour power shutdown. Loew experienced similar trouble in about 15 houses. Consolidated, Springer-Cocalis, Brandt and Skouras were next heaviest hit. Steinman, Salkin-Gerber, Rapf-Rudin, Leff-Myers, Elite, Cinema, Belle, Brecher, were other indie chains suffering from curtailed revenue. Large number of privately owned family theatres similarly stricken.

Utility company is quoted as defining trouble as 'an act of God.' Regardless of contract stipulations there is small likelihood of any lawsuits being started to recover losses sustained. Ianket agreement on file with Public Service Commission permits an out for juice purveyors.

On the legit end, when the lights darkened, Broadway houses were

DAILIES GIVE FILMS BETTER NEWS BREAKS

Leading dailies throughout th country are beginning to increase the amount of space accorded pictures, with several since the first of the year doubling their film sections. This has been brought about, according to home office pictur sources, by realization that an important function of a newspaper these days is to more thoroughly cover the film field.

For years the film companies have contributed a major portion of a daily's advertising copy, yet in most cases outside of New York, Chicago and Los Angeles, the newspaper publishers have been backward about turning over editorial space to this form of amusement. Also, with legit and stage shows considerably reduced in late years, papers have realized their major source of amusement news and revenue is pictures of late the road has been trying a comeback.

One daily in Indianapolis conducted a survey to determine local reader interest and found that th comic section rated first in popularity, page one news second, and picture news third. Sports to which the average paper gives many times the space it does films, was further down the line.

AMERICAN LEAGUE'S 2D COMM'L FEATURE

Detroit, Jan. 21.

The American League's flicker, 'Take Me Out to the Ball Game,' produced by Fisher Body division of General Motors Corp. and directed by Umpire George Moriarty, goes on the road this week following the okay of baseball moguls at special preview here last week.

Same procedure of distribution as with League's first venture last year, 'Play Ball,' will be used this year by Fisher Body. Prints will be sent free of charge to all clubs, organizations, etc., requesting them, plus mailing costs to outside Detroit. Sixty-five prints were made last year; 2,000 organizations took advantage of offer, and more than 2,000,000 persons saw flicker.

Here for preview were William S. Harridge, pres. American League; Thomas A. Yawkey, Boston Red Sox head; Alva Bradley, pres. Cleveland Indians; several officers of champion Detroit Tigers; Lew Fonseca, ex-manager of Chicago White Sox; Roger Peckinpaugh, former Cleveland pilot, and Moriarty. Latter three will lecture with pic.

New flicker, in both 16 and 35 mm., and of six and three-reel lengths, embodies distinct departure from first venture in that players actually talk in describing their special plays, etc., with Ted Husing providing the comment. Also includes closeups of many stars, world series and some feature stuff to liven things.

Requests for flicker already piling up, with good chance of beating last year's record. Fisher Body, the angel, is handling distribution from its office here and gets its dividend in plugs before and after pic.

IMPORTANT PAR CONFAB

ERPI BOW-OUT OF ASTORIA PLANT?

lectrical Research Products, Inc., will probably give up operating the former Paramount studios at Astoria (Long Island). Instead of expanding in the east, Erpi is stated as ready to concentrate its future film financing activities and studio operations at its own General Service plant on the Coast.

Coast plant is held to be paying. Erpi, on the Walter Wanger contract alone.

Capt. George McLeod Baynes and Erpi would accordingly possibly part company soon. Baynes is in charge at Astoria.

However, he may take over the plant, should current financing activities in this direction prove successful. Trade reports also mention Monte Brice.

Erpi has the plant under a lease that has around five years more to go, at a rental of $30,000 yearly. The studio costs Paramount, owner of the plant, around $90,000 yearly.

Question of Paramount taking the plant back for production on its own, while considered recently by that company, appears to have been tabled for the time being.

Erpi is reported inclined to turn over its lease under proper financial guarantees. Such guarantees, undoubtedly, would include conditions calling for payment of the present Erpi rental of $30,000 annually plus certain charges for equipment now in the plant.

Whitford Drake, v.p. of Erpi, and chief operating official of that company, is slated to go abroad this week, leaving the inference that the matter is in hand and that Erpi may be all set for the Astoria shift. Drake's trip is held officially to be a vacation.

PREZ TO REPORT ON 1936 PROD.

Otterson Will Not Be East for Tomorrow's (Thur.) Homeoffice Board Meeting—Has Been Personally O.O.'ing Production and Is to Report Later

THEATRE DEALS

Filmdom focuses attention this week on Paramount. One of the most important sessions of that company's board of directors is scheduled for tomorrow (Thurs.) unless a quorum is unobtainable owing to the absence of some directors. If the meeting is not held it is expected that John E. Otterson, president of Par, will address the board on the company's 1936 production and business outlook at the next board session.

Of the last 11 or 12 films made by Paramount, around seven were made under the aegis of Otterson, as president. Some of these are still unreleased.

Production costs and schedules have to be adjusted.

Otterson has been on the Coast where he is said to have conferred with John Hertz, Floyd Odlum and other Par financial mentors who were there at the time. These men were on the Coast on other business but while on the Pacific slope took a look into the Par situation in which they are heavily interested. What the outcome of their observations might be is not known but likely to be indicated at this coming board meeting.

Otterson was mentioned as about to return at the solicitation of certain company officials, but is deferring his eastern journey. Hertz has returned to New York already.

Whether the board will take up the question of pending theatre deals such as the Hoblitzelle-O'Donnell partnership and the A. H. Blank arrangement for the middle-west in not known. These matters have been up persistently for several weeks but so far as any official indication goes there has been no settlement of these situations by the company.

The question involved in at least one of the two arrangements is whether the deals, as presently operating, continue or whether Par shall execute the options in the company's behalf and operate the theatres on its own.

Koenig Leaves Warners After 12 Years to Head U Production

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

When and if the Charles R. Rogers-J. Cheever Cowdin group takes over Universal about Feb. 1, William Koenig, until recently studio manager at Warners, becomes exec in charge of all productions on the lot. As head of the studio Koeni will work directly under Rogers, who is to become head of company, handling both production and distribution.

Contract was officially signed Saturday (18). Hitch was the length of the binder, Carl Laemmle giving him a two-year ticket as studio head at $2,000 weekly.

Steps are now being taken to have Koenig's contract at Warners washed up. It runs until July at $1,750 a week. Koenig ankled at Warners two months ago when studio relieved him of many production responsibilities, but continued to draw salary.

After Koenig had collected a few paychecks, overtures were made for settlement of his contract. It looked for a time as if he would join Selznick International, but this deal hit a snag.

Koenig hopped east some time ago for confabs on the U situation, and received an okay from the financial interests.

He had been production manager at Warners for 12 years, prior to which he held same post at U.

Status of Fred Meyer, Universal's executive studio manager, will remain unchanged in the event the Cheever-Cowdin interests take over the studio. Meyer holds a contract running through 1937.

J. Cheever Cowdin is slated to handle the financial end as an officer, with Carl Laemmle expected to hold the post as chairman of the board, if and when the deal jells.

Hollywood, Jan.

Eddie Small and Harry M. Goetz, heads of Reliance Picts, whose United Artists releasing contract expires upon the completion of 'Last of the Mohicans,' have been talking a releasing deal to both RKO-Radio and Paramount for the past week. One day one deal is hot, next day the other.

Yesterday (Monday) they conferred with Watterson Rothacker and John E. Otterson on a plan that would be similar to the Walter Wanger situation, obtaining part of the finances, if not all from Paramount, Par releasing, but making their pictures off the Paramount lot.

PIONEER'S 'CUSTER' IN TINT; FORD DIRECTS

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

PAN BERMAN'S OWN RKO UNIT

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Pandro Berman sticks at RKO Radio another year on new producing contract, stipulating weekly salary of $2,500 and percentage of profits of pix, which should net him around $200,000. Although his present contract doesn't expire until March 23, studio handed him a new pact.

Producer will have his unit under direction of Leo Spitz, prez of RKO-Radio Pictures, and under Ben B. Kahane, head of RKO Studios, Inc. Latter, in turn, will be liaison between Berman and Sam Briskin, who is in charge of all productions and executives on the lot.

Berman has set four pix, including one starring Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, one Hepburn production; one for Lily Pons and 'Winterset,' the stage play which he bought recently while in New York.

Laemmle Urging Rogers-Cowdin To Pass Up U Buy, Coast Reports

U's Ifs and Buts

Since the Cowdin-Rogers option for the purchase of Universal runs until Feb. 1, most of the off-and-on conjectures in the trade about the trade are open. There are details in the situation which are subject to various conference between the prospective purchasers and the Universal people. Modifications on behalf of either side may be quite possible depending, naturally, on the stipulations under which the option was granted and accepted.

However, from all possible authoritative sources the outlook at the present moment is held favorable to the C-R group exercising its option.

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Though the Charles R. Rogers-J. Cheever Cowdin groups claim it is all set for the Universal takeover and are actively checking up on all studio matters, Carl Laemmie is bending every effort to get them to agree to withdraw their option for the studio take-over. Instead, Laemmie is offering Rogers an important post with the organization and desires to use Cowdin on the financing end.

From an authorative source it is reported that the $2,000,000 Rogers-Cowdin have been negotiating to get from British capital may not be available. Necessary to handle the deal is $8,300,000, with Rogers claiming that they have on deposit in New York a good portion of the $1,500,000 necessary for the option to become effective. Cowdin is head of Standard Capital Corp.

7 Good Performers Among Amus. Issues in Otherwise Dull Week

By MIKE WEAR

Fact that London markets were closed because of the King's death tended to further diminish interest in the stock market yesterday (Tues.). Result was irregularly lower prices, with majority of losses in amusement sector held to minor fractions. Universal preferred continued its sensational climb, going up 4 points to a new 1935-6 high at 80. Dipped to 75 at close on profit-taking, for 1-point decline for day.

Amusement liens also were inactive and mostly lower. General Theatres, Paramount and Warner Bros. bonds bucked trend, last named reaching new peak at 89¾.

Despite some excellent performances by individual stocks, majority of amusements followed general trend and closed lower in last week's stock market. Amusement Group first edged up into new high territory at 44 as measured by averages for 12 representative issues, much as had been anticipated. But the group reacted later, dropping to just below 42 and winding up week's activity at 42⅝ for a loss of 0.573 of a point, compared with close on previous Monday.

Dow-Jones industrial averages closed at 144.05, which represented a decline of 2.47 points. Other representative groups also finished at lower levels though none of losses were alarming.

Even in the face of general reactionary trend, seven amusements hung up new 1935-6 highs, with radio issues showing the way. Stocks to make new peaks, their top quotations and net gain on week, were Eastman Kodak pfd., at 165, up 2; Radio common, at 14¾, up ⅝; RKO, at 7¾, up 25c; Universal pfd., at 76, up 17; U common, at 10⅝, up 4½; Columbia Broadcasting A and B stocks, at 53⅜ (asking price), up 6¼, and Westinghouse pfd., at 130¼, up 3¼. Keith bonds at 96¾ were only liens to move into new high, although Warner Bros. obligations tied old mark at 89½.

Sensational upturn in Universal preferred stock, which sent this issue up 17 points in a week, was based on two factors. One was expected favorable earnings statement soon to be issued while other was belief that Rogers-Standard deal would go through, with this combination picking up option to buy-in next month. Some observers in the Street held that, even if this action, optimistically anticipated, was not taken, Universal Pictures Co. would

J. J. KEMP SENTENCED FOR FROM 2½ TO 5 YRS.

John J. Kemp, New York insurance broker who catered chiefly to theatrical people, was sentenced Tuesday (14) to Sing Sing for a term of from two and one-half to five years by Judge George Donnellan in General Sessions Court. He had pled guilty to one of two indictments charging grand larceny. Kemp admitted his total thefts amounted to over $100,000 from theatrical folk covering 10 years.

The specific charge on which Kemp was sent to prison was that he had stolen $10,127 from Clarence Bliss, midget known professionally as Little Billy. The second indictment was based on the complaint of Donald Brian, actor, who lost $2,246 when Kemp forged his name to an application for a loan from an insurance company on one of Brian's policies.

Kemp was arrested last September at his office 551 Fifth avenue, after he admitted he had stolen a dividend check for $1,524 issued by the Equitable Life Assurance Society on the life of Will Rogers.

Although both Bliss and Brian asked that the court be lenient with Kemp, Judge Donnellan said the defendant was entitled to no sympathy, 'because you had imposed on many who had faith in you and nobody knows what you have done with the stolen money.'

COOPER'S TRUSTEES

Sid Kent, Former Lincoln, Neb., Boy, With Other Lincolnites

Lincoln, Jan. 21.

S. R. Kent, president of 20th-Fox, a former Lincoln boy, is one of the board of trustees for the $1,000,000 foundation erected by J. H. Cooper for deserving children. Another is Austin C. Keough, legal counsel for Paramount. Cooper will also serve on the board. Lincoln men chosen for other board positions include J. E. Miller, chairman and prominent department store head; Charles Stuart, financier and Cooper's landlord in the Stuart theatre; E. N. Van Horne, president of the Continental National Bank; Sam Waugh, head of the First National Bank's trust department; J. C. Seacrest, newspaper publisher and radio exec, and Max V. Beghtol, local attorney.

It was erroneously reported last week that Mr. Cooper is a widower. He has a wife living, Mrs. Gertrude Cooper; also a seven-year-old son.

Two new theatres which J. H. Cooper, Paramount partner in the middle west, is building himself without any participation by Par, will operate for the purpose of swelling the $1,000,000 foundation for destitute children. The other 30 theatres in which Cooper and Paramount are partners, located in Nebraska, Oklahoma and Colorado, will not turn over any of its profits to the proposed fund.

Cooper's two foundation-building houses, to be located in Bartlesville and Ardmore, Okla., will be ready for operation before the end of the year. Plans have not yet been drawn but they will be medium sized theatres in keeping with the population of the towns. Cooper and Par, as partners, have a house under construction at present in Oklahoma City. Par is a 50% partner with Cooper in this house and the 30 which are presently operating.

Cooper is now in New York where he makes his home.

NOVARRO FLOP FOLDS MAGYAR VAUDE HOUSE

Budapest, Jan. 10.

Fovarosi Orfeum, opened in September, with much blowing of trumpets as the only big time music hall in town, under management of Teddy Ehrenthal, has folded.

Last straw was Ramon Novarro, engaged for a week's crooning. He nowise had the success expected. Audiences and critics were disappointed and said so. Also the star did some singing gratis in a night club, annoying his management.

Novarro, on the other hand, contends that the management failed to pay him the cash advance he was entitled to, wherefore he walked out after three performances. Price of tickets had to be refunded.

Ehrenthal may now turn the Orpheum into a musical comedy house for the rest of the season.

In complimenting Allied Theatre Owners of the Northwest, Inc., for refusing the application to membership of an exhibitor against whom claims for bicycling film had been brought, the Hays' office urged that interests of both distributors and exhibitors would be best served if organizations co-operated to strengthen the copyright law. Gabriel L. Hess, counsel of the motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, suggested that the law be strengthened by addition of adequate damage provisions to curb bicycling. The exhibitor who sought to join the Northwestern Allied unit, asked that organization to intercede for him with a view to quashing certain bicycling claims.

In a bulletin sent to every exhibitor in the territory, Northwest Allied States has urged united aggressive action to push the Duffy anti-music tax bill to success in Congress. Theatre owners are asked to enlist support of their patrons in the fight and to bring pressure to bear on Congressmen. The Ninth Minnesota district exhibitors are being lined up to take a leading part in the battle because their representative at Washington, Congressman R. T. Buckler, is a member of the House patents and copyright committee to which the measure has been referred.

Failure of Governor Harry Hoffman to issue his 30-day reprieve for Bruno R. Hauptman a few days earlier kept 'March of Time' from including the Hauptmann case in the current release which hit the screens last Wednesday (15). If reprieve had come before last Friday (10), editors of the reel figured the Dr. John F. Condon testimony and salient details of case might have been included. As it was, 'March of Time' officials feared they would be accused of sensationalism merely for the sake of including leading headline copy in the issue.

When George Browne, prez of International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, returns to the Coast from the Miami labor meetings, he will go into a huddle with Nicholas M. Schenck, Leo Spitz and other producers to iron out status of Coast cameramen. Settlement of IATSE difficulties, which returned its studio locals to the basic agreement and closed shop, provided for the organization to waive jurisdiction of first cameramen in California. Confabs will provide line between first lensers and seconds and exact status of firsts.

Newest kid discovery is Jackson Snyder, seven-year-old, in the new Mae West picture, 'Klondike Annie.' Youngster was attracted to Miss West at the Hollywood fights where he is a character, mitting all the fighters before they answer the gong. Sent for by the star, he was given a bit but did it so impressively that both Miss West and the director, Raoul Walsh, decided to prop up his part. He is said to be a cinch for a contract and the attendant buildup.

Week before Columbia decided to change the name of the Harry Richman picture from 'Rolling Along' to 'The Music Goes 'Round and Around' it paid Shapiro, Bernstein & Co. $500 for the use of the former title. S-B published a tune with the 'Rolling Along' tag several years ago, with the title page listing Richman as one of the writers. Settlement with Columbia also covered the use of 'Rolling Along' as the name of one of the songs which had been written expressly for the picture.

With Radio Corp. of America directors scheduled to meet either next Friday (24) or on Jan. 31, Wall Street opinion is that the Joe Kennedy recapitalization plan, on which he has been working since first of year, will be brought up for perusal and discussion. Workability of re-cap proposal, as viewed by various groups within RCA, probably will determine whether plan will be approved or held over for later confab.

Recently reported here that Bland Johaneson (N. Y. Mirror) was the only Manhattan film critic working without an assistant. Signals over. There are two or three others who pound the trail alone.

One is Regina Carewe (N. Y. American) who, according to VARIETY's own boxscore, reviews more films a year than any other critic. But the count between the Misses Carewe and Johaneson is very close.

A national survey to determine the importance of the use of motion pictures and 'visual aids' in America's elementary and high schools, was last week announced by Dr. Cline M. Koon, specialist in radio and visual education of the Office of Education, U. S. Department of the Interior. More than 20,000 superintendents of schools throughout the U. S. will contribute information on the subject.

'Frontier Justice' is being carried as the handle on the Walter Futter-Hoot Gibson picture released three weeks ago, and also on a Bill Cody production now being sent out. Pix are contenders in the same territories, but neither producer has seen fit to do anything about switching titles.

Although the 'Count of Luxembourg' doesn't start at Paramount until April, studio has started extensive tests of Frank Forest, American-born opera star, who will be co-starred with Gladys Swarthout. It took execs seven months to sew up rights to the operetta.

Boothmen's Merger Expected to End N.Y. Theatres' Bugaboo of X-Picketing

When roposed merger of Local 306, Allied and Empire operator unions is effected, Greater New York exhibitors may feel virtually assured that a complicated booth situation has come to an end, and that in future the theatres will deal with only one organization. The fear that another independent boothmens' union may spring up to cause another cross-picketing war, is allayed by reports of cooperation from Mayor F. H. LaGuardia to obviate such chances.

Understanding is that the mayor has agreed to reexamination of all Greater New York operators now holding licenses. All persons to whom licenses were issued since 1928 will be subject to such an order, claim of union leaders being that since then many men obtained licenses who aren't entitled to them. There are about 6,000 "so-called 'scabs' who are not in Local 306, Allied or Empire but hold licenses permitting them booths. Most of them have never seen the inside of a booth, it is added, but if another independent union sprang up after 306, Allied and Empire had consolidated, they might form the nucleus of the membership.

Cross-picketing and other troubles all over again, which could be ended only by absorbing such a new union, would inevitably result. Theatre owners again would be placed in the middle in all probability, at the mercy of a situation that has been difficult to control in the past.

Legally new unions under old New York State charters could be organized and, legally, they could operate. Projectionists who could pass a reexamination under licenses could also legally join such unions but as matters stand now, it is doubted if any new union could command a sufficient number of men with okayed licenses to mean anything. Much will depend on Mayor LaGuardia and qualifications of operators to pass on reexamination of licenses, whether they belong to any union now or not.

Joseph D. Basson, president of 306, who has spent months of effort toward the creation of one Greater New York union out of three now in operation, is in Miami attending the midwinter session of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, where the matter has come up for discussion.

B'WAY PAR PARTIAL TO WEDNESDAY OPENINGS

Paramount, N. Y., is planning to remain a Wednesday change day, after having shifted from Fridays to the middle of the week at Christmas (Wednesday). Parites believe that the house gets a better break several ways by bringing in new shows Wednesdays, with 9 o'clock previews the night before. It is felt that better advance breaks on publicity are obtained with Mondays and Tuesdays slow days for papers and other de luxers not pounding away for space on those days.

With only the Center, and occasionally the Strand and Rivoli, starting new shows on Wednesdays but almost always holding over, the Par also believes it will get better review attention.

OFFICIAL TALLY HOW PA. VOTED ON SUNDAYS

Harrisburg, Jan. 21.

Of the 2,558 municipalities in Pennsylvania, 317 voted on the question of Sunday pictures at the last general election in November. The returns show that 164 approved Sabbath pix and 153 rejected them.

The referenduin was purely a local matter and therefore no return of the vote was made to the State Bureau of Elections where the official vote for State-wide elections and the vote for Congressmen, State legislators and judges are recorded.

The vote, following within two years local option votes that permitted Sunday baseball and football, shows the growing tendency in the State to wipe out gradually what succeeding legislatures have never been able to do—the Blue Laws of 1794.

The complete returns show that 25 cities favored Sunday pictures and 17 opposed them; 114 boroughs favored and 122 opposed them, and 25 townships favored them while 14 voted them down. The 317 municipalities where the vote came up were scattered through 61 of the State's 67 counties.

Detroit Prosecutor Warns on Giveaways

Detroit, Jan. 21.

Warning theatre owners to cease giveaways, under threat of prosecution under State anti-lottery laws, Prosecutor Duncan McCrea this week promised to clean-up unless practice stopped. Action followed decision of Judge DeWitt H. Merriam in Circuit Court last Friday (17) in granting permanent injunction restraining Jacob Schreiber, operator of the Colonial and Majestic, from conducting drawings in his houses. Sproat-Temple Theatre Corp. made petition.

In letters to Schreiber and five other nabe operators, McCrea called attention to decision and announced that the operators must give him written promises not to conduct further lotteries. Theatres whose owners were notified include the Capitol, Buchanan, Rex, Kramer and the East Side. Complaints are on file against all these houses, McCrea declared.

FILM DIRECTORS FORM OWN GUILD

Follow Screen Actors and Screen Writers Guilds in Indications that All Film Arts and Crafts Are Going Union

EQUITY TIE-IN

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Sudden formation of a Screen Directors Guild last week indicated to Hollywood that the major studios were headed for 100% closed shop of all crafts and groups associated with production. Directors organization will tie-up for concerted action with the Screen Actors Guild and Screen Writers Guild.

Last week's organization meeting of directors was preceded by two previous huddles of meg wielders, secretly held on Dec. 23 and Jan. 6, at which times basic organization plans were laid and incorporation papers prepared. Corporation charter was granted at Sacramento last Monday (13). Lawrence Bielenson, attorney for the Actors and Writers Guilds, was called in to handle legal and organization phases for the directors group.

At first organization meeting Wednesday (15) at Hollywood Athletic Club, attended by around 50 directors, King Vidor was elected president; Lewis Milestone, first vice-president; Frank Tuttle, second v.p.; William K. Howard, secretary; John Ford, treasurer.

Officers Named

Officers will sit on board of directors, which will include Frank Borzage, Clarence Brown, John Cromwell, Howard Hawks, Wesley Ruggles, Rouben Mamoulian, William Wellman, Gregory La Cava, Edward Sutherland and H. Bruce Humberstone.

Purpose of forming the Guild, according to spokesman for group, is due to curtailment of power of directors during the past year, with fear that if practice continued earnings and standing of directors would be seriously cut down.

Among the meg wielders' squawks is the practice by some studios of handing out scripts two or three days prior to start of picture, without giving director sufficient time for preparations. On completion, some directors are denied the right to sit in on cutting process.

Growing practice of splitting production into two or more units also is wail of meggers.

About 250 directors are expected at first general mass meeting of the new Guild tomorrow (Wednesday) night, when new members are slated to follow lead of those attending last week by forwarding resignations to the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences.

After main body gets rolling, intention is to organize the assistant directors into a Junior Guild, as an affiliate. Although the Directors' Guild will not directly affiliate with American Federation of Labor, group may make an indirect tie-in through hookup with the Screen Actors Guild, which holds AFL connections through Actors Equity.

Gillmore OK Seen

It is understood that Frank Gillmore, president of Equity, is en route here via the Panama Canal, accompanied by Paul Turner, legal chief, pair due to arrive the end of this week. If directors want affiliation with Equity through the Actors Guild, it is expected Gillmore will okay the proposition.

One major purpose of the Directors' Guild is to campaign for percentage of picture profits for ace directors. Some have held percentage deals which have proved very remunerative, and they feel cut of every big picture will greatly increase their earnings and give them greater power roduction matters.

Technicians' Guild is latest group to be discussed for organization, now that the directors have become Guild-minded. If formed, would include art directors, technical directors, sound engineers, set designers, fashion and costume directors, laboratory engineers and others in sub-executive capacities in studio departments who are not eligible for membership in other labor or Guild groups.

MPTOA Skipping Its '36 Conclave But Plans a Record Conv. for 1937

In all probability passing up an annual convention this year for the first time in its history, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America is looking to 1937 for its biggest session. The convention that year will be held in San Francisco, according to tentative plans.

Not only will the 1937 conclave be different in that Los Angeles is also included as a topper-offer to business sessions at 'Frisco, but expected by leaders that by then there should be many matters of national importance for the convention to take up. Moreover, by '37 the MPTOA, it is hoped, will be a more powerful and more representative national exhibitor body than today, with new units added to it. Within the past three months three new units have been affiliated with the MPTOA. These are the Washington state organization, organized under the leadership of Hugh Bruen, operator of the 45th St. in Seattle. This group originally was hooked up with Allied States Assn. Other new units in the MPTOA camp are the recently organized exhibitor associations in Kansas City and Oklahoma City territories.

Frisco's Fair

In 1937 San Francisco is planning to hold a large fair in connection with opening of its new bridge. Expected that this will provide a draw for the exhibs' convention. Idea is to hold business sessions in Frisco and then charter a train to take all delegates to Hollywood where they can visit the studios. No business sessions would be held in Hollywood but between the two California keys the convention would be a matter of 10 days or more. Conventions have always been four or five days.

Miami was being considered for this year in thought that a trip to Florida would entice MPTOA members the same as New Orleans at Mardi Gras time did last year. Several leaders also suggested Havana but both these spots, it was feared, would be too expensive, hotel accomodations in both being at a premium during the winter season.

Ed Kuykendall, MPTOA president, at present in Columbus, Miss., attending to business matters, is expected in New York the end of this month. He will probably designate a key somewhere in the middle west, maybe Kansas City, where the full board of the MPTOA can meet this year in lieu of a convention.

Same Biz Pace in L. A., 'Bride' Out Front, 21½G, 'Wilderness' Dualed, $20,700; 'Obsesh,' 'Blood' Hot H.O.'s

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.

(Best Exploitation: United Artists)

Trade continues at same pace current stanza as last week. ittle fluctuation one way or another.

Paramount, with 'Bride Comes Home,' is individual leader of the group and gauged for the $21,500 mark. 'Ah Wilderness,' topping double bill at Chinese and State, doing much better than house had anticipated for it, while 'Magnificent Obsession,' in second stanza at Pantages and RKO, running far ahead of holdover trade for these houses. Pic will stay for third week.

'Captain Blood' proving money-maker for Warners on its three week stay in the Downtown and Hollywood houses, with third week take keeping them on profit side of ledger.

'First a Girl,' GB importation in second week at Four Star, getting heavy play from screen colony which has been best part of its support for the run.

'Tale of Two Cities' on move-over to United Artists from State proving good magnet with house exploiting heavily.

United Artists grabbed tops in exploitation on week for 'Two Cities' move-over from State. Getting lot attention with live bear planted atop marquee, where it is turning the pages of a five foot-high compo board replica of the Dickens volume. Most novel stunt in months and a strong attention-getter. House also went in papers strong and besides had two bank nights.

Estimates for This Week

Chinese (Grauman) (2,028; 30-40-55)—'Wilderness' (MG) and 'My Marriage' (20th) split. Combo started off at much better pace than anticipated and though headed for nothing startling will wind up with around $10,500. Last week 'Two Cities' (MG) came through with just short of $11,000, very healthy.

Downtown (WB) (1,800; 30-35-40)—'Capt. Blood' (WB) (3rd week). Proving one of best third week attractions house has had in long time, will get around $6,500. Last week, second, little shy of estimate with $7,400 windup.

Four Star (Fox) (900; 30-35)—'First a Girl' (GB) (2nd week). No sensation but doing healthy trade and will top with around $2,800. Last week, first, off to good start but slowed toward end, winding up with $4,000.

Hollywood (WB) (2,756; 30-35-40-55)—'Capt. Blood' (WB) (3rd week). Running a bit behind downtown and will wind up with take around $6,000; last week considerably off, $6,300.

Orpheum (Bdwy) (2,270; 25-30-35-40)—'Dan Matthews' (Col) and 'Perfect Gentleman' (MG) split and vaudeville. Plenty hard going with this screen combo so that $4,600 will have to be sufficient though not money maker. Last week 'Man of Iron' (WB) and 'Whispering Smith' (20th) came through okay to $5,800.

Pantages (Pan) (2,700; 25-35-40-55)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U) (2nd week). Very big night trade with mats far above average, cinch for $7,500. Last week, first, not up to calculations but big profit at $11,800.

Paramount (Partmar) (3,595; 30-40-55)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and stage show. Colbert name figuring very important locally, sure to hit $21,500. Last week 'Only Cook' (Col) and stage show headed by Bill Robinson, pip for house which cleared strong $18,700.

RKO (2,950; 25-35-40-55)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U) (2nd week). Hitting far above holdover business and should easily reach $7,500 mark, more than average that good pics do in the house on initial stanza. Last week, very healthy but not what figured at $10,600.

State (Loew-Fox) (2,024; 30-40-55)—'Wilderness' (MG) and 'My Marriage' (20th) split. Keeping even pace with week before which is excellent and will churn off with around $10,200. Last week 'Two Cities' (MG), did consistent biz after only fair start, winding up with oke $11,600.

United Artists (Fox-UA) (2,100; 30-40-55) — 'Two Cities' (MG). Plenty of exploitation on move-over and couple of bank nights in corking showing with take just short $5,300. Last week, 'King of Burlesque' (20th), up to predictions, a little shy of $5,000.

PAR'S LIZ RUSSELL

lizabeth Russell, commercial artist's model signed by Paramount, leaves today (Wed.) by train for the Coast.

'Vanities'-'Voice,' 16G, 'Freshman'-Bowes, 11G, Highlight Ind'polis

Indianapolis, Jan. 21.

(Best Exploitati : Lyric-Loew's)

Nip and tuck downtown this week, with the Indiana foregoing its usual straight film policy to light up its stage with a 75-minute version of Earl Carroll's 'Vanities,' while the smaller vaudfilm Lyric makes its presence felt with a Bowes unit (No. 3). 'Vanities,' which recently played the legit house here at $2.75 top, is scaled at a 55c top in the Indiana, and, coupled with 'His Master's Voice,' will probably reach $16,000.

Bowes' simon-pures with 'Freshman Love' plenty strong at the Lyric, at least $11,000 at 40c top.

Lyric and Loew's share exploitation honors. The former did the customary Bowes welcome stunts in an effective manner. Loew's, trying to hold its own against 'Vanities' and the amateurs, threw a special premiere with all the trimmings on 'April Blossoms.' They had a special broadcast from the lobby, with floodlights and celebrities (local) attending the opening night.

Estimates for Thi Week

Apollo (Fourth Ave.) (1,100; 25-40)—'Professional Soldier' (20th). Too much competition for McLaglen-Bartholomew combination featured in ads, nild at $3,000. Last week repeat of 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) fairly good at $3,400.

Circle (Katz-Feld) (2,600; 25-40)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U). Repeat directly following its run at the Indiana, moderately good for holdover at $3,200. Last week 'Dangerous' (WB) weak at $2,900.

Indiana (Katz-Feld) (3,100; 25-35-55)—'Master's Voice' (Par) and 'Vanities' on stage. Latter doing good biz at $16,000. Last year another edition of same show did five grand more under same circumstances of being brought back at popular prices soon after higher-priced legit run in town. Last week 'Magnificent Obsession" (U) did very well at 40c scale by pulling $7,500.

(Loew's (2,800; 25-40)—'April Blossoms' (UA) dualled with 'Lone Wolf' (Col). Former pic world premiered here to little avail against competition, thin at $3,300. Last week 'Wilderness' (MG) and 'Only Cook' (Col) dual finished nine-day run with excellent $11,000.

Lyric (Olson) (2,000; 25-30-40)—'Freshman Love' (WB) and Bowes' ams on stage. Latter dragging them in from the firesides, and, well campaigned, will bring gross to socko $11,000 or more. Second Bowes unit to play the town. The other one played the circle last August and didn't go well. Last week Lyric did great $9,500 on 'King of Burlesque' (20th) and vaude headlining Johnny Perkins.

'Curly,' 'Seas,' 'Love Me' Top B.O.'s in Sydney

Sydney, Dec. 30.

Managements have brought in their best bets to grab a nice slice of the holiday coin. Shoppers are keen buyers nowadays and will only spend where they get the most and best for the least.

Pix doing best are 'China Seas' (MG), 'Love Me Forever' (Col) and 'Curly Top' (Fox). All three are recent openings and biz has been remarkably high.

Others likely to get somewhere are 'The Guv'nor' (G-B), 'Page Miss Glory' (WB), and 'The Big Broadcast' (Par), Older runners are 'Passing of Third Floor Back' (G-B), and 'Escape Me Never' (BD).

Intense tropical heat is the rule here now, and this may extend over the holiday period but regarded as not likely to hurt biz too much.

Melbourne, Dec. 30.

umper biz here. Lineup includes 'Call of the Wild' (U.A.), 'Go Into Your Dance' (WB), 'Bright Lights' (WB), 'China Seas' (MG), and 'Big Broadcast' (Par).

'BURLESK' $13,500, 'RANCHO,' 11G, NICE IN ST. L.

, Jan. 21.

(Best Exploitation: Loew's)

Stiffest kind of competition on screens of local cinemas with all but two of the first runners showing dualers. Indications are all will have a generous portion of b. o. pie. After four weeks of combo policy Ambassador, F&M's downtown theatre, finds name attractions of calibre desired not available and resorting to dual policy with return to matinee price until it can book shows wanted.

Loew's, with Jean Harlow in 'Riffraff,' opened its doors an hour earlier in anticipation of rushing business and hunch was a dandy one as customers arrived in droves during first days of run. Unless all signs fail it should be the fairhaired theatre in b. o. take this week but will find Orpheum with 'Rose of the Rancho' and 'Two in the Dark' right on its heels.

Huge Fox on Grand boulevard showing 'King of Burlesque' will disappoint if it isn't the leader among midtown houses this week. Missouri, with its combo program, is still continuing to do nice business and apparently has hit on a policy that natives will pay to see.

Loew's exploiteers sold natives on Jean's 'brownette' hair with transcriptions and tieups with beauty departments of department stores, beauty shops, etc., to earn exploitation laurel wreath for this week.

Estimates for This Week

Fox (F&M) (5,038; 25-35-55)—'King of Burlesque' (20th). Gathering momentum which should get a nice $13,500. Last week 'Magnificent Obsession' (U), second week finished for a swell $11,000 on top of $17,600 for first.

Ambassador (F&M) (3,018; 25-35-55)—'Chan's Secret' (20th) and 'First a Girl' (GB). Absence of stage show and ordinary program won't do much better than $9,500 for last a fair week. Last week 'Could Only Cook' (Col) and Bowes' amateurs on stage; natives went for simon-pures in large way and left $16,200 at b. o. for fine run.

Shubert-Rialto (WB) (1,725; 25-35-55)—'Fang and Claw' (RKO) and 'Freshman Love' (WB). Program doesn't figure to do better than $6,200 for only so-so week. Last week 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) managed to collect $7,200.

Orpheum (WB) (1,950; 25-35-55) —'Rose of Rancho' (Par) and 'Two in Dark' (RKO). If pace is maintained should get a neat $11,000. Last week 'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) and 'Dr. Harrigan' (WB) sagged a bit towards end of week but garnered $9,400 for good run for small house.

Loew's (Loew) (3,162; 25-35-55)—'Riffraff' (MG). Harlow's popularity with natives should make $14,000 an easy goal for good week. Last week 'Two Cities' (MG) drew many children and second week finished with nice $11,300.

Missouri (F&M) (3,514; 25-40)—'No Mercy' (20th) and vaudeville. Figures to reach or surpass $10,500, okay. Last week 'Monte Carlo' (20th) and vaudeville, fast opening slowed a bit in middle of week but finished with a satisfactory $9,500.

Detroit Tigers Go For Beatty's Lions, Bang-Up $26,000 with 'Burly'

Detroit, Jan.

(Best Exploitation: Fox)

Tigers and lions seem to be Detroit's favorite dish, not only in baseball and football championships, but likewise on the stage. Anyway, the debut of Clyde Beatty's wild animal act, largest of its kind to enter vaude, is the roaring attraction here current week, and the Fox wickets are whirling to the tune of about $26,000, swell. Pic is 'King of Burlesque,' which is doing its bit, too.

Aided by upping of prices 5c. matinees and 10c. evenings, three combo houses are seeking bigger coin in the future and getting quite a lot of it this week. With costs on upgrade, houses decided to charge more. Film spots likely to follow suit.

Although not in the high money class, the 1,700-seater Adams is pulling in a magnificent gross this week with 'Magnificent Obsession,' which enjoyed bang-up session at the Fox two weeks ago. Around $7,500, which is near house record, is due current stanza.

Michigan slips back this week after terrific $31,000 last session on Bowes amateurs plus 'Dangerous'; a good $22,000 due this stanza on 'Riffraff' and 'Hour of Joy' revue on stage.

Things went haywire on opening of Wayne King at RKO Downtown, plus 'Hitch-Hike Lady,' but biz picked up over week-end and house figures around $13,000, okay, although there should have been more. 'Captain Blood,' held for second session at United Artists, continues to beat the band and shoul bring a neat $10,000 this week; di almost $14,000 first stanza.

Exploitation pretty slim everywhere current stanza, but Fox got most of it. Latter's build-up on Beatty was just beginning to flower when a cub lioness, presented by Beatty to Dearborn police chief year ago, committed 'suicide' after losing a dog playmate. 'Loneliness' of cub had been brought to attention of daily press; Beatty had wired he was bringing cub's mother with his act so as to appease lioness, and everything was all set for nifty mother-child yarn when cub up and choked itself to death with leash during the night. Incidents got lot of play, nevertheless, so efforts were not all in vain. House also lined up several radio talks for Beatty, plus the usual didoes.

Estimates for This Week

Fox (Indie) (5,000; 30-40-65)—'King Burlesque' (20th) with Clyde Beatty's lion-tigers on stage. Wild animal trainer's debut in vaude a roaring success in more ways than one; swell $26,000 due this week. Take last stanza just under $18,000, okay, with 'Could Only Cook' (Col) and Toby Wing topping vaude.

Michigan (United Detroit) (30-40-65)—'Riffraff' (MG) plus 'One Hour of Joy' revue ('One Hour with You') on stage. Gross slips back this session, about $22,000, neat, in offing. Had terrific 7 days last week with Bowes amateurs and 'Dangerous' (WB), $31,000.

Downtown (RKO) (30-40-65)—'Hitch-Hike Lady' (Rep) with Wayne King's orchestra on stage. Off badly, but recovered and looks like about $13,000, okay, this stanza. House got back into good coin class last week with resumption of vaude; 'Mr. Hobo' (GB) plus 'Broadway's Hollywood Cabaret Revue' snagged a nice $14,500.

United Artists (United Detroit) (25-45-55)—'Capt. Blood' (WB) (2d week). Continues in high level, with a good $10,000 coming up this week. Still getting usual heavy Hearst exploitation. Slid under wire last week for $13,500, nifty.

Adams (Balaban) (1,700; 25-40)—'Obsession' (U). Back here after big session two weeks ago at Fox, and pic is endangering house record; excellent $7,500. 'Paddy O'Day' (20th) and 'One-Way Ticket' (Col) okay $3,700 last week.

State (United Detroit) (3,000; 25-40)—'Perfect Gentleman' (MG) and 'Millions in Air' (Par). Doing over average biz, around $6,000, good. 'Confidential' (Col) and 'Bar 20 Rides Again' (Par) turned in another $4,000 last stanza.

Stage Show's 'Round' Title with 'Oakley' $13,000 in Montreal

Montreal, Jan. 21.

(Best Exploitati Loew's)

Mid-winter temperatures and weather affecting weekend grosses to some extent with great extension this year of ski-ing activities both locally and in Laurentians north of here. Houses on Main street currently show nothing standout, but still good average.

Palace has 'Night at Opera,' shown New Year's Eve and then built up by good word-of-mouth, which should bring $12,000, very good. Capitol has 'Stella Parrish' and 'Miss Pacific Fleet' good for $9,000. Loew's has a stageshow with 'Annie Oakley' and 'No Ransom' and should be best in town at $13,000.

Tie-in with all music stores in town on the stage show, titled 'Round and Round Revue,' and with gunsmiths, hardware and sport stores for 'Oakley' with departmental store advertising and big press ballyhoo, Gene Curtis and Ken Finlay hoisted Loew's into be: : position of week.

Estimates for This Week

Palace (FP) (2,700; 50)—'Night at Opera' (MG). Total contrast to last week should bring flood of fans and gross looks like topping $12,000. Last week 'Obsession' (U) grossed a fine $11,000 after slow start.

Capitol (FP) (2,700; 50)—'Stella Parrish' (WB) and 'Miss Pacific Fleet' (WB). Good combo and should get $9,000. Last week 'Dream Too Much' (RKO) and 'Perfect Gentleman' (MG) good at $10,000.

Loew's (M. T. Co.) (3,200; 50)—'Oakley' (RKO) and 'No Ransom' (Emp.) with 'Round and Round Revue' on stage looks big at $13,000. Last week 'Socrates' (WB) and 'Ladies Crave Excitement' (Emp.) with stage show, $12,000.

Princess (CT) (2,300; 50)—'Punishment (Col.) and 'Tamara' (U) indicates $6,000. Last week 'No Mercy' (Fox) and 'Dressed to Thrill' (Fox) okay at $6,500.

FOX-WC BANK NIGHT CHAMP; $2,500 POOL

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Fox-West Coast is leading the nation in the amount of coin given away at bank nights. Top giveaway was $2,500 in Hollywood-Glendale pool. Denver recently gave away $2,000.

B. V. Sturdivant, manager of the pool, is shooting for $5,000 prize.

Fool proof tickets eliminate possibility of racketeering and a motor-driven mixer has been introduced for the drawings.

Snow and H.O.'s Slow Up Loop But Chi Hangs On for $40,000; 'Opera' Starts with Okay $18,000

Chicago, Jan. 21.

(Best Exploitation: State-Lake)

Friday arrived in the loop to the accompaniment of one of the season's worst snowstorms which sent the folks to their firesides. Afternoon business was pretty good on the shopper trade, but weakened night play made the fifth stage show in the vaude houses unnecessary.

This figures as element No. 1 in the slide-off of gross currently; the second item is the holdover of shows which accounts for the decreased gross at the Chicago and Palace. At the former the triple threat line-up of 'Bride Comes Home,' Veloz and Yolanda and 'Red' Hodgson make it a cinch for another big session, though naturally not as smashing as last week's $59,000. In the first place Veloz and Yolanda's contract for this week restricts the stage shows to 36, whereas last week the house ground out 42.

Despite its extremely late release here in Chicago, the Marx picture, 'Night at the Opera,' is pounding forward to what looks like an easy three weeks' gallop at the Roosevelt. Plenty of complaints over the holding back of this picture, especially since it has run itself out in most key spots of the country already.

Two B. & K. Randolph street grinds, Apollo and Garrick, move into the first-run category currently with 'Mr. Hobo' and 'If You Could Only Cook,' and both boost the gross into high marks.

State-Lake leads the exploitation parade on a slashing campaign for 'Devil's Island' (Col) which lends itself to that kind of smearing.

Estimates for This Week

Apollo (B&K) (1,200; 25-35-55)—'Mr. Hobo' (GB). Arliss picture started off well over the weekend and appears headed to big $7,500. House has perked generally in past few weeks and is showing particular strength on week ends. Last week 'Mutiny' (MG) completed a six weeks' grind in the Loop to great $3,900.

Chicago (B&K) (3,900; 35-55-75)—'Bride'. (Par) and stage show. Veloz and Yolanda, dance team, and 'Red' Hodgson on stage. Entire slate holds over for second week and it's again a lulu despite fact that number of stage shows is restricted to 36 currently. Will hit $40,000 high, for holdover, and may stay third week. Last week topped everything this house has seen since the World's Fair with a sensational $59,000 on 42 performances.

Garrick (B&K) (900; 35-55)—'Only Cook' (Col). First and doing well at this tiny house at $5,000. Last week 'Frisco Kid' (WB) touched good $5,100 in second Loop session.

Oriental (B&K) (3,200; 25-35-40)—'In the Air' (MG) and vaude. Three Stooges headlined for quick return to this house. Combo managing pleasant $19,000 currently. House has been riding on the profit side right along for past two months. Last week 'Personal Maid' (WB) and Olsen and Johnson unit swung a fine $20,000.

Palace (RKO) (2,500; 35-55-65)—'Obsession' (U) and vaude. Picture holding over with new vaude line-up headed by Jane Froman. Sweet $23,000. Last week the women flocked in to the merry tune of $27,700.

Roosevelt (B&K) (1,500; 25-35-55-65)—'Night at Opera' (MG). Late arrival in town but not hurting the take any, gross doing a Tarzan with a yo-ho $18,000, practically operatic. Last week 'Rose of Rancho' (Par) managed to struggle through final half of a weak fortnight to $6,100, so-so.

State-Lake (Jones) (2,700-20-25-35-40)—'Devil's Island' (Col) and vaude. Neither storms nor depression competition affect this house's even tempo. A steady gallop for a neat and steady profit. This week around $12,000 again. Last week $1,000 a Minute' (Rep) with Ed. Lowry unit snapped up strong $12,800.

United Artists (B&K-UA) (1,700-35-55-65)—'Captain Blood' (WB) (2d week). Picture is under pressure from 'Strike Me Pink' (UA) seeking an early entry. Iood should do around three weeks before departing. With hit around $13,000 for second week after topping indications on its first sessio for 18,700.

'Flash Gordon' Sparks

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Universal's 'Flash Gordon,' 12-episode serial, is in work with Frederic Stephanie directing. Henry MacRae producing.

Buster Crabbe, lead, is supported by Jean Rogers, Priscilla Lawton, Richard Alexander, James Pierce, Duke York, Jr., Frank Shannon, Stanley Sanford and Lon Poff.

'First a Girl' Nice $3,000 But B'ham Mostly Weak

Irmingham, Jan. 21.

(Best Exploitation: Alabama)

Business off this week due to gang of weak pictures. 'First a Girl' is one of best bets while 'Bride Comes Home' is second best. 'March of Time' short is getting almost as much play as the feature at the Alabama, helping exploitation.

'Bride' is getting space on safety council bulletins on the streets.

Estimates for This Week

Alabama (Wilby-Kincey) (2,800; 30-35-40)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par) at $6,000, fair. Last week 'Littlest Rebel' (20th) on nine days, $8,000, good.

Ritz (Wilby-Kincey) (1,600; 25-30)—'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO). Indicates poor $2,400. Last week 'In Person' (RKO) $3,200.

Strand (Wilby-Kincey) (800; 25)—'Annie Oakley' (RKO) and 'Great Impersonation' (U). Weak at $1,500. Last week 'No Mercy' (20th) full week $1,900, fair.

Empire (Acme) (1,100; 25)—'First a Girl' (GB). Nice showing for the week, $3,000. Last week 'Pacific Fleet' (WB) $2,500, fair.

BLIZ PUTS CHIZ ON PROV.'S BIZ

Providence, Jan. 21.

(Best Exploitation: RKO Victory)

Town in grip of winter, blizzard tying up practically everything and killing week-end biz. Now it's all up to the weatherman.

RKO Victory back in the first-run class this week with 'Fang and Claw' on crest of swell bally campaign. Ballyhoo on picture arted several weeks ago with all sts of freak stunts, and continuing right up to opening. Campaign included special lobby display with jungle trophies, and local lad dressed as a savage. Then there were window displays, heralds, tie-ups with bakeries, department stores, etc.

Estimates for This Week

Strand (Indie) (2,200; 15-25-40)—'Rose of Rancho' (Par) and 'Hitch Hike Lady' (Rep). Plenty of publicity breaks through personal appearance of Gladys Swarthout at concert three days before opening, auguring big week, but storm moved in just at a time when theatres here get most of their business. Under the circumstances does not anticipate over $6,500. Last week 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and 'Forced Landing' (Rep) one of the leaders with a swell $9,800.

Loew's State (3,200; 15-25-40)—'Professional Soldier' (20th) and 'Live Ghosts' (MG). Not more than $6,000, off for this stand. Last week 'Wilderness' (MG) and 'Dan Matthews' (Col) plenty nice at $17,000 for nine days.

Majestic (Par) (2,200; 15-25-40)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U). Biz okay until big storm, around $6,000. Last week 'No Mercy' (20th) and 'Uncle Dudley' (20th) frisky at $8,300.

RKO Albee (2,500; 15-25-40)—'We're Only Human' (RKO) and stage show. Plenty of emphasis on flesh entertainment brought them out in droves, but storm hurting; no more than $6,500 in prospect. Last week 'Two in Dark' (RKO) and vaudevilie nice at $8,500.

Fay's (2,000; 15-25-40)—'Paddy O'Day' (20th) and vaude. With Albee now in vaudevilie field, this house has its headaches; with other elements will not reach $5,500 at most. Last week 'Born to Gamble' (Ind) also off at $6,500.

RKO Victory (1,600; 15-25)—'Fang and Claw' (RKO) and 'Hot Off Press.' Look like $2,000, oke. Last week 'Informer' (RKO), brought back here in wake of much publicity, soared to $2,400 for five-day run, excellent.

'Obsesh' Magnif $4,700, 'Burlesk' $4,000, Tacoma

Tacoma, Jan. 21.

(Best Exploitation: usic ox)

Lumber and employment continue ahead of a year ago in Tacoma, and so theatre takings are favorably affected. The town is well wed to the dual police with double fare a habit since long before the new Hamrick-Evergreen dual plan at all spots, recently adopted.

Best exploitation for Music Box, where 'Obsession' is getting usual book store tieups and, in addition, letters to all doctors, enclosing 'call' cards, giving privilege of reporting at b. o. where the M. D. will sit in case of emergency call, and telling about the doctor angle in pix.

(Estimates for This Week

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (750; 16-27)—'One Way Ticket' (U) and 'Remember Last Night' (U), but called after the book, 'Hangover Murder' for local consumption, dual. Moderate at $1,500. Last week 'Pompeii' (RKO) and 'Missing Man' (Col) dual, $1,900, fair enough.

Music Box (Hamrick) (1,400; 16-27-37)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U) and 'Paddy O'Day' (20th), dual. Former getting special campaign, strong at $4,700. Last week 'Riffraff' (MG) and ' tars Over Broadway' (WB), dual, $3,900, good.

Roxy (Hamrick) (1,300; 15-27-37)—'King of Burlesque' (20th) and 'Baldpate' (RKO) dual. En route to o. k. $4,000. Last week 'Monte Carlo' (20th) and 'Kids and Queen' (UA) dual, $4,200, big.

BURNS-ALLEN UP 'CEILING' TO 35G, HUB

Jan.

(Best Exploitation: iet)

Metropolitan opened up a siege of hefty stage bookings this week to compete with the Keith lineup. 'Ceiling Zero,' ith Burns and Allen on the stage, the town's b.o. leader. Looks like $35,000 or better, despite big snow. Radio comics will do two free shows at Hancock Hall (1,000 capacity) tomorrow night (22). 'Zero' has been sold to Hub for four weeks via a legit showing at the Copley, and this is figured to have aroused interest in the pic. On the Met vaude list to come are Ricardo Cortez, Paul Lukas and other name acts. Although originally planned to tilt prices this week, the idea was suddenly abolished on opening day (17).

'Riff-Raff' will get second money at the State and Orph at $34,000 for nine days. Keith-Boston also ringing up pretty money, at $22,000 pace, with Earl Carroll's Sketch Book on stage and 'Hitch Hike Lady' on screen. Keith Memorial holding over 'Obsession.'

Par and Fenway get 'Bride Comes Home,' second run from the Met, on dual bill with 'Pacific Fleet,' run off by the Met for their New Year's Eve show. Combo very satisfactory.

Burns and Allen provided Gene Fox and the Met space pryers ace material for exploitation. Overstocked with advance gags, such as newspaper contests, the publicity department had paved the way for arrival stunts at the station and interviews by local critics, breaking on opening day of the show. On the way from station to hotel party with crix, Gracie handed a traffic cop a key to the city, and this netted some extra space.

Estimates for This Week

Met (M&P) (4,200; 35-50-65)—'Ceiling Zero' (WB) and stage show with Burns and Allen, Cardini, Ben Blue. Hitting high G's, for around $35,000, best take in weeks. Last week 'Rose of Rancho' (Par) and stage show blah, $15,500.

Keith-Boston (RKO) (2,300; 35-50-65)—'Hitch Hike Lady' (Col) and Earl Carroll 'Sketch Book.' Another girlie show that is building long lines at the b.o., heading for nifty $22,000. Last week 'Red Salute' (UA) and Hollywood stage show, starring Jackie Coogan, heaped up a beaut $26,500.

Orpheum (Locw) (3,000; 25-35-40-50)—'Riff Raff' (MG) and 'Lone Wolf' (Col), dual. In for nine days at satisfactory $18,000 tempo. 'Two Cities' (MG) pulled last week, after seven days, although originally penciled for nine days to bring house back to Friday opening; $7,000.

State (Loew) (3,200; 25-35-40-50)—'Riff Raff' (MG) and 'Lone Wolf' (Col), double. Oke at $16,000. 'Two Cities' (MG), singled last week satisfactorily, in second frame for $7,000.

Keith Memorial (RKO) (2,900; 25-35-50)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U) (2d week). Holdover aiming at $10,000, good; first week very good at $20,100.

Paramount (M&P) (1,800; 25-35-50)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and 'Pacific Fleet' (WB). Oke at $7,500. Last week $7,800 for 'Dangerous' (WB) and 'Broadway Hostess' (WB), dual.

Fenway (M&P) (1,600; 25-30-40-50)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par), 2nd run, and 'Pacific Fleet' (WB), dual. Okay at $5,000 trot. Last week satisfactory $4,700 on 'Dangerous' (WB) and 'Hostess' (WB), dual.

Scollay (M&P) (2,700; 25-35-40-50)—'Collegiate' (Par) and 'Dangerous' (WB). Both 2nd run, good combo for this spot, will hit around $6,000. Last week potent $8,500 for 'Captain Blood' (WB) and 'Millions in the Air' (Par), dual.

Storm Crimps All B'way Grosses But 'Strike Me Pink' Nice $90,000 And Holds; 'Zero' 40G, 'Burlesk' 30G

(Best Exploitati usic Hall)

A bad snowstorm which started late Saturday night (18) and continued through most all of Sunday wreaked havoc with New York theatres. Estimated by the Music Hall that it lost $10,000 to $12,000 as a result of the weather which tied up traffic and kept people in their homes. Other houses were hurt proportionately, Paramount figuring about $5,000 worth of business was kept away by the snow and sleet.

Despite the setbacks, several attractions are still strong enough to go into good figures. Eddie Cantor starrer, 'Strike Me Pink,' which came into the Music Hall on a two-week commitment, leads the pack this week, looking $90,000. Two other pictures which would have done more except for the inclement weekend weather but will turn in nice profits are 'Ceiling Zero' at the Strand and 'King of Burlesque' at the Center.

'Zero' may hit $40,000 and holds, while 'Burlesque,' which got off strong, will be $30,000 or over on first seven days ending last night (ues). Latter also holds over. Second week of 'Ghost Goes West' mighty good, $30,000. Management figures it was nicked $5,000 or $6,000 by what the weekend brought.

Holdover of 'Rose of Rancho' and Casa Loma orchestra with Onyx Club boys will be about $25,000, another figure that is very satisfactory, discounting the blizz. New show came in last night (Tues.). Par on a preview, 'Collegiate' on screen and the Hal Kemp orchestra, with Yacht Club Boys as an added attraction in the pit. Next attraction for the trench is the Ted Fio Rito orchestra.

Capitol and Roxy both were snowed under this week, 'Exclusive Story,' at former, failed to entice and will be lucky to turn in more than $20,000. 'Charlie Chan's Secret,' Roxy tenant, looks only $25,000, and both houses get new pictures Friday (24). The Rialto and Astor brought in new ones last night (Tues.). 'Dangerous Waters' came into the Rialto after $3,800 for four days on second week of 'Crime of Dr. Crespi.' Astor went a full second week on 'Last of Pagans,' $5,000, ushering in 'Widow from Monte Carlo' also last night (Tues.). Rialto now has its subway entrance and downstairs box office open.

In addition to more than doubling the normal advertising budget of the Music Hall, 'Strike Me Pink' obtained the benefit of a comprehensive exploitation campaign pointed both for local and national value. United Artists sold a swell contest idea to one of the New York tabs and effected many tieups designed to help the picture on its engagement at the Hall.

Estimates for This Week

Astor (1,012; 25-35-55)—'Last of Pagans' (MG) (2nd week). Ended its second week last night (Tues.) at $5,000. First week was $7,000, bringing fair profit on run. 'Widow From Monte Carlo' (WB) the new picture.

Capitol (4,620; 25-35-55-85-$1.25)—'Exclusive Story' (MG). A tailender and fortunate if getting over $20,000, weak. Predecessor, 'Riffraff' (MG) went sour, also, around $25,000.

Center (3,525; 25-35-55-85-$1.10)—'King of Burlesque' (20th). Hurt by snowstorm but still big at $30,000 on first week ending last night (Tues.), picture going a second and may nick out a third. Third week of 'Ah, Wilderness' (MG) just under $20,000, excellent.

Palace (1,700; 25-35-55)—'Dangerous' (WB) and 'We're Only Human' (RKO), dual. Pair not doing so well, $8,000 or under. Last week's doubleton, 'No Mercy' (20th) and 'Your Uncle Dudley' (20th) better, $9,500.

Paramount (3,664; 25-35-55-85)—'Rancho' (Par) (2nd week), Casa Loma orchestra (4th week) and Onyx Club Boys (2nd week). Snow stalled traffic coming this way but at $25,000 on holdover still good. First week $40,000, excellent. 'Collegiate' (Par) with Hal Kemp orchestra and Yacht Club Boys in pit, opened on preview last night (Tues.). House is staying at a Wednesday opening from now on.

Radio City Music Hall (5,989; 40-60-85-99-$1.10-$1.65)—'Strike Me Pink' (UA) and stage show. Hurt on weekend seriously but will end at $90,000 or over just the same, and holds over. Last week 'Sylvia Scarlett' (RKO) dipped to $57,000, bad.

Rialto (750; 25-40-65) — 'Dr. Crespi' (Rep) (2nd week). On final four days of second week ending last night (Tuesday), $3,800, oke, after first seven days of a little over $9,000. 'Dangerous Waters' (U) came in on preview last evening (Tues.).

Rivoli (2,092; 35-55-75-85-99) — 'Ghost Goes West' (UA) (2nd week). Swung the turnstiles here first week to tune of $43,000 and on holdover will get around $30,000, excellent considering Sunday's storm. Chaplin's 'Modern Times' (UA) now won't arrive on the scene until early in February, date to be set.

Roxy (5,836; 25-35-55)—'Chan's Secret' (20th) and stage show. Chan couldn't dope the weather and a drift of snow piled up against the box office, cutting the take to $25,000 on week, mild. Last week house got $29,100 with 'Invisible Ray' (U), fairly good.

Strand (2,767; 35-55-65-85)—'Ceiling Zero' (W). pened Saturday (18) and considering weather inrounds, big at $40,000 pace, holding over. Final (3rd) week of 'Capt. Blood' (WB) $19,600.

State (3,450; 35-55-75) — 'Two Cities' (MG) and vaude headed by George Givot. Public may shell out total of around $25,000 for this show, good. Last week 'Splendor' (UA), over $20,000, under recent average.

'BURLY' STRIPS CINCY OF $16,000

Cincinnati, Jan. 21.

(Best Exploitation: Albee)

'King of Burlesque' is the champ biz bringer currently, marking up $16,000 for the Albee. Capitol, with roadshow engagement of 'A Midsummer Night's Dream,' fetching okay biz. Palace is in line for $9,500 on 'Rose of Rancho' and Keith's is pulling $4,000 on 'Murder of Dr. Harrigan.'

Jackie Coogan and Betty Grable personaling with 'Hollywood Secrets' unit and linked with 'Three Live Ghosts' on screen, registering $14,000 for Shubert.

Lyric and Grand are move-over studios for 'Collegiate' and 'Two Cities.'

Heavy snow Sunday (19) was a severe traffic halter for theatres.

Estimates for This Week

Albee (RKO) (3,300; 35-42)—'King of Burlesque' (Fox). Breezy start and nice notices paving way for $16,000, good. Last week 'Magnificent Obsession' (U) held its fast opening pace and built up to a smash $19,000.

Capitol (RKO) (2,000; 55-83-$1.10-$1.65)—'A Midsummer Night's Dream' (WB). Nifty advance campaign and swell reviews. Trade okay. Last week 'Twin Cities' (MG), transferred from Albee for second week, $6,000 at regular 35-42c scale. Pic drew $21,000 in initial nine days.

Shubert (RKO) (2,150; 35-55)—'Three Live Ghosts' (MG) and Jackie Coogan and Betty Grable heading 'Hollywood Secrets' unit. Effective advance buildup in dailies and more helpful bally from interview broadcasts on WLW and WCPO. A dandy $14,000. Last week 'We're Only Human' (RKO) and Wayne King band and three vaude acts, $12,000, a chin socko.

Palace (RKO) (2,600; 35-42)—'Rose of Rancho' (Par). Heading for an all right $9,500. Last week 'Collegiate' (Par) dropped off in last half but $11,500 no complaint.

Lyric (RKO) (1,400; 35-42)—'Collegiate' (Par). Moved over from Palace for extended first run, $5,000, fair. Last week 'Bride Comes Home' (Par), second downtown week, $4,500, following $12,000 on eight days of first showing at Palace.

Keith's (Libson) (1,500; 30-40)—'Dr. Harrigan' (WB). Jerking mystery fans for $4,000, fair. Last week 'Dangerous' (WB), a holdover, $4,200, after $7,000 in first week.

Grand (RKO) (1,200; 25-40)—'Two Cities' (MG). Third downtown week, $3,000, neat. Last week 'Littlest Rebel' (20th), third week in ace-house territory, $3,500. Pix fetched $16,000 in first week at Palace and $9,500 in nine days on transfer to Capitol.

Family (RKO) (1,000; 15-25)—'Nevada' (Par) and 'Too Tough to Kill' (Col), divided. Normal $2,200. Last week $2,400 on split between 'Whispering Smith' (20th) and 'Navy Wife' (20th).

Philly Biz Building; Cantor's 'Pink,' $18,000, 'Obsesh' 14G, Both Hold

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.

(Best Exploitation: Aldine)

This week's biz, should show a substantial increase over th of last week, which was decidedly under average. Three plx are expected to get some real attendance. Surest of the lot is Eddie Cantor's 'Strike Me Pink,' at the Aldine. Cantor film will probably stay three weeks. Opened Saturday to strong trade and should get $18,000 or over on its first full week.

Magnificent Obsession' at the Boyd, also a Saturday opener, slower in getting started but is figured as sure of femme trade. It did not, however, get laudatory notices here. If it gets $14,000, which it should, it figures as a certain holdover. 'Rose Marie' is underlined to follow.

Third good possibility of the week is 'Professional Soldier,' at the Fox, which got a corking set of notices and built nicely after its Wednesday opening. It won't get a full second week, however, unless management makes a last minute change of decision. It should get $21,000 or better in nine days allotted to it. Ed Sullivan heading stage show.

Considerably less certain of success is 'Rose of the Rancho,' which opened Saturday at the Stanley. It's going to suffer by the flock of musicals which have gone before it. Despite high touting of Gladys Swarthout, film doesn't look strong enough for more than a week at no more than $12,500.

Earle figures to taper off this week with 'Freshman Love' as its film feature and Fifi Dorsay and Eddie White on the stage. Stanton, which has been running way ahead of normal lately, will slip this week with 'Last of the Pagans,' and the smaller houses aren't likely to do anything big.

Estimates for This Week

Aldine (1,200; 40-55-65)—'Strike Me Pink' (UA). Eddie Cantor pic should put house back in the black. Three weeks not unlikely. First week figures to get big $18,000 or over. Last week, 'First a Girl' (GB) weak $8,000 in nine day.

Arcadia (600; 25-40-50)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par). Second-run ending today (Tuesday) with rather good $2,500. 'Riff Raff' (MG) also second run tomorrow.

Boyd (2,400; 40-55)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U). Figures to build with femme trade and ought to get second week; $14,000 likely. Last week, 'Dangerous' (WB) got so-so $11,000.

Earle (2,000; 25-40-50)—'Freshman Love' (WB) and vaude. Fifi Dorsay and Eddie White head stage show. Combo figures for $13,000. Last week, 'Dance Band' (FD) and Major Bowes' Ams, very nice $17,500.

Fox (3,000; 40-55-65)—'Professional Soldier' (20th) and stage show. Swell notices and good trade. Nearly $21,000 figured for it in nine days. Last week, 'King of Burlesque' (20th) good $15,000 second week.

Karlton (1,000; 25-35-40)—'Murder of Dr. Harrigan' (FN). First-run and looks weak. Maybe $2,400. Last week, 'I Dream Too Much' (RKO). Rather good $3,300 for a second-run.

Keith's (2,000; 30-40-50)—'Captain Blood' (WB). Second week of second-run here getting $3,000. Last week, $3,900.

Stanley (3,700; 40-55)—'Rose of the Rancho' (Par). Too many lightweight musicals before it: $19,500 and only one week figured. Last week, 'Collegiate' (Par) got only $11,500.

Stanton (1,700; 30-40-50)—'Last of the Pagans' (MG). Not over $6,000 indicated. Last week, 'Riff Raff' (MG) in second week got $7,000, nice.

'OBSESSION,' $10,000, BIG IN PORTLAND, ORE.

Portland, Ore., Jan.

(Best Exploitation: Mayfair)

All major spots in the hurg used teaser campaign to plug 'Midsummer Night's Dream,' roadshowing at the Mayfair. Since that house is operated jointly by Parker-Evergreen, it meant that all other Parker houses and Evergreen houses were in on the plugs. Mayfair upped admish to $1.65 top, highest ducat rate for straight pic asked in the burg for many a moon and four times the usual top admish. That didn't phase the b.o. though, and 'Dream' is smashing home for a big winning.

Everything else just fair except 'Obsession,' big at the Broadway.

Estimates for This W

Broadway (Parker) (2,000; 25-40)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U). Great $10,000. 'Captain Blood' (FN) in 10 days hit high spot for this house at $8,900.

United Artists (Parker) (1,000; 25-40)—'Red Salute' (UA). Poor five days, $3,000. Last week 'Splendor' (UA) registered; closed only $3,600.

Paramount (Evergreen) (3,000; 25-50)—'Dream Too Much' (RKO) and 'Lone Wolf Returns' (Col). Pons opus disappointing, $1,500. Last week 'Musketeers' (RKO) and 'Navy Wife' (20th) $4,000.

rpheum (Hamrick-Evergreen) (2,000; 25-40)—'Could Only Cook' (Col) and '2 In Dark' (RKO). Fair for $4,000. Last week 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and 'Uncle Dudley' (20th) closed a big second week for $5,700, with first week hitting the high spots around $9,800.

Mayfair (Parker-Evergreen) (1,400; 55-$1.65)—'Midsummer Night's Dream' (WB). Two shows a day at roadshow prices, bringing good results from heavy exploitation campaign. Last week (25-40) 'Dan Matthews' (Col) and 'Stormy' (U) only fair combo, little under par for $2,000.

DESPITE SNOW, B'KLYN FAIR, 'WILDERNESS' 14G

Brooklyn, Jan. 21.

Avalanche of snow and sleet over weekend affected downtown deluxers considerably at b.o.'s. Snow drifts so bad in some sectors it was practically impossible to have gone downtown had anyone so desired. Picture houses in Boro Hall vicinity have attractive enough product on screens. Paramount with 'Dangerous' is doing okay while 'Ah Wilderness' and 'Last of Pagans' at the Low's Met, and 'Obsession' at Albee are better. Met went in for lavish display in dailies stirring up enough interest to make week's showing worthwhile.

Amateur nights still going strong at Albee and Fox. Former offering two exhibition Wednesday nights and latter on Mondays with local furniture house sponsoring broadcast of show via WMCA for hour's duration. Both houses continue to stress amateur angle display copy in daily gazettes.

Trans-Lux in Boro Hall sector showing 'Crime and Punishment,' French version with titles in English. Scant biz this week.

Estimates for This Week

Paramount (4,000; 25-35-50)—'Dangerous' (WB). Should hold take to $10,000 or so, ok. Last week 'Comes a Bride' (Par) brought in $16,000, mighty fine.

Fox (4,000; 25-35-50)—'Dangerous Intrigue' (Col) and 'Hitch Hike Lady' (Col). Okay $11,000 anticipated. Last week 'Could Only Cook' (Col) and 'Mimi' (FD) $9,000, so-so.

Loew's Met (3,400; 25-35-50)—'Wilderness' (MG) and 'Last of Pagans' (MG). Augurs nifty $14,000. Last week 'Splender' (UA) and 'Perfect Gentleman' (MG) drew $13,000, okay.

Albee (3,500; 25-35-50)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U) and 'We're Only Human' (RKO). Good patronage and figured to do $11,000, good. Last week 'Fang and Claw' (RKO) and 'Navy Wife' (20th) proved dud at $9,000.

Strand (2,000; 25-35-50)—'Leavenworth Case' (Rep) and 'Coronado' (Par). Should take in satisfactory $6,000. Last week 'No Mercy' (20th) and '$1,000 a Minute' (Rep) (3d week) got fine $9,000.

OFF, TOO, IN BUFFALO

'Obsesh' Sensash in 3d Week at Lafayette to $9,000

Buffalo, Jan. 21.

(Best Exploitation: uffalo)

Downtown grosses only average current week. Lafayette continuing with 'Magnificent Obsession' for third week.

Shea's Buffalo celebrating its 10th anniversary afforded excellent opportunity for special exploitation. A 10-layer birthday cake over five feet high was displayed in lobby and pictures carried the newspapers, together with special anniversary story. Extra outdoor advertising, window displays and cooperative ads all stressed the anniversary feature. The Buffalo Public Library distributed 5,000 bookmarks in connection with the Sabatini books.

Estimates for This Week

Buffalo (hea) (3,600; 30-40-50)—'Capt. Blood' (WB). Indicates around $10,000, fair. Last week, 'Collegiate' (Par) under expectations at $10,900.

Hipp (Shea) (2,400; 25-40)—'Splendor' (UA). Probably good for around $8,500. Last week, 'Midsummer Night's Dream' (WB), seven performances up to Wednesday with 'Splendor' continuing for rest of week, $9,000.

Great Lakes (Shea) (3,400; 25-40)—'Dangerous' (W). Looks to get around $8,500. Last week 'Dream Too Much' (RKO) slipped considerably under estimates to $6,000.

Century (Shea) (3,400; 25)—'Pacific Fleet' (WB) and 'Man of Iron' (WB). Continuing with good grosses, for $8,000. Last week, 'No Mercy' (20th) and 'Coronado' (Par), good at $9,100.

Lafayette (Ind) (3,400; 25)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U) (3rd wk). Continues to pack them in after two weeks of capacity business, and should do around $9,000 for its final stanza. Last week, second week for the feature got $11,500.

'MAID' WITH AMS OK $14,000, K. C.

Kansas City, Jan.

(Best Exploitation: Mainstreet)

In spite of weather and icy streets, grosses will be close to normal all around. The Tower after setting a new record of $14,850 with 'Magnificent Obsession' last week held it over and is continuing great.

At the Midland 'Professional Soldier' is just fair, although given plenty of newspaper space, and 'Dangerous' at the Newman is in the same classification.

Mainstreet has a Bowes unit in addition to 'Personal Maid's Secret' but practically all of the publicity went to the ams.

Extra newspaper space was used liberally, nifty tie-ups with chain stores with thousands of special heralds and window cards; radio announcements, and swell cooperation by the Star which not only gave liberal space but sponsored an amateur show to select a K. C. amateur to appear with the Bowes 'gang' at the theatre, and also gave an hour of its radio station WDAF to broadcast a number of the amateurs who survived the preliminary auditions.

Estimates for This Week

Mainstreet (RKO) (3,200; 25-35-50)—'Personal Maid' (WB) and Bowes unit. Strong play which looks like close to $14,000, good. Last week 'Two in Dark' (RKO) and Ada Leonard Revue, $12,000, nice.

Midland (Loew) (4,000; 25-40)—'Professional Soldier' (20th) Not as strong as expected, attributed to bad weather, but picture showing increased strength and should hit close to $8,500, fair. Last week 'Wilderness' (MG) slowed a bit towards the last finishing with $17,000, good.

Newman (Par) (1,000; 25-40)—'Dangerous' (WB). Business just fair, expect no sensation, around $8,000, fair. Last week 'Collegiate' (Par) $8,500, good.

Tower (Rewot) (2,200; 25-33)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U) (2d wk) and 'Rumbaland Revels,' revue. In second week, hitting strong, $11,000, great after a record $14,850 first seven days.

Uptown (Fox) (2,040; 25-40)—'Mister Hobo' (GB) and '$1,000 a Minute' (Rep.) dual. Arliss may draw some of the class trade at this big suburban, $4,500, good. Last week 'Comes Band' (MG) and 'Chan's Secret' (20th) $3,200, fair.

'CAPT. BLOOD,' $5,500, TOPS BLIZZED OMAHA

Omaha, Jan. 21.

(Best Exploitation: randeis)

Blast of blizzardy winter which came on the tailend of last week and maintained its fury through opening days this week spells debility for all picture attractions. Beginning Wednesday evening and lasting past midnight Friday snow fall well in excess of a foot and the heaviest fall in near a decade.

Heading the list of attractions is the Brandeis with 'Captain Blood' which opened to holdout business in the beginning of the snowfall and which will last the week (eight days) out, to draw near $5,500, top money for this house and would have been even better in normal weather. Orpheum with 'Ah, Wilderness' in the next niche with $5,500, unless tailend of the week comes in unusually strong. Orph suffers probably least of the three houses on current bill, but had to take most on the chin on last week. Omaha with 'Monte Carlo' would have been set for an average week, but gets cut down by opening in the middle of the blizzard, $5,000 will not be bad considering.

Brandeis gets the attention from the exploitation angle as tie-ups with the Hearstian Bee-News on the Cosmopolitan production swamps the amusement page on 'Blood'. Others not laying down by any means but Hearst takes the ribbons this week.

Estimates for This Week

Brandei (Singer-RKO) (1,250; 25-35-40) — 'Capt. Blood' (FN). Single feature this week. Would have held its own against a one-day snowstorm, but three days sends it under some. In eight days should hit $5,500, okay. Last week, 'Could Only Cook' (Col) dualled with 'One Way Ticket' (Col) light in the face of weather, $3,800.

Orpheum (Blank-Tri-States) (2,976; 25-40)—'Wilderness' (MG) and brought in on 'Mary Burns' (Par) last day of the storm may not be stunted to extent of its opposition, should reach $6,500, about a grand off from normal. Last week 'Whipsaw' (MG) and 'Perfect Gentleman' (MG) off to banging start but had to take it from the storm last two days; $6,800 very little under expectations.

Omaha (Blank-Tri-States) 2,100; 25-40)—'Monte Carlo' (20th) and 'Chan's Secret' (20th) between the two of them would have gotten a sizeable following, but brutal weather the answer limiting this one to $5,000, very light. Last week 'Rose of Rancho' (Par) doubled with 'Navy Wife' (20th) was little to cheer about though opinion favorable on Gladys Swarthout, $5,500 barely average.

'Lady'—'Letty'

Smith, which dates back to 1857 and can be found in the archives of the Glasgow courts. The decision declared that even though the pattern of the plot was in the public domain, the defendant could not be regarded as having made a fair use. On this point the court averred, 'In concluding as we do, that the defendants used the play to a certain extent, we need not charge their witnesses with perjury. With so many sources before them they might quite honestly forget what they took; nobody knows the origin of his inventions; memory and fancy merge even in adults. Yet unconscious plagiarism is actionable quite as much as deliberate plagarism.'

O'Brien, Driscoll & Raftery successfully fought the appeal. Nathan Burkan represented Metro.

Sheldon Bedri

As to damages, which will accrue to Edward Sheldon, who has been bedridden for 17 years, and Mrs. Margaret Ayer Barnes they may run into a small fortune, unless privately settled between both parties, as sometimes happens, in lieu of further appeals and litigation expense. Under this decision, Metro must account for and turn over to the authors of 'Dishonored Lady' the entire profits of 'Letty,' and every exhibitor who played the picture is also technically liable for $250 minimum damages, under the copyright statutes, for every time the film was flashed on the screen. There can be no appeal unless the U. S. Supreme Court issues a writ of certiorari.

Shortly after Katharine Cornell's appearance in 'Dishonored Lady' at the Empire, N. Y., Mrs. Barnes and Sheldon agreed to sell the picture rights to Metro for $30,000. J. Robert Rubin, Metro v.p. and attorney, drew up the contract but it was never signed because the Hays office banned the story for films.

$25,000 Offer

A working script of 'Letty Lynton' (Crawford-Montgomery) had been sent to Sheldon by someone in the cast at the time of film production, but he decided to wait until the picture was finished and exhibited before taking legal action. Mrs. Barnes then again called on Rubin, according to her attorneys. She estimated that $5,000 had been paid for the 'Letty' book (based on the same Scotch murder case) and suggested that if Metro would give her and Sheldon a check for $25,000 they'd call it even. At first refused, later they were reported offered the $25,000, but the authors then declined to accept. Rights to 'Letty' were purchased for $3,500.

Arthur F. Driscoll of O'Brien, Driscoll & Raftery, which office handled the famous 'Abie's Irish Rose' - Universal decision, upon which the defense based its case, took Judge Learned Hand to task for his rulings in the 'Abie' suit and drew an admission that there had been some errors on the court's part. Driscoll's office associates in the case were Edward J. Clarke and Sidney Rosenbloom.

SNOWBOUND LINCOLN

Fir iz Since New Year—' 'Angel,' Fair

Lincoln, Jan. 21.

Everything's in the heaviest show in more than four years in this area and none of the attractions are clicking. Besides, all pictures opened bucking a campaign speech by former President Hoover in the Coliseum which drew nearly 10,000. Of all the attractions, 'Dark Angel' at the Stuart and 'Frisco Kid' at the Lincoln are the top pacers, though sluggish.

Snow which had been pelting down for nearly a week K. O.'d all idcas of special exploitation. Most of the ushers could do better shoveling than flashlighting the few patrons.

This is the first bad week in the grosses since the turn of the year.

Estimates for This Week

Colonial (LTC) (550; 10-15)—'Rainbow's End' (Indie) and 'Three Live Ghosts' (MG), split. Inclement weather taking its toll here as elsewhere; more than a fair $850 is unlikely. Last week 'Whispering Smith' (Fox) and 'Tumbling Tumbleweeds' (Rep), split, $900 for the run.

Lincoln (LTC) (1,600; 10-20-25)—'Frisco Kid' (WB). This pic, held back for some time, has only a moderate outlook. House will be satisfied if winding up at about $2,400, little better than fair. Last week 'Whipsaw' (MG) plenty nice, took slightly more than $3,100, o. k.

Orpheum (LTC) (1,200; 10-15-20-25)—'Forbidden Heaven' (Rep) and stage show headlining Rudy Bundy and his band. 'Way Down East' (Fox) follows in for four days alone. Stretch is paced for a probable $2,200, not so good. Last week 'Millions in Air' (Par) and the Ed Gardner 'Fads and Fancies' stage show, split with 'Broadway Hostess' (WB) and 'Baldpate' (RKO), dual, $2,400, so-so.

Stuart (LTC) (1,900; 10-25-40)—'Dark Angel' (UA). Bucking Hoover's speech to 9,500 at the Coliseum, likely only $3,200, just average. Last week 'Collegiate' (Par) stepped out to get $3,700, nice enough.

Varsity (Westlaid) (1,100; 10-20-25)—'Lone Wolf' (Col). Scared all the people out of the house; had $1,000 in sight. Last week 'First a Girl' (GB) strong enough on the start to be a winner with $1,500.

'Bride' $10,500, 'Soldier' $5,000, Balto B.O.'s Big

Baltimore, Jan. 21.

(Best Exploitation: Hipp)

tandout continues to be 'Magnificent Obsession' at Keith's, which is snatching a swell $6,000 in second session, and will hold another lap. That will be longest run a film has enjoyed at the house for upwards of a year.

That Major Bowes Ams can still stir 'em up is being proved at the vaudfilm Hipp where Unit No. 4 is the potent factor getting spot a nifty $17,000. The pic, 'Another Face,' isn't doing the luring.

With the D.A.'s office conducting an investigation of the 'numbers' racket in Balto, 'Exclusive Story' at the vaudfilm Century is timely. House amply apprized burg what story matter in flick contained. Well liked and should soar up to a dandy $18,500, despite the creeping start.

Pa. Ted Routson of the Hipp, spotted a local lass on Major Bowes NBC hour week before current unit came in. Quarter hour after girl had her opportunity, stunt called for the Major to read a wire from Hipp mgt. offering girl a spot in the unit when it played here. Big play up in press.

Estimates for This Week

Century (Loew-UA) (3,000; 15-25-35-40-55-66) — 'Exclusive Story' (MG) and vaude. Timely for this town these days, with plenty interest in the 'numbers' racket, added attention, $18,500. Last week 'Riff-raff' (MG) and vaude, $17,600, nice enough.

Hippodrome (Rappaport) (2,300; 15-25-35-40-55-66) — 'Another Face' (RKO), 'March of Time' (RKO) and Bowes unit No. 4 on stage. The simon-pures the lures, pulling a crackerjack $17,000. Last week 'Could Only Cook' (Col) and 'Hit Parade' unit on stage, weak $10,500.

Keith's (Schanberger) (2,500; 15-25-30-40)—'Obsession' (U) (2d wk). Talk o' the town, splendid $6,000, after socko $9,000 on first lap. Will go third round.

New (Mechanic) (1,800; 15-25-30-35-40-55) — 'Professional Soldier' (20th). Opened Monday to immediate attention, evincing a pace that suggests around $5,000 on stanza. Vic McLaglen got so much laurel-crowning recently when publications and public started choosing best pix and performances for past year, that renewed interest in actor noticeable. Last week 'King of Burlesque' (20th) 10 days to excellent $7,000.

Stanley (WB) (3,450; 15-25-35-40-55)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par). The b.o. resembled a beehive right from opening; assured of hotsy-totsy $10,500. Last week 'Collegiate' (Par) fairish $6,800.

Estimates for This Week

Colonial (LTC) (550; 10-15)—'Rainbow's End' (Indie) and 'Three Live Ghosts' (MG), split. Inclement weather taking its toll here as elsewhere; more than a fair $850 is unlikely. Last week 'Whispering Smith' (Fox) and 'Tumbling Tumbleweeds' (Rep), split, $900 for the run.

Orpheum (LTC) (1,200; 10-15-20-25)—'Forbidden Heaven' (Rep) and stage show headlining Rudy Bundy and his band. 'Way Down East' (Fox) follows in for four days alone. Stretch is paced for a probable $2,200, not so good. Last week 'Millions in Air' (Par) and the Ed Gardner 'Fads and Fancies' stage show, split with 'Broadway Hostess' (WB) and 'Baldpate' (RKO), dual, $2,400, so-so.

Stuart (LTC) (1,900; 10-25-40)—'Dark Angel' (UA). Bucking Hoover's speech to 9,500 at the Coliseum, likely only $3,200, just average. Last week 'Collegiate' (Par) stepped out to get $3,700, nice enough.

Varsity (Westlaid) (1,100; 10-20-25)—'Lone Wolf' (Col). Scared all the people out of the house; had $1,000 in sight. Last week 'First a Girl' (GB) strong enough on the start to be a winner with $1,500.

'King Burlesque' Wow $8,000, 'First A Girl' Strong 3G, 'Fleet' 4G in Denver

(Best Exploitati rpheum)

Denver, Jan. 21.

'King of Burlesque' is headed for the biggest gross here and goes to Broadway for an extended run. 'Miss Pacific Fleet' had balcony standouts every night and for 40c seats. Holdouts two nights.

'First a Girl' is doing 50% above average with strong, steady business all week.

'Millions in Air' getting five days, doing nicely, but must go out on account of heavy campaign on next film, 'Splendor.'

Stock show in Denver throwing many to theatres with groups in cow-country clothes going in first-runs every day.

Orpheum rates best exploitation on girl dressed as an Hawaiian passing out candy kisses in front of theatre, worded 'have taste of Pagan kisses and see 'Pagan Love' at Orpheum.

Estimates for This Week

Aladdin (Huffman) (1,500; 25-35-50-60)—'First a Girl' (GB). Biz 50% above par at a nifty $3,000. Last week, 'Splendor' (UA), did $2,000, and is being held over at the Broadway.

Broadway (Huffman) (1,500; 25-40)—'Splendor' (UA). Following a week at the Aladdin, stays five days at $1,000 take, o.k. Last week, 'Capt. Blood' (FN), $1,200, above average, after a week at the Denver.

Denham (Cooper) (1,500; 25-35-40)—'Millions in Air' (Par). Only five days, nicely for $3,500. Last week, 'Rose of Rancho' (Par), $8,000, doubling average gross.

Denver (Huffman) (2,500; 25-35-50)—'King of Burlesque' (20th) and stage band. The prize b.o. baly this week, bangup $8,000. Last week, 'Riffraff' (MG), did good business with $5,000.

Orpheum (RKO) (2,600; 25-35-40)—'Last of Pagans' (MG). Good bally and biz oke for $4,000. Last week, 'Dream Too Much' (RKO), good with $5,000.

Paramount (Huffman) (2,000; 25-40)—'Pacific Fleet' (WB). Bull market here, too, $4,000. Last week, 'Great Impersonation' (U), $2,000, below average.

'Exclusive Story' $4,800, Rialto, L'ville, $4,500 OK

Louisville, Jan. 21.

(Best Exploitation: State)

Holdovers are delivering the heaviest sock currently, 'Obsession' coming through for top biz of $5,400, with 'Dangerous' giving a good account of itself at the Mary Anderson; gross indicated at about $3,300. Pic will occupy the screen until 'Midsummer Night's Dream' comes in at prices scaled from 50c to $1.50 for eight-day engagement.

Other first-runs just so-so. They have to be content with just ordinary biz, product not being of any particular strength. Word of mouth helping 'Obsession' immensely. Strand ran large ads stating that pic was playing to capacity biz in spite of 'critics' adverse criticism. Had the natives talking, and then flocking downtown to see the film which the newspaper oracles had put on the pan.

Recent action of legislature in repealing 3% sales tax measure lops 1c from admission prices, and even this slight reduction brings a feeling of satisfaction to patrons here.

George Hunt, Jr., dug up new exploitation angle on 'Exclusive Story,' offering prizes for best letters on the affirmative and negative side of the question, 'Should a newspaper man be compelled to divulge his source of information?' Cash prizes and ducats awarded to winners.

Estimates for This Week

Loew's State (3,000; 15-25-40)—'Exclusive Story' (MG) and 'Dangerous Intrigue' (Col), dual. Keeping up interest with some nice exploitation, and gross indicated at $4,800, pretty fair. Last week 'Wilderness' (MG) held up satisfactorily to $5,300 finish.

Rialto (4th Ave.) (3,000; 15-25-40)—'Coronado' (Par) and 'Master's Voice' (Par), dual. Coming through in nice style and should wind up around $4,500. Added feature is television apparatus set up in lobby, handled by Wendall McMahill. Last week 'Rose of Rancho' (Par) not so forte, but profitable at $5,000.

Brown (Ind) (1,500; 15-25-40)—'Fang and Claw' (RKO) and 'First a Girl' (GB), dual. Not much b.o. strength in evidence; should wind up with $2,300, fair. Last week 'Mister Hobo' (G) somewhat under the mark of previous Arliss efforts; $2,000, slow.

Strand (4th Ave.) (1,500; 15-25-40)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U) (2d week). Holding up nicely and reaping gratifying returns, will wind up with around $5,400, profit. Last week much bigger than figured to a windup of around $6,500.

Mary Anderson (Libson) (1,000; 25-40)—'Dangerous' (WB) (2d w.k). Doing well enough to hold until 'Midsummer Night's Dream' comes in at roadshow prices. Will likely do $3,300, okay. Last week same film did better than looked for, $3,800, well on the profit side.

National (Ind) (2,400; 15-25-40)—'Rip Roaring Riley' (Puritan) and Stratosphere Revue. Stage entertainment nothing to write home about this week, while pic decidedly weak, headed for light $2,800. Last week 'Cappy Ricks' (Rep) and vaude wound up with fair $3,500.

Alamo (Ind) (900; 15-25)—'Kids and Queen' (U) and 'Nevada' (Par), dual. Holds to about average draw, with grosses fluctuating but little from week to week. Take indicated at about $1,100. Last week 'Gallant Defender' (Col) and 'Couldn't Take It' (Col), dual, took light $1,200.

'Prof. Soldier' Plus Kazanova Gypsy Orc Nice $21,000 in Wash.

Washington, Jan.

(Best Exploitation: Fox)

Everybody has something to sell this week and everybody is selling it. Smash celluloid holdovers but the result is spreading the biz evenly and making total above average.

Best bally honors to Fox for 'Professional Soldier.' Nor did Ray Bell, new boss p.a., make most of McLaglen's new-found rep, but hit sport page through Damon Runyon's authorship, even getting review by one baseball columnist.

Estimates for This Week

Earle (WB) (2,424; 25-35-40-60-70)—'Dangerous' (WB) and vaude. But Bette Davis getting personal raves, week should see oke $17,000. Last week 'Mary Burns' Fact and Spitalny orchestra took same figure.

Fox (Loew) (3,424; 25-35-60)—'Professional Soldier' (20th) and vaude. McLaglen new rep plus nice reviews on comedy angle and comments on Kazanova Tzigane band on stage adding up to satisfactory $21,000. Last week 'Riff Raff' (MG) can thank Harlow for oke $22,500.

Palace (Loew) (2,363; 25-35-60)—'Two Cities' (MG) (2d week). Will get big $15,000 for nine days. Last week beautiful $23,000.

Keith's (RKO) (1,830; 25-35-60)—'Obsession' (U) (2d week). Holding up to big $9,000. Last week same pic got sock $15,000.

Belasco (Radin) (1,100; 25-35-50-70)—'Kids and Queen' (U). Hollywood comedy in foreign arty spot will pull so-so $3,000. Last week 'La Maternelle' (Met) clicked with nice $4,500.

[illegible]et (WB) (1,853; 25-40)—'Capt. Blood' (WB). Third week on mainstem looking at nice $4,000. Last week same pic got big $7,500.

Columbia (Lenzy) (1,262; 25-40)—'Wilderness' (MG). Second week downtown should win nice $7,500 for nine days. Last week 'Old Kentucky' (Fox) third stanza socked away swell $6,500.

HARLOW-'DAN', DUAL IN N. H., GOOD $6,500

New Haven, Jan. 21.

(Best Exploitation: Poli)

Storm killed everything here over the weekend. Doubtful if much of it will be caught up last half. Bijou trying out Screeno once (Tues) weekly. College getting big response on locally made two-reeler with home-town cast.

Poli and College split bally prize currently. On 'Riffraff,' Poli went to town on Harlow's brownette coiffure. Spread a flock of coupons good for 'Brownette' sundaes at reduced tariff; beauty shop window had Harlow color photos illuminated with spots; additional beauty parlors were flooded with color miniatures showing authentic shade of hair; bunch of fan mag giveaways carried corner envelope adv, and campaign was topped off with lengthy broadcast.

Estimates for This Week

Paramount (M&P) (2,348; 35-50)—'Master's Voice' (Par) and 'Impersonation' (U). Battling the weather, light $5,500. Last week 'Rancho' (Par) and 'Susan' (U), fair enough $6,800.

Poli (Loew) (3,040; 35-50)—'Riff-Raff' (MG) and 'Dan Mathews' (Col). Would probably be weak even without the storm, tepid $6,500. Last week 'Wilderness' (MG) and 'Could Cook' (Col) drew managerial 'ahs' with sweet $11,200 on nine days.

Roger Sherman (WB) (2,200; 35-50)—'Invisible Ray' (U) and 'First a Girl' (GB). Lukewarm and cut to six days, not too good $4,700. Last week 'Dream Too Much' (RKO) and 'Harrigan' (WB), hypoed by adding extra shows of 'Informer' last three nights, so-so $5,800.

College (Loew) (1,565; 25-35)—'Lone Wolf' (Col) and 'Smith Speaks' (20th), plus local featurette 'It Happened in New Haven.' Heavy take, $4,500, with 'New Haven' getting big share of credit. Last week 'Rebel' (20th) and 'Uncle Dudley' (20th) holdover rated nice $4,200 at 35-50 scale.

PITT'S PERFECT ALIBI, WORST BLIZ 25 YRS.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 21.

(Best Exploitation: Stanley)

For a change the boys have an alibi—and a real one. Worst blizzard and snowstorm in last 25 years placing everything at standstill this week, with only the bravest of the brave venturing out of their homes and then hardly in search of entertainment.

Burg hasn't experienced the like of it in quarter of a century. Theatres at least lucky to get in couple of days, Friday and Saturday, before the deluge, but after that just too bad. Sunday was brutal, foot of snow on the ground making traffic impossible and business practically nil. No let-up yesterday (20) with drifts piling up several feet high, trolleys and buses hours late and main stem looking like Goldsmith's famous village. Unless the miraculous happens, doubtful if anybody will be able to attempt any kind of recovery within next couple of days.

Stanley got worst break of all. With punchy b. o. combo, 'I Dream Too Much' on screen and Ben Lyon, Bebe Daniels, Toby Wing and Johnny Perkins on stage, house started out like house afire, appraising record-breaking Bowes takings over weekend, with $6,250 take for Saturday alone. However, weather nullified everything following better than 10 grand in two days and doubtful if takings will go as much beyond that. It's a shame but nobody's fault.

Same thing true everywhere else. 'Magnificent Obsession,' after $12,000 opening session, started second week day storm break and sank to practically nothing at all, and will be lucky to wind up with $4,000 under present circumstances. 'Bride Comes Home' got away nicely at Penn but that getaway's all it'll have to show at end of week. Maybe $6,000, more than likely not. Two double-feature sites, Warner and Fulton, also in doldrums although not so much as others because these houses have a Thursday inaugural, which gave them a day's start on the mercury. 'Fang and Claw' and 'Perfect Gentleman' gave Warner best opening in several weeks and may hold things up to $3,800 or thereabouts while at Fulton 'Paddy O'Day' and 'Whispering Smith Speaks' shouldn't slip lower than $3,000.

Stanley opened guns on both stage and screen for current week, tying up everything with a musical connection for 'I Dream Too Much' and getting every break possible from newspapers on Lyons, Daniels and Wing, corraling interviews in almost every news, society and theatre section in town.

imates for This Week

Alvin (Harris) (2,000; 25-35-40)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U) (2d week). Flicker was a b. o. smash from word go but weather will cost it several grand. Opening session attracted better than $12,000, sensational, but b.o. period started day worst storm in 25 years broke and that'll mean a big drop to $4,000 or perhaps under. House goes back to duals Sunday (26) with 'First a Girl' and 'Lone Wolf Returns' for five days only, returning following Friday (31) to presentation policy. Latter, however, expected to be only temporary.

Fulton (Shea-Hyde) (1,750; 15-25-40)—'Paddy O'Day' (20th) and 'Whispering Smith' (20th). Got in a day ahead of rest of 'em on Thursday (16) which helped some but not enough, maybe $3,000, in the dumps, but weather plays no favorites, so house can get some consolation out of that. Tough break, however, for a site that's finding it going plenty tough as it is. Last week 'Chan's Secret' (20th) and 'Hitch Hike Lady' (Rep) developed surprising strength after slow getaway and claimed better than $4,000.

Penn (Loew's-UA) (3,300; 25-35-50)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par). Picture had been doing first-rate all through territory and started out to duplicate previous showings in first-run engagement but blizzard soon put a crimp in that. Could have shot deer here after Sunday, all of which means brutal $6,000 if that. Last week 'Collegiate' (Par) not so hot either, getting few hundred under $9,000, deep red.

Stanley (WB) (3,600; 25-40-55)—'Dream Too Much' (RKO) and Ben Lyon, Bebe Daniels, Toby Wing and Johnny Perkins on stage. Weather gave Stanley worst break of 'em all. House looked to have what it takes this week for smash session and started right in that direction getting better than $10,000 in first two days or within a few hundred bucks of record-breaking Major Bowes takings recently. However, despite storm house should get $19,000 from present looks of things. Last week 'Splendor' (UA) and stage show fair enough at $20,000.

Warner (WB) (2,000; 25-40)—'Perfect Gentleman' (MG) and 'Fang and Claw' (RKO). Another one that got away in swell fashion, only to sink to practically nothing. Might be $3,800, but that's a guess because weather's keeping 'em all indoors. Last week 'Beldpate' (RKO) and 'Millions in Air' (Par) around $4,500.

'Dream' at $1.73 in Nice Seattle, Start; 'Obsession' $10,000

Seattle, Jan. 21.

(Best Exploitation: Music Hall)

There's an extra showshop running in town this week, the 2,300-seater Music Hall, lit up for roadshowing of 'Midsummer Night's Dream.' Town is full of ace attractions, with 'Magnificent Obsession' at Fifth Avenue, and 'Ah Wilderness' headlining at Orph.

Best exploitation for 'Dream' at Music Hall, with opening night sponsored by elite Junior Leaguers, gals selling tickets and acting as hostesses. Social night made of it. Parent-Teachers organizations also back of showing; special matinee for teachers in public schools, and superintendent of schools letting schools recess early one day so kids can go to matinee. Newspaper blasts got into society sections of newspapers and opening night was a dress affair.

Estimates for This Week

Blue Mouse (Hamrick) (900; 27-37-42)—'King of Burlesque' (20th) and 'Baldpate' (RKO). Dual good for $3,800. Last week, 'Riffraff' (MG) and 'Stars Over Broadway' (WB) second week), $3,000, slow.

Coliseum (Evergreen) (1,800; 21-32)—'Metropolitan' (20th) and 'Bad Boy' (20th) dual, split with 'Thanks Million' (20th) and 'Great Life' (Par) dual. Runs 10 days and $5,000 pace is O.K. Last week, 'Romance' (20th) and 'Red Salute' (UA) dual, split with 'In the Air' (MG) and 'Way Down East' (20th) dual, $2,900, slow.

Fifth Ave. (Evergreen) (2,400; 27-37-42)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U) and 'Paddy O'Day' (Fox) dual. Almost $10,000, certain, terrif. Last week, 'Two Cities' (MG) and 'Coronado' (Par) dual, too long a show, got kicks, $7,800, fair.

Liberty (J-vH) (1,900; 16-27-35)—'Whispering Smith' (20th) and 'Dangerous Intrigue' (Col) dual. Big at $4,500. Last week, 'Splendor' (UA) and 'One Way Ticket' (Col) dual, $3,700, moderate.

Music Box (Hamrick) (900; 27-37-42)—'Two Cities' (MG). Moved from Fifth Ave., heading for a good $4,000. Last week 'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and 'Night Out' (U) dual, second week, $4,100, good.

Music Hall (Hamrick) (2,300; 57-$1.73)—'Midsummer Night's Dream' (WB). Getting cooperation of organizations, with Junior League sponsorship, first roadshowed pic since 'Dinner at 8' (MG); nice advance sale, and biz strong. Last week, dark.

Orpheum (Hamrick) (2,700; 27-37-42)—'Wilderness' (MG) and 'Navy Wife' (20th) dual. Special bally for former, expects good $7,800. Last week, 'Burlesque' (20th) and 'Baldpate' (RKO), $6,500, fair.

Paramount (Evergreen) (3,106; 21-27-32)—'East of Java' (U) and 'Perfect Gentleman' (MG) dual. In sight of good $4,300. Last week, 'Mr. Hobo' (GB) and 'Dr. Hannigan' (Par) dual, $5,800, big.

'OBSESH,' $18,000, BEST IN SNOWBOUND NEW'K

Newark, Jan. 21.

(Best Exploitation: Branford)

An ice storm Saturday followed by heavy snow and sleet Sunday did no good at all here especially with Newark's desire to do all its business on week-ends. It is a question how much of the lost business will be made up during the week. There is one hit picture here, 'Magnificent Obsession,' with 'Freshman Love' that opened Friday at the Branford to tremendous holdouts. It should go to a great $18,000 but the weather may mean a loss. There is nothing else save 'Pioneers of Palestine' at the Little which would normally go to $1,500.

The Mosque has reorganized and seems to be going ahead now all right. The Orpheum is closed.

There is not much publicity being done this week but the Branford.

Estimates for This Week

Branford (WB) (2,966; 15-65)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U) and 'Freshman Love' (20th). Should go very high, at least $18,000. Last week 'Dangerous' (WB) and 'Payoff' (FN) fine $19,300 in nine days.

Capitol (WB) (1,200; 15-30-40)—'Bride Comes Home' (Par) and 'Splendor' (UA). Not much over $3,000 here. Last week 'Capt. Blood' (FN) and 'Millions in Air' (Par) not strong at $3,400.

Little (Franklin) (299; 35-50)—'Pioneers of Palestine' (Musa). Going all right, $1,500. Last week 'Poil de Carotte' (Pathe-Nathan) and 'Czarina' (Kinema), $700.

Loew's State (2,780; 20-30-35-55-

Mpls. B.O.'s Are Hot in Zero Temp; 'Dangerous'-Hutton Orc Good at 12G

Minneapolis, Jan. 21.

(Best Exploitati Minnesota)

Despite 20 below weather the box-offices here still are hot and business continues to zip along. The State and World are sharing in the Minnesota and Orpheum's prosperity currently and everything along the rialto is copasetic.

Reasons for this week's box-office activity are 'Dangerous' plus Ina Ray Hutton and stage entertainment at the Minnesota; 'Captain Blood' and 'Magnificent Obsession,' at the Orpheum, State and World, respectively. The Bette Davis-Hutton combo has 'em flocking to the ace Publix house and 'Captain Blood' is showing surprising box-office strength.

'Magnificent Obsession' moved over to the sure-fire World after a bang-up week at the Orpheum. It grossed sufficient at the latter house to warrant its retention for another seven days, but a booking jam forced it out. It promises to give the World the biggest week's business the Steffes house has enjoyed in months and apparently is ticketed for an extended run.

The Minnesota ran away with exploitation honors, 24-sheeting and putting over a number of good newspaper story stunts for Ina Ray Hutton. Included in the latter was a heart action test to determine the effect of her trucking on masculine auditors.

Estimates for This Week

Minnesota (Publix) (4,200; 35-40-60)—'Dangerous' (WB) and Ina Ray Hutton and band and other acts on stage. Scale jacked up to 60c after 5 p.m. for this bill and there's anything but a dearth of customers. Lots of praise for picture and same goes for flesh-and-blood entertainment; merrily rolling along toward good $12,000. Last week, 'Two Cities' (MG), $12,000, good.

Orpheum (Singer) (2,890; 25-35-40)—'Capt. Blood' (RKO). Hitting better pace than anticipated, well sold and apparently delivering customer satisfaction to a high degree; overcoming stiff competish and bitter cold to race along at $8,000 clip, big. Last week, 'Magnificent Obsession' (U), $15,000, tremendous.

State (Publix) (2,400; 25-35-40)—'Riff Raff' (MG) and Louis-Retzlaff fight pictures. Not up to expectations, $3,500, light. Interest in fight film because Retzlaff, a North Dakotan, has done much of his fighting hereabouts; $7,000 pace, good. Last week, 'Splendor' (UA), $2,800, bad.

World (Steffes) (350; 25-35-40-55)—'Magnificent Obsession' (U). Moved here from Orpheum for extended loop run and likely to reach dandy $4,000, biggest biz in months. Last week, 'Swedenhielms' (Swedish), $2,500, pretty good.

Time (Berger) (290; 15-25)—'Narcotic' (2d week). Second loop run for this sex picture, but holding over for second canto. Sensational front bringing 'em in, looks like good $1,000; first week, $1,200.

Lyric (Publix) (1,300; 20-25)—'Melody Lingers On' (UA). Hampered by lack of cast names, lucky to top $1,500. Last week, 'Millions in Air' (Par), $1,700, fair.

Uptown (Publix) (1,200; 25-35)—'Night at Opera' (MG). First neighborhood showing of this smash hit and hot $4,000 in prospect. Last week, 'Monte Carlo' (20th), $2,400, fair.

Century (Publix) (1,600; 15-25)—'Rendezvous' (MG). Second loop run, pretty good $2,500 indicated. Last week, 'Mutiny' (MG), third loop run, $3,500, big.

Aster (Publix) (900; 15-25)—'Barbary Coast' (UA) and 'No Marcy' (20th). Second loop runs, split en route to good $1,000. Last week, 'Stella Parrish' (FN) and 'Two Fisted' (Par), second loop runs, and 'Little America' (Par), first run, split, $800, fair.

THEATRE BUILDING AND BUYING WAR SERIOUS THREAT TO BRITISH INDIES

Union Cinemas and Deutsch Latest to Combat G-B and BIP — Four Circuits, 1,400 Houses, Seen Likely

London, Jan. 12.

Serious position of the indie exhibitor in this country has been made more acute by the long-expected announcement of another buying and building war between the big circuits.

Union Cinemas, latest to enter the field in a big way, headed by Fred Bernhard and Arthur Segal, intends to bring its theatre ownership up to 200 by the end of the year.

Oscar Deutsch, who preceded Union in the buying field, intends to hit the same figure.

Both Gaumont-British and Associated British are adding, buying sites, taking over existing theatres, and planning new ones.

In one year it may well be that there will be four circuits, controlling between them 1,400 film theatres in Great ritain, excluding the Irish Free State. Present film theatre total is just over 4,300.

Situation is serious, both for the indies who will be forced out, and some of the circuits who, playing opposition bookings to each other, may find themselves cracking their own receipts in order to spike opposition.

Latest statistics here indicate the 4,300 theatres cater to 19,000,000 paid admissions per week. Total seating capacity of the British theatres is placed by Simon Rowson, renter who makes film statistics his hobby, as rather more than 3,872,000, which is one seat for every nine of the adult and adolescent population. This ratio is dangerously near the breaking point, it is felt in some quarters, and will be shortened still further this year by nearly 400 theatres whose seating capacity will not be less than 800,000.

Admitting some indies will fall by the wayside the moment the new fellows start operating, the British trade is much nearer an over-seating problem than the U. S. was in '29, just before the crash and the wholesale closing down of cinemas.

That many of the small men are aware of this is evidenced by the systematic opposition to licensing of new theatres when they come up before local authorities.

Officials of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, aware that one half of their membership will be knocked off the map by the other half, say nothing.

At the same time Associated British have announced an immediate public issue of $5,000,000 stock at 5% as first mortgage security. This will bring its public issue to $17,500,000, amount authorized in their articles of association.

The Bernard-Segal group claims to have lined up $15,000,000 on 50 existing properties in which they have bought control and 47 new sites. The Deutsch interests claims the same expenditure on 56 existing properties and 51 sites—making its total 220 by December.

Sydney Bernstein, who owns a class indie circuit, has invested a lot of coin in eight theatres he now has under construction, and A. E. Abrahams, who works closely with John Maxwell of Associated British in exhibiting, claims to have a big bankroll on 10 new buildings.

Par Loses Two

Paris, Jan. 12.

Local courts have been pretty tough on Par lately. One decision favors Marcel Pagnol, French author-producer, in a suit for an accounting on Paramount's distribution of French films based on his plays, 'Marius' and 'Topaze.' Court awarded him $16,000 and possession of both of the negatives, and he is now announcing remake of 'Topaze' on his own. 'Marius' was one of the most successful French talkers of its time.

Leopold Marchand, another French author also won a judgment for $33,000 in connection with the breaking off of his deal with Par when local production for Par's own account stopped. But after the lower court judgment he settled for less, in cash.

NO JUGO PRODUCTIONS BUT CINEMA BIZ OKE

Belgrade, Jan.

Some years ago there was a great movement in Jugoslavia to create a national film industry. Many companies sprang up, but after short time they went bankrupt, so that there is not one at present worth speaking about.

On the other hand the picture houses are doing quite well. Their number is today bigger than last year, and the competition between cinemas is so great that the quality of films brought into the country is generally very good.

Newest addition to the number of important picture houses in Belgrade is the Luxor. American and Russian films have the greatest following in Balkans, Russian even more than American, but, fortunately for the Yanks there are fewer Russian films available.

CLASA'S SECOND

Mexico City, Jan. 21.

Cinematografica Latino Americano, S. A. (Clasa) finishes its first pic, 'Vamonos Con Pancho Villa' ('Let's Go With Pancho Villa') late this month and will immediately start work on its second, 'Una Noche en Pariso' ('A Night in Paradise').

Anzac Competish

Sydney, Dec. 30.

For several years it has been the practice of theatre managements here to allow children entree at 12c. for all early shows. Idea has always brought plenty to the b.o.

This year the railroad has decided to grab some kiddie biz and is offering train rides into the country for 12c. Kids are now forcing their parents to take them riding instead of watching pix.

It's called the biggest kick in the pants the theatre men have had here in years.

German Statistics

Berlin, Jan. 10.

Latest statistics state that Germany boasts 5,005 kinos.

There are 44 producing firms in the Fatherland.

During 1935 201 films were shown, which number contains 94 German pix. The United States are represented in this figure of 201 with 50 films.

251 Dubbed Pix in France in 1935, New Record; 193 Were American-Made

Paris, Jan. 12.

Number of dubbed films placed on the French market in 1935 broke all records, local year-end figures show. Total for the year was 251, against 150 in 1934 and 143 in 1933. Of the 251, 193 were American.

This is in spite of the fact that the quota law permits only 188 films to be dubbed in France every year. Explanation is that the figure of 251 includes all pix released or previewed during the year, whereas the quota is based on the number of licenses for dubbing granted by the censors. At least 63 of the 251, therefore, must have been dubbed on licenses granted in 1934.

Dubber films of non-American origin put out in 1935 were: 25 German, 19 English and the rest from scattered countries, no more than 3 to a country.

Original Decline

Original French talkers, made in France or abroad and released in 1935 show a slight decline: 115 instead of 126 in 1934 and 158 in 1933. This is under the midyear estimates. However, local trade considers that although the quantity of output is down, the quality is improved over previous years.

Original French talkers produced abroad and released in 1935 were 20: 10 in Germany, 5 in Italy and 2 in Hollywood.

Foreign films shown in France in the original languages also beat all records in 1935, with 237, against 196 in 1934 and 153 in 1933. Of the 237, 177 were American, 14 English, 34 German and 5 Russian; 157 of them were distributed in dubbed as well as original versions.

Total Foreign

To find the total foreign films distributed in France during 1935, therefore, it is necessary to deduct 157 from the total of dubbed and original versions, which gives 466 foreign pix for the year, against 436 in 1934 and 572 in 1933.

Only the dubbed figures really count, because the vast majority of original versions only play in a couple of theatres. Law restricts them to 15 bookings in France and provinces, but few get that many. Exceptional films are allowed to exceed the legal number of bookings, by special dispensation, but these are very few, including 'Little Women, 'Invisible Man' and German 'Unfinished Symphony.' There are 60 houses in France showing foreign language versions, of which 40 are in Paris—1½% of the total number of wired theatres in the country.

Production figures for France for 1935 show that 115 films were shot locally during the year. This includes three English versions, two German versions and one film in Arabian, leaving 109 French talkers.

English versions are 'Koenigsmark,' 'Vie Parisienne' and 'Tarass Bulba,' all as yet unreleased, although the French version of 'Koenigsmark' has been put out.

Local Production

The 1935 production figure is just one above that of 1934, when 114 pix were made. Figure for 1933 was 157. Major producers entirely disappeared in 1935, and the films were made by 83 different independent companies, the two largest of which made only five films each. They are Flores Film (Fred Bacos, producing for local Paramount distribution) and Sigma Films.

Most active among the studios were those of Pathe, which were rented to indies for the production of 26 films—one more than they made in 1934, when Pathe was still producing. Billancourt studios, always rented to indies, made 21 films against 14 in 1934. Next come Gaumont-Franco-Films-Aubert lot with 13, against 15 in 1934; Eclair at Epinay with 13 against 10 in 1934; Paramount lot at Joinville with 11 against only three in 1934; Neuilly with nine pix, Photosonor with five, Place Clichy with four and Francois 1 (open only last four months of the year) with three.

Only picture made all year at the Tobis Epinay lot was 'Kermesse Heroique' in French and German. No pictures were made during the year at the former Haik studios at Courbevoie, nor at Asnieres. Two pictures are listed as having been made entirely on location.

Figures were compiled by Pierre Autre for Cinematographie Francaise.

Berlin, Jan. 9.

Dr. Bausback, chairman of Tobis, was confident at a stockholders' meeting regarding the future of the company.

In spite of much difficulty concerning export possibilities there is no reason for any apprehensions, he said. While production costs have risen, there is a welcome improvement in general trade and a much higher figure in theatre attendance. Approximate expenses for a film nowadays are $200,000, against $120,000 last season.

Required permanency of production as outlined by Dr. Joseph Goebbels, minister of Propaganda in his recent speech before the Film Chamber, has already been solved by Tobis by founding a new production company, the Tobis-Magna. During the quiet summer season this firm will produce a limited number of artistic films.

F. R. Langenscheidt, film exporter, has entered the board of directors of Tobis. Langenscheidt was business manager of Minerva and Transocean previously.

ENIC's Remakes

Rome, , 10.

National Union of Cinematographic Industries (ENIC) is planning to release a number of films in the next few weeks, chiefly of foreign origin remade in Italian versions.

First of these will be the 'Diary of a Beloved Lady,' which has been directed in both Austrian and Italian versions by Hermann Kosterlitz. Isa Miranda plays the part in Italian which Lily Darvas did in German. Ennio Cerlesi has Attila Hoerbiger's part and Loris Gizzi, Szoeke Szakall's. Jaray alone of the major actors is in both versions.

Tirrenia Studios have finished 'A Gust of Wind' directed by C. F. Tavano, and 'Through the Streets of the World,' directed by Jean Epstein. Both will be distributed by ENIC. Ermete Zacconi is in both films, in the first with Dria Paola; in the second opposite Madeleine Renaud.

Hans Albers, Attila Hoerbiger, and Annabelle are included in the cast of the new Nikolas Farkas film 'Variety,' which will also be distributed by ENIC.

German-Italian Pic Is Started in Rome

Film, which is based on Ludwig von Wohl's romance 'The Maharajah's White Lady' will be shot for the most part at San Remo. Ferruccio Biancini is in charge of production for both versions whereas Goffredo Alessandrini will direct the Italian, and Arthur Rabenalt the German version.

DENY DEAL

Paris, Jan. 12.

Acquisition by Metro of the Elysee-Gaumont, Champs Elysees house, as its local showcase, is denied by Hakim Brothers, who now run the theatre. They'll continue management, they say.

This would leave Metro still looking for a spot to replace the Madeleine, taken back this year by the Gaumont-Franco Film-Aubert circuit.

Dr. Arnold Fanck, producer of 'Piz Palu' and 'Storms Over Mont Blanc' leaves shortly for Asia to make a film in Japan.

Free Television Shows in Paris Frighten French Picture Exhibs

Paris, Jan.

Television is giving the French film trade a bad case of jitters.

Every Sunday Georges Mandel, lo czar, gives free public television shows at ten spots scattered over Paris, where he has installed receiving sets to capture programs broadcast from the Eiffel Tower. So far this is oke, because the screens are about the size of letterheads and only 50 persons can see them at a time. No competition with regular film houses.

But the exhibs are afraid of what may come in the future, and are trying to organize themselves to stave off competition.

Campaign is on foot to have newsreel matter broadcast by television, and that is seen by the film trade as a first step toward broadcasting shows. Exhibs figure that only second run rights to news will be reserved for them.

Solution is seen in an agreement between exhibs on one hand and producers and distributors of features and newsreels on the other to lay off television. Pact would reserve newsreel and program films entirely to picture theatres. Television could have trailers or could make special shots in studios under guidance of press agents, so as to broadcast matter which will serve as promotion for later film releases. Otherwise the film biz plans to refuse co-operation.

This, naturally, does not take into account initiative of the television people, who can broadcast anything they like, providing they produce it in their own studio. And the television people are the government.

This fear is really part of the more general fear of the French industry that the state will butt in.

Another threat, more definite to local exhibs, is tendency of socialist and communist municipal governments to spend their money on meeting halls which, incidentally, are used to give film shows. Town of Clichy, a Paris suburb, run by reds, has just voted $300,000 to build a hall which is to be wired for sound. Will seat nearly 2,000. Four film theatres pay taxes in Clichy, and they now expect the town government, which they support, to go into competition with them. Appeal is being made to distribs to refuse to rent film for such sessions.

SNIDER-DEAN DEAL FOR CIVIC, SYDNEY

Sydney, Dec.

Snider-Dean, new indie unit breaking in here next month, is said to be dickering for the Civic Theatre from Haymarket Theatres Ltd., for a pic policy. Should the deal go through, mostly Metro and Republic product will be used.

S-D recently completed a deal with Sir Ben Fuller to take over some of his theatres in Australia, and is now looking for other spots.

Civic has been closed for some months following a vaude flop. Plans were afoot between Stuart F. Doyle and Ernest C. Rolls for the latter to bring in revues from Melbourne. This idea suddenly went floppo and announcement was made that theatre would return to pix, with no managerial names mentioned.

Hungarian Costs

Budapest, Jan. 10.

Figures for recently finished locally made pictures are estimated at $32,400 for 'Addressee Unknown,' $24,000 for 'One Night Only,' $31,200 for 'Friendly Expression, Please,' $19,000 for 'Grandmamma,' $22,000 for 'The Queen's Hussar,' $34,000 for 'New Landowner' and $21,600 for 'I Can't Live Without Music.'

All these are full-length features and in Hungarian versions only.

Joe Pasternak is back here after completing Francy Gaal's latest, 'Catherine the Last,' at Sacha Studio in Vienna for Universal.

'Back to School' will be her next film, he says, shot in Vienna or Budapest, with Hermann Thimig as her partner. Music is by Brodsky with Victor Gertler as production manager.

After this comes 'Miss 13,' also a Francy Gaal feature, and 'Harbor Angel,' starring Elma Bulla.

One of the three, Pasternak says, will be made in color.

PARIS REX ON AUCTION BLOCK

Paris, Jan.

Rex, 4,000-seat deluxer on the Grand Boulevards, which was started by Jacques Haik on American plans as France's first atmospherique picture house, will go on the auction block Jan. 14.

Following the acceptance of a settlement in bankruptcy for the Haik enterprises in general, the theatre, which was the ace of the Haik chain has been declared bankrupt.

All the Haik theatres—Rex, Olympia and Colisee—were turned over to the Gaumont-Franco Film Aubert chain for operation when the Haik enterprises first went into liquidation, but the subsequent liquidation of GFFA itself further complicated the situation.

The Olympia early this season was declared independent of GFFA and is being managed again by Haik.

French Exports Up

Paris, Jan. 12.

French film export circles are boasting of the conquest of new foreign markets in 1935. Some French pix grossed as much as $66,000 in world marts, it's said.

Twenty-five Frenchers were exported to the United States and 24 to Japan, claimed to be new highs for these countries since talkers began.

SCHEDULES SET BY ALL MAJORS

Metro, Columbia Films May Swell Total — Gaumont Tops List with 25, 16 Headed for U. S.

FOX LISTS 13

London, Jan. 12.

All major ritish companies here have now listed their production schedules for 1936. Total reached, excluding quickies, of which the British market still has more than its fair share, is 192 features.

This figure will be bettered as two American majors—Metro and Columbia—have British plans.

On top of the list comes Gaumont-British, with 25 films planned—19 at Shepherds Bush and six at Gainsborough.

Included in the G-B list are two Hitchcock productions, two Arliss starrers, one Bennett picture and three Will Hay comedies.

Sixteen of the G-B 25 are being aimed at the U. S. Importation of John Forde is likely to add to the G-B directorial list, and a further batch of writers is on its way.

Michael Balcon, G-B production chief, recently grabbed 16 American players for this output.

ritish International

Second in quantity comes British International, with about 20 outlined. Chief of these will be 'Glamorous Night,' based on the local legit hit. B&P's production plans are still in a state of flux, following suggestions that John Maxwell, chairman, was thinking of switching policy and making fewer but more expensive pictures. At present, though, 20 looks likely.

Alex Korda, head of London Films, is likely to come in with 12, all of which will be in his usual $400,000 average production nut class.

Among offerings planned he has Laughton in 'Cyrano'; 'Conquest of the Air,' by John Monk Saunders; 'Revolt in the Desert,' a picturization of the Lawrence of Arabia epic, and 'Elizabeth of England,' with Flora Robson, produced by Eric Pommer as his Korda bow-in film.

Fox figures on about 13 for the year, the first, starring Elizabeth Bergner, in production.

British Broadcasting Corp. Plans To Enter Pic Biz for Television Fodder; Film Producers Worried

London, Jan. 12.

Entry of the British Broadcasting Corp. into film production is a virtual certainty here, with the corporation now formulating its final plans for the formation of a unit.

Situation has arisen following the B. B. C. announcement that regular television will start on May 1 from the new station at Alexandra Palace, north London. Local engineers, believed to be working closely with G. E. C. experts, have decided that television's most practical arm is a film strip.

This being the case, they intend broadcasting regular newsreels as a start, hoping to come into the feature field later.

Thus a deadlock arises, the Cinematograph Exhibitors Assn. and the Kinematograph Renters Society, film trade's two protective associations, having agreed to include clauses in all distributing and production contracts that no film is to be televised until three months after its last booking on general release, and not then if the subject is considered important enough for a nation-wide reissue later.

Agreement

Both parties agreed to this clause, and its inclusion in standard contracts here becomes operative in the spring.

This means that B. B. C. is void of support from the entire picture business, both American and English, American concerns all being members of the local K. R. S.

Faced with the problem of wanting film to televise and having no chance of a successful approach to the industry, B. B. C. is understood to have made quiet probes with one or two small units outside the big protective associations.

Wherever this has happened B. B. C. has been greeted with thumbs down. It thus finds itself without an already established unit capable of turning out film. Established newsreels, not yet approached by B. B. C., have been contacted by the two protective societies, and a meeting was held. While newsreel chiefs refused to commit themselves, it was made pretty plain that B. B. C. was unlikely to get any of their footage.

Future

Future plans for the corporation's entry into televising film may rest with a Scot named John Grierson, who once worked for Par in Hollywood. He is chief of the semi-governmental General Post Office films unit, making class propaganda pictures for that branch of the civil service. Scale and scope of pictures made is far beyond the average of that type of work, and its chief has a local reputation.

BBC and GPO are linked, the corporation deriving its revenue through the GPO, whom people have to pay for a license to run a radio set. Understanding is that Grierson has been approached by BBC to see whether his unit could handle the corporation's film stock.

Meanwhile it has to get a regular film supply by the beginning of May, and Wardour street is plenty worried.

Gwenn's London Pic

Edmund Gwenn sails for London today (Wednesday) to make a film version 'Laburnum Grove' for Associated Talking Pictures. He starred in the play in New York and London.

Gwenn will return to New York immediately after the film and may do another play here. He is under contract to Metro but has studio permission to do a play if he can find one which is satisfactory.

FIVE-DAY SKED ON GUITRY PIC

. 12.

Sacha Guitry and his company finished film 'New Testament,' based on last season's legit comedy hit, in five days of studio time. Runs nearly 10,000 feet.

Company rehearsed the play at the Madeleine Theatre before going on the lot, and when they got there they just went through it, with the cameras grinding, in scenes of eight minutes or more. In some shots the cameraman ran out of film before the scene was finished, and the actors had to wait for him to reload.

Guitry's theory is that it's the dialog which counts—his dialog, anyway. He allowed no changes of camera angle during the speeches, on the principle that they'd distract the attention of the audience from what the actor is saying.

Legit-film idea, on which Guitry insists, is not new in France. Marcel Pagnol had it, and a number of French pictures are little more than plays photographed. But no one has gone as far as Guitry, nor shot a film so fast. Louis Aubert, film pioneer, is his producer, and is expected to back him for five more pix.

Guitry has Hollywood ambitions, and has been talking America to a local agent. Figures he might be made into a new George Arliss. U. S. will have a chance to judge Guitry when Jean Lenauer brings over 'Pasteur,' Guitry's first production.

If You Look Foreign and Pay Double You Can Now See English Pix in Rome

Rome, Jan. 10.

If you've got the pull to get a little green 'tessere' (pass) you now can see pix in their original languages in Rome and with lots of comfort.

It's been a long time since anybody in Italy has seen any foreign films in original versions, because according to Fascist law all films shown here must be produced in Italian.

Things got to such a state that finally the Ministry of Press and Propaganda, after a lot of pressure from foreigners (especially newspapermen) decided to allow one exclusive house to show foreign pix in their original language to a picked audience.

In order that Italians wouldn't be corrupted by hearing foreign languages it was decided that only foreign newspapermen, diplomats, scientists and Italians who knew foreign languages, or had some pull in science or letters, could get passes.

It's proving a great hit. Everybody wants to go and the Quirinetta, where the pictures are exhibited, can't find room enough for everybody. 'Becky Sharpe' (RKO) was the first pic shown.

It's not so hard to get passes (which in reality are only permission to buy tickets at about double the price for normal picture houses, but this keeps out the mob) if you've got a bit of a pull and look like a foreigner.

House is the most comfortable in town but only holds a few hundred. Programs are changed twice weekly and there is one afternoon and one evening performance.

Many and varied gags, majority of which land, combine with a set of good songs and individual performances to make Eddie Cantor's latest good entertainment. Picture doesn't look the cost of previous Cantor starrers. It is a little less lavish. At the box office both here and abroad the take will be big.

Cantor is hard at wor all times, eating up a lot of footage, but others in the picture also have their day and individually are important in support of the star. This is particularly true of Parkyakarkus, of whom audiences will want more than the picture gives, and of Ethel Merman, who has two production numbers to herself.

Parkyakarkus is anything but subjugated. He doesn't arrive on the scene until the picture reaches the half way mark, but when he does it means added laughs. The Greek dialectician has some good lines. They'll want to see much more of this fellow. Parkyakarkus plays a hick comedy part and is a type who screens for laughs. All he'll ever need is material.

Cantor is aces all the way. In some instances he's actually cute, but he isn't singing so much in 'Strike Me Pink,' having only two numbers, one with Miss Merman atop a ferris wheel, the other (a production display) with Rita Rio, hotcha tapster and okay, and the girls. There are only four songs and no reprises. All are scorers and of the four three get production backing. Other is 'Calabash Pipe,' novelty lyric number Cantor and Miss Merman do together. They sing it from the top of a ferris wheel with a cut to aging characters for a chorus.

Cantor, with Miss Rio, leads the production effort around 'The Lady Dances.' It's well sold and a good number, with Miss Rio leading the girls in a smart tap specialty. Other two numbers are for Miss Merman alone in the nitery setting, where she's spotted as the particular weakness of the hick Cantor. Miss Merman is tops and has received the most expert assistance from special photographers put on to camera the production sections.

Dances and ensembles were photographed by Gregg Toland, while Miss Merman's first number, unusually well done, was cameraed by Merritt Gerstad and specially credited. This is Miss Merman's singing of the torch ditty, 'First You've Got Me High, Then You've Got Me Low,' assisted by a chorus which gives the song spiritual treatment. Miss Merman's other torcher is 'Shake It Off With Rhythm,' backed by a mixed ensemble. Another tap dance by Miss Rio figures in this production session, with a male line to dress. Specialty is done on a mirror stage and carries out some novel camera tricks. Miss Rio at points stops dancing to watch her image do taps upside down. Quite clever as an idea. The four song numbers which contribute much to 'Pink' were written by Lew Brown and Harold Arlen.

Story structure permits the musical numbers without interference. It's the kind of comedy yarn also which could have been done without the benefit of singing and dancing. Originally called 'Dreamland,' it was intended for Lloyd and would have made ideal material for this comedian. Going to Sam Goldwyn instead for the use of Cantor, it was given the title of 'Shoot the Chutes,' being laid in an amusement park. Because Goldwyn felt 'Strike Me Pink' would mean more territory where Cantor means money, rights to this title, name of a musical comedy done several years ago, were acquired.

While 'Pink' would have provided swell opportunities for Lloyd, it at the same time suits Cantor well. Big-eyed comic plays a meek tailor to college campus trade whose efforts to overcome an inferiority complex land him quite by accident into the job of general manager for an amusement park that is trying to keep slot machines off the premises. Cantor's troubles with the racketeers behind the slot machines form the basis for most of the comedy situations.

Miss Merman does not share the romantic interest with Cantor, this chore having gone to Sally Eilers as Cantor's secretary at the amusement park. Touch and go is the night club worker over whom Cantor is daffy, but who helps frame him with the slot machine gang. Miss Eilers renders a steady performance. Helen Lowell in a character part is excellent. Gordon Jones good as a dumb college boy, while gangster menace is ably invoked by Brian Donlevy, Jack LaRue and William Frawley. Pitchman bit with Clyde Hagar collects its full value.

Mama Gini	Mathilda Comont

All the punch of the original stage play, plus the extra advantages the screen can contribute to this type of material, is intact in 'Ceiling Zero.' It has a fine cast that's double-barrelled in performance and on the draw, and an entertainment wallop of extraordinary power.

The Broadway stage version, which Warner Bros. bankrolled for a moderate success at the tail end of last season, depended on its dialog and whatever excitement it could steam up through offstage effects. Picture replaces the effects with visible illustration and the difference is considerable and for the better.

For James Cagney and Pat O'Brien, their relations as principal characters in a moving story are more or less according to formula, but there's so much else to this picture that rehashing of the old routine may not even be noticed. There's too much going on around them.

Cagney reverts to the 'Public Enemy' days in that he meets violent death at the finish. Up to then, as a daring and not strictly rational flyer, he has been a devil with the ladies, a pilot who loses his license through irresponsible acts and a man who is indirectly to blame for the death of a close friend. The finish, and his finish as well, result from his attempt to atone for his indiscretions. From all angles it's not only a natural role for Cagney, but a break for him also. He has been softened up too much lately as an actor and in character in routine scenarios, but this one makes up for a lot.

There are some scenes in a beer parlor, a hospital and views of planes, exterior and interior, in flight, but perhaps 65 of the picture's 95 minutes unfold in the superintendent's office of a commercial air line. It's here that the exciting drama behind the business of peacetime flying is so graphically and compellingly painted. The complicated mechanical phases of modern aviation are simply illustrated and, in interest, carry the picture in absorbing fashion until the high powered human element goes to town. As a technical display, along with its entertainment qualities, 'Ceiling Zero' is as expert as 'G-men.' In the latter the training of the government cops was made an important part of the story. In 'Zero' the mechanics of commercial aviation are disclosed in similar fashion. At this inside stuff technique the Warner studio is tops.

Structure of the stage play is faithfully followed, the main reason being that Frank Wead, who wrote the show, also adapted the picture. As in the legit version, wherein the big moment arrived at the conclusion of the second act with the crash of Tex Clarke's ship, it likewise comes on the same schedule in the film. What follows hardly reaches the emotional peak of the anti-climax, because it isn't possible to repeat at such a pace in one picture. In fact it isn't easy to repeat on that one in a whole year. For the Clarke crash in 'Zero' is about the most exciting piece of stage or screen business that has come along in seasons. It will keep the auditors on edge for a solid 15 minutes.

Stuart Erwin as the ill-fated Clarke turns in a trouping job that always equals Cagney and O'Brien, and now and then even transcends theirs. He approaches his big stuff in a quiet manner, but when he gets there he's in. June Travis is a lovely looking girl for the heart interest and Isabel Jewell and Martha Tibbetts handle their important assignments capably. Miss Jewell makes herself a vital character through able playing in her biggest dramatic moment.

In the early minutes the lady-killer rep of Cagney is laid on a bit too thick, yet it's something that Cagney has managed to overcome before, and he does it again. O'Brien, as his friend and debating opponent in the dialog, renders his usual intelligent interpretation. There are other good bits in lesser roles, and the picture on the whole is an example of good casting. Gary Owen makes a particularly fine contribution as a shell-shocked ex-flyer.

A title sheet dedication sets the keynote of story and pays a tribute to the pioneers of commercial aviation. Although it contains several crashes despite the radio beams and the demonstrations of the two-way plane-and-ground conversations, the picture is no slam at flying. In fact pains have been taken to point out the comparative safety of today as a result of the efforts of the men whose experiences are so vividly pictured.

Miniature Reviews

'Strike Me Pink' (Goldwyn-UA). Another money picture for Eddie Cantor.

'Ceiling Zero' (FN). Splendid adaptation of a last season legit show, with James Cagney and Pat O'Brien. Good cast in a first rate aviation thriller.

'Leavenworth Case' (Republic), Weak mystery film, lacking box-office names.

'Exclusive Story' (Metro). Publicity possibilities should put this one over, but it also has plenty excitement to sell. Franchot Tone, Madge Evans.

'Ki of Burlesque' (20th-Fox). ig time musical with production, material and cast making up for story shortcomings. Box office potentialities big.

'Dangerous Intrigue' (Col.) Ralph Bellamy and Fred Kohler lifting ordinary story into fair programmer classification. Good double program material.

'We're Only Human' (RKO). Weak as entertainment, mostly for the twinners.

'Charlie Chan's Secret' (20th-Fox). Above average Charlie Chan detective mystery, with Warner Oland and good cast.

'Hitch Hike Lady' (Rep.) Adventure comedy, geared to pop tastes.

'Ivory Handled Gun' (U). Typically exciting Buck Jones western.

'Murder of Dr. Harrigan' (WB). Mildly entertaining murder mystery along regulation lines that probably will do no better than mildly at box offices.

LEAVENWORTH CASE

Republic Pictures production and release. Features Donald Cook, Jean Rouverol, Maude Eburne, Warren Hymer, Norman Foster. Director, Lewis D. Collins. From original story by Anna Katharine Green; screen play, Albert DeMond and Sidney Sutherland; camera, Ernest Miller and Jack Marta. At Strand, Brooklyn, week Jan. 17, '36, on double bill. Running time, 60 mins.

Dr. Harwell	Donald Cook
Eleanore	Jean Rouverol
Bob	Norman Foster
Gloria	Erin O'Brien-Moore
Phoebe	Maude Eburne
O'Malley	Warren Hymer
Silas Leavenworth	Frank Sheridan
Henry Clavering	Gavin Gordon
Inspector Holmes	Clay Clement
Hudson	Ian Wolfe
Miss Owens	Peggy Stratford
Duke	Archie Robbins

What should have been an intriguing sleuth-murder mystery film wobbles badly through inept casting and slovenly direction. Net result is that 'The Leavenworth Case' is just another detective meller, lacking good draw names and destined for double programs. Story has nothing to go with Leavenworth or prisons, name being that of wealthy retired broker about which story revolves. It's taken from Anna Katharine Green's novel of some 50 years back.

This story, rated as the daddy of many subsequent detective mysticfiers, should have been a natural for the screen. Three points in Green story formula have the actual murderer announce the crime, spot a conversation or other artifice to throw suspicion on some other person, and lastly make the slayer last person to be suspected. Hadl screen adaptation and director held more faithfully to this outline, a happier result might have been forthcoming.

Instead, actual killer is spotted by audience almost immediately after the crime (though monkey he employs to turn loose gas is revealed later). After this faux pax, it's only a matter of how long the detectives will be permitted to ask stupid questions. Suspense is developed in two closing sequences, but it's too late.

After rich man has been mysteriously slain, a variated collection of relatives are held prisoners in the home, while police seek solution of crime. All done before in subsequent mystery stories, but numerous chances for originality offered here, and overlooked.

Norman Foster is cast as star sleuth. Entirely unsuited for such a role, figured to be outrunder character which makes it all the worse. He merely goes through his usual routine performance. Jean Rouverol is wasted in the romantic assignment, for she shows promise of going places. Erin O'Brien-Moore could have switched roles with her, and bettered the film.

Bright moments are contributed by Maude Eburne, as the oldish spinster who really solves the crime, and Warren Hymer, as the chief sleuth's side. Both are handed some rather absurd lines. Hearty laughs they wrest from their characters are due solely to their own abilities. Donald Cook as the fiendish doctor out after the old duffer's coin is satisfying enough.

EXCLUSIVE STORY

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer release of Lucien Hubbard production. Features Franchot Tone, Madge Evans, Stuart Erwin, Joseph Calleia. Directed by Geo. B. Seitz. Story, Martin Mooney; screenplay, Michael Fessler; camera, Lester White; editor, Conrad A. Nervig. At Capitol, N. Y., commencing Jan. 17, '36. Running time, 68 mins.

Dick Barton	Franchot Tone
Ann Devlin	Madge Evans
Tim Higgins	Stuart Erwin
Ace Acello	Joseph Calleia
Werther	Robert Barrat
Michael Devlin	Farrell MacDonald
Tess	Louise Henry
Mrs.	Margaret Irving
O'Neil	Wade Boteler
James Witherspoon, Sr.	Charles Trowbridge
James Witherspoon, Jr.	William Henry
City Editor	Raymond Hatton
Comos	J. Carol Naish

With Mooney first, or at least third page news and with his crime expose being touted in all the Hearst papers, this feature is rich in publicity angles, but in spite of some distinguished performances and some thrilling bits, it's grade B. Story starts off in a large way, but quickly drops into the personal angle becomes just another G-man story, without the G-man. And even this personal story lacks punch at times in spite of good situations. On its own it would not rate top b.o. classification but with its exploitation background much depends on what the local management does.

The introduction, showing how the numbers game (developed from the policy racket) was taken from the original Negro manipulators and swelled into a gigantic gambling monopoly is forgotten after a reel or two, but that first reel shows interestingly how the idea is snowballed when big gangsters move in on the smaller fry and make it a syndicate. Had it been kept to that strain the story might have gone places.

Instead, the story moves over to Michael Devlin, a kindly old grocer who has been forced to become a numbers agent, and his daughter, Ann. The latter interests a newspaper reporter, who first shies from her story but capitulates when she finds a rival to the gang, who is trying to horn in, propped against her doorway, dead. She phones the reporter and he takes up the crusade. After that it's the Devlins and the reporter, Higgins, against Acello and Werther, the man who took the racket from the Negroes and the man who took it from the little gangster.

Tone, the nominal hero, stays mostly behind the eight ball until a special act of devilment, the burning of a steamship, moves him to action. This is a bit far fetched and does not properly belong to the story save in its relation to the Devlin family. Werther sends a consignment of liquid fire to some Cuban rebels, in charge of Devlin. The Cuban police, suspicious, turn it back. The steamer catches fire on the return trip and the newspaper reporter and the young attorney fly from New York to off Cape Hatteras for pictures, which is something of a strain on the credulity. The whole idea is mercly a mechanical whip-up, but it provides some lively business in the newspaper office when the story breaks. At no point does the action flow fluently, and yet it has many high moments.

Acting honors go to Joseph Calleia as the minor gangster. He dominates the early action and gets the big scene at the finish. Second honors go to Stuart Erwin, playing the reporter straight, but with flashes of homely humor, mostly deriving from the dialog. There are times when he strongly suggests the late Will Rogers. Tone is just in to lend his name to the marquee. Any reasonably competent player could have taken the assignment. It is not a standout character, and the story is not written to give him a playup. J. Farrell MacDonald plays the grocer with rugged strength and Margaret Irving, as Devlin's wife, has only a bit but plays it delightfully. The direction is good and the production handsomely done, but the story is too disconnected to carry the interest along properly.

Madge Evans is agreeable but just the necessary girl interest.

'King of Burlesque' is a first rate musical in all departments except story, but the production cements managed to keep two steps ahead of the uninspired theme all the way so that its shortcomings won't be noticed. Through sightly staging, catchy music, a clever cast and shrewd dialog provided by producer Kenneth MacGowan, the picture has plenty in its favor and is the kind of entertainment that will dr w the sugar.

Perhaps it's because his material is stronger than usual, but whatever the reason, Jack Oakie has even more on the ball than in the past, and he makes off with the picture. As a life saver for weak moments, and without star billing, he's getting to be the most dependable player on the Coast, with an expert sense of comedy now and the No. 1 mugger of the period. Co-featured with Oakie are Warner Baxter, in a show producer role that's getting to be stock for him, and Alice Faye.

Productionally the picture doesn't go lavish until right under the finale, where the flash means most and accomplishes the feat of making 'Burlesque' seem bigger than it is. Up to then it's chiefly story, or rather swell dialog and good playing by the cast, with the story not to seriously regarded nor presented. Laughs range from snickers to yells, with a good share of both. Harry Tugend, Fred Allen's radio scripter, collabed on the screen play with Gene Markey, and James Seymour did the adaptation. Vina Delmar is credited for the story, but the story that developed is the one that Miss Delmar turned in, then the studio bought the author's name for billing purposes mainly. The story has taken a lot of pounding in other musicals in the past.

Warner Baxter is a burlesque producer who goes to Broadway and makes good with a series of musical shows. But he gets a society yen, falls for a Park avenue dame and goes broke finding out he was wrong. Oakie and Miss Faye are a couple of pals who come up with him from burlesque, and they secretly finance his comback through a prop angel. With Miss Faye it's also a matter of being in love.

For his comeback the producer lifts upon a new idea and quite an issue is unfortunately made of it. The 'new idea,' after much teasing via the dialog, turns out to be a combination cabaret-theatre, which is the same 'new idea' that Jolson conceived in 'Go Into Your Dance,' and which was far from new even then. But despite that, along with the foregone conclusion that the venture will be a success, the producer's comeback show gains increased effectiveness through the manner in which some clever musical people are worked into the finale splash.

As a telephone operator, office boy, elevator man and bootblack, respectively, Dixie Dunbar, Kenny Baker, Fats Waller and Gareth Joplin pester the producer for a chance to strut their stuff all through the picture. They get it in the finale, and their specialties are not only good in themselves but interesting through the specialists' previous connection with the plot. Also worked in in similar fashion for excellent returns is Nick Long, Jr., whose class hoofing highlights a sightly girl number. Miss Dunbar leads a boy number, and the diminutive buck dancer and songstress is a cutie in front of a line of extra tall gents. Kenny Baker from radio makes good in his vocal chances, and the dusky Waller gets plenty hot at the piano and while singing as additional background for Miss Dunbar. Joplin is a juve stepper and okay.

Among non-musical people in support roles for the book, Gregory Ratoff as a phoney millionaire, Mona Barrie as the brutally frank and therefore not dislikeable Park avenue gal and Arline Judge as Oakie's dumbbell sparring mate, are all fine. Miss Faye sings satisfactorily and looks well despite a too-fluffy coiffure. Her best is a novelty song skit in which Herbert Mundin plays straight.

Score by Jimmy McHugh and Ted Koehler includes 'I'm Shootin' High' and 'Lovely Lady,' and carries a sock all the way. In addition

Jack Yellen and Lew Pollack contributed a swingy novelty in 'I Love to Ride the Horses on a Merry-G-Round.'

Sammy Lee's dance numbers make good use of a limited number of people for mass effects and show some interesting new angles without resort to overheads. Sidney Lanfield's direction, as indicated by the pace of the picture and its general merit was splendid. Bige.

FRASQUITA

(AUSTRIAN MADE)
(OPERETTA)

Atlantis-Vienna production and DuWorld release. Stars Jarmila Novotna. Director, Carl Lamac. From Franz Lehar's operetta of same name; Lehar conducting the Vienna Philharmonic in musical accompaniment. No other credits available. At World, N. Y., Jan. 17, '36. Running time, 85 mins.

Frasquita	Jarmila Novotna
Harold	Hans Heinz Bollman
Hyppolit	Heinz Ruhmann
Count Elmert	Max Guistorff
Dolly, his daughter	Charlotte Daudert
Jaromir, Harold's servant	Hans Moser
Karl, Count Elmer's servant	Rudolph Carl
Juan	Franz Schafheitlin

(In German)

'Frasquita' will probably get some business on strength of title and music, but the importance of the picture is for Hollywood. Hollywood can use it. It's a natural for remake into English. Dressed with proper acting, directorial and productional talent, it could be an A-1 filmusical.

Taken from Lehar's pop operetta, a perusal of the original stage script shows Hollywood little to work with. But the Viennese producers who made this film knew something. They went about it properly. Misfortune is that, after they figured out how to make it they cast it almost uniformly with actors who either don't know how to act or don't fit their roles. No pace and many script deficiencies.

Stripped to its essentials, it is just a light musical comedy book about a boy and girl who are engaged to be married. But the girl really loves her bridegroom's best friend (who returns her sentiments in the matter) and the groom is really in love with another woman. After some mixups it's straightened out.

What makes it charming and entertaining is the deft touch with which it is handled, the clever comedy which is injected and the really excellent music. Not that those things are evident in the film. The music is there; the comedy and deft touch are hinted at and sketched for Hollywood (when it gets around to it) to work out and make really delectable.

Jarmila Novotna, in the title role, is one of the new school of s.a. opera divas. She made her rep with the Prague National Opera House and has an excellent voice. She's not the best actress in the world, but maybe that doesn't matter. She sings beautifully. Hans Heinz Bollman as the romantic juve is heavily Teutonic and not likely to make any hearts flutter either here or abroad. Heinz Ruhmann is the comic and working under wraps; he's trying to avoid mugging, thereby losing all value. Charlotte Daudert as Dolly, the heroine, is a beautiful blonde, but no Bernhardt as an actress.

The photography is only fair and the sound a bit under that. Kauf.

Dangerous Intrigue

Columbia production and release. Features Ralph Bellamy, Fred Kohler, Gloria Shea. Directed by David Selman. Story, Harold Shumate; screen play, Grace Neville; camera, George Meehan. At the Fox, Brooklyn, starting Jan. 17, '36, half of double bill. Running time, 59 mins.

Tony	Ralph Bellamy
Greta	Gloria Shea
Carol	Joan Perry
Brant	Fred Kohler
Joe Kosovic	Fredrik Vogeding
Dr. Miller	Edward Le Saint
Danny	George Billings
Dr. Wagner	Boyd Irwin, Sr.
Taxi Driver	Gene Morgan
Mr. Mitchell	Stanley Andrews

Some capable direction and acting has made this inexpensive production a fair programmer that should get its share of dual-bill business. Rather creaky vehicle, that of the failure who wanders to new surroundings and makes good. Title is no help, and there's not sufficient lift to name players.

Ralph Bellamy in 'Dangerous Intrigue' is a famous surgeon. Through no fault of his own, he is rated a flop by his society-minded fiancee. Attack of amnesia transports him to Scranton where he finds new hope in aiding injured workers in the Pennsy steel mills. Scranton residents may be amazed to see such an elaborate steel plant spotted in their front yards.

Film has usual heavy to out to wreck the steel works and take Ralph's life. It is only when the surgeon's skill saves his son's life that the villain sees the light. Idea, used on occasion before, is done with first-rate effect here.

Most laurels belong to Ralph Bellamy for his believable portrayal of surgeon though the villainous Fred Kohler runs him a close race. Bellamy has been in about every type of business and professional man of late. Gloria Shea does satisfying job as the Polish girl he courts in the steel mill town. Fredrik Vogeding, as her father, and George Billings, the plotting mill worker's son, do much to make picture capture more attention than story actually deserves. David Selman contributed slick directorial job. Wear.

WE'RE ONLY HUMAN

RKO release of Edward Kaufman production. Features Preston Foster, Jane Wyatt, James Gleason. Director, James Flood. From story, 'Husk,' by Thomas Walsh; adaptation, Rian James; film editor, Archie F. Marshek; camera, J. Roy Hunt. At Palace, N. Y. on double bill, week Jan. 17, '36. Running time, 67 mins.

Pete McCaffrey	Preston Foster
Sally	Jane Wyatt
Danny Walsh	James Gleason
Martin	Arthur Hohl
O'Brien	John Ariedge
Mrs. Walsh	Jane Darwell
Inspector Curran	Morgan Conway
Berger	Mischa Auer
Tony Ricci	Harold Huber
Anderson	Christian Rub
Mrs. Anderson	Rafaela Ottiano
Tommy	Delmar Watson
Grandma	Elsie Elsler
Morgan	Charles Wilson
Casey	James Donlan

'We're Only Human' is a police story built around a blustering and blundering cop who lost his courage and is degraded for the only kind of a finish this kind of a story could have. It offers nothing very original nor anythin which will raise it above double feature standards. Cast features Preston Foster as the detective sergeant, Jane Wyatt as a newspaper reporter and Jimmy Gleason as another cop.

Core of the story very simple and elementary. A cop single-handedly lands the leador of a gang of gunmen, permits him to escape on the way to Sing Sing and spends the rest of his time trying to effect a recapture. Girl is bodily tossed into the story and, much in the same manner, into the affections of the cop. In between it's friction with newspapers, girl's dissatisfaction with cop's manners and actions, kidnaping of the mother of a key witness and a good dcal of shooting. Picture just barely manages to maintain some suspense and keep its head far enough above the danger mark that would make an audience give it up.

Comedy injected into it is of superficial weight. Sympathetic interest for Preston Foster as the girl reporter never penetrates deeply. Toward the end the only real note struck in this direction is aroused by the unfortunate position an accountant and his family have gotten into as a result of knowledge of a shooting. Christian Rub, the bookkeeper who saw the killing, gives a swell performance as the hard-comical Swede, while Rafaela Ottiano as his wife also impresses.

Foster plays his role in cop fashion along hackneyed film lines. This is also true of Miss Wyatt, who seems to be the only person on her paper to handle big murder stories. Gleason doesn't have much as the cop who stops a bullet. Char.

Charlie Chan's Secret

Twentieth Century-Fox release of John Stone production. Features Warner Oland. Directed by Gordon Wiles. Based on character 'Charlie Chan,' created by Earl Derr Biggers; screen play and original story, Robert Ellis and Helen Logan, in collaboration with Joseph Hoffman; camera, Rudolph Mate. At Roxy, N. Y., week Jan. 17, '36. Running time, 72 mins.

Charlie Chan	Warner Oland
Alice Lowell	Rosina Lawrence
Dick Williams	Charles Quigley
Henrietta Crosman	Herself
Fred Gage	Edward Trevor
Janice Gage	Astrid Allwyn
Baxter	Herbert Mundin
Warren T. Phelps	Jonathan Hale
Ulrich	Egon Brecher
Carlotta	Gloria Roy
Morton	Irvin Miller
Professor	A. Edmund Carew
Harris	William Bailey

Warner Oland's new Charlie Chan story is easily the best of his recent screen efforts. It should more than please the Chan clientele and get satisfactory box office returns. Director and writers never overlooked bet in story development, with Henrietta Crosman and Herbert Mundin heading a well-balanced supporting cast.

As with all detective yarns framed around Earl Derr iggers' Oriental sleuth, Chan in this instance sets out to solve a baffling murder and to protect others from threatening doom. It all hingcs on the settlement of an estate, with virtually every person in the cast excepting the police and master detective suspected. That's a highly familiar film formula, but here it is made plausible through faithfulness to detail.

Customary feigned dumbness of Charlie Chan is never forced, though this characteristic is intelligently maintained here. In fact, it is this apparent weakness that brings about eventual downfall of the murderer.

After an essentially pondcrous beginning, Chan soon is at work attempting to put his finger on one of several who might have slain the son of a wealthy family. There's a pair of phoney crystal gazers, the family attorncy, the market losing son-in-law, the vengeful caretaker and wife-seeking news scribe—all set to profit by the young man's demise. And climax of mystery is the most powerful to be concocted for Charlie Chan story in some time. Figures as a halr-raiser but logical follow to the main climax.

Warner Oland turns in his customary skillful interpretation of the shrewd detective, but is not permitted to clutter up the action too much with wise Chinese-American proverbs. Whole film is strengthened by grand trouping job by Henrietta Crosman. Herbert Mundin again is a butler. As the frightened, involuntary assistant to the super sleuth, he provides his usual quota of rare comedy scenes.

Uniformly fine performances contributed by Rosina Lawrence, Charles Quigley, Edward Trevor, A. Edmund Carew and Gloria Roy. Gordon Wiles' direction deserves special mention because of way he handled cast without deviating from central story thread. Highly capable writing done by Robert Ellis and Helen Logan in collab with Joseph Hoffman. Wear.

JURY'S EVIDENCE

(BRITISH MADE)

London, Jan. 7.

British Lion production and release. Features Margaret Lockwood, Hartley Power. Directed by Ralph Ince. Scenario by Ian Dalrymple from screen play by Jack de Leon. Cameramen, George Stretton, Harry Rose. At the Palace theatre, London, Jan. 7, '36. Running time 71 mins.

Edgar Trent	Hartley Power
Betty Stanton	Margaret Lockwood
Mary Trent	Nora Swinburne
Philip	Sebastiah Shaw
Agatha	Jane Millican
Cyril	Patrick Ludlow
Crowther	Charles Paton
Ruby	Eve Gray
John Stanton	Frank Cellier
The Judge	W. E. Holloway
Hodson	Dick Francis
Geoffrey	Philip Strange
Murphy	Aubrey Fitzgerald

Capably produced and directed film representing great care with detail. Its success, or otherwise, will depend entirely upon whether the ordinary filmgoer assimilates the surprise finish, which seems to lack elucidation for the lowbrow.

Acting represents a larger percentage or histrionic ability than can be found in most plays or pictures. No sensational talent, but all competent.

Story opens with a man on trial for murdering his wife. Mixed jury retires with 11 for conviction and the foreman holding out for acquittal, on the ground the evidence is circumstantial. Foreman finally pleads with the other 11 to let him enact a story in which they will play the characters. This tale continues for an hour, and then picture is flashed back to the jury room, where the 11 still insist on convictions with the foreman, utterly exhausted, consenting to bow to their decision.

Only point in the evidence about which the jury are unconvinced is the prisoner's own tale of finding a valuable brooch in his wife's possession on returning home and, according to his tale, walking out on her, believing her unfaithful, and claiming he did not take it with him. He had volunteered the story of the brooch, and there is no evidence to prove she ever had one. At the finish, when the foreman of the jury rises to give the verdict to the court he cries out 'Not guilty,' to the consternation of the other 11 jurors; throws down the brooch and bumps himself off.

If this is clear, then the picture is an excellent programmer. Jolo.

(In Spanish)

'El 113' is the virgin effort of a new Spanish producing unit, Ece, and it's not bad. Despite its brevity, action is slow, like in all Spanish pix, although there is plenty of room for zipping it up. Technique not outstanding, although it must be remembered that technical facilities are not abundant in Spanish as yet. Strictly for the Spanish language market.

Yet Ernesto Vilches does an outstanding piece of work and he gets more closeups than Garbo.

Plot is complex and needs plenty of unwinding. It's about a heroic French soldier (Vilches) who stumbles accidently on the scene of a man shooting another. Assailant escapes and the dying victim charges Vilches with seeing to it that his daughter gets the wad of bills he carries and his fortune. Vilches, on a secret military mission which took him near his home leaves the cash with his wife. Assailant follows and, when the soldier leaves, snatches the roll and scrams, after killing the wife. Vilches is accused of the murder and is found guilty on his baby daughter's testimony that he had been home. He is sentenced to life at hard labor. Time passes, his daughter becomes the fiance of a wealthy constructor, he finds the man who killed his wife and his rep is cleared. Plus many intervening complications. No wonder that at times the thread of the yarn is lost.

Ece, headed by Manuel Herrera Oria, name theatrical producer and film distrib here, has the support of Catholic organizations to produce moral films. Zff.

HITCH HIKE LADY

Republic Pictures production and release. Features Alison Skipworth, Mae Clarke and Arthur Treacher. Directed by Aubrey Scotto. Supervised by Victor Zobel. Story, Wallace MacDonald; screen play, Gordon Higby and Lester Cole; camera, Ernest Miller and Jack Marta. At Fox, Brooklyn, week Jan. 17, '36, as half of double bill. Running time, 77 mins.

Best effort from Republic in a long time. Good entertainment on any double lay-out and should gain fair grosses in some houses soloing. Ordinary routine cross-country auto trip, interrupted by some tall hitchhiking, is deve'oped into an intriguing plot, with happy intermingling of humor and heart tugs.

Story is an achievement in conceived by Wallace MacDonald, former screen player. Add to this some polished performances by Alison Skipworth, Mae Clarke, Arthur Treacher, Warren Hymer, etc., plus Aubrey Scotto's megging, done with consummate intelligence.

At the close the payoff is implausible but it goes over o.k.

Several new slants injected into familiar story of poor English housekeeper who gains enough cash to come to U. S. in visit son. She is not aware that he is detained in San Quentin prison. This secret is carefully kept from her by the girl she meets on her jaunt cross the continent, by the lad who befriends both of them, and by the slick promoter and his tough crook pal. Continued belief that her son is doing well prompts this quartet to go to any extreme to keep truth from her.

Arthur Treacher as the slick gent with an easy English accent here whose final promoting job—a prize orange contest—enables him to promote happiness for the unknowing Englishwoman, is tops in his role. Alison Skipworth likewise is in her glory as the unsuspecting lady from England. Warren Hymer, the promoter's rough, crook partner, has one of those made-to-order roles. Mae Clark, out of pictures of late, is effective in the sole romantic role; likewise as attractive as ever. Jimmy Allison, young newspaper on the Hollywood scene, contributes probably his best effort to date. Remainder of cast equally fine. Wear.

Ivory Handled Gun

Universal Pictures production and release Stars Buck Jones. Directed by Ray Taylor. Story, Charles E. Barnes; continuity, Jack Neville; camera, Allen Thompson and H. Kirkpatrick. At Stanley, N. Y., as half double bill, Jan. 13-14, '36. Running time, 58 mins.

Buck Jones	Buck Jones
Paddy Moore	Charlotte Wynters
Wolverine Kid	Walter Miller
Bill Ward	Ward Bondale
Pike	Frank Rice
Pat Moore	Joseph Girard

'Ivory Handled Gun,' with Buck Jones, will picase where up-to-date hoss sagas are appreciated. Contains usual number of implausible situations and incredible stunts, but will get over with the western fans.

Revenge motif dominates. For a change, however, sheep are on the range instead of cattle but the usual thievery and plotting goes on. Numerous smart touches, and a bit of originality in the dialog.

Effort is made to show cowboys and rustlers as being not entirely dumb. Picture's weakest spots come when it attempts to go romantic.

Jones' voice turns in greatest rough-and-ready western characterization uncovered in horse operas for months. Head and shoulders above others here though support cast is satisfactory. Charlotte Wynters is welcome relief from usual sugary heroines of these pictures, though a slightly English accent is incongruous. Wear.

Murder of Dr. Harrigan

Warner Bros. production and release. Features Ray Linacre, Ricardo Cortez, Mary Astor, John Eldredge. Directed by Frank McDonald. Story, Mignon G. Eberhart; adaptation, Peter Milne and Sy Bartlett; film editor, William Clemens; camera, Arthur Todd. At Gloire, N. Y., week Jan. 13, '36. Running time, 67 mins.

Sally Keeler	Ray Linacre
George Lambert	Ricardo Cortez
Lillian Ash	Mary Astor
Pa Harrigan	John Eldredge
Lieut. Lamb	Joseph Crehan
Dr. Coate	Frank Reicher
Mrs. Harrigan	Arabella Kerry
Simon	Phillip Reed
Peter Melady	Robert Strange
Margaret Brody	Mary Treen
Ladd	Gordon Elliott
Jackson	Don Barclay
Wentworth	Johnny Arthur
Ina	Joan Blair

A murder mystery that's too routine to inspire more than casual audience interest. It's along formula lines from the throat of murder down to solution of the murder, plus another death. No names in the cast for marquee attention and doubtful if results will be any better than lukewarm.

Most of the action, as usual, rounds efforts of police to pin guilt upon a flock of persons after a lot of humdrum questioning. As usual, also, everyone looks suspicious except the cops.

Picture carries fair romantic interest with Ricardo Cortez and Kay Linaker paired as sweethearts. Cortez plays a new role, while Miss Linaker plays his favorite nurse. Virtually all the action is in a hospital, whose founder suddenly disappears while on his way to the operating room. The doctor who's to perform an operation on him, using a substitute for ether, is murdered and the patient, scared to death, goes to the morgue in place of another body. It appears the founder of the hospital was in danger because he held the formula to the new anaesthetic, while the doctor who was killed claimed it was partly his.

Another doctor, an orderly, several nurses, the boy friend of the murdered doctor's wife and the wife herself all may have had a motive for the murder. The orderly is it in the end.

Miss Linaker gives a good performance opposite Cortez, whose work is standard, while Mary Astor, as another nurse, proves an agreeable cast selection. John Eldredge okay as a doctor who in the hospital seemed to be afraid of for unexplained reasons. Joseph Crehan okay as a detective lieutenant. Char.

Daredevils of Earth

(BRITISH MADE)

Hallmark production, independently released in U. S. Features Ida Lupino, Cyril McLaglen, John Loder, with Marie Ault, Moore Marriott, George Merritt, Sam Wilkinson, Ginger Lees. Directed by Bernard Vorhaus. At Park, N. Y., half of double bill three days, Jan. 17-19, '36. Running time, 57 mins.

Plffling stuff. Ida Lupino is in America now, if that could mean something. As a keen Cyril McLaglen is not very effective. John Loder is an obvious heavy. The story is sluggish, sometimes silly and often incoherent.

McLaglen is big Bill Summers, a dirt track motorcycle racing champ and a ladies' man. When Loder jams Miss Lupino, McLaglen cracks him up on the track. For that McLaglen is barred by the racing stewards.

Plenty of library newsreel shots of crowds and racing scenes, not very clear but fair enough. han.

'MARCH OF TIME' (No. 10)
Three Subjects
20 Mins.
Center, New York.
Radio

This release, No. 10 of the series, starts the second year for the produced newsreel compiled and edited by the magazine Time. In its first 12 months the reel set a high standard for itself, as entertainment and a new approach to the dramatization of current events. The Time staff needs only to continue applying its expert sense of news values to maintain the pace.

No. 10 consists of three subjects, two of them timely enough to classify as news matter, and the third an interesting library item.

Expedition of Hawaiian youths to a chain of barren islands in the Pacific, under direction of the U. S. Department of Commerce, for the purpose of charting weather conditions for the benefit of trans-oceanic aviation, is the leader. Well done.

'Monsieur de Paris,' chief executioner of France, is shown practising his gruesome occupation, which he inherited from his father and which has relegated him to the life of an outcast. There's no action in the item, but lots of drama.

The TVA problem is broadly treated from both viewpoints for the closer. This certainly comes under the heading of news, so much so that the anticipated Supreme Court decision on the project, if coming this week or next, may place this 'March of Time' in the category of yesterday's newspaper. However, no such informative coverage of TVA has been presented by the press or the screen until now. Time gives it short, compact, clear treatment, with the pertinent issues clearly drawn, both sides given an equal break. All in all, a hot but dry current topic covered in remarkably interesting fashion. Bige.

One of the Technicolor shorts, with excellent color sense on the faces. Radio Rogues are featured, but there are a number of vaudeville numbers and a line of attractively costumed bathing beauties, not to mention a dozen or so film notables supposed to be sunning themselves at this Hollywood resort. They are introduced by Reginald Denny with his best English accent and a highly artificial manner. Good sight stuff for a filler-inner, but that's about its tons. Ohic.

WOR's Vaude Try on New Amsterdam Roof—It's Almost a Barn Dance

WOR, New York, took its first dip into the vaude presentation business Saturday night (18), using the 800-seater atop the New Amsterdam theatre in Times Square for what the station calls an 'experiment.' Four weekends have been designated as the trial period. With the admission pegged at 85c. and the house pretty well papered, there were lots of empty seats.

Opening bill made a curious hodge-podge of entertainment. The station went far afield from its original intention of transporting to Broadway the idea that has kept the WLS Barn Dance going for almost four years at the Eighth St. theatre in Chicago. The hillbilly angle, which has proved a gold mine for WLS, became a minor note in the case of WOR. What the latter unlimbered was a so-so collection of vaude acts supplemented by some of WOR's regular talent and a hillbilly troupe.

'At the Opry House' is the billing for this Saturday night mixture, and to carry out the opry house idea the station's impresarios have surrounded the stage with a barn set and included among the props some wagonwheels, harnesses and horse-blankets. Proceedings were split in three parts, the first of which took in the vaude show which ran an hour and 15 minutes. Second section consisted of the regular Saturday night broadcast by Hal Halloran's hillbilly troupe, which lasted half an hour, while the showing of some old newsreel clips accounted for the finale. It started at 9:15.

WOR rates as among New York's most conservative and dignified stations, with this attitude readily attributed to the fact that the outlet is owned and operated by the Macy and Bamberger department store interests. Under these circumstances, some of the stuff that took place during the vaude phase of the evening must have struck the station's Jersey suburban following as somewhat offbeat. Particularly the exhibition of the can-can by eight dames who looked and acted as though they had never been on a stage before. This octet gave the dance all they had, including torn rompers and stockings.

Another contribution that may have caused embarrassment among the Jersey contingent was some of the gags that Art Frank, doing his a.k. hick routine, exchanged with his girl feed. Frank's patter for the most part resolved around the theme of virility. How the Jerseyites dealt with the subject was evident in the fact that he didn't have them coming his way until he swung from the talk into the dancing portion of his act.

Frank did a fairsome job at m.c.-ing the vaude end of the bill, taking over this assignment shortly after the opening of the show from Halloran. Vaude bill had Fields, Smith and Fields mixing pratt falls with rough and tumble clowning, Bert Hodge doing the character of a village cutup in song and facial callisthenics, Edna Murphy in a kick and tap routine, Johnny Burke dishing out his drattee routine, Ted Meza scoring big with impression of an inebriate on rubberlegs and Don Wardell and Dorothy Dade in a acrobatic adagio flingeroo which had the customers wondering whether the act would finish without mishap. Of the group regularly allied with a WOR mike, Pauline Alpert, pianiste, and Sid Gary, baritone, garnered the biggest reception, while Eleanor Sherry's vocalising on Tin Pan Alley themes got over nicely.

Hillbilly interludes were framed, in addition to Halloran, around Tex Fletcher, Zeb Turney, Chuck Cook, the Rambling Around Quartet, and Don Carney, WOR's 'Uncle Don,' who did a hick monolog. Odec.

MUSIC HALL, N. Y.

In order to get the proper turnover this week on the Eddie Cantor picture, 'Strike Me Pink,' first Cantor starrer to play here, the stage portion, in three scenes, has been cut to 28 minutes. It could be even shorter for better results, but as standing at just under a half hour it is adequate platform salad to go with the main dish on the screen.

Not much is needed behind the foots, including comedy, with Cantor all over the screen dishing out plenty. This was apparently sensed in working out something for the stage that would do. Leon Leonidoff's show is anything but pretentious. It is also anything but sockful, though having enough to satisfy.

Show is billed as 'Winter Cruise,' a Music Hall travelog. The three portions are backgrounded in Spain, Italy and Morocco. A drop serves to effectively suggest travel and the countries being visited, with film of a boat and local sights projected onto the drop. Boat looks like the Normandie from the shots used.

First set, best of the three, is that of a tavern in Spain. It isn't expensive looking but makes an impressive sight because of its wide sweep on the stage. Unless one refers to the program, however, it isn't easy to see that this is a tavern. There are a couple of tables and a lot of people around but no service. Pilar Calvo, Consuelo Moreno, Luis Maravillas, Hilda Eckler, Nicholas Daks and the ballet figure in the opening act. Spanish solos, a dance team and other specialities are included. The ballet group does a good castanet routine. The Spanish specialty talent is doubling from El Chico, Village nitery.

In Italy it's the Blue Grotto, a favorite spot for the tourists, with Viola Philo, Edwina Eustis and the house glee club in boats. Lighting creates a striking picture, effects of water and the entrance to the grotto heightening the effect of the simple number. Soprano work very effectively leading the choral singing.

For the close, with set that of a fort in Morocco, the well-trained Russell Markert line, Rockettes, go to work. They become native soldiers, carrying guns and wearing hoods and cloaks. The girls do a tricky number very cleverly and for a finish join up with the ballet group for total of 64 girls. This has been done before but difficult to weld the two and get the proper results. Besides which a ballet girl is not a Rockette and numbers together would have to be engineered to fit both. As many as 64 girls creates an effective picture on the big stage here, though not so easy to handle. Six Abdulas, tumbling act, also in the final number.

Business Thursday night on last show virtually capacity. Char.

EMBASSY, N. Y.

(NEWSREELS)

Though the house makes the Arkansas plane tragedy the No. 1 item in the reelof, the latest clips on the Hauptmann case easily capture top dramatic interest. In all, the week's film melange composes an exceptionally well-edited bill, with the spot news sparse but impressive and the magazine bits running above par in brightness and variety of subjects.

Pathe does the reporting of the Arkansas air transport crash which took 17 lives. The scene is rapidly scanned and the story is made poignant without any gruesome close-ups of the victims. Accompanying shots of the twisted chunks of the wreckage is an unharrowing flow of comment, which fades out on the remark that through study of this debris it is hoped that the Government will be able to determine the cause of the crash and find ways of making commercial flying safer.

Effectively linked together for the telling of the past week's chapter in the Jersey cause celebre are exclusive but separate interviews with Mrs. Hauptman and Dr. Condon. Hearst contributing the first and Paramount the latter, and divers scenes in Gov. Hoffman's office and outside the Trenton prison following the issuance of the 30-day reprieve. Paramount also contributed these latter episodes. In the office interview the governor declared that a great doubt existed as to certain phases of the case and that a great sense of duty had actuated the reprieve, while the quizzing of Jafsie adds nothing new to the general knowledge of the case. Dr. Condon asserts that he knew of no new evidence that should stay Hauptmann's execution, that he was sure that no one but Hauptmann had been connected with the case, and that nothing had occurred since the trial to change this opinion. Interview with Mrs. Hauptmann brings merely a reaffirmation of her belief in her husband's complete innocence.

In the disaster department Hearst projects an airplane shot of the vessel which sunk off Oregon during the recent northern Pacific storm with a loss of 34 men, while Paramount and Pathe combine to disclose the floods that have been sweeping farmlands in the south of France and towns just outside of London. From Universal comes a pictorial narrative of an ice jam and its thawing with the damages from floods easily foreseen, while Fox tops the spectacular division of the news parade with a strip showing U. S. Army planes bombing a Hawaiian lava flow to divert it from doing damage to the city of Hilo's water supply.

Howard Hughes' transcontinental jump in nine hours and 27 minutes has its aftermath in an interview recorded by Hearst, Universal discloses pictures of a clash between Chinese students and the Jap-backed authorities in the city of Peiping, and Pathe brings to the screen the story of America's own 'Town of the Living Dead.' In recalling the tragedy that has befallen scores of workers who helped cut through the West Virginian tunnel, the newsreel presents interviews with a silicosis victim who is still a jump ahead of death, a local doctor who had warned the construction company against the malady and Congressman Marcantonio, who expresses his determination to find out who was responsible for the wholesale deaths and see that the guilty are punished.

Clips having political flavor consist of Paramount's pickup of comment on the strikeout of the AAA by the Supreme Court and predictions of what next for the farmer and Pathe's library and statistical potpourri on the latest phase of the soldiers bonus issue. For comedy relief there's Lew Lehr's in two click dialectic bits involving a fat woman and a frolicsome pooch, the highjinks of a couple baboons and Fox's projection of the two clowning grunters, Managoff and Kalmikoff. Odec.

Cirque Medrano, Paris

Paris, Jan. 11.

As an antidote to the post-holiday slump, R. and J. Medrano have cooked up an elaborate production, a sort of parody revue which they call a 'clownerie,' and which takes up the entire second half of their current ring show. It's staged by a local American, Floyd duPont; has an American star dancer, Barbara La May, and is based largely on the work of Bluebell's line of 20 girls from the Pramount. Plus some good local names and the Medrano's seven staff clowns.

Idea may have been inspired by Eddie Cantor in 'Roman Scandals,' for the fantasy involves a dream by two clowns, Rhum and Manetti, that they have been transported to ancient Rome. They awake to find everyone, including the ringmaster, Loyal, dressed in togas.

Barbara La May, long a local favorite, plays a beautiful captive, role into which her contortionist slave dance fits well. Charles Rigoulot, strong man, does a gladiatorial allin wrestling number, and a curious specimen, named Mac Norton (a Frenchman) swallows live frogs and goldfish and then produces them again, for the benefit of clowns Recordier and Boullcot as Nero and Octavia.

Extraordinary expense (for this spot) in costumes by Zanel, and a grand staircase (which folds up to let the clowns Rhum slide down on his derriere for a laugh) give the show a production air, but at the same time it retains the tone of improvisation, which is the feature of French talking clown work.

First part of the program is climaxed by the Four Akimotos, fine Japanese acro troupe, including one first-class equilibrist, who closes the number with a backwards slide down an inclined rope. Also a couple of fast little English girl acrobats, Lily Avon and Dorothy Vale, whose ring, rope and iron jaw work is as competent as any seen here in a long while. There's a nine-year old trick cyclist, Jackie Ballan, who does an entire act by himself, and Barbara La May does her fan dance with a brassiere and trunks.

ORIENTAL, CHI

Chicago, Jan. 18.

In line with the recent policy of Balaban & Katz to train the best available talent on the box-office in a campaign to line up a string of profits before Lent gets underway, the Oriental has booked a parade of names from radio, screen and vaude. Currently the house reached back into the files and pulled the Three Stooges (Howard, Fine and Howard) into town for a repeat after showing here just four months ago for two bang-up weeks.

Maybe it wasn't such a smart move on the part of B. & K. for Howard, Fine and Howard, who are hurting themselves in this town, where they have been dynamite for the past three years. They're doing exactly the same act that they did here for two weeks. Not a line has been changed. The result is a letdown.

Only four acts on the bill, the running time being padded out neatly by the Dorothy Hild dancers in two excellent routines and Mark Fisher as m.c. and songster. In the deuce spot after the Hild dancers opened the show come Barr and Estes in an eccentric dancing act that is one of the two real clicks of the bill. An act with a clever dancing plan, an idea and worked out to good results by the hard-working man and woman. Can hold a spot farther down in the bill. Man could work out his comedy pantomime bit somewhat stronger, for his present anxiety to give it speed is hurting the final results of the bit.

Art Tatum, blind pianist, doubles to the stage from the Three Deuces cafe, and halts proceedings with his whirlwind pianolog. All popular medleys and played with a skill and variety of attack that sells.

Show has been going great after the Hild dancers, Barr and Estes, Art Tatum, but then along comes Pinky Lee and Company, an act that never gets started. Lee needs material desperately. Girl contributes a good Russian number and Lee himself milks the audience at the end with his own Russian stepping. Act lacks an idea.

Picture, 'It's In the Air' (MG). Business okay at the last show Friday. Gold.

STATE, N. Y.

Ronald Colman has his head chopped off as the finale to Metro's 'Tale of Two Cities.' Helping the State audience recover from this bit of drama, George Givot and Frank Conville indulge in funny sayings and comic conduct. Givot is still the Greek ambassador, but billed this week as a 'new film sensation' due to his debut in 'Riffraff.' The billing indicates that Loew is ever impressionable to what happens in Metro pictures.

Three DeLong Sisters, uncommonly slender for girl acrobats, open. Theirs is a superior turn by any system of measurement. Neat in appearance and in performance, they execute a variety of feats with a load of finesse.

Conville's comedy is accumulative. He starts quietly and acquires velocity. Blonde assistant provides the right foiling. By the time the turn has unraveled its full length the audience is nicely convinced that it's all pretty agreeable entertainment.

Not so certain is the audience about Kingsley and Case (New Acts) who occupy the third niche. They have lately been on the radio. Offer two songs here and get a weak nod-off.

Givot's nicely timed delivery of his garbled dialect rings up the laughs with steady regularity all the way. He converts a demand for an encore into an introduction of Leon Navara's musical session, which closes. Later turn is presided over by one of the graduates of the old m.c. epoch in show biz who has survived and prospered. Navara is okay on the spieling, although making no passes whatever at comedy. His own individual contribution is a burning-hot piano with a left hand that spells showmanship in bringing forth the plaudits. He has Dawn and Darlo for ballroom adagio and Chester Fredericks for comedy relief. Both specialties click. Male half of the twosome is a wiry gent underneath his deceptively slight stature and tosses the girl about with an assortment of lifts that are unusual. Land.

National, Louisville

Louisville, Jan. 17.

National this week has a lineup of acts which go through their paces with a minimum of stalling and lost motion.

Al Aldridge, a pleasing emcee in tails, introes the turns, doing his stint first. He batons for the stage band, this week the house band augmented by Myra and her mystery band, consisting of five musicians. Aldridge indulges in some rubberleg terps, after which he settles down to his job of presenting the acts and waving baton.

Euhl and Odessa slip on for some stepping, fast and snappy and make way for Winnie Mack, capable young acrobatic dancer. Nothing out of the routine for that type of work, but plenty good enough. Alexander Bros. and Evelyn, are in for some dextrous handling of tennis balls, and man of the act has some nice tricks which he does in a nonchalant manner.

A quartet of singing and dancing girls, the McNally Sisters, next out for some close harmony to open. Their voices are small, and with no p.a. system to help out, they couldn't be heard beyond the fourth row. Girls then come back for a nice routine of precision stepping, which sends them off to good applause. Seems like old home week, for the girls bob up every now and then, first at an Indiana night club, and this is second time th y have appeared on vaude bill at this house. Act is okay for floor show purposes, but not sufficiently strong for here.

George Lovett, with Georgia Templeton, and Myra and band headline the bill. Lovett circulates slips of paper through the audience, on which they are requested to write any musical title. Blindfolded violinist and pianist on stage, assisted by sax, trumpet and drums, then play the selections, or a few bars of the piece requested. Lovett presents the act in a showmanly way, garnering several legitimate laughs while making his rounds of the audience. Similar to the standard Mercedes turn, which uses a piano.

Following is Tyler and St. Claire, mixed team, who double on a marimbaphone, playing pops and 'Hungarian Rhapsody' with equal ease. Questions asked by the femme partner are answered by the man by playing on the instrument, getting some laughs.

Log Cabin Boys, from a local radio station, are usual hillbilly combo, with leader Frankie Moore, affecting a nasal drawl, which patently sounds a false note. Moore, from Chicago's South Side hasn't been in Kaintuk long enough to acquire the mountaineer's distinctive accent, but the rest of his troupe seem to be the McCoy. Work about 20 minutes, with two femmes garnering the applause. Nasal singing and guitar twanging all left 'em sitting on their hands.

Present bill in for four days, with balance of week double features. Lower floor well filled first show Friday. Feature 'Rip Roaring Riley' (Puritan), plus Universal news. Wiede.

SHEA'S, TORONTO

Toronto, Jan. 18.

Trendel is the headliner this week, and the Swede dialectician gets over on personality, but should find himself a writer. He's been out of the public eye a long time, and his present material doesn't help. Flo Burt is his side-kick, and really carries the act. She gets over without any difficulty and whams in her Garbo impersonation. And Brendel's burlesque fan dance should be dropped; it's been done too often in these parts recently.

Harry Anger's presentation, which ran 74 mins. when caught, but is to be cut down on time, opens on a 'Street Scene' layout in full stage, with everyone on as spectators for the Al Libby and Betty bicycle act. Balancing and head-to-head stands put this over, acrobatics appearing particularly dangerous. Bobby Bernard trails in 'one' on the p. a. system for a pop medley and then clinches with his 'Dusty Shoes' number complete with histrionics. It's dramatic.

Then the line for a tap, half the girls in masculine attire. Leads up to Raymond Wilbert for his hoop routine, easy stage presence and chatter effectively selling the act. The Brendel influence seen in the appearance of the Royal Swedish Bell Ringers, sub-billed. No trouble in scoring. Then Frank and Pete Trado for interruptions and face-slapping, clinching with their audience impersonations and two-man mount dance routine.

Line opens second half with a waltz ballet in white and silver costumes, Jeanette Hackett trailing with a wand bolero patterned on Loie Fuller's flame dance, but done without the illuminated pedestal. Butterfly effect is carried out in white chiffon draperies, and the blonde dancer has this and that to accentuate the grace of the dance. With line backgrounding, it makes a nice effect, particularly in the blue lighting. Then Brendel and Burt, with line girls in crimson scanties and helmets out for a hot finish and everyone on stage for curtain. Troupe comes down the right aisle and clambers over the feet and knees of the front-row customers to get on stage. This should be changed. No reason why they can't use the traverse aisle and then up the steps to the stage without annoying the payees. Full stage set for finale didn't arrive in time for closing show opening night, and everything was done in front of the drapes.

Nice biz and looks like a fair week. Feature, 'Annie Oakley' (RKO). McStay.

STANLEY, PITTS.

Pittsburgh, Jan. 17.

Plenty of marquee t.n.t. this week, with Bebe Daniels, Ben Lyon and Toby Wing for stage names and Lily Pons in the flicker. Another b.o. McCoy locally is fat and funny Johnny Perkins, who m.c.'s the layout and turns in his slickest job around here in some time. Perkins developed into more than just a moderate draw last winter during a four months run at the Alvin and that he's not been forgotten was indicated when he walked out cold at opening performance to a rich hand.

Although management has labeled presentation 'Hollywood on Parade' for obvious reasons, it's the non-Hollywood Perkins to principally delivers, working hard and helpful every time he's needed most. Miss Wing, who looks like a million, can thank him for making a little something out of her turn since he fixes her up at the start with some old but serviceable patter and then pulls her back again after she's slipped with two tunes in so-so voice.

Miss Daniels, even more comely off screen than on, and Lyon have a trifling sketch that will show them to better advantage when it's polished a bit. Right now it's somewhat uneven. For a start they step out for what's supposed to be a radio broadcast, with some satire directed at corny commercial plugs and then while Miss Daniels changes into her 'Rio Rita' gown Lyon wastes a few minutes reading some of the usual fan 'letters,' gagged for laughs. It's pretty familiar stuff and a weak filler for the act. Seems they could find something better for this spot. Miss Daniels' delivery of 'Rio Rita' okay and she winds up doing a Spanish number while tossing violets into audience. They're a personable couple, ingratiating and attractive.

Opening has Geraldine and Joe, two youngsters with nimble feet, on together at first, then back individually and doubling again for hoke adagio, with boy in wig and ballet skirt for a finish. Brisk turn but last number isn't so hot and might wisely be eliminated. They're followed by Miss Wing and poor spotting brings on Ruth Petty at film ingenue's heels. Two partly-vocal turns in row does neither of them any good. Miss Petty has first-rate set of pipes and real stage presence, which she shows off advantageously in few minutes of crossfire with Perkins, but easier delivery would give her songs more sock.

After Miss Daniels and Lyon, pair of expert acrobats, Park and Cliff-ford, trot on for some high class strong arm stuff and then Perkins rounds out an active afternoon by doing a trick or two with them at curtain. It's an always sure-fire stunt, particularly when the outsider is of Perkins' proportions.

First show ran overboard on time, about 75 minutes, and elimination of quarter-hour or so should make loads of difference. Dave Broudy's orchestra on stage, moving up from pit after overture, with conductor in for several dialog spots in the familiar vein of vaude's two-a-day era.

Picture 'I Dream Too Much' (RKO) and snowstorm crimped biz, although line-up was strong enough to attract full downstairs and quarter balcony at opening despite weather. Cohen.

ROXY, N. Y.

No big names in new stage show at the Roxy but good, smooth entertainment fore and aft. If anything, bill goes in for more spectacular, eye-filling build-up of Gae Foster girls, regulation line here. Routines more colorful and better done, too. Mildred Patterson steps from usual spot in line to do neat acrobatic routine perched on high pedestal.

Fred Allen's amateur hour contributes two turns because recent broadcast resulted in tie for laurels. One is Gertrude Goldy, black-haired miss, who gives plenty of lilt to 'Music Goes Round 'n' Round.' She virtually tied for applause here, too, with Gibey Sisters (Frances, Wanda and Ann), whose close harmony contribution is 'You Are My Lucky Star.' Both contestants on briefly and both show promise.

Opening is with Capt. Proske's tigers and lions, one of top-notch animal acts currently indoors. Introduced here with whole line of Foster girls draped around circular iron cage (with wild beasts absent). Regular tricks by cats but without stalling.

Comedy and knockabout acrobatics and hand balancing by Three Nonchalants keep the ball rolling. These boys, who've been around enough to know the ropes, climax with a nifty triple build-up. Ross and Stone, with latter's sleepy stuff going great at this house, on next to close. Combination of Ross' classy piping and ivory massaging and the blonde partner's high kicking muy bueno for the auditors. Shayne and Armstrong, acro-ballroom stepping team, worked into final Foster girl appearance. Satisfying.

Freddy Mack, orchestra leader, acts as emsee for entire proceedings, doing swell job. Whole show should get more than its share of juvenile patronage, especially with the prevailing 15c fee for youngsters.

Feature is 'Charlie Chan's Secret' (20th), while shorts are 'Stranger Than Fiction' (Universal), Universal Newsreel and 'On Ice,' Mickey Mouse cartoon (UA). Wear.

LOEW'S, MONTREAL

Montreal, Jan. 18.

Sub-zero weather and bitter winds couldn't keep 'em away from 'Music Goes Round and Round Revue' at Loew's currently, with all seats filled opening night Friday (17).

Prez has minimum dancing effects, depending on smart patter, clowning and novel sunts for success. Al Gerson's orchestra does a lot towards snapping up the show. Girl line starts with backflipping and leapfrogging in flowered pajamas, variation to usual routine. Reynolds and White, headliners, clown through acrobatics to a good hand, stepping up show to speed that is maintained almost to the end. Followed by Smart Set Foursome in tails and evening gowns crooning into mike. Girls are lookers but act slows up show to some extent. Ward, Pinky and Terry, tumblers, put on a burst of speed and get an earned first call of evening in good acrobatics, taps and knockabouts with slow photography effects that have crowd on their feet.

Girl line in silver transparencies against black drop and lighted from rear are background for tall blonde in black who taps and backflips to another good hand, mainly on looks. Johnny Hyman follows with his clever work on blackboard, pattered smartly and wins good audience reception that would have been bettered if he hadn't mentioned Taschereau to end his act. Taschereau is premier of province and not too popular in this city.

Goodrich and Schaefer, knockabout instrumentalists, play all sorts and sizes and, using electric and fireworks effects, have the fans excited from start, building up to surprise finish (when one of them turns out to be femme. This earns a couple of curtain calls, femme returning to take call and play violin.

Tall blonde returns for taps and backflips before girl line and the foursome croon 'Round and Round' with girl line as chorus and going into dance. Rest of acts file down theatre through audience for finale and curtain to 65-minute show.

'Annie Oakley' (RKO) and 'No Ransom' (Emp) on screen. Lane.

PARAMOUNT, L. A.

Los Angeles, Jan. 16.

Herman Timberg and company head the stage bill along with Al Lyons' orchestra, in for a third consecutive week, but it takes Etta Moten, who did the 'Carioca' number in 'Flying Down to Rio,' to nab top honors with her rendition of 'The Glory Road.'

It is a difficult song for a woman, but Miss Moten, introduced by Lyons as the 'brown thrush of filmdom,' presents it in a truly capable manner, and was recalled for four encores at the second show.

Fanchonettes, good as usual, open show with an Americanized Swiss dance routine with taps predominating. Band is behind scrim at opening, but moves up front for Bob Rogers, tenor in the band. Nick Cochrane follows with a comical ditty. He repeats with one chorus of 'Round and Around,' which he did the week previously with Judy Starr. Miss Starr had to leave the band after figuring in auto accident. Cochrane didn't do so good alone, but he does play a wicked trumpet.

Joyce White is next with a tap-song number, which could be hot, but isn't. Lyons outfit then swings into 'Dinner for One, Please, James,' with leader doing vocal chorus.

Timberg entourage with his son, now billed as Tim Herbert, and Audrey Parker follow, with everything landing.

Fanchonettes return to do a butterfly number with Rogers vocalizing. Dance, staged personally by Fanchon, features flower-opening sequences used so many times in films.

'Bride Comes Home' (Par), Grantland Rice sportlight, Popeye and newsreel complete the bill. Hane.

ORPHEUM, LINCOLN

Lincoln, Jan. 18.

Very short on talent, this show was likewise short by considerable margin of entertaining the few customers lured in through the week-end snows. In spite of the fact that it runs more than 50 minutes, largely due to the headlining Rudy Bundy band, it could have been more happily done in less time. For the first time in some weeks the house standby is in the pit.

Band, with Bundy in front, takes the stage in full when the traveler opens and it's for 'Music Goes Round' which features Al Kollat, who wades adenoidally through it with only minor applause success. Vaude starts with the Mah Jong Trio, an Oriental novelty dancing threesome.—Act and band seemed still at rehearsal on this second show until the turn is half over, when it begins clicking. One of the girls is a clever dancer and the male member does some tough splits.

Bundy is featured at a quartet of horns next, wherein the stunts he saw daily as a member of the Milt Britton-Benny Meroff school of nuttery, creep in. As Meroff comes out to stunt with a flock of instruments, so does Bundy, only Meroff is able to sell it. Kollat tries the fall off the stand, etc., but it's sour. Wright and Kelsey, who have a new horse blanket for their old 'Spark Plug' act, play horsey next. Like the livery stable, this horse business has long since worn its day.

Gracie White, buxom blonde, is called to the mike for a whirl at 'I'm in the Mood for Love,' but it goes flat. Gracie has no life, and this tune is dragged to pieces. She and Kollat take the spot soon after in a medley and sing a pair of pop tunes, still negative.

Kollat, who does yeoman service as the band's stunt man, tries again in pseudo comedy with 'Here Comes the British.' Ray Vaughn, who has a novelty xylophone act, is next to close. He plays the traditional numbers, then for an encore brings out some variously filled liquor bottles on which he bangs out some tunes. His St. Vitus tactics detract from an otherwise very fair turn. Bundy and his clarinet close.

Time is 53 minutes, but seemed longer. Pic, 'Forbidden Heaven' (Rep) and biz slow, partly due to the heaviest snows in four years. Barney.

JEFFERSON, N. Y.

This is the nabe where the audiences talk back to the actors. But that's something of a healthy sign for vaude in these parts—it hasn't been often lately that audiences have even been within screaming distance of actors around 14th street. The Jeff resumed five-act bills on first-halves only a few weeks ago. Previous to that, for more than a year there wasn't a variety house in the city below 23d street.

This is also the type of house where early-comers save seats for relatives and friends, and all of the latter must've showed up Friday evening. The house was quite filled just before the start of the last show, with 'Bad Boy' (Fox) drawing from the screen end and a nicely blended bill draughting from the stage side.

Freddie Lightner, next-to-closing, laid himself wide open for the audience comics, most of them spotted on the shelf and upper boxes, but pulled past them without casualties. With Roscella in support, the hokist got the crowd fairly quickly, though his tendency to play to the pit hurts his score. He's also building himself up as the first to take from Berle instead of being on the losing side. He's using one of Milton's cheesest gags.

Another turn that glove-fits this nabe is the trey-spotted Zeb Carver and Folks (5), mixed hill-billy act that came rather late in the cycle, but almost sure-fire here. Foreigners make up a good portion of the residents around the Jeff, and a sight act is always safe. Carver's turn is chiefly novelty musical and singing, but hoked plenty. The Kitaros, two men and woman, open this show, and their risley juggling, also sight, brings them an unusually strong reception for this type of an act.

Another thing Jeff audiences demand is s.a., and there's enough women in the Grace DuFaye closing act not to mention the deucer. Alice Dawn, to satisfy the tastes of these parts. Miss Dawn is a nasal torcher who worships the mike, but the crowd here called her back for an encore. Miss DuFaye's acro dancing in her nicely mounted act is received well, with the same going for the femme challenge-hoofing trio in her support. Boy who hoofs on the prop piano also got over.

Layout makes it in an hour flat. Scho.

CENTURY, BALTO

Baltimore, Jan. 17.

This week's show is at least 80% vocal. Two of the turns are singing singles while two others contain large portions devoted to larynx unleashings. Opening act is Llazeed Arabs.

Deuce detailed to El Gary, winner of series of 13 commercial (brewery) half-hours over WBAL. A local lad, Gary is getting $200 for this date, half of which is being paid by the radio sponsor of contest he won, along with the title of 'Maryland's most popular radio star.'

Ross and Bennett, mixed comedy team, are both personable and potentially a fine act, but need material. Man is a feather-footed hoofer, and the girl can toss a tootsie too. Their singing is okay, with improvement to be gained by better selection of numbers. The girl has a lot of personality.

Emile Boreo, who hasn't shown here in some years, makes a slight impression. Formerly he used to bounce 'em out of the benches in Balto, but this time he found it far from a skylark getting over to any degree. Started with French jingle sung in his peculiarly hoked style, then into his 'Wooden Soldier.' Last week's Eno of boy hoofers did the same bit here, but much more colorfully; yet Boreo originally intro'd number years back. His demented soldier bit is perhaps timely as diatribe against war, but mob had difficulty following meaning of piece; and anyway, people here don't excite easily to pseudo-patriotic, bust-on-bustin' aroushings. Closes with 'Dark Eyes' as done by a Spaniard, Greek, Jew, Frenchman and Yankee. Lack of tact displayed was Boreo's unsubtle begging for bows, at each of which he pantomimically inquired if mob wanted more and when he thought crowd signaled assent, claimed his throat troubled him and regretted his inability to continue.

Closing, a classy flash team of Marian Pierce and Don Carthay getting billing. Opens before a really striking and novel 'full' set with a ballroom glide, then an unbilled baritone in tails steps out in one and sings a lengthy number while stage gets fresh setting.—Singer has nice pipes and delivery, but is awkward. For its closing caper, the team does one of those slick and slithering modern moochings, prefaced by a song from the baritone which gives the bit some story body.

On the screen, 'Exclusive Story' (MG), a cartoon and Metro clips. Preluding the vaude is usual organ-log by Harvey Hammond, as well as the first pit overture George Wild's 12 men have granted the customers in about a year. Considering that overtures are as rare in the Century as all this, more preparation might have been expended. Attendance fair.

in St. Louis, from destruction.' Wolff said Zukor told him he considered the Ambassador and Missouri theatres as the best in St. Louis and quoted the film exec as saying, 'We big companies sometimes have to do things we prefer not to do.' Wolff testified that Zukor promised to send a wire that night to learn if something couldn't be done relative to the St. Louis difficulty.

Objections to Wolff's alleged conversation with Partington and Joe Bernhard, general manager for WB Circuit Management Corp., were upheld by the court.

In his cross-examination by Reed, Wolff acknowledged that Harry Arthur was in St. Louis during Federal grand jury inquiry and had phoned him in L. A. on Jan. 11, 1935, when indictments were voted. Wolff admitted he was entirely familiar with all the facts involved in the case, explaining that Arthur, as v.-p. and gen. mgr. handled business details of F&M's properties here.

A question by Reed drew from witness that Harry Koplar first approached Arthur relative to possibility of F&M associating themselves with Koplar in bid for lease on Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres. He did not remember exact date of overtures but related that Arthur told Koplar F&M was not interested in deal.

Partington's Testimony

Jack Allen Partington, v.p. of F&M, monopolized the witness chair all day Thursday (16) and the Court called it a day at 5 p.m. In opening direct testimony Partington reviewed his theatrical career which began at the Imperial theatre, San Francisco.

Leading up to the now famous conference with Herman Starr, Abel Cary Thomas and Gradwell Sears in WB's New York office on March 6, 1934, Partington said he was lunching with Arthur when the latter said he had been told there was trouble in the picture field in St. Louis. Partington was not permitted to repeat what a trade newspaperman is alleged to have told Arthur.

Arthur, witness testified, said he had made an attempt to get both Harry and Albert Warner on the phone, but both were out and Albert Warner's secretary suggested he talk to Sears. As they walked into Sears' office, Partington testified, they saw copy of a trade paper in which war between WB and F&M was streamlined. Arthur asked Sears what it was all about, Partington continued, and Sears replied that WB had a $4,000,000 investment in those theatres; that they belonged to WB which intended to have them.

Partington quoted Arthur as saying to Sears, 'There must be something than can be done about it. We don't want trouble. There is no reason we can't get together.' Sears, according to witness, called Starr on the phone and arranged for them to go to his office. When they arrived there, Sears is alleged to have said, 'Fanchon & Marco have gummed the works for Warner Bros.'

Partington said Starr sent for Thomas, and he and Starr did 90% of the talking, repeating that WB and $4,000,000 invested; they were the only ones who could operate properties; it had the personnel and film service necessary to run them.

Partington said he interrupted to remark, "We are little fellows and don't want to fight you. There must be some way that we can arrange this.' Witness said reply was we could get out of St. Louis. 'Arthur,' Partington testified, 'said if we did that we would lose our money and that Snyder would probably sue F&M for breach of his contract.'

Cross-Examination

Partington was given a rough ride on cross-examination by Wood who, referring to witness' testimony at previous trial, brought out that some of testimony given today had not been given during criminal case. Partington explained that his recollection of what transpired at the meeting was clearer today than last November.

It was Wood's cross-examination that established fact Partington forgot to mention name of Harry Koplar as being brought into conference but Wood's questions recalled to his mind that Thomas had made some very caustic reference to the St. Louis exhibitor and said Koplar had cost WB $80,000 in St. Louis and they intended to 'get him.'

Partington was reluctant to repeat Thomas' exact words but Judge Molyneaux ordered him to use the exact language until the witness called Court's attention to fact there were several women spectators in room. Judge Molyneaux rescinded order smilingly and permitted Partington to whisper and then designate cuss words as 'that so and so.'

Hardy was considerably miffed when Wood made repeated reference to fact that Koplar's name was not mentioned in criminal case and, at one point, Judge Molyneaux said, 'Ordinarily a lawyer does discuss matters with a witness before he puts him on the witness stand.'

Partington denied to Wood that suggestions were made to him not to refer Koplar's name being mentioned at the conference. Hardy interrupted to inform the judge that he resented the suggestion that he told witness to withhold any testimony; 'I told him to tell the truth and the whole truth' Hardy shot at the whole courtroom and sat down. No further comment was made by the court on the subject.

Kreismann's Testimony

Former Mayor Frederick H. Kreismann of St. Louis, another Government witness, member of bondholders' committee for theatres, told of a conference held June 6, 1934, by the committee, its counsel and representatives of WB at office of Thomas N. Dysart, chairman of committee. Meeting, he testified, was called at request of Sam B. Jeffries, of local WB counsel, to put before committee WB's final plan of reorganization.

Just before Court adjourned, Judge Molyneaux summoned all counsel to bench and notified them that, at conclusion of case, he would hear arguments on question as to whether he would permit testimony of J. M. Ulmer and B. D. Gordon, both of Cleveland, relative to conference with Starr in New York in reference to Wheeling, W. Va., to remain in record. Testimony of these two witnesses was excused several days ago as it was accepted with reservations.

A new witness, present but not called to the stand during the six weeks' criminal trial last fall, was the main witness Tuesday (14). He was Spyros P. Skouras, former head of the family which operated the Ambassador, Missouri and New Grand Central theatres until 1931, and now president of Skouras Theatres Co. and second v.p. and gen. mgr. National Theatres Co. During Skouras' testimony, the defense attorney scored what he believed to be an important point in the trial when, bringing out that Harry Koplar, veteran St. Louis exhibitor, was a bitter enemy of Warner Bros.

In criminal trial Judge Moore first ruled out the 'Koplar litigation' testimony on objection of prosecution but later permitted it to go into the record on offer of proof that it was relevant. In June, 1931, testimony and records showed Koplar filed several receivership suits in Circuit Court against Warner interests and receivers were appointed. However, in November, 1933, following a referee's report Judge Hamilton dissolved the receiverships and entered judgment for defendants.

It has often been pointed out by defense counsel to this litigation as one reason for WB's refusal to do business with Koplar here, the latter being associated with F&M in operation of theatres, Government again strenuously objected to receivership litigation records yesterday but Judge Molyneaux admitted them. He directed defense counsel to refrain from reading contents of various records, including referee's report and judgment, but said they could be incorporated in the brief which will be filed at end of trial.

Skouras occupied the stand almost the entire day and when cross-examination was concluded, he was succeeded by Joseph H. Grand, local counsel for bondholders' committee of three theatre properties. Grand repeated previous testimony of statements made at several conferences in the spring of 1934 to bring proposed leases of three houses to successful conclusion. He said, at this time, WB was attempting to persuade the local bondholders' committee it was making a bad move in leasing theatres to Allen L. Snyder and F&M. Plans for this lease had been announced in March, 1934, and approved several months later by the Federal Court.

Advance Production Chart

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Twelve feature films started production during the past week, a record number for mid-season. Warners led off with four; Columbia, two; Metro, one; Paramount, one; Republic, two, and 20th Century-Fox, two. An estimate of probably final negative cost of the new films exceeds $3,000,000.

In the matter of cost, 'Romeo and Juliet,' with Norma Shearer, Leslie Howard and John Barrymore, will lead the list. Two big musicals also in work: Grace Moore, in 'Cissy,' at Columbia, and Joe E. Brown in 'Sons o' Guns,' at Warners. The others are comedies and dramas.

Total of pictures currently in production, either before the cameras or in the editing rooms, was lifted during the past week from 56 to 67. 'Romeo and Juliet' is listed for next season's release. Charles Chaplin in 'Modern Times,' which will have its world premiere at the Rivoli, New York, Jan. 31, will be handled by the United Artists sales department separate from the other releases of this season. The only preview review of 'Modern Times' appeared exclusively in 'Daily Variety,' Dec. 28. The picture is not likely to be shown again publicly until the public world premiere.

Full quota of completed films was marked off as finished at the various studios. It is the practice of production chiefs to give a trial exhibition of features before theatre audiences prior to final approval of the pictures.

Variety's new service department for general information of the motion picture industry, it is hoped, will be of particular value to theatre operators. It is called Variety's Advance Production Chart.

Of import to the exhibitor, in the week to week arrangements of his film bookings, is an accurate report of production activities from the Hollywood studios. Such information is intended as a guide to film rental commitments. Many theatre men have passed up money making attractions through non-delivery of certain listed films. The advance production chart should perform service as a barometer of future deliveries of pictures from major and independent studios whose product is released through one of the national distributing organizations.

It shall not be the intention to anticipate in advance of completion of a film the box office merits of a picture. Such judgment is reserved until publication of the studio preview by 'Daily Variety,' and the regular weekly Variety review which is written after the pictures have been viewed in theatres before paying audiences. Variety never reviews pictures in projection rooms on the theory that this is neither fair to the picture nor the reviewer.

Accompanying the chart, however, will be a detailed report of every picture which goes into actual production before microphone and camera. Names of the producers, directors, writers and cast will be listed. In addition, a brief description of the story material will be given, and such comments likely to be helpful to the man who pays film rental, whether in the nature of a flat rental price or on a percentage basis. Distinction will be indicated between the films contracted for the current season release and those which have yet to be assigned national exhibition dates.

The progress of production in competing studios can be watched carefully by theatre men and also by Hollywood executives. That the man who runs a theatre on a policy of four to six changes of program a week has a never ending problem of booking pictures properly from nine national distributors (and the few remaining states' rights exchanges) seemed to be news to many studio people.

With double feature exhibiting almost universal in the U. S., and with percentage dates the rule in nearly every competitive theatre situation, the ultimate revenue collected by any picture is materially affected by features concurrently produced and released by competing film companies. Never was the 'other fellow' so closely watched in show business as at the present time. Variety's Advance Production Chart keeps the score on production progress, clearly indicating the studio which is abreast of its sales department's promises of deliveries, or the organization which is falling behind its schedule. Distribution season of all major companies starts on Aug. 1 each year; ends with July releases.

With the 1935-36 production season just passing its halfway mark, a check-up shows 196 features of the 443 total sold to exhibitors at the beginning of the season to be completed, or ready for shipment of positive prints this week.

An additional 56 films are in process of production at the present time, of which photography has been completed on 20. Assembling, retakes, musical recording and final editing will be completed on eight of these by the end of next week. Hollywood ships on the average eight films every seven days.

Despite the reorganization of management at several of the major studios since last summer, production schedules have been maintained for the past six months at a rate of delivery which at this time prompts a prediction that nearly every plant will fulfill its sales department's commitments.

Three companies, 20th Century-Fox, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and RKO-Radio have not completed as high a proportion of the season's requirements as the number finished at Paramount and Warners.

Officials at 20th-Fox declare much time was lost early in the production season while Darryl Zanuck and staff were moving into the Westwood studio, but that the present schedule of producing, if continued for the next three months, will complete the season's schedule. Assurances are given by RKO-Radio studio, of which Sam Briskin recently became operating head, that the rate of production will be increased soon, and RKO will make all, or nearly all, of the 48 features it has sold for the season.

Resume of the features now in production follows. Variety each week will pick up additional pictures as they start in work.

HIGHEST IOWA STATE COURT OK'S 'BANK'

A decision of importance which may set a precedent for the rest of the country was handed down yesterday (Tuesday) in Iowa's highest tribunal, the supreme court, declaring 'bank night' legal. The court reversed findings of lower courts which had held bank nights illegal.

Test case was against A. H. Blank theatres in Des Moines and originally started in municipal court in that town, but reached the state's highest judicial authority as result of a fight put up by the Blank interests with support from Affiliated Enterprises, Inc., of Denver, which was under contract to supply bank nights.

During the past week in New York, Special Sessions found the Tremont, Bronx theatre, guilty of conducting a lottery through cash giveaways, with a wheel used to determine lucky numbers.

PUBLIC BALLOTING ON DETROIT DUALS

Detroit, Jan. 21.

As the first actual fandom test on double-film policies, Lou and Ben Cohen, who operate six uptown and nabe houses, have installed ballot boxes in all their theatres wherein patrons are urged to vote for or against present problem. Small ballot cards are given out to all ticket purchasers, with provisions for ' ' and 'no,' name and address, marks.

Houses taking part are the Hollywood, Roxy (all nighter), Rio, Mayfair, Victory and Norwood, all modern, well distributed about city, and now playing double features.

Concert Shorts

ing spontaneous recognition. One, at the Aubert Palace, was a rendering by Thibaud of 'Fountain of Arethusa,' technically difficult violin piece which illustrates the Greek legend of a nymph turning into a spring. Nymph on screen is played by a nude girl, who dances the story of her pursuit by a hunter. Other public tryout, at the Colisee, was of Gabriel Faure's 'Cradle Song,' sung by Ninon Vallin and illustrated with shots expressing meaning of the music.

Selection

The musicians themselves, led by Thibaud, select those of whom films will be made, and they are barring all but big names. Among those already in are Alfred Cortot, Alexander Brailowsky, Elisabeth Schumann, Gregor Piatigorsky, Clothilde and Alexander Sakharoff, Wanda Landowka, Segovia, Mischa Elman, Ignaz Paderewski and Fritz Kreisler. Latter joined up with the proviso that he make no film for a year, being tied up for that time by a contract for production of an operetta.

Two films are made of each artist—one illustrating only the musical technique, with camera concentrated on the artist throughout, showing him from all angles and concentrating on his fingers, if he's an instrumentalist, during difficult passages. This picture is intended for strictly musical use only—for instruction in conservatories, and showing as pure concert in outlying sections to which the artists do not often go. Second film is intended for general picture theatre release, and is a little production, illustrating the music.

Only music which the composer intended to invoke an image is used, sonatas and other abstract forms being strictly avoided. Vuillermoz supervises from a strictly musical viewpoint.

Directors, such as Max Ophuls and Marcel L'Herbier, are mugging the shorts.

Dubusy's 'Children's Corner,' played by Cortot, is soon to be previewed, as are Schubert's ' ve Maria' by Elisabeth Schumann, and a Chopin waltz by Brailowsky.

Legit Censors

other company of 'Tobacco Road' stirred a local argument, with booking permitted despite paid advertisements in the dailies by the local Archbishop warning against attending the play.

It is mostly 'Road' and 'Children's Hour' that have stirred up the heat. Detroit, Philadelphia and Chicago banned 'Road.' Boston and Chicago banned 'Hour,' although the latter play has not yet played any road dates. Two road companies of 'Road' are out. Both shows were not molested in N. Y. Not in a number of years has there been so much concentration on censorship or worry about the matter in legit circles.

Equity has sent a letter of complaint to Boston on the banning of 'Children's Hour.' Group takes in consideration the fact that Boston, by banning shows, shortens the length of its members' engagements and tends to make other out-of-town stands censor-minded.

'Tobacco Road' has not yet played the Hub. Management was informed by Boston's play censor last season that the drama could be presented there without interference if certain script deletions were made. Present 'Road' company at the Forrest, N. Y., with the desired script alterations will probably be sent to Boston after the Broadway run, now in its third year.

First in Oklahoma

Oklahoma City, Jan. 21.

Never had a play or film been censored or deleted here until 'Tobacco Road' came along yesterday. Mayor Frank Martin said 'no' emphatically, and kept saying it for four days. He relented three hours before curtain time, after he and his board of censors looked at their job of rewriting in a special rehearsal and agreed that they had done better than the original writer. All profanity and 'objectionable scenes' were removed.

Show was put on at the Shrine auditorium by the Number Three Co. with Charles Timblin in the Jeeter role and Irving Becker as manager. Business was only fair, due to cancellations during the day. Uneasy customers didn't think the Mayor would relent, and who wanted to see a pure version anyway?

Francis Potter Hauser, local impresario, tried to get an injunction against the Mayor's ban last week, but district judge wouldn't put a hand in.

Censor board here always has been made up of just three of the Mayor's newspaper pals who wanted the title for the season and cinema pass that went with it. When Mayor Martin decided to put the finger on 'Tobacco Road' he canned the news boys and named a utility chief, a bottling works president, and a Presbyterian preacher, who followed orders and sat on the play as soon as they had found copies and read them. None of them had ever seen the show.

Philly's New Board

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.

Board of Theatre Control to act as censors for legit shows will be named by the newly elected mayor S. David Wilson, he announced last week. He emphasized intention of not 'interfering' with theatres or audiences, but said 'some plays have a bad effect on the community.'

Board, to include three men and two women, will be named in a few days. It will take the place of Henry Starr Richardson, newspaperman and 'unofficial censor.' Formerly there was a similar board, which was superseded by a Safety Director. Richardson replaced him.

Censorship has taken an unobtrusive form here in the last few seasons. Only two shows to be barred have been 'Sailor Beware' and 'Tobacco Road.' They were given the double-O in script form and managements notified of the nix. Mayor's club in such cases is revocation of theatre license.

Prelate's Paid Ad

Albuquerque, N. M., Jan. 21.

Archbishop R. A. Gerken, Catholic prelate here, has nixed 'Tobacco Road,' skedded for Jan. 25. Issued a statement to newspapers followed by advertisements over his name 'warning' the 'decency loving public against a play entitled 'Tobacco Road.'

Arthur Esberg, city manager for all local theatres, has been mum on the matter, since no formal protest against the play has been made to him. Mayor is likewise sitting tight, since he has not been contacted.

First time in recent history of the city that a move has been made to ban shows. Indications are that the show will be permitted to play and looks like the house (Kimo) will be jammed.

SERIOUS TALK OF MERGING 5

Has Been Up Before but Now Figured to Have Stronger Chance of Consummation—Hearst, 20th, Universal, Pathe and Par the Five Newsreelers

SAVE OVERHEADS

The single newsreel is up again before the trade. Preliminary sentiment has been sounded already among leaders of the industry. This unification plan for the five existing newsreels is being considered seriously in certain quarters and the plan is known to have strong sponsorship, this year, from top men in the business who view such a merger of the newsreels as a common-sense plan for the trade.

Question of amalgamating all the newsreels into a single operating unit has been a recurrent problem in the trade for years. Because of the genuine leader support which the plan seems to have the chances of a merger of the newsreels appear brighter for this year than in the past.

Existing newsreels are Hearst-Metrotone, 20th Century-Fox Movietone, Universal, Pathe and Paramount.

Elimination of costly existing competitive overhead is obviously a prime factor.

Merger plan is expected to be given wide discussion early next month when a conclave of the various company chieftains may be had to mull it over as a body. Return of Sid Kent, president of 20th Century-Fox, is expected to further the move. Kent is reported among those who favor the plan.

Par Sales Dept. Reports Quick Reaction to $500,000 Ad Campaign

While its $500,000 advertising campaign on pictures on release in January, February, March and April is pointed toward the box offices of theatres which are to get the pictures, Paramount notes a definite reaction in its sales department which reports accounts are speeding up bookings and increasing commitments.

According to exchange managers in various parts of the country, the effect of the big ad spreads in leading key city dailies, many of which penetrate smaller towns, is a sudden increase in rentals. One branch manager reported that if all other exchanges increased business to the point he had, the $500,000 ad campaign would be paid for entirely by increased sales business.

Film salesmen report they are selling men who couldn't be brought in before, while others are increasing their present commitments, and still others who have been lagging on bookings are beginning to hurr up playdates.

Otterson's Call

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Blurb boys in Paramount publicity department had a strange caller the other day.

John E. Otterson walked in, introduced himself and visited with the puffers for an hour.

ROXY LEFT BUT 5G, PETITIONS WIDOW

Roxy's total estate will run under $5,000 in value, according to the widow of the showman, Mrs. Rosa R. Rothafel, in a petition for letters of administration filed in the N. Y. Surrogates' Court. Samuel Lionel Rothafel (Roxy) died in New York Jan.

Mrs. Rothafel's petition sets forth that she has been unable to find any will and that to her best knowledge his personal estate consists almost entirely of a claim against the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corp., now in reorganization. (This amount is around $179,000). She sets forth that her husband owned no realty.

Besides the widow, the heirs are his daughter, Mrs. Veta Bijur and Arthur R. Rothafel, of Hollywood.

Pizor Calls Philly Meet

Philadelphia, Jan.

Lewen Pizor, president of Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern Jersey and Delaware, has called a meeting for the election of officers on Thursday (23). Meeting is of particular interest as likely to bring to a head rivalry between MPTO and newly formed Independent MPTO, which was supposed to be a fusion body of the two local exhib organizations, IEPA and MPTO.

Pizor has declared that MPTO would retain its identity. Subject likely to come up for a vote at coming meeting with a number of members, especially those of this city, expected to move for a complete merger. Showdown is likely with the general feeling being that Pizor, with upstate membership can maintain original MPTO identity.

Powers' Club Burns

Westport, Conn., Jan. 21.

Pat Powers' Longshore Beach and Country Club here took a $50,000 trimming from a fire Monday (20). Six persons were forced to flee in the cold weather. Fire ruined the interior of the class spot.

Powers, former film man, is president of the club. He was in New York at the time of the fire.

PAR'S H.O. PAY TILTS

Salary increases here and there have been handed out by Paramount both to old employees who suffered cuts and to others who joined the company after such pay reductions had been enforced.

No particular department has been favored in the increases, heads picking those most deserving of increases at this time.

PATHE STATEMENT DUE

Report of Pathe Film Corp. for 3-month period ending near close of year is expected within the next few days.

Part of the dividends due Pathe from DuPont Film Mfg. Co. will be included.

F-WC Legal Battery Back from N. Y. on Tally-Corbar Charge

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Major Walter Tuller, L. W. Myers and William Carman, of the law firm of O'Melveney, Tuller & Myers, and Charles Buckley, of the Fox-West Coast legal staff, returned from New York yesterday (Monday) with depositions and other ammunition for the answer of National Theatres, Chase National Bank, F-WC and various officials and former trustees for F-WC to T. W. Tally's and Corbar Corp.'s petition demanding that the Federal Court set aside the $25,000,000 F-WC bankruptcy decree on charges that the washup was secured last summer through fraud and conspiracy. Answer must be filed by Feb. 3.

The defense is not divulging the specific lines of its answer and counter-attack except to state that the charges will be categorically refuted and a brief of facts from the defense standpoint submitted. A senior U. S. Circuit Court judge is expected to name the court here within the next 10 days before which the petition will be heard. Judge George Cosgrove disqualified himself when Tally's petition was filed.

Assets of the bankrupt were acquired by National Theatres for cash and an exchange of certificates after months of procedure before Referee Samuel W. McNabb and after most creditors had been paid off 100%.

OVERRULE DEMURRERS IN STATE-INDIE SUITS

Lincoln, Jan. 21.

Judge Munger, in federal court here, overruled the defendants J. H. Cooper, R. L. Livingston, Lincoln Theatres Corp. of Delaware and Nebraska, which recently filed demurrers asking that the plaintiffs, State Theatres and Independent Theatres' $444,000 and $1,332,000 suits be dropped because insufficient grounds for action. Suit is brought against the above defendants and seven film distributors, who are charged with collusion and conspiracy finally forcing the plaintiffs out of business. In the demurrers, it was asked that specific allegations be made that plaintiffs exhausted every bit of available film before locking the doors.

This action on the part of th Judge brings the trial much nearer this being the last probable delaying action on the books. Trial is expected by the spring session of the court.

emerge, nevertheless, with a bright financial outlook. The startling rise of the preferred also was reflected in the climb of Universal common (curb) listing). This stock pushed forward to new peak at 10⅜. Despite profit-taking Monday, it showed a net advance of 4½ points for the week.

CBS Climbs

Columbia Broadcasting started climbing the middle of last week, winding up at 53⅝ (asking price) on final day. At this quotation it was up 6¼ points.

This bullish attitude toward broadcasting firms and radio also was reflected by a nice spurt in RCA common. Issue forged ahead to 14¾, new 1935-6 top. RKO moved up in sympathy on same day, registering its best price for more than two years. It showed a gain of nearly a point at the blow-off.

Tendency of all preferred stocks to move up late last week caught both Eastman Kodak and Westinghouse preference issues for a whirl, shooting them to new highs. In contrast to a 2-point gain by Eastman pfd., the common dipped 3½ points. Westinghouse common also was off nearly a point at the finish, while the preferred was up 3¼.

Street held that the fine earnings statement of Warner Bros. already had been reflected by recent upturns in both the common and preferred issues. This was a logical conclusion since practically the same as the official figures (out Monday) were forecast at meeting several weeks ago. Despite this, Warner common held near the best 1935-6 price and showed a fractional gain at the close.

Announcement of Columbia Pictures of an initial dividend of 68¾c. on preferred had no particular effect marketwise. This preferred dividend is at the regular rate of $2.75 annually, all the stock lifted to 50¾ and then slipped to 50½ for a gain of 50c.

Loew-Par Dip

Loew common and Paramount issues were under pressure much of the time. This was particularly true of Loew, which dipped to 50¼ in reflection of a disappointing earnings statement. Stock later rallied to 51½. At this level it showed a loss of 2½ points. Paramount 1st pfd. was off 1⅛ points to 80½, stock having dipped to 78⅛ earlier. The second preferred was down 50c. to 11⅝, finishing week at bottom price. Paramount common lost nearly half a point to 10⅛, after having been to 9⅝ previously.

In addition to these losers, American Seating (off 1 point), Columbia Pictures certificates, both issues of Consolidated Film Industries; General Electric (down 2) and Warner Bros. pfd. wound up week behind the minus mark. In contrast to decline in certificates on big board, Columbia Pix stock on Curb roared ahead 4½ points to 45. At this quotation it was 2¼ points ahead of Columbia certificates.

Losses predominated on the bond list. Heaviest losers were General Theatre Equipment liens, which recently have been making successively new highs. Bonds were down 1¾ to 23¼ at close. Earlier had dipped to 22⅝. After making a new high, Keith 6s fell back to finish with a loss of 1⅝.

Paramount Pictures 6s closed on bottom at 92½, a decline of 1½ points. Paramount-Broadway 5½s dropped 1 point to 57. RKO debentures closed unchanged at 80. Strength in Warner Bros. 6s came after earnings statement was out, going to 89½, the old high. At the close these liens displayed a gain of 1 point.

Among the Women

By The Skirt

Best Dressed Woman Of The Week.
SUNNY DALE
(State)

Leon Navara's band holds the headline position at the State this week. Two dancing teams add to the entertainment of this act. One girl wears a costume consisting of a white bodice worn with a black satin skir Another miss wears an all white satin gown.

acrobatics in pale green ruffled shorts and brassieres. The young woman with Frank is beautifully gowned in white satin, studded with brilliants. The shoulders are draped in two scarfs of pale blue chiffon. A change to a shaded dress of brown velvet is made. With this striking costume a green hankie is carried.

The girl of Kingsley and Case is in black satin with a belt of green from which hang two strands of fringe.

Gae Foster girls at the Roxy remain the tops. They get better week by week. This week a girl from the ranks does some body twisting on a pedestal. Her name is Mildred Patterson and, although quite big for this type of work, reveals a rather full figure. Her costume consists of nothing but the scantiest of chiffons.

Ix of the Foster girls are in one-piece tunics of green sequins while the rest are in pale green chiffon, fashioned with high throat bands of silver. Bathing suits worn by the girls look blue in some lights and grey in others. The skirts are abbreviated with the bodies bare but for brassieres. Large black hats are faced in pink with a bow of the same shade.

Girl of Ross and Stone is in fuschia satin cut in a V-shaped bodice. Gertrude Golde, of the Fred Allen amateur program, does her one number in a robe pink frock made long and full. Gibby Sisters, from the Allen hour also, are in long black frocks buttoned from neck to hem with gold buttons.

Picture, another adventure with Charlie Chan, has but one redeeming feature, presence of Henrietta Crosman, who by the way could choose a more natural wig. Gloria Roy attempts the super-natural in a couple of exotic gowns not important.

erman Looks Well

Eddie Cantor's 'Strike Me Pink' at the Music Hall is as funny as the Marx Brothers' 'A Night at the Opera.' It is filled with all the tomfoolery of the latter picture and brought forth ripples of laughter from a large audience.

thel Merman has never been photographed so well and her first number, done with a black background, brings out the beauty of this young woman in bewildering silhouette. Miss Merman wears a black dress, made invisible, showing only her face, neck and hands. A chorus of sepia girls in spangled frocks make an outstanding effect.

Another number finds Miss Merman in a cellophané fringe gown of unusual beauty. The skirt is in rows of fringe, with the bodice carrying a cape of the fringe and a headdress of aigrettes. It is the most graceful gown seen on the screen in a long time. Miss Merman also shows a lame suit trimmed with silver fox and a simple dress of a dotted print. Sally Eilers is nice in many simple tailored suits.

The stage show at Hall is a beautiful affair. Called 'Winter Cruise,' it shows Spain, the Blue Grotto and Morocco. In a Spanish dancehall the girls are in gay colored costumes of all shades. Yellow frocks of the full skirt variety range from white to yellow with cerise slippers and trimming. Remainder of the girls are in coral and cerise. They all carry cerise shoulder fringes. One girl does a fandango with a boy. Her dress is of shiny black satin made in a double ruffle edged with red.

The highlight of the show is a drill with the girls in the full red pants, blue jackets with long white capes lined in blue.

K-A-O EARNINGS UP

Any eehan-RKO Friction Now Seen as Removed

Keith-Albee-Orpheum's improved earning performance for 1935 should have a reconciling effect on any possible inference of friction which may be alluded to ithin the trade, as existing between the M. J. Mcchan interests and the RKO management. KAO is RKO's chief theatre subsidiary, haying to do with the operation of around 75 theatres around the country, and will earn at present estimates approximately $350,000 for 1935.

This is over and above KAO's investment in Metropolitan Theatres (Fox-Met), in which New York theatre circuit KAO owns around 20% of the outstanding stock. With improved earnings in Metropolitan, bcneficial rise to the KAO income from such sources also should occur, in time.

KAO is required to earn slightly over $425,000, accordin to estimates, with which to meet the annual 7% dividend on approximately 63,000 shares of KAO prefer ed stock outstanding.

The Mcchan interests own around 28,000 shares of this preferred issue, and RKO owns around 21,000 or 33⅓%.

Back dividends which are overdue on this stock is stated to average around $30 per share, with interest, or aggregately around $1,800,000, of which around $850,000 might be duc on the Meehan holdings.

Herbert Bayard Swope is the neutral chairman of the KAO board, with Malcolm Kingsburg, a Meehan attache, vice-chairman. The personnel of the KAO board is otherwise divi ed evenly between RKO representatives and the Meehan reps.

2,000-FOOT REEL PUT OVER UNTIL AUG. 1

Failure to agree on certain specifications for new 2,000-foot reels, as well as continued opposition of Universal to adoption of larger spools, is held responsible for th industry's 2,000-foot reel committee's decision to delay official adoption of reel until Aug. 1. Originally had been scheduled to be placcd in effect April 1.

Following committee meeting at Hays office last week, statement was issued by Arthur Dickinson, Haysian representative on the new reel sct-up, saying that manufacturers would be unable to meet concentrated demands for larger reels early in April and that was the reason for shifting adoption date. This announcement claimed that manufacturers would not be able to fulfill orders for simultaneous delivery to seven or eight companies because special designs, steel, dies and other equipment are needed for 2,000-foot spools.

Fact that both Chicago and New York have ordinances forbidding use of films greater than 1,000 feet in length, also is said to have influenced committee in deciding to proceed slowly with the added outlay required for changcover at film exchanges.

Expense factor is principal basis for Universal's present opposition to 2,000-foot reels.

EXPLOITATION

Collegiate Appeals

Omaha.

To get some especial notice from newspaper readers on his showing of 'Collegiate' Ted Emerson of the Omaha theatre went in for some clever lines in the classified section. Three different types of ads worked on the gag idea were heightened in their drawing power by being addressed to only certain groups, i. e.:

College Graduates: See 'Collegiate' at the Omaha theatre and see something college never taught you.

Creighton Freshman: Don't let the sophs keep you from seeing 'Collegiate' just because 150 college cuties are in it.

Uncle Charlie: Please come home. Dinner is cold. You've already sat through 'Collegiate' three times.

Idea used before but made more effective here by getting art space in addition. Besides theatre utilized stopover of 12 girls from the film, en route to London, for breaks in the news and photo columns.

'Collegiate' also showed itself to be good material for radio plugging and Emerson went to town with a strong radio campaign headed by a song contest over WAAW in which listeners were asked to name orchestras playing recordings with passes as prizes. In addition the theatre netted some free programs over WOW and plugs from all orchestras and music stores on strength of the songs.

Theatre also got some extra notice from what might be termed opposition by spreading some of its stuff in the lobby of the Paramount theatre, now dark, but opened one night during the engagement of 'Collegiate' to house the Russian ballet. Omaha theatre ads were the only ones in the lobby.

This list of stuff as usual in addition to Emersons regular tie-ups with menu cards, milk bottle collars, 45-foot scenery truck, waste can cards, and music counter tie-ups.

Hustling Harlow

St. Louis, Jan. 21.

Taking advantage of a lull in winter season in this burg, Jimmy Harris and his exploiteer hustlers at Loew's dipped into the trick bag and went out to sell natives on a new Jean Harlow with 'brownette' hair. Over the air the boys worked up a nifty program using transcription records and special publicity material with a closing offering a new color photo of the star to those writing for them. Around the town with the Walgreen drug store chain is a snappy back-bar display offering those wishing to take a chance on a 'brownette' sundae and also a color photo of the star.

Harris sold several beauty chains the idea of putting in full window displays, using photos from the feature and cards plugging attraction and giving date of showing, etc. In addition to beauty shop chains several of large department stores took co-op newspaper ads announcing they were offering a special prize for the new coiffure and all ads had underlines for Loew's.

Other activities included crashing dailies for plenty of free space, planting of cartoons in weeklies, Gotham hosiery tieup netting heralds and windows, 10,000 circulars in McGrory's 5 and 10 stores, bus cards in every one running, routine exploitation of readers in all suburban weeklies and large displays and special cut-out atop canopy of theatre.

Lowdown on 'Wilderness'

Seattle.

Interesting and little known background to Eugene O'Neill's writing of 'Ah, 'ilderness' (MG) is being used in local exploitation for the pix now at Orpheum.

O'Neill knew the McGinley family well in the small New England town, near Boston, and now L. J. McGinley, manager of Universal exchange here, has been discovered as a member of that family. O'Neill uses the first names of the members, with the dad of L. J. being the publisher of the newspaper, in real life and in the play. Exploitation locally used consists in breaking the story, with illustration showing the local McGinley sitting in an opera chair and looking at the movie.

M. D. Identification Cards

San Francisco.

Dusting off an old one and making it pay handsomely, Hal Neides, F & M Orpheum first-run here, mailed 1,050 numbered cards to medics. Class print job and first class postage helped bring back over 100 letters within 10 days from doctors expressing appreciation, etc. Letter also informed them 'Magnificent Obsession' was story especially interesting to their profession. Registration of doctors with ushers proved value.

Had only to show card. Usher took number and seat location, assuring delivery of telephone calls.

Opening Stunts

With new theatres going up after a long building holiday, the putting over of the new house is something to give thought to. One of the best stunts was worked by the late Ralph Ruffner when he opened the Capitol theatre, Vancouver, B. C. He heralded '$75 per seat. Some show.' It drew immediate attention. Then Ruff went on to explain that this sum represented the cost of the theatre divided by the seating capacity. It was not the admission charge, but merely what it cost to provide seats for the opening audience.

In another instance double tickets were used for the opening performance. One half was good for admission to the current show. The other half was to be honored one year later. As it turned out, only about 10% of the coupons were saved, but the idea was novel and helped to convey the idea of permanancy.

Most important houses are opened with a special section in one or more of the newspapers with the contractors helping out the displays of the local merchants, and the idea is even better when worked into a good looking booklet with enough original material to qualify it as a souvenir. One theatre recently numbered these booklets with the statement that certain of the numbers would be good for souvenirs at the first anniversary. That helped to insure preservation.

Cooperation of the mayor and other city officials is helpful, but even more effective is an open house the night before the actual opening, when light refreshments are served following the brief opening program. This can be done by invitation or invitation and paid admissions, and it is always good for a special blow off in the papers.

Effective Work

Paris.

Local Fox outfit's Shirley Temple contest, run with collaboration of Paris Intransigeant and string of provincial papers to pick little girl most resembling Shirley and send her on free trip to California, has created widespread interest, and is one of the most successful exploitation stunts pulled in this country in recent years.

Fourteen kids were picked from photos submitted in contest, and brought to Paris for final selection of winners. Stunt was done in such a way as to appear a real work for the benefit of childhood, and film exploitation angle was successfully kept in the background. Name of Fox appeared nowhere.

A number of show people not connected with contest in any way collaborated, among them Jeanne Boitel, actress, who gave each of the 14 finalists a linen handkerchief to dry her tears if she didn't win. Finalists were entertained on last day at Medrano circus, and presented to a full house during the show. Shirley's name got nation-wide publicity through stunt.

Helping the Horror

New Haven.

John Hesse has a lobby eye-catcher for 'Invisible Ray' at Roger Sherman. It's a massive head of Karloff with a red light for an eye. In a box underneath is a blue bulb mounted behind indigo glass. Bulb flashes on and off, and wordage plays it up as the invisible ray.

Additional lobby displays plug the 'don't see this picture if your nerves are weak,' angle, plus a scare announcement that due to surprise ending, no one will be seated during final reel.

Dropped Patrons

Baltimore.

Easy promotion for film houses seems to be the Lambert Pharmaceutical Company. Drug firm is introing to market another in its Listerine line, cough-drops. Last week four of the loop first-run theatres gave away sample packages of the drops, secured from local Lambert distributor.

Houses slipped samples into small paper pouches with printing on outside plugging coming films. Had 'em handed out to exiting patrons.

Phones for 'Dream'

Sydney.

Ralph Clarke, WB chief here, has handed over to Glen Whitely the entire Australian exploitation of 'Midsummer Night's Dream,' and one of the first things the p.m. did was to install 12 telephone operators in the Warner office and had them call up 15,000 subscribers per medium of the directory. Following on the experience gained over the Sydney season similar tactics will be adopted in Perth, Adelaide, and Melbourne.

Whitely goes out with the pic and will have control of the selling of the pic to the public in all of the ace spots. It's Whitely's job to make the fans say Shakespeare and like it.

Knitting Contest

Montreal.

Working on the general craze for knitting that has hit this town past three months, George Rotsky, manager, Palace, who already has free tea, bridge, cigarettes and checking privileges at this house, has tied up with leading silk and wool merchant of Montreal for $50 dollars cash prizes in knitting contest started Friday (17) and running for month.

In first four days had 2,500 letters from all over city and province of Quebec and numbers paid admish to Palace to get instructions and free teaching from knitting expert loaned by wool firm.

Figures on maybe 30,000 fan mail which coming from women, many of whom rarely attend movies, will greatly increase mailing lists besides increasing grosses at no cost to theatre since all expense borne by advertising firms.

BEHIND the KEYS

Syracuse.

Schine Enterprises, of Gloversville, reopened the rebuilt Avon at Watertown. The theatre, Watertown's largest, was badly damaged by fire on July 31 last.

Like the Eckel here, which was damaged to the extent of approximately $150,000 Dec. 21, the Avon is owned by the Central Cities Building Corporation of Utica, successor to Robbins Enterprises, which at one time operated a string of houses in the three cities.

Reconstruction of the Eckel will be pushed without delay, it is announced, and the work will be supervised by Richards and Sons, Utica contractors. Schine suggestions as to structural changes will be followed.

Lincoln.

J. H. Cooper's attorney here, Max Beghtol, accepted personal service for the former, who is a defendant in the State and Indie theatres $1,797,000 suits pending in federal court. Immediately afterward Cooper arrived in town, first appearance for him since early spring of 1935, some time prior to the suits filing. He's tinkering with the union for new contracts, the old ones having expired last Sept.

Cal Bard, fresh from selling some Indie pics over Iowa, is back at his old abode here in the Capitol hotel, where he is pressing the two big suits against Cooper and film distribs for collusion and conspiracy. His backers, G. L. Hooper, Topeka, and George O. Monroe, Beatrice, were with him. Bard claims a fund strong enough to carry the battle for three years, if necessary.

Roy Ehlers, manager and owner of the Minden, Minden, Neb., is having the place redecorated and remodeled.

Recent burning of the State, Central City, Neb., has the state fire marshal investigating for arson. Manager Joe Lucas says the place was stench bombed and the explosion set the place afire. It's owned by Bill Youngclaus of Grand Island, Neb.

Demurrers were filed in the State and Indie Theatre, Inc., collusion and conspiracy action here, by defendants J. H. Cooper, of New York; Bob Livingston, the Capitol manager here, and six film distribs, Fox, MGM, RKO, Universal, United Artists and Warners. Claim by the defendants is that the petitions in the $1,797,000 suits, do not contain sufficient grounds for action. The plaintiffs set forth that they at one time had half the houses here, and only 16% of the available feature films, which resulted in their closing.

New Prairie theatre, Ogallala, Neb., owned by Al Kehr, was opened early this week. Kehr has operated a theatre in Ogallala since 1911, when he put 75 seats in a vacant store room. At the present time he also owns the Princess in the same town. The Prairie seats 550.

Toronto.

According to the announcement this week of J. J. Fitzgibbon, general director of theatres for FP-Can., the following changes in personnel are immediately effective: Howard Knevels, manager of the Regent, Ottawa, since 1932, takes over the Capitol, Ottawa; Ken Smith, formerly assistant manager of the Capitol, becomes manager of the Regent; Ray Tubman, manager of the Capitol, Ottawa, goes West to supervise a number of houses in the Winnipeg district.

Ramsey, N. J.

Cohen & Slegal, who operate the Selwyn and Harris theatres, N. Y. City, have renovated and reopened the Ramsey here.

Albany.

Reopened only three days, the Follies, former State theatre, had to close for three more days. Then it started again. Sudden closing was due to the discovery that a hole in the heater fuel tank had caused a leak, filling the cellar with fuel oil four inches deep. Chief of the fire protective made the discovery and said if not caught in time there might have been a terrific explosion. House is in downtown business section.

Henry Kramath is operating the Follies with double features at 15 cents. House has non-union projectionists and a sandwich man is on picket duty out front.

Galveston.

Texas theatre buildings boom continues with both and large chains and independents putting 'em up all over the state. Robb and Rowley's $100,000 house at Corpus Christi follows a flock of new houses built at Houston by Interstate and Horwitz. Latest is a small home being erected at Mont Belvieu by the Jefferson Amusement Co., which will be ready for operation about Feb. 15.

Tacoma.

Local nabes and downtown grinds are going to collect some easy money this year with political slides. This is the first time since the nickelodeons that the politicians have been able to run their phisogs on the silver screen telling of their virtues.

Rates will be charged on a basis of downtown or nabe with $5 a day for spots before or after trailer in some instances; others as low as $20 a week for nightly spots only.

Buffalo.

Universal has shifted its Buffalo office to include it in the New England division under A. J. Herman. Sieg Wittman takes over Cleveland and Cincinnati as part of his eastern division. Still headquarters in N. Y., his division including N. Y., Pittsburgh, Washington and Philadelphia, in addition to Cincy and Cleveland.

Boston.

Nan Cohen, formerly with M&P publicity office, has been appointed publicity director of WB for New England territory. Performed outstanding work on 'Midsummer Night's Dream' roadshow here.

Proscott, Ariz.

Harry Nace has acquired the Studio Theatre from Milton Arthur.

Pittsburgh.

Sid Jacobs, manager of Harris-Memorial, McKeesport, named acting district manager for WB in West Virginia territory, filling in for Marshall Taylor, who has gone west on an indefinite leave. New set-up brings in Lew Fordan from Tarentum to run McKeesport house.

William Powelson, manager of Belmar, goes to Tarentum to succeed Fordan while Charles Shannon moves up from assistant managership of South Hills into Belmar spot. Before going to McKeesport about a year ago, Jacobs managed Sheridan Square, WB nabe house in East Liberty.

Scooped 'Sanders'

Spartanburg, S. C.

State here, minus section for colored patrons, played Paul Robeson and Nina Mae McKinney two days in 'Sanders of the River,' selling tickets to white audiences only, despite thousands of potential Negro customers roundabout. Carolina, top local house, grabbed film when State turned it loose and projected, with Cab Calloway ork feature, as special midnight show, B.O. results almost overwhelmed mgr. and house scooped local Negro house.

Carolina also built up 'So Red the Rose' publicity by exchanging a ducat for every 10 postcards addressed to a local resident and messaging title and date, also place for showing pix. Five thousand cards went out—all to different people—and gave film biggest mail broadside house has had in some time, and without expense except for ducats.

Plenty Shubert

Indianapolis.

Inspired by a world premier of 'April Blossoms,' assistant-manager Crouch of Loew's, with the assistance of MGM's Fred Bristow, spread the town with news of the pic's arrival on the Loew screen. Opening night, a 15-minute pick-up in the lobby was put on over WIRE with patrons and prominent citizens, who had been invited for the purpose, making statements over the air.

Kresge's Five and Ten came through with an artist in the window who made sketches of his watchers, and presented the sketch to the person when he entered the store. Six girls patrolled the streets in fluffy clothing, carrying two cards each composed of the letters in the title, and would do a routine on each corner spelling out the name of the pic. The window next to the theatre was given over to a full display, with the lobby of the empty building turned into a dart shooting gallery, with the lucky girl who hit the heart getting a pair of passes to the theatre. Eight hundred letters were sent out to musical groups calling attention to the Franz Shubert angle. Two hundred social and civic leaders were invited to the premier. The Mayor declared 'Music Week' in honor of Shubert. The Times reprinted their theatre page into a front page, and 2,000 of these were distributed.

Loudspeakers were hooked up on the second floor of the building which houses the theatre and Shubert melodies were played all day and night. Art cards were given space in department stores on the town's main stem, and the outlying districts were covered well with posting and sniping.

Picking It Up

Keeping everlastingly on the lookout gets plenty of special stuff that's better than the straight exploitation. It's an old story now, but Al Boasberg, got his job as a Paramount exploiteer chiefly through getting in on a circus parade. He had applied to Claude Saunders for a job, but when a circus came to bid home town he volunteered to pilot the parade over the prescribed route, driving a car bannered 'See the circus today. See Paramount pictures every day.' That cinched him and it does not hurt the moral that he eventually got into picture writing in Hollywood.

Most managers would have tagged the procession, if they did anything. Boasberg thought a little and got the head of the line.

Three weeks before a small towner played 'I Found Stella Parish' a want ad asked for all girls of that name to contact the theatre. None was found, but the manager was ready with a girl from out of town who was willing to answer that name. And the day he started his regular campaign on the picture the want ad page blossomed out with "How I found Stella Parish,' the credit being given the want ad. Well written and with the announcement that Stella would occupy a front seat at the first night brought a nice piece of extra change. Just a flash, but it worked.

There is hardly a picture that cannot be given a freak boost in a pinch, and often this will work better than the multiple-adjective appeal of the newspaper campaign.

Beating Raffles

Usually the Raffles stunt of a mystery man on the street to be identified is good every three of four months, but a new gag shifts the idea and the pedestrian and not the stunster is to be identified. The idea is based on an attractive card advertising the picture and serially numbered. These are to be worn on the outer clothing in conspicuous fashion. Idea is that each day certain numbers will be arbitrarily decided upon by the management. If an investigator can find the tags with these numbers the wearer receives a slip, some good for cash prizes and the others for tickets.

Certain blocks in the business section are designated as the beat of the identifier, who will scrutinize all cards and hand out the slips. Inspections are made at stated hours. In the off times the inspectors frequent other streets, not designated, and will award slips to all tags found, but for an hour each afternoon and evening during the run of the gag, the men can be found at designated spots ready to examine all badges.

Since at other times these identifications are likely to be made at any spot, the badges are worn all day, and each serves to remind of the picture being promoted.

Worked with a newspaper for the sake of the story, but not required that the winner be able to show a copy of the paper, as is usual with the Raffles stunt.

Properly handled this will give large circulation to the title being put over.

ERPI EXPANDS 16MM. BUSINESS

Recent shift in officers and realignment of departments at Electrical Research Products, Inc., is reported to have been made necessary by growth of firm's visual talking picture business (largely 16 millimeter films). Principal shift takes E. E. Schumaker to position of president of ERPI Picture Consultants. He formerly was president of the old Victor Talking Co., but more recently has been with ERPI. Change is said to be first step in making ERPI Consultants a separate organization, subsidiary to parent company.

Under new set-up, R. immer, who has been active in promotional work of talking pictures for school use, is to serve as sales manager.

Orders for first 16 mm. talking pictures recently were received by company from Ohio state board of education. Similar order came from city educators at Spokane, Washington.

INDUSTRIAL SHORTS IN BROADWAY SECTOR

Industrial films are coming back into the picture business with a bang. Most pertinent evidence of this trend found on Broadway currently, where one or more industrial pictures are being shown.

Presumably the desire of exhibitors to fill out regular program with one or two-reelers, without added cost, is prompting this new trend towards industrials. It is understood that the industrials are played at no cost to industrial firms represented, at free rental.

Alaskan Troupe Bringing Back Assorted Animals for Pic

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Menagerie of Alaskan animals is being toted back by Norman Dawn, director, and Del Cambre, lead in 'Alaska Bound.' Pair went north last September.

Five wolverines, six bears, four minks, three porcupines, five white foxes and a coop of ravens will be used here for additional scenes.

O.K. for (Organ) Sound

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

Metro sound engineers, headed by Douglas Shearer, have successfully developed a system to record organ music on a film sound track, utilizing Hammond pipeless electric organ.

Amplifier and reproducing horn method divides vibrations at a frequency of 250, with slower quiverings going through on one large system, and the higher frequencies swinging through a smaller and especially designed unit.

Time Limit for Bank Night Coin Gets Legal Jolt

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.

Time limit of three minutes placed by Southern California theatres for winner to appear for night award received a sock in municipal court last week. Judge ruled Strand had to pay winner $400, although he was not in seat at the time, but in the theatre proper.

Paul Swickert, of the Strand, contended the lucky person was ineligible for prize because the arbitrary limit had expired.

Similar suits have been filed in other courts, and at least one is expected to be appealed in order to establish a legal limit.

Pettengill Anti-Block Booking Bill Up Again

Washington,

write legislation outlawing block-booking on the statute books was planned this week by supporters of the Pettengill bill to ban current sales practices in interstate commerce.

Although no date has been sponsors the measure will receive attention of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, of which its author, Representative Samuel Pettengill, of Indiana, is a member. Pettengill said he will press his measure vigorously and hopes to lay the proposition before the House in the near future.

Demands for enactment of some measures to protect exhibitors from domination of major distributors and affiliated theatres were voiced by Representative William Schulte, of Indiana, former theatre operator. Declaring that producer control of the industry must be checked by Congressional action, Schulte said that a large group in the House will support Pettengill and forecast eventual passage of the restrictive measure.

Would Outlaw Scalpers

Boston, Jan. 21.

Attempt in current state legislature to outlaw ticket scalpers. Bill, providing fines, would prohibit engaging in business of reselling tickets for admission.

A Novelty

Minneapolis, Jan. 21.

Minnesota exhibitors are tickled because the state legislature's special session is drawing to a close without any tax bill or other adverse theatrical legislation being passed. It was feared that the body would put over a sales' tax affecting showhouses.

Local 306 Wins Out Over Allied in Brooklyn Case

The courts have refused an injunction to Allied Operators, independent boothmen's union, in its battle to force the Fortway, Brooklyn, to employ its members instead of Local 306 operators, who are at present in the theatre. Court decision represents another victory for the American Federation of Labor affiliate, 306, in its efforts to protect jobs against alleged contracts between Allied and the Independent Theatre Owners' Association under which all ITOA houses were to employ Allied men.

The Fortway is an independently operated Brooklyn house, controlled by the Signal Theatre Corp. Some time ago the Fortway joined the ITOA. It was contended that in joining, it was reed by Signal that all contracts which ITOA held would be binding on the theatr Consequently the Fortway was asked to discharge 306 operators, putting in Allied members. Th theatre refused to do this despite the so-called contract between ITOA and Allied, and courts sided with the theatre.

DOIN'S ON PITCAIRN

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

'Primitive Pitcairn,' another one-reeler concerning the island, has been made by Carey Wilson for Metro release. Wilson wrote dialog and narrated the description from stock shots.

His first short, 'Pitcairn Island Today,' is now on release.

Depression Stuff

It's a bit late in the day to write about the depression, but in his 'Haven for the Gallant' (Knopf; $2), Thomas Rourke traces the lives of two couples who have been slapped down. Shrewd character sketching in spots, but spoiled by an unnecessary coarseness of language. That sort of thing has rather run its course.

One couple settles down on the Shrewsbury to fish crabs and eels. The other pair and a couple of old men come to visit them. Too much visiting doesn't agree with the crabber, so he breaks loose. Story doesn't start anywhere in particular and ends up at the same place.

Not a picture from any angle. Just for the loan shops.

want them to tell me how to sing a song.'

The way she likes to sing a song in pictures is this: a verse and a chorus by herself, to establish it, then cut away, then sell the song. 'To make a screen number, you've got to have people surrounding you, interesting business going on—but after that first verse and chorus.' But, above all, the number itself has got to be good, well put over. Then it holds, then it's not an interruption, then it's as interesting as the story. However, Miss Merman has seen some numbers in pictures that if it were up to her, she would throw out completely. It's not alone how you do the number, she says, it's the number itself.

She's noticed that tunes are simpler today, more commercial. They're tunes that people can hum right off. She used to do numbers that, with their fancy arrangements and series of anti-climaxes, used to run six minutes. Now she does them to last three minutes top. And the audience knows when they're finished, because she finishes them just once. Nor does she go for flossy arrangements like she used to. Some songs are so beautiful in themselves, she realizes, that extravagant arrangements spoil them.

She's been lucky, Miss Merman says, finding swell songs. People tell her she's blessed with good diction. She knows she's blessed with 'a long breathing spell.' If she happens to phrase songs in a certain way that other people don't, well, that's the way she breathes. She illustrated it: 'Flying so high with some guy in the sky is my idea of (breath) nothing to do.' Now the way some one else might do it: 'Flying so high (breath) with some guy (breath) in the sky (breath), etc.' And it certainly was more interesting Miss Merman's way. The delighted Moore's waiters hovering close thought so, too.

As a matter of record, Miss Merman said, she's never taken a singing lesson in her life. Say, if she had, some guy would have popped up to take credit by now, the way you read signs in front of dancing schools that they've taught Marilyn Miller and Ruby Keeler and who knows who else. And she's never going to take a singing lesson either. People who've had lessons think more of their diaphragms than they do of the songs, she's noticed. 'If I have to take a breath, I take a breath.'

No Uniforms

Winslow, who rote 'Maedchen in Uniform,' comes forward with 'Girl Alone' (Farrar & Rinehart; $2.50), translated by Agnes Niell Scott, who has made a good job of it.

This is a story of art life in Munich, a locale with which the author is familiar in her own right as a sculptress. Eva-Marie is a little girl with art aspiration who comes to study sculpture and learns more about love. The atalier backgrounds the adventures, but Eva's love affairs overshadow art. She gets a very comprehensive view of it all, with the stress on the homosexual side, and after a purely spiritual love affair with a Franciscan monk the last chapter finds her about to settle down with the wife of one of her art acquaintances.

Delicately written, but it chiefly will interest as a study in erotomania in spite of its probing psychology. It will be one of the talked about books, if not a best seller.

Plenty Acti

Zane Grey's 'The Trail Driver' (Harpers; $2) carries all the action of the cheaper westerns, but it has also the expert telling of a man who knows how. That makes it different. Evidently written with picture use in mind, but it will take plenty of production, what with a buffalo stampede, a 5,000-herd of cattle and villains and Indians along the trail to Dodge City.

It packs about twice as much as the pulpers write into one book, and keeps the reader in a mental stew through the pages. In spite of his prolific output, Grey seems still to be able to steam them up, and he turns several neat tricks in this first of his '36 contributions.

Is and Isn't

Perhaps a little too much stress is placed on the resemblance of 'The House of the Spaniard' (Doubleday, Doran; $2) to Robert Louis Stevenson. Arthur Behrend shows he is quite able to stand on his own feet and does not need the comparison.

It's a smoothly paced story of a Liverpool shipping clerk who gets mixed up in a Spanish revolution. The story is distinctly reminiscent of Stevenson's method of building suspense, and further resemblance is noted in the adoption of the rather boyish heroes that Stevenson wrote best about, but the incident. is modern and, while not all of the motivation will stand analysis for plausibility, it makes excellent reading at the moment. Picture possibility, but it has already been done in England.

Easy Readi

Margaret Pedler, in her 'The Shining Cloud' (Doubleday-Doran; $2), has written one of those books that are easy to read if one does not stop to dig too deeply into the motivation. In other words, it is plausible if not logical.

With the scene laid in Wales, Gillian and Ronnie Kemsley take the jobs of amusement directors at a decaying hotel. They not only put the hostelry on its financial feet, but Gillian manages to get two men furiously in love with her. She marries the wrong man, but he obligingly gets himself killed while mountain climbing to clear the track. It might serve one of the English picture companies, for it reads smoothly and has plenty of action.

By WOLFE KAUFMAN

New Wodehouse Character

Wodehouse has now invented a new character to stand alongside his rogues gallery headed by Jeeves. Albert Peasemarch is he new man and he takes number two position without question, despite the fact that this is the first book he appears in. The book is titled 'The Luck of the Bodkins' (Little Brown; $2) and you don't have to buy it because someone's sure to give it to you as a present. It's that kind of a book. It's a swell gift handout.

In this book Wodehouse takes several healthy sooks at Hollywood, most of the gags being aimed toward the cinema world. Hollywood being what it is, California should be one of the biggest sales centers for the tone. They love to laugh at themselves. Book could very nicely be filmed, too.

Omnibus of Crime

Carolyn Wells' favorite sleuth, Fleming Stone, goes wandering into another of his merry mazes in 'For Goodness Sake' (Lippincott; $2). Stone, as a dick, is a little bit precious, and the problems he ponders so mysteriously and concertedly aren't always as tough as he seems to make out. Also Miss Wells seems to have gotten into the habit of writing too fast, turning out too many books. It's a sloppy job, but nevertheless manages to hold interest. Oke for films.

Simon Templar, who is known quaintly by his pals as 'The Saint,' is back in a new adventure yarn, 'Saint Overboard' (Crime Club; $2). Leslie Charteris, inventor of the character, is still setting a fast pace for his competitors and staying a good length or two ahead. It's not whodunit writing, of course, but almost, and action-y enough to more than make up for the difference. This particular one of the series is a bit more incredible than the rest, but thoroughly and constantly exciting. Could be filmed.

Rene Clair

was as good a kidder as any of them. He shrugged his shoulders.

'Poor France,' he said. 'I am gone from them.'

Getting serious, then, by permission of the reporters, he explained that France's economic condition made the production of expensive films difficult, if not impossible. The money cannot be returned, possibly, out of France alone, and the rest of Europe is now too cut up with political difficulties to make it much of a gamble.

He thought, he said, that England is in a healthy film state and can do much, and is doing much. He did not think, he said, that Hollywood need be worried; there is room for both. Stars are, he said, very important in films; but stars are not, he said, as i portant to films, as actors. The box-office angle, he admitted, is important in film making, but a director's prime duty, he felt, was to watch out more for the integral quality of the film itself; box-office would follow; perhaps slowly, but quite surely.

When was he going to Hollywood? He wasn't going to Hollywood; he was in America for only two weeks and would spend it all in New York. And he wasn't going to Harlem or the night clubs: there are some of both in both London and Paris, he's seen them. And he didn't care such an awful lot any onger about meeting any reporters. He had, he thought, enough experience. In his next film he would know how to deal with them.

GYPPERY, GOOD WILL, OVERHEAD

Dishes' Outlay Forces Film Rentals Down—B.O. Before and After Special Nites Suffers — Patron's Squawks

CARNY PALMING

While the police under license Commissioner Paul Moss re continuing drive against lottery and other special nights involving gambling angle, other factors are entering into situation in Greater New York area which are expected to influence future trend more than official regulation. Instances of gyppery, dissatisfied customers and elimination of novelty angle of these special stunts all have been hurting 'bank nites,' lottery giveaways, dish nites, etc.

Set-up which enables only one, or at most three, to win a cash prize, with others out in cold is producing plenty of squawks from customers. Some exhibitors are convinced that the good will of their regular patrons is more important than the few extra dollars gleaned from these stunt nites.

Majority of exhibs are agreed that there is nothing particularly new in cash giveaway stunts and real edge has been worn off with all neighborhoods.

Pay-off on lottery and cash stunts in 600 and 700-seat houses has been revelation in recent weeks (as reported by patrons) that old carnival palming trick is being exploited, with stooge in audience grabbing prizes and turning back coin to management. It is the dollar-and-cents answer to how some smaller theatres have been able to award $40 in cash on one evening at admish of 10 or 15c.

B. O. Damage

Another slant that is causing an awakening among exhibitors is realization that these special stunts kill off biz for the house for day preceding giveaways and after stunt is held. Patrons hold off attending for special nites.

Another evil is way dish nites have spread. Payments for dishes for these giveaways constitutes a healthy additional item for exhib in addition to his film rentals and other operating costs. With average house in an indie circuit paying $60 to $125 for dish outlay, this means that a chain of 12 theatres has to expend $700 to $1,500 weekly.

With exhibitors paying more and more for dish giveaways, the tendency has been to force rentals down. In this way, distributing companies have started to feel the rub since it means a substantial loss in revenue. Recently dish giveaways have developed to such an extent that manufacturers are including 42 to 80 pieces in a set. This giveaway stunt detracts from interest in film attractions, patrons phoning theatre only to find out what dish is being given away. If it is a small article, they stay away from the theatre.

Philly's Court Ruling Okaying Duals Will Jazz Up WB Stronghold decision Philadelphia opening that key to complete freedom of double billing will create a wide policy of pairing 'em

this circuit's 125 theatres in the city and its suburbs, it is held in distributor sources. With such a move in prospect, serious price-cutting war and a change in run classifications might likely result.

A single feature stronghold, Philadelphia is expected to see Warner Bros. being forced into duals in all its theatres in defense against such policies by competitors. This would mean that WB next summer would buy twice the product it is now using, taking everything from the major distributors in order to fill requirements. This, in turn, may force the independents into later runs in order to get major producer pictures and also into cheaper prices. Warner's has the largest theatres and a commanding buying power in Philly.

Film Row Silent

Philadelphia, Jan.

Battlefield on the subject of last week's decision handed down by U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, sitting in Philly, on the now famous Perelman double-feature case, seems to have switched elsewhere, at least temporarily. Local managers of major exchanges are silent, apparently waiting word from their various headquarters and rumors rather than concrete facts are featuring Vine street. No doubt but what the major companies, defendants in the suit which they lost by the judges' ruling last week, will appeal to the U. S. Supreme Court as the local ruling is being automatically taken as a precedent for the nation.

Whether a restraining writ will be obtained here temporarily against double-featuring, pending the new appeal is not known.

Naturally, indie exchange men here are jubilant, figuring that many exhibs will grab the double feature idea although it is admitted to be true that product now contracted for was bought strictly on the single feature basis. That may make readjustment costly.

Premium dealers and game and device sellers are not so enthusiastic, figuring double-featuring will cut a wide swath in their own biz.

Stand of Warners being closely watched. They've been strongly against double-featuring in territory but if they switch now their control of major first-run product will make their position very strong.

The decision made last week, handed down by Judge Joseph Buffington and concurred in by Judges J. Warren Davis and J. Whitaker Thompson, sustains a similar decision by Judge George Welsh handed down in the Federal court a year ago. Judge Buffington declared that the evidence submitted before Judge Welch is conclusive that the defending film companies were in a conspiracy but that there was some doubt as to the sufficiency of the evidence to warrant a charge on violation of the Clayton Law.

Hollywood, Jan.

Abraham Cleaves, 58, porter widely known for serving celebs on the Sante Fe Chief between here and Chicago, has been set by Marc Connelly for 'Green Pastures' at Warners.

He'll be the archangel.

20 Arrested for Kid Admish Violations; Propose 'Segregation'

rive to round up doormen and ticket sellers in New York picture houses resulted in more than 20 being summoned to West Side Court before Magistrate Louis B. Brodsky on a charge of admitting minors accompanied by an adult.

The defendants, men and women, all pleaded not guilty and were held in small bail for Special Sessions. The arrests were made as a result of an edict issued by Police Commissioner Valentine. The defendants are employed in the smaller film houses on the west side of Eighth avenue.

The Mayor and the Children's Society are keenly interested in this drive. A plan is on foot under which children unaccompanied will be segregated in the theatres and a matron placed in charge of them.

REFUSED $150 'BANK' PRIZE, SUES FOR $2,000

Minneapolis, Jan. 21.

Because he was refused a $150 'bank night' prize which he claims he won, I. J. Carr wants $2,000 damages for the 'humiliation' suffered by reason of not being paid off after being announced by the Fall theatre, local independent neighborhood house, as the winner. He has brought suit in district court for that amount as well as for the $150 prize money, naming Max B. Mark, manager of the theatre as defendant.

Carr alleges his name was drawn as the winner, but because the theatre then found that his name had been entered twice on the roll of those eligible for the prize he was unable to collect.

MAX WEISFELDT HEAD OF COL. SHORTS DEPT.

Max Weisfeldt goes in as short subject sales chief at Columbia Pictures this week, supplanting J. W. McFarland, who recently resigned.

Westfeldt, who comes from West Coast, resigned as head of Picture Classics, Inc., shorts producer, to go with Columbia.

Turner's Bally Agency

Terry Turner, for 14 years director of advertising and publicity for the Loew Circuit and for several years in the same capacity for the RKO theatres and Radio City Music Hall, has taken offices at 247 Park Avenue, to devote his entire time to making tie-ups between national advertisers and motion pictures and directing national campaigns and contests.

For the past two years Turner has been in that field with the Lord & Thomas agency, and has found that the national advertiser is inclined to participate in stunts, especially with pictures and theatres.

Publix NW Adds 'Bank'

Minneapolis, Jan. 21.

For the first time Publix will start using 'bank night' in some of its Twin City neighborhood houses. The theatres selected for the inaugural are the Lorsing, one of its largest and most elaborate local uptown theatres, and the Arlon, Granada and Rialto of this city, and the Capital, St. Paul, its principal neighborhood house in the up-river city.

The circuit also recently reduced its night admission price at the Loring here from 25c to 15c.

Held over in NEW YORK

Braving a raging blizzard thousands of people fought their way into the Radio City Music Hall in New York at the world premiere of "Strike Me Pink". Sunday proved to be a miracle in the annals of show business when, despite subzero weather, the "Standing Room Only" tapes were overworked all day. "Strike Me Pink" piled up such a tremendous gross that it is definitely held over a second week at the world's largest theatre.

Held over in PHILADELPHIA

"Strike Me Pink" sets a new season's record at the Aldine theatre in Philadelphia. The first three day's gross of record-breaking calibre insures a definite second week hold over and probably a third. As we go to press, crowds continue to storm box-office to see the year's greatest comedy smash.

$1,500 in Royalties Alone Clipped As 'Jumbo' Becomes Something Else

Among other changes, Texaco will drop the 'Jumbo' show title from its weekly (Tuesday) evening program over NBC, commencing with next week's (28) show which marks the beginning of its second 13-week stretch. Broadcasts will continue from the Hippodrome theatre, New York, with Billy Rose's 'Jumbo' liberally plugged in the announcements, but deletion of the 'Jumbo' title as the name of the program. This saves around $1,500 in authors' and composers' royalties.

Under the new setup the total cost of the show will be reduced by around 30%, or to less than $8,000. For its first 13 weeks it has been a $12,500 production.

Physical changes in the entertainment started with last night's (Tuesday) broadcast, which was a straight musical affair with Jimmy Durante, Arthur Sinclair and other members of the 'Jumbo' cast eliminated. Appearing last night and remaining on for the next 13 weeks are Gloria Grafton, Donald Novis, Bob Lawrence, the male chorus and Adolph Deutsch's orchestra.

Eddie Duchin's dance band also had a spot in last night's show. Duchin is a holdover for Texaco from the oil company's former Ed Wynn program, with Duchin's contract extending into this season. Sponsor has been paying Duchin $2,500 a week without using him. Not set whether Duchin continues with the show under the new arrangement, but he'll be paid regardless as per contract, standing by or otherwise.

Maybe Frank Fay

The $1,500 weekly royalty fee on 'Jumbo' consisted of $1,000 to Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, who wrote the 'Jumbo' book, and $500 to Rodgers and Hart, authors of the show's music. In addition, Texaco has been paying Dave Friedman $650 a week for additional gags and continuity. Friedman also is out under the net setup, which calls for a straight musical show entitled 'Texaco Presents' and with no script involved. Only deviation from the strictly musical classification for the future may be the insertion of a comedy m.c. None set yet, but Frank Fay has been mentioned.

Billy Rose shares in the new deal as lessee of the Hippodrome to Texaco on Tuesday nights, and for the advertising and publicity value accorded his show by the broadcasts.

Failure of the ambitious 'Jumbo' program try to land with smacko success is attributed to the impossibility of projecting a circus atmosphere, sight unseen, over the radio.

WALKS ON SPONSOR WHO CENSORED COPY

Baltimore, Jan. 21.

Lou Azrael, columnist in Hearst's News-Post whose daily stint indubitably has more readers than any other in town, flatly quit his commercial series on WBAL last week when sponsor sought to dictate what copy could be used on air. Azrael broadcast but one of series of four weekly quarter-hour talks. The sponsor was Walter Scott Motor Co., local distrib.

At the News-Post Azrael has free rein to pen what he wishes in the space devoted to him.

WBAL has not as yet found another program to replace. Scott Motors reported in plenty heat because of incident, especially because of fact Azrael stated in his newspaper what reason prompted his sudden fading from air.

A Knock's a Boost

Luella S. Laudin, secretary of Women's National Radio Committee, in interview with Dick Fishell over WMCA, New York, last week, took a rap at the station, over which she was speaking. Claiming that WMCA 'hasn't single outstanding musical program boast about.'

ASCAP DOESN'T WANT WARNER STATION

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

ASCAP refused to license KFWB, Warner Bros.-owned station, as an undesirable client on account of insinuations by Manager Jerry King on how the Society whipped stations into line. ASCAP wired warning of legal redress should the stations play numbers in its repertory.

King, however, says the station will continue to play Society tunes and demand issuance of a license on the grounds that KFWB is included in blanket invitation to all stations to sign new five-year contract.

Squelch Press Stunt To Use Prized Relic As Honor for the Maj.

Norfolk, Va.,

City Council got pretty peeved here when some citizens presumably inspired by press agents for Major Bowes tried to put over a stunt involving the removal from Norfolk of a Colonial mace ordinarily kept under lock and key as a museum piece and much prized by local pride. Mace dates back to 1754 and would be a bit hard to replace.

Proposed stunt was to transport the mace to New York City in advance of the Bowes program dedicated to Norfolk and present it to the impresario. It would be merely a loan, said the press agents.

Bowes might be number one in the Crossley Reports but the Norfolk City Council still questioned that he was entitled to borrow the souvenir of Lord Robert Dinwiddie's reign as Governor of Virginia.

GROSS SUIT PENDING

$50,000 Action Against Cantor In Higher Court

Albany, Jan. 21.

State Court of Appeals has under consideration the $50,000 libel suit of Ben Gross against Eddie Cantor. Gross is radio columnist of the New York Daily News.

Gross considers himself personally libeled in a telegram from Cantor that was published in a magazine. The wire found fault with the New York City radio editors as a group. It accused all but one of 'log rolling tactics,' 'delving into personalities' and with 'lack of background.'

The lower courts decided Gross had failed to prove he was libeled. Gross was a conspicuous absentee at the dinner Cantor threw three weeks ago in New York to the daily radio editors.

Porter Smith and B. B. Blakemore are the new business manager and commercial sales manager respectively at WATL, Atlanta, while J. M. Swicegood will alternate as general manager between the Atlanta and Columbus, Ga., stations, both owned by the Atlanta Broadcasting company. Permanent injunction was granted Woodruff by Atlanta Superior Court judge restraining Cisler from entering premises or exercising control, management or direction of station.

Woodruff alleged in petition that under terms of agreement whereby he purchased majority of stock in Atlanta Broadcasting company, operators of WATL, Cisler had failed to meet terms of agreement by a smaller purchase of stock, but continued to exercise direction of station. Woodruff also asked to be excused from debts set forth at $4,500, which he said were incurred by Cisler during period station operated in co-operation with Ogelthorpe University.

Woodruff sets forth full claim to station which he said he bought for $16,500.

EPIDEMIC OF BENEFITS AT WMCA

WMCA, New York City, is probably the champion benefit station of radiodom. During 1935 the Donald Flamm station or its personnel was identified with approximately 500 benefits for charitable organizations of one kind or another.

Harry Hershfield alone appeared at 266 benefits during the year, which is averaging three or four a week. Majority of the Hershfield banquet appearances were picked up in whole or part for airing over the station.

In this same connection William Hodson, N. Y. Public Welfare Commissioner, last week spoke over WMCA on 'Church Charities, Fake and Real'.

Braun will book Lee and other radio attractions for personals east and west, also for the network.

'Think of the Nice Bus Ride the Amateurs Will Have'—Youth, Inc.

Detroit, Jan. 21.

Youth, Incorporated, the same organization that backs beerless beer gardens for boys and girls is anxious to open the door of opportunity to Detroit lads and lassies. They believe that the depression and modern tendencies make it tough for kids without connections to get started. However, there is considerable eyebrow raising locally over the method adopted by the philantrophic organization to open the door of opportunity. They're running an amateur contest in one of their beerless beer gardens!

Extreme vagueness and lack of realistic information on the amateur gag characterizes the well-meaning officials of Youth, Inc. When pinned down for facts it comes out that the only opportunity actually guaranteed is a two-day trip by bus next May to New York City. Youth, Inc., has no deal or understanding and apparently has not even had any correspondence with any amateur program auspices. How an amateur could audition and broadcast and get back to Detroit in two days flat also not explained.

Detroiters who have heard the amateur thing described as show business' number one racket are criticizing Youth, Inc., for a gesture that's meaningless for the noble purpose proclaimed. These Detroiters point out that an amateur can only work, if at all, in an amateur unit and that swinging the door of opportunity open on vaudeville which has been practically dead for years is simply going to increase the number of layoffs who imagine themselves actors. A phoney amateur was recently yanked out of a unit here.

'Well, anyhow,' says Mrs. Mabel Miller, director of the group, 'even if they don't get an audition or don't win think of the nice sightseeing trip they'll have.'

Nine acts participated in the first contest last week.

Blackett-Sample-Hummert Retains No. 1 Position Among Radio Spenders —$1,234,143 for Spot Broadcasting

THOMPSON 2d

Black - Sample - Hummert accounted for 14% of Columbia's gross turnover in time for ran away ahead of the next big agency spender on the network's list, which was N. W. Ayer. Altogether last year Blackett bought $6,014,246 worth of radio bookings, with $2,114,962 of it going to CBS, $2,501,395 to NBC, $1,234,143 for spot time and $163,746 to the Mutual Network.

In addition to retaining its No. 1 position in radio for the third consecutive year, Blackett showed an increase of 32.3% over the agency's radio billings for 1934. N. W. Ayer's time placements with Columbia was somewhat over the 1934 figure, with $1,728,527 of the $1,822,529 total coming from the Ford exchequer.

Wasey Products gave the Erwin, Wasey agency $674,232 of the $1,046,674 it spent on CBS, while in the case of Batten, Barton, Durstine & Osborn $465,125 of its $999,018 in gross CBS billings represented the cost of 'The March of Time' clearances.

J. Walter Thompson's gross network billings, with this including its regional hookups on the westcoast for Shell Oil and other accounts, came to $4,848,078, or around 15% better than they were for 1934. This agency's spot business amounted to less than $100,000 for 1935.

In 1934 Blackett had a slight edge over Thompson in the total amount of network billings.

NBC on its red (WEAF) and blue (WJZ) networks last year served 75 out of radio's 100 biggest spenders and got 63.8% of the coin spent on all network facilities. Of the 75 accounts 34 were carried on the red and the balance on the blue.

On the angle of exclusiveness CBS figures that it had 25 such accounts, while the red had 12 advertisers that were allied with no other network and the blue, four customers of this description.

NBC statisticians in their analysis found that the top 10 in radio's big spender ranks during 1935 were responsible for $15,360,937 in gross billings, of which amount the red and the blue links garnered $10,441,076.

WJR, Detroit's $325,602 Profit

Dividend Payable Jan. 20 — W. E. Hutton Elected to Board of Directors

Detroit, Jan. 21.

With the biggest year in station's history just closed, WJR this week declared a dividend of 37½ cents, payable Jan. 30 to stock of record Jan. 20. From an estimated income of around $500,000 during 1935, station reported a profit of $325,602 after charges and taxes, equal to $2.50 a share on 130,000 shares of $5 par capital stock, about 30,000 shares of which were sold to public at $25 per in December.

Profit of $256,802, or $1.97 per share, was reported by WJR in 1934.

Rise in station's income was aided by upping power to 50,000 watts last September. For 28 consecutive months WJR has shown a substantial revenue increase over same month of previous year. Each month of 1935 set new revenue records for station.

William E. Hutton, of W. E. Hutton & Co., stock brokers who handled sale of WJR stock to public, first of its kind in U. S., was elected a director of WJR, Inc., this week. All other officers, who own large majority of station's stock—George A. Richards, pres.; Leo J. Fitzpatrick, vice-pres. and g.m.; and P. M. Thomas, treasurer—were re-elected.

MORE COIN SUSTAINING

Jimmy Scribner Walks Out On Baltimore Commercial

Baltimore, Jan. 21.

Quitting WBAL last week was Jimmy Scribner, who had protean serial on station daily for past ten months, last couple on commercial basis for Carlsbad Salts. Scribner left to return to WLW, Cincinnati, from which station he came last year to WBAL. Starts on the Crosley broadcaster this week with same serial, though changing tag from 'The Johnson Family,' which it bore here, to 'Mama and Papa Johnson.'

WBAL has been forced to cancel the Carlsbad commercial, and has not as yet found anything to replace Scribner. Ironic that he will receive bigger dough on WLW as a sustainer than he did on WBAL with a sponsor.

KNX Topped L.A. Area in '35 with Increase of 54%

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.

Top grosser in the Southern California area for past year was KNX, the Guy Earl 50,000-watt station in Hollywood. Not only headed the list but also showed a healthier increase over previous twelve-month, 54%.

Second place goes to another 50 k.w. spot, Earl C. Anthony's KFI. This frequency finished out front last year in a race with KNX but dropped into the place slot in '35.

Columbia's outlet, KHJ held to third position. Network accounts increased as did spot announcements but no bulge was noticeable in the heavier coin brackets, KFWB put on 20% over previous year but showed a lack of spurt on the dollar side.

Both KFAC and KMTR bettered mark of year before, with the latter transmitter having an edge for position. KEHE and KELW, Hearst-owned stations, didn't do much in a commercial way but may take a healthy slice this year. KECA, recently returned to network rating, didn't cut much of a figure, devoting most of its time to concert discing on a sustaining basis.

Ben McGlashan's KGFJ outscored the smaller stations, all of whom showed better returns than '34.

RESOLUTION IN CONGRESS ASKS AN INVESTIGATION OF BROADCASTING

Connery, Massachusetts Democrat, Brings Grumbling Out Into Open—President Roosevelt's 'Hands Off' Attitude—Committee of 40 Rapped

Washington, Jan. 21.

A sweeping Congressional inquiry into activities of the Federal Communications Commission relating to broadcasting was demanded in Congress Wednesday (15). Representative William P. Connery, Democrat, of Massachusetts, introduced a resolution that would create a committee of five members to get the lowdown on many matters and give the Commish a going-over. Proposition was referred to the House Rules (administration-controlled) Committee consideration.

As to the movement to grill radio czars moved into the open, numerous other developments on the radio front received public attention. These included:

1. Disclosure that Department of Justice agents have launched a new inquiry into F.C.C. affairs, particularly the handling of the applications of station WNBF, Binghamton, N. Y., and Knox Broadcasting Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

2. Rumors that because of political intervention, Commish is about to back-track on its decision to delete station KFYR, Bismarck, N. D., using excess power.

3. Publication of a letter sent Prall by Representative Richard A. Wigglesworth, Republican, of Massachusetts, together with Prall's response, asking numerous pointed questions about Commish policies and activities.

Disclosure that four of the seven members refused to approve Prall's answer to Wigglesworth on the ground the responses were not accurate descriptions of Commish views.

President Roosevelt took a hands-off stand and declined to mix into the turbulent life of the Commish. President said at his press conference that his only knowledge of F.C.C. troubles came from press reports and declared he was taking no hand in any of the investigations. The President pointed out that he has not conferred with any members of the Commission during recent weeks.

The committee named to look into non-profit broadcasting, which is headed by Dr. John W. Studebaker, Commissioner of Education, is stacked with industry representatives, Connery said, although the individuals were supposed be educators.

Raps Committee of 40

'These are the 40 men who are to make an unbiased study of the question as to what should be done about allocating time on the radio to education, labor, religion, veterans, farmers and other non-profit-making enterprises,' the Massachusetts Congressman said. 'Of these 40, please notice 18 of the men picked by the Radio Commission either own or operate commercial radio stations; seven are affiliated with people who run the stations; two of the 40 belong to the Communications Commission; leaving 13 educators out of the 40 to whom the general public is supposed to look for relief on this question of allocating time.'

Chairman Prall flatly denied Congressman Wigglesworth's insinuation that the Commish is delinquent in handling applications, declaring there is no case when as much as 22 months elapsed between submission of a case and filing of briefs. The question of issuing a license to the Shepard Broadcasting Co. has been delayed, he said, because the Yankee network station wants facilities in violation of Commish regulations. Prall added that Shepard controls 13.33% of Massachusetts stations, listing his holdings as WEAN, Providence, WNAC, Boston; WAAB, Boston, and WICC, Bridgeport, Conn.

Meanwhile, two Justice Department agents were revealed to be carrying on an intensive investigation of circumstances surrounding the rivalry between station WNBF and the Knox Broadcasting Co. for the right to use the 1240 kc channel in upper New York State. G-men were understood to have made a secret trip to Albany in running down reports that Mortimer Prall, chairman's son, overheard conversation about paying a commissioner to vote a certain way, while the majority of the F.C.C. continued with its own quiz into the same matter.

Taking advantage of Republican rumpus over use of the air-waves for political discussion, Rep. Byron N. Scott, California Democrat, last week solicited support of the Republican party for legislation designed to strip the Federal Communications Commission of its censorship powers, 'provide for regular periods for discussion of social problems with an equal opportunity for both sides of a controversial issue to expound their points of view,' and relieve broadcast stations of responsibility for any remarks made over the air.

In a wire to Henry P. Fletcher, Republican National Committee chairman and chief squawker about Columbia Broadcasting Company's apparent partiality for Democratic programs, Rep. Scott beat the bass drum for two bills introduced last year in the House of Representatives and fathered by the American Civil Liberties Union.

Governor Would Use Mexican Station to Broadcast Meeting

Atlanta.

Governor Eugene Talmadge, anti-administration politician, has been barred from the use of NBC and CBS radio facilities under the policy recently promulgated by both webs.

Governor wanted to broadcast the convention of the 'Jeffersonian Democrats' (his kind) to be held in Macon, Georgia, on Jan. 29.

Finding himself stymied he has been trying to work out a stunt to have the red-hot speeches taken by telephone wires to the independent radio station at Del Rio, Mexico, to be broadcast over the high-powered airwave of that station.

Not certain, however, that this can be arranged.

Governor's Daughter Sponsored Over KDYL

Salt Lake City, Jan. 21.

Evelyn Blood, daughter of the Governor of the state of Utah, made her radio debut over KDYL last Thursday (16) as editor of the 'Society Column of the Air.' She is sponsored by Crawford-Day, home furnishers. Chats on home styles, fashions, society events and her sponsor. A string ensemble and a male soloist assist.

Miss Blood is billed as Alice True. As soon as local society mob learned of her identity they flocked to KDYL and now sit in as an audience.

ORGAN MUSIC REVIVAL

Back on Station Mat Voted It a Public Bore

Charlotte, N. C., Jan. 21.

WBT has arranged for use of a new organ and returns that type of music to the air over its station for the first time in a year. Station pulled its wire from the Carolina theatre 12 months ago with the announcement that there was no public interest in that type of music. Present wire is to the Z. A. Hovis chapel, where a new organ has just been installed.

A program of organ music has been sold to the Benjamin Moore Paint company and is scheduled for each Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock. Marie Davenport is the organist.

Hollywood End

Trend among the New York advertising agencies is to continue to shift more and more of their program directors to Hollywood. J. Walter Thompson agency has as many producers on the Coast as it has in the New York office.

Other agencies maintaining radio staffs on the Coast are Cecil, Warwick & Cecil, Lennon & Mitchell, Kenyon & Eckhardt, Benton & Bowles, Young & Rubicam and Kenyon & Eckhardt.

Courtesy Gesture by Stations Helps Daily Explain News Error

Cincinnati, Jan. 21.

Unique incident of radio coming to the assistance of the press in smoothing out a serious news bull occurred Thursday (16) when WCKY, WSAI and WKRC flashed correction announcements as a courtesy to the Times-Star.

Afternoon sheet, in one of its late editions that day, carried a story of a court decision approving a liquidating dividend to depositors of a defunct local bank. Boner in the yarn was use of name of one of the burg's oldest and biggest banks for the closed institution. Paper ran a front page explanation of the mix-up in its final issue. To make added timely amends, Moses Strauss, managing editor, called upon three stations to include the clarified report in their early night newscasts. Broadcasters obliged graciously, on a gratis basis.

Strauss did not extend the request to WCPO, 'voice of the Post,' opposition rag.

Affair, equally smart on part of newspaper and broadcasters, regarded by air and fourth estate mob as an important good-will cementer between Cincy station owners and publishers, the latter only recently having renewed radio news columns, following a lay-off of several years.

CBS Sales Promotion Personnel Changed

Number of personnel changes being made in the advertising and sales promotion department at CBS's home office. Jules Dundees and Edwin S. Reynolds, latter previously with WOR, New York, added to the staff of writers. Dan Wickenden, newcomer to radio, named assistant to Maurice Gaffney, director of trade news.

Meantime Bob Schmidt is resigning to take a job with the Mutual web, John Churchill, previously in the market research department as assistant to John J. Karol, now appointed chief statistician.

Kate Smith in Louisville

Louisville, Jan. 21.

Kate Smith, Ted Collins and revue company of 40 arrived in Louisville, Sunday (19), and played two-hour private performance for A. & P. employes at Memorial Auditorium. Over 2,500 people crowded the theatre. Singer also aired her regular stanza over CBS network from WHAS studios Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

During the Louisville stay singer was interviewed by Mildred Lee, radio scribe, over WHAS, and made several talks before civic clubs in the interest of the city's Community Chest drive which is in progress.

Acme to Mutual

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Acme White Lead company goes to Mutual with a new show on Feb. 4, set through the local Henri-Hurst & McDonald agency. Will use WGN here, WOR in Newark, WLW in Cincinnati and five stations of the Yankee network.

Show will be broadcast on WGN here at noon and then rebroadcast an hour later for the rest of the chain.

NEW YORK RADIO PARADE

By Nellie Revell

Precise Stage Directions

Authoress of one of radio's oldest family scripts handles all her own casting and production. Recently this series returned to the air, this time at another network. Follows her instructions to one of the actors auditioning for her: 'the script calls for a man of about 52 with a touch of the Bronx in his voice but not Jewish.' With this description the actor went into a huddle, crammed, auditioned. After which the authoress left the control room and complimented the actor on doing a swell job, giving her just what she wanted, etc., at such short notice. The inevitable occurred when she asked, 'Now play it just once more but this time make him, about...about two years older.'

Radio Audi lipped In

Reason the Nat Abramson Op'ry House show at the MBS-Playhouse over the New Amsterdam Theatre runs from 9:15 to 11:30 rather than the usual 8:30 to 11 p.m. is that George White's 'Scandals,' legit musical revue is playing at the New Amsterdam Theatre proper and audiences for this show take preference. Starting Op'ry House at similar time would jam the lobby. As it is the Lou Little program which uses the MBS-Playhouse from 8 to 8:30 exits its audience through the rear of the building.

Bacher's C.O.D. Ideas

Last week Bill Bacher planed in from the coast for a fast once over of the town. He spent quite a time in a huddle with Benton & Bowles, executives, his former bosses. Among other deals mentioned was an idea Bacher offered them for use on their Beauty Box account. However, Bacher had prepared no script and wanted $25,000 on the line for his idea. B&B took time out to think, Bacher flew back to the coast. (One night last week a program built round Lionel Barrymore was piped in from the coast for Palmolive account. Built by and piped over CBS.)

Hal Kemp lots Summer

Gulf Oil wants Hal Kemp's band to carry on for the coming summer while Phil Baker is vacationing. But Kemp, currently at the Hotel Pennsylvania, usually goes a-touring during the summer months making top coin on one-nighters and dances. At present the sponsor and Kemp are endeavoring to make a deal whereby the band might be aired from major cities while touring. Hinges on how Kemp's dates re arranged.

Publisher Gets Hunk

Maxwell Showboat dropped its 'Let's Have Another Cup of Coffee' theme song. 'Let's Have...' is published by Berlin's. Seems this publisher was getting a run around when it came to getting a few plugs for other tunes, on this program. Hence the restriction.

CANADIAN STATIONS MEET

Warners Opens Legal Fire in N. Y.; Sues NBC, CBS, WMCA, WHN, Others

Warner opened its barrage of litigation last Friday (17) with the filing of four copyright infringement action in the Federal Court in Manhattan. WB publishing group has a raft of other complaints in preparation against stations in various parts of the country and it proposes to file these with the local courts during the current week.

Last week's four actions involved WEAF, NBC's red key; WABC, Columbia's New York outlet; WMCA, fountain head for the Inter-City Group, and WHN, the Marcus Loew Booking Agency outlet. Also named in the WHN case were the Schenley Products Co. and the William H. Rankin agency on amateur show, which the liquor combine had supported over WHN. With the latter station the alleged unauthorized use occurred on Jan. 1 and the tune was Witmark's 'I Love Mountain Music.'

WMCA is accused of infringing Jan. 3 by way of 'Mountain Music' also, while an early New Year's Day broadcast of 'Put On Your Old Gray Bonnet' (Remick) was cited in the complaint against WEAF. Harms' 'I Get a Kick Out of You' was the tune that WABC is alleged to have broadcast on Jan. 3. Damages of $5,000 is asked in each of the four complaints.

Warner ros. reveals the position that it will take toward municipally or state owned stations in the matter of issuing performing licenses in the answer it has drawn up in the suit which WNYC filed last week in the New York Supreme Court. Corporation Counsel Windels asked that WB be restrained from interfering with the city's station on the 'ground that since it didn't operate for a profit there was no need of it obtaining a performing license.

Warners' reply to this demand for a declaratory judgment was it was ready to give WNYC a license as soon as the municipality was agreeable to signaturing the sort of contract which WB had drawn up for it. This agreement stipulates that the station will not broadcast anything that is staged for a profit, with the idea here being to prevent the promoters of a charity or any other enterprise to use the station gratis for the boosting of such private propositions.

Warner Bros. filed two additional copyright infringment suits against New York outlets yesterday (Tuesday), making six the total number of complaints it has on hand with the Federal court in Manhattan. WB at the same time acted against WIP, Philadelphia, with the papers laced with the U. S. court in that city. Number of stations which have taken out Warner music licenses tallied 231 by press time yesterday (Tuesday).

WNEW and WMCA were named in the latest infringement actions brought by WB in New York. Former outlet was charged with airing Remick's 'Canadian Capers' and Witmark's 'Lullaby of Broadway' on Jan. 5 and 4, respectively, without obtaining the necessary permission, while the second complaint against WMCA cites the use unauthorizedly of Remick's 'My Buddy' on Jan. 4. WIP is alleged to have broadcast 'Canadian Capers' on the night of Jan. 1. Like the previous actions, an award of $5,000 damages is being asked in each of the foregoing complaints.

Warner is proceeding slowly in its campaign of litigation. Performing rights contracts in connection with each infringed composition are carefully checked before the complaint is drawn. Instead of depending on the radio log record for its evidence, WB is collecting voluminous affidavits. Filing of the infringement papers on the New York end is being handled by A. M. Wattenberg, counsel for the various Warner publishing firms.

Red Face Stuff

Atlanta, Jan. 21.

tation WATL found itself in an embarrassing position last week when attempting to cover the Joe Louis-Charles Retzlaff fight by shortwave. Similarity of name between Joe Louis in the main bout and Tiger Al Lewis in the semi-final put on just afterwards resulted in a complete confusion.

Station was racing merrily ahead with a sparkling blow-by-blow description of a five round fight only to discover that the wrong fight was on the air!

COMMERCIALS START ON NEW NBC LOOP

NBC has three accounts set for clearance over the west coast supplementary of the blue (WJZ) link. They are Woodbury, Jergens and Lucky Strike. For the smokes it will be the new Wednesday night program.

Failure to clear this Pacific supplementary in time was responsible, according to NBC, for its loss of the Mary Pickford show to CBS. The backers of the Pickford program, the National Ice Industries, Inc., had set a week ago Saturday (10) as the deadline for this clearance, or else. Several of the dealers participating in the co-operative project had already printed merchandising material with NBC given as the release when the waiting period expired.

Blue's Pacific setup consists of KGO, San Francisco; KECA, Los Angeles; KFSP, San Diego; KEX, Portland; KJR, Seattle, and KGA, Spokane.

MEXICAN SIGNAL IS WINNIPEG STATIC

Winnipeg, Jan. 21.

In line with squawks from rural listeners who claimed Chicago station were interfering with reception of CKY, government owned Winnipeg transmitter, that station had its frequency changed from 780 kilocycles to 910 several months back. Now more howls are coming in, this time complaining that the Mexican transmitter, XEAW, is making radio reception do flip-flops down on the farms.

Minister of telephones, W. J. Major, has been asked to do something. Another change in frequency is sought.

Raymer's Detroit Office

Paul Raymer, station rep, opening a branch office in the General Motors building in Detroit with Paul Wilson, previously a member of Raymer's office, in charge.

Concurrently WBRC, Birmingham, is added to the client list. Is a 1,000-watter and member of CBS. Has had no rep heretofore.

Paul Raymer office has taken over the representation of WBRC, Birmingham, in the national field.

Parsonnet to D&C

Marion Parsonnet is switching to Donahue & Coe from the Lennen & Mitchell agency.

Donahue & Coe will send Parsonnet to Los Angeles to handle the Mary Pickford series for National Ice Dealers. Programs will originate in the projection room of Pickfair in Beverly Hills.

MANY PROBLEMS IN DOMINION

Indie Stations Huddle in Toronto to Formulate Polices—Pending Changes by Liberals Not Yet Clarified

150 ATTEND

Toronto,

With the major topic of discussion to be the matter of performing rights in Canada, this now accentuated, , by the withdrawal of Warner ros. from ASCAP, representatives of Canada's independent stations, as distinct from those owned or operated by the Canadian Radio Commission, are here for a two-day conference of the Canadian Association of Broadcasters which gets under way tomorrow (22). Delegates are here from Halifax on the east, to Vancouver on the west. Discussion will centre around the clarification of certain points in the Judge Parker report regarding the activities of the Canadian Performing Rights Society plus the WB withdrawal. Not understood here whether Canadian law will uphold the withdrawal of the WB repertoire as far as broadcasting stations in this country are concerned. Directors of C. A. B., who held a conference behind closed doors today (Tuesday) confess themselves at sea and will not be able to reach any decision until tomorrow's general meeting.

Questions of program service and card rates are also to be dealt with, but specific complaints will not be known until the arrival of the full delegation.

Loosening of federal regulations on radio advertising in Canada has been promised by Prime Minister Mackenzie King, but he has not yet elucidated certain proposals regarding new regulations, specifically those dealing with the commission's ban on spot announcements from 7 to 11 p. m. This problem may come up in tomorrow's conference. If it is the considered opinion of the meeting certain recommendations regarding presumed deterrents to commercial broadcasting in Canada will be made to the Dominion authorities.

Expected political changes and reforms in Dominion broadcasting which may occur in March and April at which time radio commission personnel and regulations are slated to be revamped by the present Liberal administration. It is generally felt that Canada will in the immediate future have a better chance to cop off a growing volume of advertising revenue. So, despite various difficulties and problems yet to be solved, the broadcasters feel they are on the threshold of big things.

Association members have grievances against the commission, notably as concerns station compensation which is, as in America, below local card rates. While grumbling among themselves the peculiarly delicate political situation under which stations must operate in Canada has thus far frightened broadcasters from plain speaking out loud.

Anything like the open floor squabbling characteristic of the conventions of the American broadcasters trade association (N.A.B.) is quite unlikely here. Boys are not that sure of their own rights and this is only their second annual pow-wow anyhow. Toronto newspapers will not be admitted to any of the meetings. Comparatively few persons not themselves Canadian broadcasters will be present. Among the exceptions are George Besse, from Chicago, and Joseph Hershey McGillvra, from New York, both of the station rep firm bearing the latter's name. McGillvra has the largest list of Canadian stations of any American time broker.

Harry Sedgwick will preside as president of the Canadian association. Arthur Evans is secretary. Among those here are: Major William C. Borrett, CHNS, Halifax; J. Narcisse Thivierge, CHRC, Quebec; L. W. Bewick, CHSJ, St. John; J. E. Campeau, CKLW, Windsor; Phil Lalonde, CKAC, Montreal; W. A. Stanton, CHML, Hamilton; W. C. Mitchell, CKCR, Waterloo; H. Gordon Love, CFCN, Calgary; M. Lefebvre, CHLP, Montreal; L. E. Edwards, CKOC, Hamilton; H. Dougall, CKPR, Fort William; H. R. McLaughlin, CJRC, Winnipeg; G. Little, CKCR, Waterloo; J. Beardall, CFCO, Chatham; Henry Gooderham, CKCL, Toronto; H. R. Carson, CFAC, Calgary; A. A. Murphy, CFQC, Saskatoon; George C. Chadler, CJOR, Vancouver; Harry Sedgwick, CFRB, Toronto; E. T. Sandell, CKTB, St. Catharines; J. D. Buchanan, CKPC, Brantford; E. W. Mason, CKSO, Sudbury; A. Cormier, CKCH, Hull; Dr. G. M. Geldert, CKCO, Ottawa; Alexander Dupont, CKCH, Hull.

Meetings are being held at the Royal York hotel here.

Reginald Billin recently resigned as WAVE, Louisville program director, is giving recitals and demonstrations on new electric organ for local music firm.

Report Hartford Merchants Raising Funds to Keep WTIC; WDRC's $175,000 1935 Profit

What, No Billing!

Difficulty which Pinaud is experiencing in its quest for a substitute singer on its Mutual Network program is largely due to the refusal of the candidates to cloak mike identity in a name of the commercial's choosing. Pinaud is insisting that the newcomer take a single French name, like Nanine or Yvonne.

Girl who is now on the show is billed as Jeanine. She's quitting because a youngster is on the way.

Hartfor , Jan. 21.

If a group of Hartford business men can prevent it, this city will not lose Station WTIC, its 50,000-watter, now in the works to be moved to Boston. Good many ifs and maybes in the whole situation. Federal Communications Commission has not openly expressed any sentiments which is an important omission in all calculations. And the Boston broadcasters are just as enthusiastic over the movement to keep WTIC in Hartford as are the Hartford merchants.

Hartford's idea is that WTIC has been a standout civic asset and its loss simply as a pawn in a checkerboard game between two competitive broadcasting groups would be hard to justify as in 'the public convenience, interest and necessity.'

WDRC, $175,000

Meanwhile WTIC has been losing $300,000, or better, every year with the Travelers Insurance Company no longer willing to charge off the deficit to advertising. Against this the present Columbia affiliate, WDRC, will clear a profit for 1935 of about $175,000. Station will presently move into new and more impressive quarters.

To hold WTIC in Hartford local business men will have to raise funds to match or better the option money put up by Cherry and Webb, Providence department store group which owns WPRO, Providence. Columbia Broadcasting is reported as having supplied part of this option money.

Hartford Chamber of Commerce feels that the loss of WTIC will be felt by the city for within the past few years more and more conventions have been brought here. Radio publicity helped a lot. Hotels would also not like to see WTIC move away and merchants covering national areas from Hartford would feel the loss. Radio Station WDRC and the newcomers to be owned and operated by the Hartford Times are already preparing baskets to get some of the WTIC business. The Times station will start operating on or about May 1.

Ft. Wayne Pair To NBC Ally; WOWO on Red?

Fort Wayne, Ind., . 21.

Indiana broadcast circles see in the purchase of WOWO and WGL by the Westinghouse Manufacturing Co. a precursory move on the part of NBC to strengthen the position of both the red and the blue links in this territory. Buy of the two outlets from Fred C. Zeig and co-local interests is subject to the approval of the Federal Communications Commission.

WOWO is licensed at 10,000 watts on a clear channel (1160 kc.) and divides time with WWVA, Wheeling, W. Va., while WGL operates at 100 watts full time. WOWO is on CBS' supplementary list.

Probabilities are that WOWO will be aligned with the red (WEAF) link and WGL made a part of the special group (WIRE, Indianapolis, WCKY, Cincinnati, WHIO, Dayton), which may be used in place of WLW, Cincinnati, by a client of either the blue (WJZ) or red.

Walter Evans, mgr. Westinghouse's radio division, represented that company on the deal. NBC has an operating arrangement on all Westinghouse-owned outlets.

REPUBLICAN NAT'L COMM.
Tuesdays 8:30-9 p. m.
WGN, Chicago

With all the drama of a Buck Rogers thriller this platterized political campaign drew thousands of telegrams and phone calls to the studios on the first broadcast on Jan. 14 when the program came over the loudspeaker in a rush of blurred sound, roar of static and general interference. This continued for exactly eight minutes of the opening portion of the broadcast and made the show hardly audible and particularly difficult to listen to. Only the dyed-in-the-wool Republicans and reporters on duty stuck valiantly to the radio when 'Jumbo' beckoned pleasantly on one side of the dial and Fred Waring on the other.

One of those defects in the needle which blurred its sensitivity caused the Republican devotees among the listeners to insist that there was dirty work afoot. So insistent was this report that the Republican National Committee through its press bureau in Chicago released a story that the G. O. P. didn't believe that the trouble was deliberate and laughed off the reports that the air channels were being sprayed to cause deliberate interference.

However, after eight minutes of blurred sound, Tom Sabin, National Director of Radio for the Republican National Committee, rushed to the mike to explain that the program would continue in just a moment. There was silence and then the show started once more, and for the first time, clearly. They had shoved the needle back somewhat and that those who had been suffering doggedly through the blurred opening of the program had to listen to a portion of it all over again.

So much from the technical jamboree. As far as show business is concerned, it's a second-rate show hardly comparing in audience pull with such programs as 'Lone Ranger,' Lionel Barrymore in 'Scrooge,' 'Little Orphan Annie' or 'First Nighter.' And since the G. O. P. have come to the ether as a show business plea to the nation, they must stick more closely to the rules of showmanship.

Throughout the program the tone is that of foreboding, impending doom and likely disaster. The entire tone is negative, not positive.

Show is split up into a number of home-life sketches which were evidently designed to bring the G. O. P. point of view right into the family circle. All sketches tended to point out the calamity which has been brought upon the country. First of the sketches has its locale at the marriage license bureau, with two young lovers deciding not to get married when the clerk informs them that among their debts they much include the debts which the government is incurring for them. Other sketch is a rib on the debt problem, with two crossroads storekeepers deciding to add to their debts rather than pay off their current bills on the grounds that they would then be spending their way to prosperity. Third sketch took place in a butcher shop and took for its theme the increased price of pork due to the hog-killing tactics of the New Deal, while another sketch at a breakfast table blew off with the statement that the bacon being used on the table was imported from Poland due to the fact that American pork had been killed off.

There was one smart angle (borrowed from Huey Long's repertory) when at the 15-minute mark, the announcer told the public that there would be a short musical intermission and asked the listeners to phone their friends and relatives to ask them to tune into the program if they were not already listening. He asked them to tell their friends that a program of vital importance was being broadcast on WGN, the Chicago Tribune station.

This was the first program of a series and the only one on a platter. The others will originate in New York and be broadcast by live talent. Evidently they've decided to take no more chances with discs.

LIFE OF KING GEORGE V

WABC, New York

Hurriedly written, staged and broadcast within five hours of the time news of the death of King George V of England reached America, this episodic half-hour highlighting his life clearly showed that strain. It would have been better left unbroadcast, being a flimsy attempt by CBS to report a major news event and making radio compare unfavorably with what newspapers can do with a story in that length of time.

And yet little more could be expected of a half-hour of dialogue and story written on such short notice, and of a cast given such little time for rehearsal. However, production would have been more effective with a better cast (none of whose names were announced).

Life of England's king and India's emperor, as broadcast by CBS, seemingly held very little in the way of drama, the broadcast taking him up from the time of boyhood to manhood and death through episodes that were chiefly inconsequential. However, King George reigned through some of England's most hectic years, especially the World War period and the years immediately following. His parleys with the other crowned heads of Europe, his frequent chastisement of Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, prior and in the early periods of the war, would have made fine radio material, but was not included in this CBS broadcast.

Broadcast chiefly showed him as a democratic ruler who preferred the sea to the throne, excluding entirely his blunt statesmanship which once caused Colonel House, in a letter to President Wilson, to refer to him as 'the most pugnacious monarch let loose in these parts.'

Guest appearance of this femme spieler on Allan's stanza, called 'Little Moments With Big People,' showed her as possessing promising ether attributes, although the script on this occasion (17) was wishy-washy and the timing of the stuff very poor. No fault of Miss Alexander's, except that she might have spent more time rehearsing.

Background of Melinda Alexander is that of a hoity-toity lecturer and conductor of ritzy forums in the Waldorf-Astoria. These fluffy circumstances, however, did not damage her air appearance, instead equipping her with poise, clarity of voice and lucid expression. Proved herself withal as something of a femme Alexander Woollcott, though she might generally well get off the solo standard and lead a radio discussion, femme club, or something of a similar nature requiring fluent gab.

Allan's setup of the guest appearance consisted of a mythical trip to India, where Miss Alexander went into a several discussion of religious sects, customs, etc. This background contained numerous phoney angles, and Allan's prompting with questions and straight lines not up to the mark. Finish too clipped to be smooth. Guester, however, exhibited a number of promising moments and could get her stuff to register if given a chance. Also ought to read her script two or three times before addressing the mike.

(Mitchell-Faust)

There are several things wrong with this show. It is spotted badly in mid-first palace, immediately following 'Painted Dreams,' a highly dramatic program which may take the edge off this program. Every other day is also not the best routine for a continued story.

It's story of a girl who wins a beauty contest with the resultant love problems and the usual home-and-mother technique. In general, the same type of material which forms 95% of the radio script programs.

Cast from top to bottom is nickelodeon — 'Me proud beauty, marry me or I'll get my dad, the boss, to fire ya.' That sort of playing that has the heroine reading her lines with throat-y tonsils.

Brewery is sponsoring this program, and that looks like misplaced judgment also. Beer is essentially a man's drink or tradition has no meaning. Ladies go for sidecar cocktails. In the plugging much is made of the fact that this beer has gotten the bulk of its business through word-of-mouth, through people taking a swallow of the potion and then rushing to the telephone to tip off a pal. The announcer intimates that listeners should follow that plan.

Saturday, 4:45 p. m.
WOR, New York

This is the series by which the Mutual web is attempting to glorify advertising. Not just radio advertising (as proven by the choice of Roy Dickinson, charge d'affaires of Printers' Ink, as the lead-off speaker), but the whole structure of paid publicity.

Attempt fell somewhat shy of being an effective apologia for advertising on the one hand, or a thorough trade discussion on the other. Ingredient of showmanship—radio advertising's cardinal asset—entirely omitted. This left Dickinson in the dilemma of catering to both consumers and professionals without a means of glossing over his plight. Using light news snatches, etc. for material was no help. Only weakened the job.

Started his spiel by saying that advertising is as old as civilization, dating back to Babylonia. Psychology of this argument of age not impressive. Aside from being historically inaccurate (what was practiced in Babylonia was propaganda, not advertising), the point would have been firmer had Dickinson called advertising a bedfellow of mass production economy, which it decidedly is. This would have provided a livelier springboard into advertising's best thesis: that mass production needs a constant stimulant to move goods as well as herald new products.

Next came the story of the invention of the Hygeia milk bottle and how advertising acquainted mothers with this sanitary contrivance. Advertising's moral in this story is really tri-partite: (1) it spreads news of the invention; (2) it antiquated poorer bottles, hence aided quality; and (3) it created a mass market of such dimensions for Hygeia that even the humblest child can have one. Dickinson mentioned only one of these three morals—that advertising spread news of the bottle.

Windup of the stanza had a series of 'tips' for the trade. Here was named the increase in newspaper and farm magazine lineage, the newspaper campaign that prompted building of the Golden Gate bridge, the use of slogans, and the raw deal Santa Claus got this season by being irreverently handled in cartoons, etc.

Nothing said of the following significant advertising and selling matters: the Food & Drug bill; fair trade laws; the farm market in its post-AAA aspects; radio; liquor; automobiles; status of consumer cooperative movements, etc.

Assuming that some of the foregoing subjects must be soft-pedaled because of factions in the trade, this series, to run 16 weeks, will have to step on it to convert vociferous critics among consumers into believers in advertising. Critics' usual argument is that advertising encourages high prices. Dickinson missed fire here on his counter attack by not grabbing the bull by the horns in a robust, showmanly fashion.

Andy Weuhrer's keyboard accompaniment adequate, program caught including nice arrangement of 'The Death of Music Goes Round and Round,' involving use of Lizst Rhapsody and Chopin Funeral March.

Miss Velasco's theme is 'Love Walked Out of My Heart,' an original by Judson La Haye, WICC program director. The songstress is daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Carman, same tribe as Bliss Carman, the poet.

Al Pearce and his roadshow from California has been quite a Coast rave and a fave for some years, cementing regional popularity with theatre dates which reflected, at the boxoffice, the wide extent (on the western slope) of their public favor. Shifted to New York under NBC auspices for a sustaining builder-upper, last summer, and are now Pepsodent sponsored from Chicago.

All of which above might more or less belie the indifferent impression they made when caught last Friday night (17), the second of a new schedule, after having been on during the afternoons. On the NBC-WJZ spoke, every Friday, they are on a night-time schedule; on NBC-WEAF, on Mondays, they do their stuff in the afternoon at 5 p.m. EST. Night audiences are fairly discriminating.

Pearce has quite a gang with him and if nothing else it's primed for variety. Salient impression is coziness. But that may be the answer to their popularity. While theirs is a homely humor, it's not particularly funny. (In justice, for the record, they've been heard on other occasions to better advantage.)

An idea of the stock company may be gathered from the recapitulation of the cast: Cal Pierce (Al's brother); the 3 Cheers, male trio; Mable Todd, singing comedienne, who rang the vocal bell with her contraltoing of 'The Day I Let You Get Away;' Tizzie Lish, a pseudo-dizzy cooking expert, whose brutal comedy was one of the prime negations to the proceedings; Lord Bilgewater (Monroe Upton) who tips off his school of comedy by that hokum label; Morey Amsterdam (taking a siesta on this particular show, apparently); Tony Romano, singing guitarist; Andy Andrews, singing comic; Harry Foster, okay tenor who registered with his 'Alone' solo and other vocal interludes; Arlene Harris, billed as 'the human waterboxx' who did that but whose monolog was nsg; Elmer Blurp (Pearce in person); Bill Wright, characters, and Bernardine Upton, straight. Not all showed.

Harry Sosnik's orchestra is sturdy musical background, used imaginative arrangements of Youmans' 'Great Day' music.

Lord Bilgewater essayed some Joe Louis comedy (it was the night of the fight in Chi, and so the script was very Brown Bomber-minded) which hit 'n' missed. Ad plugging not only verbose but irritating, utilizing talking polly as a prop to drive home the trade name.

This program for the hicks and sticks only. For more worldly ears insufferably small timey.

(J. Walter Thompson)

In purchasing this long-run serial Cream of Wheat is relinquishing Alexander Woollcott and making a snappy bid for the kids who go on a hot-cereal diet in winter. 'Buck Rogers' has all the trimmings for a two-fisted knockdown, dragout job. Was originally a successful newspaper cartoon; thence got onto the ether, where Cocomalt has lately bankrolled it, and is further abetted by a variety of 'Buck Rogers' toys and gadgets.

Story, scripted by E. R. Johnstone, fabricates a lot of synthetic adventure which takes place in inter-stellar space 500 years in the future. Lines and pace serve only one purpose—to get as racy as possible—and to that extent admirably suit their ends. Odd voices and weird sound effects (most of the latter poorly done) creep in. Aside from the adventure lure, there is a thick condiment of pseudo-scientific terms.

Serial is one of the waning number of old-time kid radio jobs. A good many of its colleagues were shushed when mothers started complaining that little Johnny cringed under the sheets or choked on his spinach after catching an earful of the blood and thunder. 'Buck Rogers' curvived the guillotine.

Commercials are a model of how to drag 'em in. For a box-top the juve is invited to join a club which makes him a 'solar scout' and a 'personal friend of Buck Rogers.' There is a gold badge and a handbook ready for members; and 'can't you see your friend's eyes bulge when he sees your gold badge?' Cream of Wheat is zippily prescribed as 'what's needed to succeed.'

Cast ably sells its stuff the way the layout calls for. Will probably move a good bit of cereal off grocers' shelves.

tarted in 1928 as a sustainer (entitled 'Rise of the Goldbergs'), was turned into a vaudeville act, later got onto the ether again via Pepsodent, and now (13) after a layoff of two years becomes property of Super-Suds. Sponsor is shooting it out nationwide.

Recurrent commercial interest in the Goldbergs, attesting audience pull, due to able scripting and finished acting. Author, Gertrude Berg, who also plays the title role, handles the racial problem by plowing directly into it. Basis of the yarn is a series of well-conceived trivia arising in a Jewish-American family. Plenty of potentialities here, and the most is made of them. Characters are further endowed with peculiarities of speech which make them easily recognizable. Parents speak with a Bronx accent. Kids use public school English. Material alternates comedy and serious scenes with good timing.

Lion's share of the lines go to the mother, who renders them in a Stella Adler voice. Sound effects are not frequently needed, but what there is of them okay. Early scene had a clock striking, a simple yet effective device giving as much of an idea of the setting as a page of script.

Commercial palaver about on a par with other soap gabbing.

'GANG BUSTERS'

COLGATE-PALMOLIVE-PEET

(Benton & Bowles)

If the current 'Gang Busters' format is retained and the stanza makes the grade with the listening audience, two circumstances will be mainly responsible: (1) other web competish is not insuperably heavy; and (2) crime is so all-pervasive a piece of Americana that some fascination inevitably attaches to it. Aside from this unearned increment and one passable stunt tie-in, 'Gang Busters' gets mired in a bog of red tape, abetted by a poor production job. Distinctly is not impressive.

For Phillips Lord, erstwhile 'Seth Parker,' this marks the second flier at a crime theme, his debut on the subject having been the 'G-Men' serial for Chevrolet some months back. As in the earlier opus, this one runs afoul of too much illtimed morality. The criminal, in fact, gets such fragmentary space that it appears as if punishment and police laudation are being ladled out for a few vague pistol shots. Lord never hints at the socio-economic background of crime. Having thus chosen to depict only crime's specific brutalities, he races through his material at a helter-skelter pace to leave more room for glorifying the police.

In 'Gang Busters' the police glorification is rung in by having some dignitary help in the story person. First one was Gen. Needham, Massachusetts Commissioner of Safety, who figured in the smashing of the Millen gang. Potentially this idea has some value as a local attention-getter. But its carrying out was cluttered with lengthy and colorless palaver, sagging the Millen end into a choppy string of overlapping clues, the police back-patting may have its drawbacks from another direction, anyhow. Feeling is pretty prevalent that the police are not always so simon pure in connection with local crime, and pointed cracks to this effect have been emanating from Washington lately. This would tend to call for caution when building a lofty pedestal. Might make the program look foolish if a scandal 'breaks.'

Topping off the lack of pace to the story, an ill-timed commercial is fitted directly into the middle of the stanza. Phony Irish cop gabs about shaving cream, and winds up by discussing the merits of putting olive oil into the daily remark from the burly flatfoot is as goofy as if he had been caught red-handed with a daisy chain in his hair.

Windup has Lord giving listeners description and whereabouts of important hoodlums so that they can send info to the police. Real merit to this idea, but Lord gummed the initial description by having to correct the whereabouts of Alvin Karpas.

This musical script show replaces the Gold Medal Minstrels show on Mutual and like the Minstrels program must be figured as an attempt to wrangle a new radio method into the across-the-board programs. Evidently operating on the principle that the morning hours are becoming cluttered with dramatic scripts to such a point where they are beginning to lose their effectiveness, this program veers into another field by injecting music into the script idea.

This tends to bring a pleasant enough touch to the show through the use of tunes but this addition of musical interlude must decrease the value of the dialog portion of the show, so that the value of the script dramatic show in gathering 'must' listeners is somewhat injured. Also, there is the fundamental problem of the clock; after all, there are only 15 minutes in the entire period and of these 15 at least three must be used in plugs and announcements. Songs fill up half of the remaining time, leaving only some six minutes for the progress of the story.

Story itself is standard; that of a boy and girl trying their luck on Broadway; the boarding house locale, the cross-section of lower theatrical stratum. The big 'break' and the love interest. With music becoming of particular importance in this show, the script itself can be standardized without injury to the show.

Cast is uniformly capable as handled by Miss Dillon and Eddie Dean in the lead roles. Lee Bennett, vocalist of the Jan Garber orchestra, is in the show as an orchestra leader, breaking into song on occasion. Both Miss Dillon and Dean warble. Tiny Stowe, ex-minstrel, is announcer on the show besides being its producer. He delivers his lines in a neat confidential manner that sells. Gold.

Starting a big 1936 program, which—incidentally—calls for more time than in any previous year, the Pure Oil Company of the Carolinas is selecting key cities over the Carolinas for weekly 'salutes' from WBT.

A little later, time already under contract will be used for life story of Jimmy Mattern, the flyer, by use of transcriptions. These will run for 15 minutes. Still a third phase of the contract calls for six five-minute programs, and announcements daily to start later.

Program of salutes was launched with a hello to Gastonia. That fact was heralded on the front page of the Gastonia afternoon newspaper. Shadwell presented his male chorus of eight voices and his orchestra, with a good blending of the vocal and instrumental.

On the period also was Grady Gaston, secretary of the Gastonia Chamber of Commerce. Clair's part was as commentator, in the role of 'The Old Shepherd.'

Series will be carried out entirely on institutional lines with local city officials appearing for the city being saluted. Plans also call for historical facts concerning the city at hand, presented in the form of dramatic skits. Episodes in the history of several such cities are already in the mill being dramatized for use.

All this against the musical background of the male chorus and orchestra is effective enough for general listening and very effective with the cities currently under salute. Hard.

If that's what is most people will be glad to take another helping of the latter. Comedy was downright bad, lacked punch and ran rampant between musical renditions.

Ken Niles of the KHJ announcing staff performed as cheer leader to dubious results. He's entitled to better material and this one won't endear him to those who were prompted by the newspaper ads to get a load of it.

Only new gag was door to oblivion, which was swung open to admit the guys who picked SMU to wallop Stanford. And at that a variation of the doghouse idea, which is older than Hector. Newspapers skit, in which sports and society staffs changed places, looked like a good idea gone wrong.

Harry Stockwell piped a number in his usual capable style, as did the Stafford Sisters. From then on it was every comic for himself. It called for a gong.

Bankroller may have liked the show if for no other reason that the prez of the risk outfit got in a fat five minutes of hoopla about what a great company it is to do business with.

New guest stars will participate each week. Program will have to build if sponsors expect to unload any new policies. Helm.

In the nature of a good-natured get-together, this party was to celebrate the Northwestern road's crack train's (the 400) first anniversary on rails. Carl R. Gray, road's vice prez, and A. M. Fenton, v. p. of traffic, both spieled on the merits of 'the short cut to Chicago at a mile a minute' and passed out orchids to lowlier workers.

Pullman Porters' Quartet, under direction of Nels Swenson, ran through several ditties in neat fashion, and Eunice Jordan was in good voice on several pops and one blues song. Jack Costello, oke as usual, on the announcing end. Leroy Stahl, local free lance, emceed.

Stint, which ran from 9:00-9:30 p.m., was actually a studio party, with chef finally slicing up a big cake and passing it around to guests. Raschick.

DRUMS
With William Farnum, Kay Brinker, Myra Marsh, Bill Royal, Cy Kendall, Louise Larabee
Mystery Drama Serial
FOLGER COFFEE
Thursday 7-7:30 p.m. P.S.T.
KHJ, Los Angeles

(Raymond R. Morgan Co.)

Author of 'Chandu' has contrived a sequel in this air whodunit. Characters are only noticeable change. Pattern pretty much the same, judging from the opening episode.

William Farnum, old time film star, has become quite an air-bet. His voice is well pitched for the mike and he gives the character of retired consul an authentic touch. Story is woven around him and the various menaces who pop in and out of windows.

Supporting cast judiciously picked and the production is up to par. Beating of drums in the background is remindful of 'Emperor Jones' but an effective piece of sound biz. It helps strengthen the mystery angle and lends a spooky atmosphere. Musical backup by Felix Mills is well done.

As in 'Chandu,' author Vera Oldham sends the yarn to many locales, mostly to foreign climes which are associated in the general mind with things dark and dank. Miss Oldham explains the drum effect on the premise that 'no sound holds so many variations of feeling and mood as the beat of a drum.'

Cyril Armbrister is responsible for the direction, being acquainted with such programs through his production of the original 'Chandu' and 'Strange As It Seems.' Narrator is J. Donal Wilson.

Entire string of Don Lee stations on the Coast (14) take the piece. Helm.

WARREN MUNSON
Street Interviews
15 Mins.
Sustaining
WGY, Schenectady

General Electric Company is cooperating on technical end. Brings back to WGY's wave band the voice of Munson, for several years an acc announcer at station and later a microphoner in Cleveland and Hartford. His 'Informal Interviews' are broadcast at luncheon hour on certain Wednesdays, the first one caught being from lobby of De Witt Clinton hotel, Albany (where WGY has a branch studio), and, second, after an interim of several weeks, from a spot outside Schenectady postoffice.

Like most men-on-the-street salvos which have hit the air lanes recently, this one resembles the NBC Vox Pop. Questions are similar in type, the bizarre and trick predominating and the serious coming only occasionally. Considering the limitations (Munson has no co-questioner), he makes this stand up. Possesses a smooth, likeable personality, think-talks rapidly, and queries intelligently. Jaco.

HOLLYWOOD STAR DUST
With Sid Paine
15 Mins.
Sustaining
WCOP, Boston

Running on no set formula, Paine gets away from routine gossip stuff and spices his gab occasionally with an interview. On show caught Paine had Horace McNab, p.a. with Joe Flynn on 'Three Men on a Horse' publicity, in front of the mike.

McNab's answers were whooped back with gusto on questions relating to his present vocation. Admitting early in the verbal melee that he was formerly a vaudevillian, Horace handled his lines as if he were playing a two-a-day in the stix. Fox.

ELMER GOES HOLLYWOOD
With Martha Wentworth, Fred Shields, Dick Quine, Barbara Luddy, Bud Duncan, Lloyd Blanteed, Cy Kendall, Ralph Scott, Joe Franz
Comedy Drama Seri
30 Mins.
Sustaining
KNX, Hollywood

Guy Earl has been nursing this one along, waiting to spot it. With 'Frank Watanabe and Hon. Archie' on their first vacation in seven years with the station he plugged the gap quickly with 'Elmer.'

Geared for the juves, it should land solidly. It's chockfull of kid antics and suspenseful enough to make them want to catch the next one.

Story concerns innocent kid from the sticks tossed into a neighborhood of the film city where sole topic of youngsters is the film biz. Most of their parents are studio workers and naturally the juves pick up the vernacular of the celluloid plants. Which is so much Greek to the lad from the crossroads. But he gets an immense bang out of the gags, wisecracks and apparent worldliness of his new playmates.

The buildup is naturally aimed at Elmer, and sympathy is so pitched in his favor that the youngsters at the dials will be pulling for him to show up the corner gang. Part is nicely played by Dick Quine, who has done minor bits around. Support is okay, with the youngsters Bud Duncan, Lloyd Blanteed and Bobbie La Mancha standing out.

Script authored by Leonard Cox, station's program director, and Cliff Arquette, who does the rural character in Myrt and Marge.

Piece goes five nights a week and at a time when the other majors are loaded with network specials. Likely that it will be moved to an earlier period so that it won't interfere with the grownup listening. Helm.

FRANCE LAUX
With Del King
'THE INQUIRING REPORTER'
(Man-on-the-Street)
France Laux and Del
15 Mins.
L. COHEN GROCERY CO.
KMOX, St. Louis

KMOX mike is set up in front of Mayfair hotel, on busy corner in business section, during lunch hour three times weekly. France Laux and Del King corral passersby and ask gag questions. Sidewalk quickly blocked and as crowd overflows into street traffic cops have their problems.

Sample of questions: 'Should a man read the evening paper while the wife wrangles the dinner dishes?' or 'Who is the best motor car driver, a man or a woman?' Each one interviewed receives can of vegetables or fruit from sponsor.

Commercial plug is short and done by studio announcer at opening and closing of show which appears to be a business builder for bankroller. Probably a good representative of the sidewalk type of stunt program. Hurst.

LEE FRANK Interviews
15 Mins.
Tues.-Thurs. afternoons
LIT BROTHERS DEPT. STORE
WFIL, Philadelphia

Miss Frank, former special writer for Ledger Syndicate, uses considerable originality in planning her shows. She also manages to collar most of real names that hit town, fact that gives series added interest for dialers.

Recent guesters have included leading players of 'Personal Appearance' playing road engagement here, Zoe Akins speaking about her new 'O Evening Star' play (Miss Akins said it was her radio debut), cast and authors of 'I Want a Policeman' in novelty sketch and two local scribes (Elsie Finn and David G. Wittels) who wrote original story for 'I Dream Too much' film. Others in previous shows were Victor Moore, William Gaxton, Nazimova, Jane Cowl and Colin Clive. Novel angle of shows is that, of all celebs who appeared, only La Fin and Wittels insisted on writing their own script for show.

'MORRIS and ESTHER'
Comedy Serial
With Hyman Brown and Julie Berns
15 Mins.
GOODMAN'S PRODUCTS
Mon.-Thurs., 7:30 p.m.
WHN, New York

(Kelly, Nason and Roosevelt)

A homc-made serial, replete with pathos and commanding interest from certain audiences. It's in Jewish dialect and handled quite well. Formerly under the title of 'Bronx Marriage Bureau' and heard over WOR, New York, this new series continues the same characters.

While the two leads are played steadily by Hyman Brown and Julie Berns, number of supplementing characters are drafted into the adventures. The duo is responsible for continuity and direction chores also. It's heaucoup sentimental at times, which is probably okay for purchasers of Goodman's noodles. On twice weekly. Pal.

HERBERT KINGSLEY and EVELYN CASE
Singing, Piano
5 Mins.
FLEISCHMANN
Thursdays, 8 p.m.,
WEAF, New York

(J. Walter Thompson)

Team of Herbert Kingsley and Evelyn Case, on Rudy Vallee Fleischmann Show Thursday (9), are specialists in song and piano arrangements, their 'Frankie and Johnny' number being perhaps best known. Twain does a five-minute routine which mixes up hotcha and classical singing, Kingsley handling the former and Miss Case the latter. Kingsley also does the necessary work at the piano. While not an outstanding air interlude, the Kingsley-Case combination provides fairly amusing entertainment for those who don't see them perform.

Spotted in the first half of Vallee's program, the act would command attention if for no other reason than that it works fast, going through the whole five minutes without any stalling. There is a brief dialog bit concerning what Kingsley does (it being the piano) but otherwise the pair is singing its specially-arranged numbers. Miss Case has a good soprano voice which on one occasion went coloratura for a trilling portion. Kingsley can get hot at times with his voice. Char.

Dr. CHARLES M. COURBOI
Organist
30 Mins.
Thursday, 10 p.m.
SUSTAINING
WOR, New York

Stanza is another step in the Wallenstein (musical director) regime at WOR to fill the evening air with at least one period of reputable classics. Courboin was erstwhile Belgian court organist, currently is a consultant on organ building jobs, and ranks as one of the topnotch manipulators of the Wurlitzer.

Material for the programs represents an undiluted skimming from the major works of Franck, Handel, Bach, and Guilmant, plus occasional organ versions of such piano classics as Chopin's Nocturnes, etcs. Series has been running for several weeks and is planned to continue indefinitely because of the reputedly warm response of the classical fans.

Announcing is done by Floyd Neale and could profitably be trimmed.

YOUR FELLOW MAN'S OPINION
THE OTHER WOMAN'S DIARY
Drama Voting Contest
30 Mins.
PAR SOAP
Wednesday, 9 p.m.
KHJ, Los Angeles

This is that 'something new' that so many harp about but few achieve. If it didn't get its message across it's because the sponsor broke in all too often with blurbs.

Idea is new and worthwhile. Two 15-minute dramatic programs are offered. Dialers are to vote for their choice. One receiving most votes will get the 15-min. spot on the Don Lee coast chain. Harrison Holliway, manager of KFRC in Frisco, came on to say that it was the first time in the history of radio that an audience was to sit in on an audition and have a say-so on which program is used. (At any rate, it's the first time for the coast.)

Both are subjects out of the agony column but plenty weighted with what the gals go for. And who else buys the soap? 'Fellow Man's Opinion' had to do with everyday problems. Running mate was a dramatization from the daily doings of a young wife. Both well done by unnamed cast.

If the opinion gag wins out, station will call for letters from listeners reciting their problems, to be solved by others similarly affected, along the lines of an inquiring reporter. The other would be dramatic playlets that will send the continuity writers scurrying for old copies of True Story and other confessional mags.

Commercial popped out of the continuity at least five times, which is too many as local standards go. Only credit was Jack Van Nostrand as author of 'Other Diary.'

EUGENE LEPIQUE
Pianist, Organist
15 Mins.
AEOLIAN PIANO CO.
KMOX, St. Louis

This musical comes from the showrooms of the Aeolian Company by remote control. It opens and closes with theme played on the new Hammond electric organ. The body of program is played on various stock pianos. Eugene LePique varies his program with classical and pop numbers and does swell job at both. After each number played, announcer (Marvi E. Mueller) gives factory number of instrument so listeners can ask to see piano that pleases them. Its a good idea and well produced.

About the middle of program the sales mgr., Theodore Maetten, gave a short spiel in which he invited listeners to visit show rooms. Commercial copy, for most part institutional, and very little of that. Hurst.

How N.Y.C. Stations Protect Selves On Warner Copyright Checking

Warner Bros. split with ASCAP has resulted in addition of some 25 employees to copyright departments of New York stations, though some of these added workers merely were drafted for temporary duty from other departments. Copyright staffs have been doubled and trebled in size in many instances. Columbia Broadcast System upped its copyright staff to 12 as against four formerly employed.

National Broadcasting Company claims that no additional workers were added, increased detail work being done by the regular staff. This network kept situation fairly well in hand by preparing in advance and having ready full lists for all officials concerned with keeping Warner Bros. music off network. Similar plan pursued by WMCA, where officials foresaw WB-ASCAP parting of way weeks before break came. Employees from other departments were pressed into service to prepare complete lists. All announcers in the various stations have lists to guide them.

Further precaution taken by WNEW executives because of the large number of tunes played on Dance Parade nightly between 9 p.m. and 2 a.m., most of which are remoted. Announcers and technical crew given strict orders that where any number not previously scheduled and completely checked is played by dance band, the number is to be faded out and an electrical transcription played instead. Announcers told to state that the transcription is heard because of copyright difficulties. Only one in station's copyright department before but now has three assistants.

No additional workers added to copyright staff at WOR, it was officially stated. Where WINS formerly had only one, it now has three in copyright department. Practically the same increase made at WHN, which now has five on copyright work.

WINS' Strict Rule

Strict rule laid down by WINS that if musical selection is not submitted far enough in advance for complete research, number will not be included on any station program. WHN follows almost same routine. Latter station took further precaution of removing every musical recording from Warner Bros. publishers from files available to announcers and put under lock and key. This was done because of large number of recordings used on early morning broadcasts.

Stations WHOM, WAAT and WBNX rated as having no copyright departments. Latter two are reported as having signed with Warner Bros., with likelihood that WHOM may follow suit this week. Understood that they have been given low rate by WB, with station officials figuring signing up as easiest way out.

WHN AMATEUR SHOW GETS NEW SPONSOR

Phillips Milk of Magnesia picks up Jay C. Flippen's amateur program on WHN, New , where Schenley's Distilleries drops it after 39 weeks. First Phillips' broadcast was last night (Tuesday).

Along with the change in sponsors, ams' broadcast is cut from an hour and a half to one hour.

Radio-Theatre Pact in France an Actuality

Paris, Jan. 12.

Dickering between radio czar Georges Mandel and four big subsidized theatres — Comedie Francaise, Odeon, Opera and Opera Comique — has resulted in accord whereby regular broadcasts from all four will go on French state network beginning Jan. 15.

Pay for air shows will go to administrations of theatres, which will split it among players. Comedie gets $200,000 a year, enough to save its life.

Opera Comique, when subject was first broached, thought it might not want to join, but money overcame objections. Music performances from this house and Opera will be broadcast direct from stage, whereas Comedie and Odeon will give studio shows.

Shreveport Minstrels Return to Civic Aud

Shreveport, Jan. 21.

Railways Dixieland Minstrels, aired via KTBS, is again slated to move into Shreveport's Municipal Auditorium next Friday eve (24). Stanza makes a great deal of its visual audience, and has some direct tie-ins between free studio ducats and the street car biz.

Show is written by Jack Gross and has been going 58 weeks, 26 of which were bankrolled by the Shreveport Railways company. Purchase of two ordinary fares on Friday eves allows the passenger free admission to the radio program. Similarly, spectators may purchase two fares at the box office and get in.

Determination of the winners is by the use of an electric noise machine which records applause.

Radio Set Tabulation Due in Feb.

N.A.B.-4A's-A.N.A. First Joint Effort Checks Receivers

Certified tabulation showing the radio sets installed in various states and communities will be released to the trade by the bureau of station measurement around Feb. 1. It will be the first survey emanating from the three-faction project since its organization last summer. Groups represented in this independent research idea are the National Associations of Broadcasters, the American Association of Advertising Agencies and the Association of National Advertisers. NBC and CBS also have delegates on the bureau's various committees.

In previous years the advertising trade has depended on CBS for its info about the number of home sets in the country. Columbia's tabulation was an amalgamation of figures obtained from the government plus info gathered by McGraw-Hill from radio manufacturers and distributors.

Station measurement bureau now has three committees functioning. Heading the groups is the executive committee of 15 with the broadcasters, advertisers and agencies each having five members; then there is the steering of seven, while the third committee is composed of five research technicians, with one each from the networks, the NAB, the ANA and the Four A's.

NBC is issuing a booklet entitled 'Statistical Robot' explaining a machine that automatically computes for advertisers the potential circulation for any group of stations. Gadget also shows the amount of overlap in any area where two stations hit parts of the same audience.

Figures, used as basis of calculation, are those found in 'Network Areas.' Machine has been in use about three months and will do 40 hours of human work in four hours. Eventually it will be fixed so that it will also calculate market data into circulation figures.

Inside Stuff—Radio

NBC sales promotion department plenty nettled when it was discovered that CBS had beat it to the tape with a free magazine designed to do a high-minded public relations job. CBS's free rag, currently fresh out of the mails, is called 'Talks.' Contains a dozen radio speeches by prominent spielers, is contemplated as a quarterly with a format similar to 'Reader's Digest,' and has an initial print order slightly over 5,000.

First issue was sent to newspaper editors, club leaders, savants, religious heads and other personages whose ability to engender squawks against radio was considered ripe for a little salving. Foreword by William Paley states that the publication 'is being sent to you because of the personal interest which we believe you have in network broadcasting as a great forum for popular discussion of ideas.'

Where NBC's burn comes in is that the web started working on a similar free mag last November, tentatively entitled 'Radio Rostrum.' Was envisioned as broader in scope than 'Talks,' with newsstand circulation and outside advertising. Idea went to Stanley High, director of talks, and thence to the budget department. Died there when it was found that it would require at least $500 per month.

Feeling at NBC is that since CBS came out with a mag first, it (NBC) can't salvage the 'Rostrum' without looking like a plagiarist. 'Rostrum' consequently is in limbo for good.

Death of 'Rostrum' also darkens the outlet for a second NBC free mag called 'Radio Digest for Women.' Latter was definitely slated for appearance first of this year, but hasn't been sent out yet.

Reprieve for WLTH, WARD and WVFW, transmitters involved in the complicated Brooklyn cases, last week was granted by the Federal Communications Commission. Stations, which had been told that Jan. 22 marked the end of their broadcasting careers, will remain on the air until Feb. 18, Commish having relented on grounds of 'possible hardship' which might result from immediate application of the sentence.

Transmitters, which have screamed loudly over losing their assignment to WBBC and proposed new Brooklyn Daily Eagle station, have not yet given up hope. WVFW, mouthpiece of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, last week carried the fight to the Capitol when members of the organization called on members of Congress to try and block Commish action.

Saturday's edition (25) of 'Atlantic Family on Tour' will be aired from Philadelphia instead of New York due to appearance of Bob Hope, member of the cast, with the 'Follies' down there.

N. W. Ayer, agency in charge, had planned to broadcast from Philly in a similar fashion last Saturday (18) but was stymied by trouble with the musician's union. Ruckus started when the union objected to Red Nichols' ork which provides music for the series (though it is not billed), favoring a local band instead. Ayer now placating the union by hiring a standby group of Philly musicians.

Same type of musicians' trouble last fall caused permanent removal of the series from WCAU to New York.

Subsidiaries of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. kick in with service charges of $18,000,000 annually, Paul A. Walker, chairman of the telephone division of the Federal Communications Commission, last week revealed in his report to Congress on his investigation of the telephone monopoly.

Commish Investigator Walker is nearing end of the $750,000 appropriated by Congress for the purpose of prying into the affairs of the Telephone Empire and is finding the investigation 'such a vast task' that further appropriations and an extension of time probably will be necessary to complete the ferreting.

NBC has had published a set of four small books containing information on the part that broadcasting has played in the fields of education, religion, public affairs, agriculture and the cultural arts. Foursome in boxed form is being distributed among representatives of the field involved, government officials, owners of NBC affiliated stations, network advertisers and ad agencies.

Major part of the material in these books was culled from the mass of testimony that was taken during the hearings of educational and religious organizations' bid for special broadcast facilities before the Federal Communications Commission last summer.

Station WORL, the former WBSO of Needham, Mass., has recently hit the air under the aegis of the Broadcasting Service Organization, Inc. Impression that it is now a new Boston station is incorrect. Organized in 1926 by Roger Babson, station is in new hands and has offices in Boston, but simply for remote control and advertising purposes.

New corporation which took the outfit over is headed by George A. Crockwell, prez and treasurer, and contains a number of ex-Yankee web men. Has a sales force of five, four men and one woman. First broadcast was on Sunday, Jan. 5.

Birmingham News is understood to have closed a deal for WSGN. Known for several months that the paper would like to have the station. Application for transfer of the license from R. B. Broyles to the 'News reported filed with FCC, with paper purchasing station outright.

WSGN went back into the hands of Broyles several months ago after Ormond Black failed to make a go of it.

Acquisition will give three of the South's leading papers radio outlets. Atlanta 'Journal' has WSB, the Memphis 'Commercial Appeal' has WMC and the 'News' WSGN.

NBC's red (WEAF) link topped CBS in the gross from time sales for 1935. Red's tally was $18,727,715, while the year brought CBS $17,737,804. Gross for NBC's blue (WJZ) network came to $11,659,499.

Beginning with the January sales totals, NBC will release the monthly break up of the red and blue links. Web has heretofore declined to make these figures known on the ground that the intermixing of the supplementary groups made it difficult to distinguish one link's income from the others'.

Adele Astaire (Lady Cavendish) whose U. S. ether debut was on the Magic Key of RCA on Jan. 12 over NBC, had her initial fling at broadcasting in Europe last year, doing a commercial series for a beauty concern, which was recorded in England, and then shipped across to France. Station Luxumbourg aired series.

Failure of makers of radio equipment to standardize on a uniform type of receiver has retarded television service in the United States, Federal Communications Commission said last week in its annual report which declared visual broadcasting is just around that corner.

George Lederer celebrated his first anniversary in radio Jan. 15 having been connected with WINS, N. Y., for the past year.

Veteran showman has conducted a series of weekly personality skits, high-lighting the greats of the stage who have passed on.

Crashing of Mutual web by WFIL through grabbing local etherings of Ray Perkins-Feenamint and Whelan Cigar shows on Sunday nights is being watched closely by Philadelphia broadcasters. See in it possibility of busting Philly radio status wide open.

Stations with studios in New Jersey and also in New York city, which means WOR and WNEW, have been instructed by musicians' union that they must maintain union 'house' orchestras in both spots.

FCC's Washington Docket

Washington, Jan. 21.

Application to swap control of three broadcasting stations last week were granted by the broadcast division of the Federal Communications Commission.

Station WBI, Bangor, Me., passed from the hands of the Universalist Society of Bangor into control of an individual, Frederick B. Simpson. Present assignment of transmitter is 1,200 kc. with 100 watts. Pitt Publishing Company, a Pennsylvania corporation, will take over WCAE, Pittsburgh station operating on 1,220 kc. with 1 kw. from WCAE Incorporated, transmitter's licensee. Third transaction involves transfer of control of KFNF, Shenandoah, from the Henry Field Company to Henry Field.

New station applications by the Burlington Broadcasting Company, Burlington, Ia., and the Herald Publishing Company, Denison, Tex., were referred to examiners. Iowa outfit is asking 1,310 kc. with 100 watts while Texas rag requests a smallie to operate on 1,200 kc.

The following applications were received:

The Brockway Company, Watertown, N. Y., new station to operate on 1,270 kc. with 250 watts days; WOL, Washington, D. C., frequency change from 1,310 to 1,230 kc. and juice-jump from 100 watts to 1 kw.; WBEN, Buffalo, N. Y., daytime increase from 1 to 5 kw.; WHDL, Olean, N. Y., frequency change from 1,260 to 1,400kc.; United States Broadcasting Co., Washington, D. C., new station to operate on 1,310 kc. with 100 watts (contingent upon granting of WOL, Washington, application for move of station, change of frequency and power); Lookout Broadcasting Corp., Chattanooga, Tenn., new station to be operated on 1,420 kc. with 100 watts days.

'Examiners' Reports

Power boosts for two Indiana stations were recommended to the broadcast division by Examiner Ralph L. Walker. WFBM, Indianapolis, station owned by the Indianapolis Power & Light Company, is requesting jump from 1 kw. all times to 1 kw. nights, 5 kw. days, retaining present frequency assignment of 1,230 kc. Station WHBU, Anderson, Ind., asks change from 100 watts unlimited to 100 watts nights, 250 watts days.

tating that objectionable interference already existing between the two stations will be increased, Examiner Walker concluded that, in spite of this, 'the net result will be to increase the satisfactory service area of each station, including therein a substantially greater population.' Quota increase in the Fourth Zone, which would result from the juice-jumps, was dismissed by the examiner who said 'it appears that a slight departure from an exact mathematical estimate is justified.'

Power jump for WSPD, Toledo, O., and renewal of license for WFEA, Manchester, N. H., were okayed by P. W. Seward, hoping to settle squabble over interference between the two transmitters.

Toledo station, operating on same 1,340 kc. frequency as WFEA, is requesting boost from 1 kw. nights, 2½ kw. days, to 1 kw. nights, 5 kw. days. Granting of plea of WFEA for a renewal of license was recommended on condition station install new antenna and ground system, now under construction, and make field intensity tests to determine that its signal will not interfere with WSPD.

Daytime power boost for WJBC, Ioomington, Ill., was recommended to the Commish by Examiner John P. Bramhall, who found need for additional daytime service in the area proposed to be served. Smallie, which operates on 1,200 kc., wants 250 watts days.

AUCTION OFF STATION?

Notice Posted on KWKC on Back Income Tax

Kansas City, Jan. 21.

An official notice was posted in the lobby of the Federal building this week announcing that station KWKC, 100-watt radio station, this city, would be sold at auction Jan. 22 to recover $16,000 back taxes, which Wilson Duncan, owner, is alleged to owe the government.

Sale was ordered by Dan Nee, collector of internal revenue, who said Duncan had failed to pay income taxes for the five-year period between 1928 and 1932. The total tax was $10,132 but the penalties added brought it to the higher figure.

Thomas Cleveland, director of the station, states that Guy T. Helvering, commisioner of internal revenue in Washington, had granted the owner 90 days, December 14, to adjust the matter, and that the sale would not be held.

U. S. TOBACCO ACCT. OFF M'CANN AGENCY

U. S. Tobacco Co. is removing its advertising account from McCann-Erickson Mar. 1. The successor agency has not been decided upon. Tobacco company will continue the 'One Night Stand' program with Pick and Pat on CBS, regardless of the shift. Show has been on for over two years and proved consistently successful.

Exit of the U. S. Tobacco account from Mc-E occurs a year after the retirement of Harry Dwight Smith as a stockholder in the agency. Smith, who is now with the tobacco combine and has for years been a major stock owner in the latter, had in 1932 quit as v.p. in charge of McCann-Erickson's radio department because of differences with one of partners over certain personnel. It is understood that this same situation was largely responsible for Smith's decision to turn the account over to another agency.

WAVE, Louisville, switching from Transradio New Service to INS.

'Mattern' Vs. 'Jimmy Allen' Discs

Two Series Have Aviation Theme and Oil Company Sponsorship

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Pure company is extending its ether spot campaign and on March 1 starts on some 25 stations through the midwest with a disc show tagged 'Diary of Jimmy Mattern.' This 'Mattern' show report is already bringing heated repurcussions from other sources which have aviation programs now running, particularly from the Russel Comer agency which has its own 'Jimmy Allen' show sold to several sponsors, especially Skelly Oil and Richfield Oil.

Comer agency has written to stations now carrying the 'Jimmy Allen' program and is asking them if they intend to carry the 'Jimmy Mattern' program for Pure Oil. Comer agency makes no statement as to its policy should the station reply that it would accept the 'Mattern' program, but the inference is that it would suggest the cancellation of the 'Jimmy Allen' program. Both shows are on wax.

Freitag agency here is handling the Pure Oil 'Jimmy Mattern' spottings, which will hit on a five times weekly basis.

Courtroom Broadcasts Dropped; Judge Thinks Value Exhausted

St. Paul, Jan. 21.

WCTN's 'Traffic Court of the Air,' Monday and Friday program over the newspaper-owned indie for the past year, was silenced last week by Judge Clayton Parks for the remainder of his term on the bench. Judge John W. Finehout, however, will resume the broadcasts in his court when he returns. The two judges alternate monthly.

Parks's kibosh was explained, despite admittedly salutary results in reducing traffic accidents toll, 'I do not believe it proper for me to continue the broadcasts from the courtroom in view of the fact that I have filed for re-election. I further believe that the broadcasts have done some good and that they have educated the public on rules of driving, but I believe that one year was sufficient, and that the broadcasting should not be made a permanent institution.'

Judge Finehout's slant: 'It is somewhat inconvenient for us here in court to have these broadcasts, but I believe that as long as business and professional men, newspapers and civic organizations are willing to give of their valuable time and efforts to promote this safety matter, that because of its educational value it should be continued. I am perfectly willing to do my part, for the time being, at least.'

Albany, Jan. 21.

Radio broadcasting figures in recommendations made to the New York Legislature by the State Judicial council as a direct result of the Bruno Hauptmann trial.

Council proposes that no judge or court or attache may be allowed to permit the broadcasting, or photographing, of any proceedings in a courtroom or in an area close to the courtroom so as to disturb the order and decorum.

In addition, lawyers would be forbidden to directly or indirectly cause to be broadcast, or printed in newspapers, any statement concerning the evidence or persons involved in either a criminal or civil trial. Only comment as shown by the developments in a trial would be permitted to be expressed.

HEADLINED AT THE ROXY

New York—Week of Jan. 10

"Variety" Said in the Issue of January 15th

Marty May heads this week's Fanchon and Marco production. He gives the current unit more than an adequate amount of laughs. May is pretty well known, having been around for many years. He has an air audience, too, through broadcasting on both big networks and comes to the Roxy this week as one of the most seasoned performers house has played under present policy. His material is away above the average and his showmanship something that vitally helps the material across. May has a clever foil in Carol Dee, in addition to a young lad for an encore, Larry Raymond, who whistles 'Poet and Peasant' in the way that can't miss from the big stage here.

'GLAMOUR GIRL'
—NBC ARTISTS BUREAU.

Whispered Intimacy at NBC
New York City.

Sex is rearing its pretty head at NBC. For the last several months the network's artists bureau has been exploiting a 'glamour girl' named Dorothy Lamour. When not posing for photographers she's a singer.

Now comes a promotional brochure devoted entirely to Miss Lamour's sex appeal. As recommendations for sponsor attention NBC describes the gal in these lusscious phrases credited to Edward de Salisbury:

'Whispered intimacy.'
'Soft delight of warm persuasion.'
'Plaintive sigh of tremulous longing.'
'Petulant abandon.'
'Receptive languor.'

Motor Show Tie-Up
Winnipeg.

Winnipeg's annual Motor Show (Jan. 18-25) at the local 5,000 seat Auditorium (under joint auspices of Back to the Land Association and Winnipeg Free Press) will highlight an 'Old Crates' race of ancient automobiles.

CJRC, Winnipeg, are putting lines in for a nightly broadcast from the floor, going a full hour on the opening splurge and may remote the race of time-warn buggies from various points along route.

Sacramento's Big Splash
Sacramento, Cal.

Sacramento Bee included as part of the dedication of the new studios and transmitter for its station, KFBK, the publication of a 26-page insert in the Jan. 10 issue. Front and back page of the special section was a three-color job.

Several pages of the insert were devoted exclusively to pictures of CBS names, with which network, as well as the Don Lee unit, KFBK is affiliated. There were also photos of the new studios and KFBK entertainers and personnel, while the text matter was largely devoted to a review of local radio history, the station's coverage and descriptions of the plant and the dedicatory programs.

Parade of Zoftie Mamas
New York City.

WHN, New York, is staging a beauty contest on Jan. 26 at 5:30 p.m. EST, getting various prominent New York magazine artists to introduce favorite models. Rosemary Andree, English prize winner, who's been over here for some time, suggested it to station execs, and was slated to enter, but changed her mind. Now she's only going to look on.

Artists scheduled to bring posers along are: Howard Chandler Christy, Neysa McMein, Wallace Morgan, Hayden Hayden, Arthur Brown, Alfred Cheney Johnston, Floyd M. Davis, Tom Webb and Mario Cooper.

Gladys Glad will be judge.

Jewish Hillbillies
St. Louis.

Comedy program at KMOX that's liked is the Jewish Hillbillies. Esther Blitz is the newest member of group answering to the billing, Silly, Hilly, Billy, and Milly.

Sing mountain music with Hebe accents.

Utah State Capitol Program
Salt Lake City.

First job turned out by the newly reorganized KSL continuity staff drew a lot of orchids. On the occasion of celebrating the 40th anniversary of Utah's admission as the 45th state in the Union, KSL had a half-hour program Monday that netted the state and station praiseworthy comments. It was a remote control hook-up from the chamber of the house of representatives at the state capitol here.

All the historic societies in Utah played ball and as a result the dramatized reenactment of that Jan. 4, 1896, was historically correct. Program was unique in every detail. Didn't drag or center too much on minor events. The D.A.R., and S.A.R., and Utah pioneer groups loaned historical relics for the broadcast. Highlight of the broadcast was the presentation of all Utah Governors since statehood, or their kin. The present Governor Henry H. Blood played Brigham Young.

KSL's managing director, Earl J. Glade, obtained exclusive rights for the broadcast. It was the official statehood celebration. More than 1,000 persons crammed the legislative chamber to see the program.

One portion of the broadcast, patterned after 'The March of Time' was devoted to Utah industries. Army band, P.-T.A. choir and a Boy Scout playlet were presented.

Mrs. Josephine Goff of the KSL dramatic staff, supervised the show and Glade was master of ceremonies.

Celebrating Vancouver's 50th
Vancouver, B. C.

With the city celebrating its Golden Jubilee this year, Vancouver will originate several major programs to feed Canadian and United States networks.

Championship sport events, a trans-Canada air race and similar events are on the calendar. First shot is fired with a Canadian Radio Commission broadcast this week by the Vancouver Symphony orchestra.

Courtroom Program Clicks
Spartanburg, S. C.

First city government—WWNC radio traffic court broadcasts having gone over in a big way, station and city fathers are now lining up a second sizzler, destined, per info, to be more horrible and chilly than the opener which attracted statewide attention. City Judge Sam Cathey and Police Chief W. J. Everett among cast. Broadcasts are from police courtroom. Wilbur Morgan is director in charge.

Bandit Nab Follow-Up
Seattle.

KJR capitalized on a recent actual story-book capture of criminal gang here by local police, tying in with the interest now centering in the war on crime. Bandits, whose robberies of factories had been giving police trouble for some time, were rounded up when caught in the act by police trap. One thug was killed, another wounded, and the papers raised a big stir.

KJR news reporter interviewed on the air chief of police, captain of detectives and detective who shot crook, presenting facts of the capture and inside stuff on crime crushing.

Blair's Bulletin
Chicago.

John Blair station rep outfit has started a bulletin service to agencies and sponsors tagged 'Radio Hot Spots.' Bulletin flashes to agencies new periods or spots which become suddenly available on one of the Blair-represented stations.

Pepsodent Showmanship
Schenectady, N. Y.

An autographed copy of the Christmas night script on which Amos was air-married and photo of Amos 'n' Andy, with career data on the reverse side, offered by Pepsodent over NBC for a 10-day period, the listener being required to send one of company's tooth paste or powder boxes.

On New Year's eve, instead of the usual skit, the team broadcast a personal talk to ethereal audience. In addition to a report on their cross-country travels and observations during 1935, it carried a plea for safe driving—accident figures quoted—and a crime-does-not-pay brief, based on what Amos 'n' Andy had seen and had been told on a tour of J. Edgar Hoover's bureau in the Department of Justice at Washington. Duo closed by introducing to dialers their announcer, organist and control engineer.

A Sound Effects Stumper
St. Paul.

Local brewery wants to open its KSTP program with the words, 'And here comes another case of beer,' with appropriate sound effects.

To Corinne Jordan, production mgr., it looked easy, so she dispatched a kid for a case of beer. They auditioned a bloke lugging in the case, but all they got was the thud of his brogans. Next they tried empty bottles in the case and rattled them, but so well built is the modern beer case that instead of rattles again there were only meaningless thuds.

Staff decided that a case of suds being hauled onto the premises doesn't make any sound, though the naked ear says otherwise. To date the problem has the sound men cutting out paper dolls.

How to Stay Out
Nashville.

WSM has made a dicker with the U. S. State department in which the latter, through its division of Current Information, checks the scripts on a new program entitled 'America's Flag Abroad.' Stanza aims to capitalize on the current European war scare, and will attempt to show how the U. S. is steering clear of entanglements.

First program will be aired Friday (24). Is nominally sponsored by the National Life and Accident Insurance company, owners of WSM.

Saving the Program
Miami.

WQAM here pulled itself out of a hole by some quick thinking few days ago when a short circuit threw the station off the air just as the Kentucky Clocker (Hiram Powell) had skedded a sports revue with such guesters as Sammy Renick, Mack Garner, Tom Thorp, Bitsy Grant, Gar Wood, Tom Heeney, Joe Tinker and others.

Leslie Harris, production man, let the celebs gab through a dead mike as per schedule without telling them of the mishap. Recorded the whole works, however. Kentucky Clocker then played the platter on his next stanza, explaining that it was what would have happened hadn't the station gone off the air. Guesters enjoyed the stunt and sat around at home hearing themselves broadcast.

Emergency Information
New York.

Following a blast in a powerhouse here which plunged parts of the metropolis into darkness, WMCA put on a program giving info on power conditions.

James Clemenger, announcer, read statements from power and light officials, as well as police and fire departments, reassuring audience that police and fire service would continue.

Nice Doggie—Nasty Man!
Rochester, N. Y.

Station WHEC, in co-operation with the Democrat & Chronicle and the Rochester Humane Society, is giving a series of broadcasts to raise funds for dog licenses for children and families about to lose their pets for lack of funds.

Mrs. A. W. Ocorr of Pittsford, a dog fancier, gives the talks, including sob stuff about children clinging tearfully to their pets as the dogcatcher drags them away to the gas chamber.

Test M.D.'s Mike Fright
Boston.

In a program of the 'Yankee Minute Men' over the Yankee Net Jan. 14 a group of doctors, speaking on 'Doctors Look at 1936,' will be put on the spot at the end of the broadcast by testing their blood pressure to see how they have survived their initial mike performances.

Docs will outline significant discoveries in medicine during the past year and indicate possibilities for the future.

Sally Out-Cracks Broun
Knoxville, Tenn.

Enterprising KNOX took advantage of fact that Heywood Broun and Sally Rand were in town the same night. With some little difficulty they arranged an air interview—by him, of her. Heywood had script; Sally ad-libbed.

At end of the 30-minute spot Sally was way ahead with the wisecracks.

DEC. TUNE BIZ BEST IN YEARS

New York, Jan.

With four tunes riding strongly at one time, the sheet music business came through December with the best month in years. Turn into the new year found the going still better. Not only were 'Red Sails,' 'Treasure Island' and 'Little Bit Independent' holding on sturdily, but 'The Music Goes 'Round and Around' was laying down records. Novelty tune clicked off a turnover of 110,000 copies for the three days following New Year's.

By the end of the first week in January 'Red Sails' had disposed of 430,000 copies, while Joe Morris' 'Treasure Island' had nudged over the 320,000 mark and was still making neat progress. Other songs that maintained a lively pace in December were '24 Hours a Day' (Harms), 'Eeney, Meeney, Mo' (Berlin), 'Thanks a Million' (Robbins), 'Dinner for One, James' (Chappell) and 'One Night in Monte Carlo' (Santly Bros.-Joy), while 'Music Goes 'Round' got in enough calls during the final lap of last month to give it rating among the first 10 best sellers for December.

December also gave the independent field the edge among the song leaders. For the first time in three years four out of the blue ribbon sextet were non-picture tunes. Exceptions in this group were 'Roll Along Prairie Moon' (Robbins) and 'Don't Give Up the Ship.'

Among songs showing decided upbeat tendencies with the fading out of the old year were 'Quick As You Can Say Jack Robinson' (Remick), 'Broken Record' (Chappell), 'Alone' (Robbins), 'If I Had Rhythm in My Nursery Rhymes' (Select) and 'Moon Over Miami' (Berlin).

Music trade is of the opinion that not only will 'Music Goes Round' run away from the rest of the list by many thousands during January, but that it will be in a demand class of its own at the disc counters. With the song's writers themselves responsible for the stencil, Decca has in its version of 'Music Goes 'Round' the best thing from the concentrated sales angle it has had since the founding of the company. Tommy Dorsey tops the Victor list with the same number.

Chi. Riding High

Chicago, Jan. 21.

Business generally strong throughout the music field in the midwest during December with the Christmas and New Year's holidays building the sales to about the best take of the year. Especially was the month a happy note for 'Santa Claus Is Coming to Town,' which swung back into prominence for the holidays. Naturally will fall off into nothingness again this month with a possibility of sales and plug revival next Christmas season.

'Red Sails' clung tenaciously to the top rung, but looks ready to fold under the spurt of a new tune sensation, 'Music Goes Round and Around.'

Demand for the latter was so terrific during the last week of the month that the jobbers and stores were unable to supply the would-be customers. Looks cinch for money and sales leader of January. Not quite in the best seller sextet for December, but powerful at the music counters, was 'Don't Give Up the Ship.' Others showing strength were 'Beautiful Lady in Blue,' which has been getting a flock of midwest plugs, and 'Eeny Meeny Miny Mo.'

Decca showed 'Music Goes' Round and Around' for its December cream list due to the sales in the last week of the month, practically tieing the top song in the Decca list for the tip-top position. All four music record firms showed an unusual similarity in their best seller tunes. Usually their lists are pretty diversified but the top sheet songs such as 'Red Sails,' 'Treasure Island' and 'Little Bit Independent' were duplicated at the wax-works counters.

Platters Hot on Coast

Los Angeles, Jan. 21.

Heavy Yule trade favored music biz which soared along at a prosperous clip. Platters had biggest month in years, while sheet music, which promises to be steadier, was well above average.

Decca was outstanding among disc houses, doing smash trade on Crosby and Powell pics. Being first to hit market with 'Round and Around,' Decca profited on this novelty hit. Number is not among first six for December as it didn't catch here until last week in Xmas month, but it's cinch for January.

Joe Moss held first and third spots for Brunswick. His 'Treasure Island'-'Boots and Saddle' double was outstanding in top spot. Two Dorothy Fields-Jerome Kern numbers came in strong and look like next month's winners.

'Ride Red Ride,' Columbia's musicians' platter, again first in the blue plate lists. Joe Venuti's work in local night spot helped bring two of his discs in second and third.

Victor returns proved Benny Goodman's current popularity. The swing master held first and second places in the Victor best selling list. This is Goodman's second month in the number one seat.

Peculiar situation arose in local 'Round and Around' craze. No platters or sheets of the Hodgson-Farley-Riley click could be bought from Dec. 30 to Jan. 3. Decca is exploiting number with lapel pins.

Inside Stuff—Music

Sheet music business last week took as a reassuring note the statistical report of the National Piano Manufacturers Association on the turnover of pianos for 1935. The association announced that piano shipments last year were not only 38% over what they had been in 1934, but exceeded anything the industry has experienced since the APMA started collecting figures in January, 1931.

Orders that were in last month proved that the piano biz was off to a solid start as far as 1936 was concerned. Unfilled piano orders in December were 36.5% ahead of the previous year. AMPA's report shows also that the shipments for the latter month were 35.5% over that of December, 1934.

Paramount is dickering with Warners Music Holding Corp. for broadcast rights to score of 'Anything Goes.' Understood Warners is asking $25,000 for the original show tunes and other numbers added by the studio.

Harms owns the orig tunes and by prior contract entered into with owners of the show for screen rights, it was stipulated that any additional music written for the screen version also is controlled by Harms.

'The Caissons Go Rolling Along,' an official tune of the U. S. Army, has been taken over by Shapiro-Bernstein from the writer, Col. E. L. Gruber. Deal involved every right in the composition, including the foreign. Resume of performances which was put out for 1934 by the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers credited the song with having received 2,900 air plugs. Col. E. L. Gruber is not an ASCAP member.

Through typographical error, the name of Duncan MacDougald, 2d, was misspelled in the by-line of his piece on College Rhythm, as MacDonald. MacDougald is Princeton, class of '36.

Waring Wins WDAS Suit

Philadelphia, Jan. 21.

Decision in favor of Fred Waring in his injunction suit against Station WDAS was handed down last week by Judge Harry S. McDevitt, of Common Pleas Court No. 1. Bandleader had sued to halt station from broadcasting his phonograph records 'in competition with his Ford radio programs.' National Association of Broadcasters and RCA-Victor co-operated with WDAS in defending suit.

In his opinion, jurist declared Waring's 'interpretations are creative since they add to the original composition. . . . The unique and individual interpretation of musical compositions is important and increases the sale of recordings and compositions. During the past decade he has created a good will and reputation in the mind of the public by the expenditure of upwards of $300,000 as well as by his unusual creative and interpretive talent.'

WDAS lawyers indicated they would appeal case.

Waring Decision

Following are pertinent excerpts from the decision handed down last week by Judge McDevitt in the Court of Common Pleas, Philadelphia, upholding Fred Waring's right to restrain WDAS, Philly outlet, from using a Waring phonograph recording for broadcasting or other commercial purposes:

In the instant case the defendant has appropriated without purchase or legal claim the creation of material produced by the complainant's intellectual effort and application of his unique talents. His creation represents production by organization, by the expenditure of labor, skill and money. His creative genius has perfected something peculiarly his own, stamped with his personality and as inseparable from him without injury as one of his limbs. His unique talents have fashioned something as distinct and original as the product fashioned publication. Communication and dedication are as dissimilar as are performance and publication.

Ownership suggests possession and proprietorship, and sale represents the conveyance of a right of any kind. At the same time, however, one may sell his corporeal and still save his incorporeal right. Undoubtedly the contract or covenant follows the chattel, and, only a false legal doctrine could separate the same, which would be equivalent to putting the stamp of approval upon unfair competition.

The complainant is, therefore, entitled to the redress that he seeks.

Let the injunction issue.

Conclusions of Law

1. The creator of a unique and personal interpretation of a musical and/or literary composition possesses a common law property right in the same, and has a right to control and limit its use.

2. The individuality, personality and unusual talents of such an artistic interpreter identify his production, creation or performance in such a manner as to make it different, and consequently, per se, a special value with pecuniary worth.

3. The interpretive talent of the complainant is creative and vests in him an incorporeal property right, just as firmly as though it were corporeal property.

4. Such incorporeal property is entitled to protection.

5. A creation or interpretation that may be captured or transcribed by mechanical means, and then capable of reproduction at the will of the possessor, makes such an interpretation or creation, property.

6. The integrity of one's art is entitled to protection, and the law gives such artist a ri ht to command a return for any commercial utilization of his talent.

7. The talents, creations and interpretations of a performing artist, may only be used or exploited under the terms and conditions imposed by the creator. Any other use is an infringement of his property right, and an injury to his name and commercial worth.

8. The law will follow science and arts in throwing the necessary protection about property rights, both corporeal and incorporeal, tangible and intangible.

9. The making of a phonograph record or the sale of the same, under such conditions as were imposed in the suit at issue, does not constitute a publication.

10. The respondent's purchase of said records vested in him a possession and ownershi subject, however, to the special property right of the complainant.

11. Such a use of a phonograph record as has been made by the respondent in this matter, is a commercial use for profit.

12. The complainant and the RCA-Victor Company were within their legal rights in producing said records for sale and limited

13. The respondent's use of said records violated the express restriction stamped thereon, and was an unlawful interference with complainant's right. The respondent's use of said records is an interference with the complainant's contractual relations with the international company, with which he has a contract for his exclusive broadcasting services.

14. The limitation of use or restriction stamped upon the face of the records was a condition or servitude inseparable from the records.

15. The restriction stamped upon the records is not an interference with the purchaser of said records to use them for the purpose intended, it is not an unreasonable condition, its enforcement would not be in restraint of trade, and its enforcement does not create a monopoly. It is a protection of the property right vested in the complainant and enforceable in equity.

16. Such use of said records, as the use made by the respondent, creates unfair competition.

Can't Fool Bela Bartok, He Turns Down Prize

Budapest, Jan. 10.

Bela Bartok, who shares with Zoltan Kodaly the honor of being Hungary's foremost living composer, refused to accept the Greguss Medal, awarded for best composition first performed during 1929-1934.

Prize was to be given for Bartok's orchestral suite, performed by the Philharmonic Orchestra in 1929. In a letter addressed to the eminent corporation which awards the medal, Bartok said he had written the suite in 1905; it was first performed in Budapest in 1909, and all over the world ever since; and if they couldn't even look up the facts concerning the performance of a composition how could they have the concelt to think they could judge it?

Far finer and more important compositions had been performed for the first time during the five years in question, such as for instance two operas by Kodaly, he stated. As for him, Bartok concluded in his irate missive, he would thank them not to award him any prizes either now or in the future, during his lifetime or after his death.

Recognition of Bartok's highbrow ability has been much greater abroad than at home, which may account for his bitter reaction to the medal-awarding commission's boner.

3 CBS Holdouts Demand ASCAP's 'Newspaper' Rate

While the American Society of Composers, Authors & Publishers reported yesterday (Tuesday) that it had obtained relicensing commitments from every commercial station in the country, broadcast circles in New York learned that CBS was deeply concerned by the position taken by three of its affiliates. These outlets were demanding that either the Society give them the same sort of contract granted newspaper-operated stations, or else. Warners' list of licensed stations, at press time yesterday, had grown to 231 names.

Warners' legal department yesterday called to the attention of ASCAP the fact that the late Louis A. Hirsch had in his contracts with Witmark and the Victoria Publishing Co., a WB subsid, reserved only the play performing rights and that when it came to other performing rights the control was with his publishers. WB communication was in answer to one from the Society in which the latter contended that Hirsch's agreements with his late publishing connections gave him full authority over the disposal of the performing rights to his works. One of the scores involved was 'Mary,' which contained the 'Love Nest' tune.

'Woo' Case

Another situation that WB has been compelled to meet since its breakaway from ASCAP is the demand from writers who have recently placed tunes with WB firms that the latter release them from their contracts. Case which occurred last week concerned the Mabel Wayne-Arthur Swanstrom song, 'I Wanta Woo.' Miss Wayne contended that, despite the commitment on the tune which Swanstrom had made, she was entitled to its release because of Harms' failure to obtain the proper exploitation for it over the networks.

Counsel for Warner met with reps from the National Hotel Men's Assn. yesterday and discussed the basis of a licensing agreement for this class of user. WB has for the past two weeks been flooded with letters from hotels in various parts of the country, pointing out that their contracts with the Society do not expire until April 15, and that under the circumstances they should be entitled to the continued use of Warners music. Stand taken by WB is that this permission expired when WB withdrew from the Society and that it will be necessary for the hotel to obtain Warner licenses as of Jan. 1, 1936.

Congressman Daly Promises Quick Action on Proposed Copyright Law Amendment Protecting Artist Rights

Victory scored by Fred Waring in his suit against WDAS, Philadelphia, will be followed up by the presentation to Congress of an amendment to the copyright law protecting the artists' rights in phonograph records. Announcement of this move was made Monday (20) at a breakfast which Paul Whiteman gave to some 200 recording artists, writers, music publishers, etc., in honor of Waring at the Essex House, New York.

Congressman J. B. Daly, chairman of the House Patents and Copyright Committee, who was among the speakers the breakfast, assailed the present copyright law as obsolete and not protective of the rights of the creator and declared that when the phonograph amendment was presented to him he would see that hearing on it started within 48 hours. As explained by Maurice J. Speiser, Waring's attorney on the suit, the amendment would give the artist a property right in his recording and bar its performance for a profit unless a license is obtained direct from the artist involved.

No Loopholes

Daley averred that the recording artists could depend on him to have on the U. S. law books a year from today legislation that will really protect his rights, not only in this country but in every European nation where the United States has a copyright alliance. When he got Speiser's amendment, the Congressman added, he would go over it in such a wey as not even the U. S. Supreme Court could find a loophole for invalidation.

Speiser advised the gathering that Judge McDevitt, who handed down the injunction against WDAS, would during the current week also issue judgment in favor of Waring on three other actions, these involving cafes, dancehalls and those films that make a business of waxing broadcasts off the air and selling them to various users.

Among other speakers at the breakfast were Judge McDevitt, B. G. Henderson, assistant to Joe Weber, American Federations of Musicians prez; Gene Buck, Whiteman, Waring and Irving Caesar. Judge McDevitt warned the performing artists that they would find powerful influences—arraigned against them when their amendment was introduced in Washington, while Buck bitterly attacked the Senatorial group that, he charged, railroaded the Duffy bill through that legislative branch.

Will Rockwell-Charlie Miller Music Combo Reunites Harms Vets

Will Rockwell, for seven years professional manager of Harms, Inc., and Charlie Miller, 18 years managing editor of Harms, before leaving that firm to start Miller Music, Inc., several years ago, have reunited as a music publishing combination, Rockwell is now v.p. and general manager of Miller Music, having bought in on the firm.

Charlie Miller for a time was financed by the late William H. Woodin, first Secretary of the Treasury in President Roosevelt's administration, and an accounting of the Woodin estate's interest in Miller Music, Inc., as made last week prior to Rockwell's buy-in on the firm, shows that the late statesman-composer had invested $263,708. Woodin's musical works were published by Miller Music, notably 'Spring Is In My Heart.'

The Miller-Rockwell combo has attracted a catalog of works by Vincent Youmans (who was originally with Miller, including such hits as 'Time On My Hands,' 'Great Day,' etc.), Peter DeRose, Oscar Hammerstein II, Frank Rown-Gilbert Wall (new combo), et al. 'Hay-Straw' by Youmans-Hammerstein is among the tunes the new Miller-Rockwell combinations will give a ride.

Miller may move from its present West 45th street location (old Harms building) to either the Brill Bldg. or Radio City.

Combo of Rockwell with Miller is trade—significant in that it united two old-line music publishers and exploiters, sans any Hollywood filmusical affiliations or any other restrictions.

Ted Lewis band is scheduled to play a one-night stand at Covey's Feb. 5. Regular prices will be boosted to $1.10 a person.

Two numbers have been penned by W. K. Jerome and Joan Jasmym for Jane Travis in 'The Gentleman from Big Bend' at Warners.

Night Club Reviews

PALLADIUM
(NEW YORK)

On the site of the old Casino de Paree on West 54th street between Broadway and Eighth avenue, the pioneer in the cabaret-theatre vogue—and during its first year under the Billy Rose aegis a sensational money-maker—has been reopened. It's virtually the same form of policy excepting that it's primed as a variety show, with a London Palladium (vaude) atmosphere. Hence the switch in name.

The Palladium take-off ends there, although there's a creditable attempt to simulate the British aura through a London bobby as doorman, a London Guards military drill for the finale, etc. In between, however, it's a vaude show—and good—with nitery trimmings in the form of 16 ponies and 12 showgirls, a little nudity (not much) and the usual cabaret fol-de-rol.

Compromise between the intended straight variety entertainment and the nite club atmosphere is a question, but probably justified. Being a nitery aura, with the tables in lieu of chairs, the show must perforce ape the nite club standards. On the other hand, the show must be made paramount on its quality and variety. The moment it attempts to simulate the French Casino and kindred type of revues it runs too great a risk of suffering comparisons, and the lavish atmosphere of the Casino, the Hollywood, Paradise, et al., have too much of an advantage.

Palladium's big commercial chance is that $1.50 price for a table d'hote dinner including crepes suzette. That's the headliner of the Palladium rather than the show. If lured by the price (also no minimum or couvert, after theatre), the capacity trade should make it sufficiently worthwhile all around. Then, too, there's always the likelihood of tilting the average per-person check through liquor, etc., which sort of takes care of itself if biz is right and the atmosphere conducive.

Wallace Mijam staged the 'Palladium Frolics,' as this variety revue is labeled, with special songs by Mitchell Parrish and Harry Carroll. Both have done an above-par job in dovetailing the sundry components. Acts are headed by the Ritz Bros., the opening headliners, for one week only (at reported $2,250) and include, in sequence, Abbott and Tanner, Arthur Ball, Arno and Arnette, Adrienne Andre, Billy Branch and Co., Andrea Marsh, Ruth Dennung, Helen Reynolds and Co., besides two bands, Jimmy Carr and his NBC orchestra playing for the show and Teddy King's alternate combo, latter shifting over from Loew's Orpheum, N. Y., where he had long been an East 86th stree vaudfilm fave.

The show is mostly the Ritzes and deservedly so. They work hard and with telling results. All their libidos about the Louhoitzian school of comedy, panze and crisp comedy may well be turned loose in a nitery, and they avail themselves of the opportunity, although it's been this same penchant for rough stuff which has retarded them. The Ritzes have become a Broadway legend of recent months in that they're ever-effective for audience values and yet somehow can't go into big league company like production, etc. Perhaps if they took inventory of their stuff that might be the answer. Too much Yiddish in the chatter doesn't help. But there's no gainsaying that Harry Ritz, abetted by Al and Jimmy, whammed 'em here.

They open with a hoke operatic version of 'Music Goes Round' which is a bit overdone. It seems longer, on the heels of an over-productioned entr'act overture by the Carr combo, and through the show's late starting at 1 a.m. Abbott and Tanner, in the deuce, are a cute pair of song-and-danceologists with 'Here Come British' (monocles 'n' all) as their specialty.

The first production flash is 'Putting Down an Empty Glass,' lead by Arthur Ball, tenor, and introducing the girls as a parade of vintages and liquors. All nice lookers.

Arno and Arnette, comedy dance pair, are the Moore and Revel of the bolero-adagio school of terpers. They open legit with a pash dance style and then into the hoke. It registers.

'Love Is a Ripple,' vocal-lead by Adrienne Andre, is one of those Apache-Barbary Coast medleys, very well staged, and commanding attention to a familiar waterfront brawl idea on the strength of the staging. The pistols are unobtrusive caps; the knife-throwing is well staged so that they emerge from their prop slits in good timing; Billy Branch and Co. engage in their fisticuffs in effective manner, and withal it's an effectively productioned shambles. Ritz Bros. run out for a comedy bit which might be skipped as it detracts from a deserving and hard-working troupe.

Andrea Marsh, comely songstress who's been around, has important potentialities. She's said to be the daughter of George Marsh, long Paul Whiteman's drummer. She's pretty and of nice voice, working with a mike, but suggesting a range that could elide the microphonic amplification. She does three pops and clicks. Her costuming, however, is bad.

Ruth Denning leads the "Whatchamacallit' dance flash, a socko, snappy terp production. Then the Ritzs for their specialty including Ted Lewis, Hitler, the challenge dance and the rest of the book.

Helen Reynolds and Co. (8) makes one wonder how Billy Rose missed this sensational roller-skating flash for 'Jumbo.' It's show biz standard and a natural for a one-ring specialty under canvass. The girls are all young and comely and their ripsnorting pace of whirlwind formations on rollers never slackens a second or misses a trick. They were one of those electric clicks and are a cinch for holdover here. 'Beat of the Feet in the Street' finales—the London Guards flash, Ball tenoring the lyrics.

Joe Sullivan books the show and upon him will depend the real success of the Palladium. Next to the $1.50 table d'hote headliner he's the key man because the show's unquestionably the thing in the nitery belt, as elsewhere, and it's long since been proved that if the show is there biz is in proportion. With or without vittles, the nitery bunch is as discriminating of the show as the cafe atmosphere.

Palladium Operating Corp., Angelo Palange, prez, operates. Palange is a WMCA fight announcer and this is his first nitery venture. There are several non-pro backers. Reported also, but unverified, that Donald Flamm, head of WMCA, is financially interested.

First week's show nut around $7,300. Hoped to bring that down to around $5,000. Belle Baker was slated for the first week's headliner in lieu of the Ritzes and may come in later.

Virtually the same old Casino de Paree atmosphere has been retained and many of the same catering staff, with Robert at the door.

CHEZ PAREE
(CHICAGO)

Chicago, Jan. 16.

After stumbling along for some 10 weeks since its fall reopening, the Chez Paree has come to life in a sudden rejuvenation, having hit on a talent line-up which spells both boxoffice and entertainment. It's a three-way name setup at present on Libby Holman, Benny Fields and the Henry Busse orchestra.

High spot in the redecorated Chez Paree is Benny Fields in his own smart turn and as general m.c. His showmanlike handling helps the running of the entire program. On his own in the closing spot, Fields is a smash, going through his routine in such a bang-up fashion that it's give 'em more or else.

It's a hit show currently all the way, with the best layout this cafe has had in many months. Libby Holman is another sock in the show and there's no question that her name in the advertising is responsible in great measure for the sharp upturn in business. She's another singing wallop in the line-up, the audience demanding six tunes from her before they would let her quit. Miss Holman makes her entrance to the floor from a table at the ringside rather than the conventional 'stage' entrance and it figures as a neat novelty approach.

Dancing is another important portion of the bill, headed by the Stewart-Morgan dancers with their adagio routine and Kay Picture in her new style of loose tap dancing. Grace and Nikki Romoff change the pace of the dancing tempo with their clever comedy routine, smart entertainment. Final act on the bill is Johnny Wells, a solid singer of songs.

Show as produced by Paul Oscard and the line as directed by Truly McGee are among the best things turned out lately in this town. Production numbers show thought and effort, particularly a double-face number and an Indian routine. Line of 16 girls cannot be touched locally for appearance.

Backing up the entire show is the Henry Busse orchestra, working like trojans in a triple-threat line-up of footing for the show, for the dancing and for the ether. Busse's playing of the show is unbeatable, keeping the pace moving and helping to build both the single performers and the line.
Gold.

Disc Reviews
By Abel Green

Quite a bit of realignment on the disk map. Ted Fio Rito is now on Decca, lured away from Brunswick, and his first batch of releases shows up as creditably on the new 35c label as on the Brunswick's 75c diskers. Plenty of Flo Rito on the piano and organ, in all arrangements, and worthily so. 'Broken Record' and 'Hypnotized' on Decca 677; 'I'm Gonna Sit Right Down—Just One of Those Things,' coupler on No. 678; and 'Cling to Me' with 'Alone at a Table for Two' on Decca 679, shows a good cross-section of the expert Flo Rito dansapation technique. First and third are of the salon school; No. 678 more swingo and hotcha with some nifty brass work in 'One of Those Things,' perhaps the best Cole Porter tune out of 'Jubilee.' Muzzy Marcellino, the Debutantes and Stanley Hickman star in the vocals.

From France, via Columbia 4112, comes Mlle. Josephine Baker, by way of St. Louis and Harlem, who gives out 'C'est Lui,' a blues by Bernstein-Van Parys from the French filmusical, 'Zouzou,' in which Miss Baker is accomped by the Jazz Du Poste Parisien, directed by Al Romans. 'Hiati,' companion piece, is an intriguing chanson with a tune by Koger-Scotto that augurs American possibilities. Here Miss Baker more than suggests the Libby Holman school of vocalizing.

Lucienne Boyer on Columbia 249 has 'Mais Si Tu Pars' ('If You Go Away') and 'Pourquoi Rever?' ('Why Dream?') in the characteristic Boyer chansonetting. Izz Volpin accomps. She brought her maestro with her for her U. S. tour.

Another Columbia importation of a French disking is No. 4118 by Tino Rossi, Gallic filmusical tenor, who offers a Casino de Paris tune, 'Vous Qu'Avez-Vous Fait de Mon Amour?,' tango ballad by Varna and Marc-Cab-Barczi. This is coupled with 'Pourquoi Quand Je Te Dis: Je T'Aime,' another tango-rhythmed ballad, with orchestral accompaniment, both highly fetching in their style, regardless of the language.

Boswell Sisters on Decca 671 (another break-away from Brunswick) give out 'Music Goes Round,' vocally, wherein Connie Boswell's unique style stands out in the trio. 'Gonna Write Myself a Letter' is companion piece. Connie Boswell solos 'Moon Over Miami' and 'With All My Heart' on Decca 657.

Ray Noble's swing classic of 'Dinah' and 'Bugle Call Rag' on Victor 25223 has plenty on the wax. Noble has taken these two national anthems of the jam jazzists and put everything but the Rainbow Room into his orchestrations. There's a snatch of the Ravel bolero, Oriental, Scottish, Egyptian and military break-down in the 'Bugle Call Rag' and in 'Dinah,' Charles Spivak, George (Pee-Wee) Erwin, Bud Smith, Glen Miller and the Yaner-Mince-Freeman-Doty sax team go to Radio City in a big way.

What a difference when his compatriot, Lew Stone, on Decca 656 (imported) tries 'Lazy Rhythm,' backed by 'Mediterranean Madness.' Latter is from 'Ballyhoo' (Walker-Nesbitt), an English production presumably and smoother. Curiously enough Stone's combo was Noble's rivals for the RMV (Victor) recordings abroad before coming to America. Somehow Stone misses out with this 'un.

Tommy Dorsey and his Clambake Seven jam it out real mean on Victor 25220 with 'One Night in Monte Carlo' and 'The Day I Let You Get Away' as Edyth Wright vocal ad libs in lowdown manner. The Clambake septet is plenty hot, with Tommy forte on the sax per usual. A previous Victor release (No. 25216) coupled two from 'King of Burlesque,' titled 'I'm Shooting High' and 'Lovely Lady' (a waltz) which shows that the Dorseyites can clean it up and be both salon as well as jam.

Since the Dorsey Bros. orchestra split up, Jimmy Dorsey has been disking for Decca. His 'Tap Dancer's Nightmare' and the classic 'Washington Grays' march are instrumental conceits which the campus swingomaniacs will dote on. Decca 655.

Fats Waller, at his swingiest, on Victor 25222 with 'You Stayed Away Too Long' and 'When Somebody Thinks You're Wonderful,' Waller massaging the ivories in his own style and exercising the larynx. Some nice wah-wah and other brass figurations further highlight this block combo.

From Chi, Earl Hines and his orchestra put up with 'Julia' and their jam version of 'Japanese Sandman' on Decca 654. Very swingo. Swingier yet is Benny Goodman's 'Good-Bye' and 'Sandman,' with accent on the jam. Victor 25215.

Eddy Duchin excerpts two from the new Shuberts' 'Ziegfeld Follies' by Ira Gershwin and Vernon Duke. They're two good tunes, too, notably 'Words Without Music' paired with 'That Moment of Moments.' Very forte on Duchin's own pianology, including some brisk breaks, and not a little of the same style of brassology which Duchin featured in his versions of the tunes from the last 'Blackbirds' revue. Lew Sherwood vocalizes and okay. Duchin again with 'Anything Can Happen' from 'Scandals' and 'I'm Building Up to an Awful Let-Down,' Fred Astaire's own tune, on Victor 25218.

Since Victor lured Guy Lombardo away, Decca swopped for Jan Garber who is probably the only dance maestro to get disk-label billing. He's captioned 'The Idol of the Air Lanes.' 'Beautiful Lady in Blue' and 'Moon Over Miami' under the Garber technique is very reedy and reminds of the Lombardo school, or vice versa. Lee Bennett vocalizes.

Filmusical songsters see Joe Morrison with Jack Shilkret's orchestral accomp doing 'Moonburn' (peach Edward Heyman-Hoagy Carmichael tune out of 'Anything Goes' Par pic), backed by 'Dream Too Much' (Kern-Fields), from the same titled film (RKO). Morrison, alumnus of George Olsen's orchestra, handled 'em in corking style. Brunswick 7588.

Frances Langford, with Victor Young batoning for her, on Decca 663, sings 'You Hit the Spot' from 'Collegiate' and 'Will I Ever Know' (Gordon-Revel). Phil Regan on Columbia 3106 does two from 'Broadway Hostess' (WB), film in which he appeared, aided by Harry Jackson's orchestra. Tunes are 'Weary' and 'Let It Be Me' which Regan tenors engagingly enough, although he's one of Jeeusst (just) type of enunciators. He might watch that for films and disks.

Same couplet as Regan's, done instrumentally, introduces Joe Sanders and his orchestra on Decca 658, 'I'll Never Forget You' and 'I Found a Rose in the Snow' (two Sanders compositions) is another couplet, No. 659, all in brisk, forthright dansapation manner. Latter is his theme song on the air. Sanders vocals; Barbara Parks dittoes with the 'Hostess' tunes.

Swing Stuff

Danny Polo left Ambrose's English orchestra to return to the U. S. ....Ben Pollack staging a come-back along swing lines with a new hand at the Roosevelt, New Orleans...Art Tatem beating it out at the Three Deuces, Chicago, along with Gladys Palmer...Joe Sullivan so busy with studio work that he has dropped his plan to organize an outfit of his own...Oldster Les Hite following Cab Calloway into Sebastian's Cotton Club, Los Angeles... English swingsheet, 'Hot News,' has folded...Duke Ellington considering the College Inn, Chicago, as his next spot, while George Olsen goes to Europe...Swingsters, Muggsy Spanier, providing relief for Ted Lewis at the Cocoanut Grove, Los Angeles...Cymbalist 'Zutie' Singleton at the Flagship, Chicago.

Coast Jam Session

Los Angeles Hot Club staged a jam fest at which Buddy Fog, Toots Camarata, Chuck Evans, and Noel Kilgan, all from Joe Venuti's band, cut some new licks. Localites Wayne Williams, Stan Kenton, Ted Repay, Jack Ordean, and Johnny Hamilton added to the rhythm while Manny Stein, Marvin George and Chaunce Farrer set the pace. Starting as a regular meeting under Farrer's direction, the boys went to town under their own power. Swingsters from the Dorsey click are expected to swing out at the next meeting.

On the Air

Latest swing hit on the air lanes is Phil Napoleon's Emperors accompanying Ella Logan on the 'Band Goes to Town' program. Composed of oldsters such as Phil Napoleon, Miff Mole and Frank Signorelli, all of Original Memphis Five, this combo shows that the boys haven't let much get by them. As a vocalist, Miss Logan inclines to get corny when she improvises, but her larnyx has the ideal swing croak. The top attraction is the brass arranging which fits the program and has that crisp attack which is so rare. Ace orchestrating of 'Wake Up and Sing,' features an okay clarinet working over brass figures while the string-bass and drums lift the ensemble.

Benny Goodman's version of 'Basin Street' is so near to the old Columbia record that they sound like twins. It takes a great band to do it, but Goodman's with Joe Harris vocalizing connects. After all, Benny played on the record.

The Fletcher Henderson arrangement of 'Get Happy' is tops, with Jess Stacy's pianology a stand-out.

Paul Whiteman's new Woodbury hour is featuring more swing and less talk. Jack Teagarden's vocal on 'Round and Round' didn't give him the break that his following trombone chorus did. Jack ducked the bell of his horn and growled a Harlemese pattern that burned up the song. He took two choruses on the strength of it.

Claud Hopkins announced 'Shades of Bix,' dedicated to 'the greatest trumpet player of all time,' and proceeded to play some musical hash with a bit of okay tenoring... Red Nichols let some good tenoring get by on 'Got a Bran' New Suit,' while a fine girl's trio warbled. Arrangenient of 'I've Got My Fingers Crossed' was stand-out... Waring's did the impossible by playing 'Mama Don't Allow No Swingin' Here' without a single solo. All phrases were arranged for each section...Helene Daniels, vocalist on the Jazz Nocturne program, showing some real stuff. Nat Brusiloff's accompanyment shows what can be done with a tuba instead of the usual string bass... Louis Armstrong's 'I Hope Gabriel Likes My Music' featured some fine trombone by James Archery, and good work by Greeley Walton on tenor.

On the Discs

Decca has released Jimmy Dorsey's 'Washington Grays' and 'Tap Dancer's Nightmare,' which feature some okay drumming by Ray McKinley on both sides. 'Grays' is an over-arranged march, but the boys get off on 'Tap Dancer,' with the prize going to the clarinet and tenor work of Skeets Herfurt. Red Norvo has waxed some sides for Decca which will be out soon, but the titles are poor. Lew Stone's English orchestra present some simple syncopation on 'Lazy Rhythm' which is selling.

On Victor, Tommy Dorsey's Clambake Seven swing 'One Night in Monte Carlo' with Edith Wright on vocal. This combo improves every minute. With Sterling Bowes' trumpet work and Tommy's trombone, the brass section is aces. Ray Noble's 'Dinah' has proved a disappointment in spite of Bud Freeman's clarinet solo. Starting with two instruments, this disc works up into a lather of arrangement in the Casa Loma manner. Fats Waller's 'You Stayed Away Too Long' features some nifty piano introduction, followed by okay trumpet-clarinet fillins. A good commercial swing disc.

On Columbia, Mills Blue Rhythm Band continues to fall below par with 'Yes Yes,' and 'Broken Dreams of You.' This outfit lacks cohesion, but Red Allen's trumpet stars in the confusion. The vocals of Lucky Millender are still better than those of Chuck Richards. The Kay Thompson Brunswicks are reported to include Manny Klein and Frank Signorelli in the swing accompaniment. The work of Charlie Hodges and Dave Barber on the Brunswick platters of Teddy Wilson maintains their position as the best swing of the month.

Niteries, Which Built Hollyw'd's 'Strip,' Now Getting That Park Ave. Snub

Hollywood, Jan. 21.

'The Strip' sounds like a section across the tracks. It's not, but a fast growing real estate project, owing its success only to a flight of fancy of motion picture people.

To be exact, it's that mile on Sunset Boulevard between Hollywood and Beverly Hills on which property has advanced in value around 500% in the past year, on which has been built 52 new business buildings within nine months. It was a neglected mile until someone came along and established a two-by-four night spot two years ago. Joint caught on at first, but soon died. However, others came, recognizing the fact that most picture people liked to stop off for a moment on their way home; hated to hang around Hollywood.

Within a few months, gown shops, haberdasheries, hat shops, novelty establishments and other small businesses started to advance on the mile. They stayed open of an evening, held night sales now and then and paid their rents with the evening business.

Rents? Anything from $30 a month to $75 paid for a sizable store. Then William Haines opened his interior decorating establishment in the middle of the mile and the rush was on.

Paley Buys a Block

Constance Bennett bought five lots, Sam Jaffe, three. Jay Paley came along and bought a block. Milton Bren bought four lots. That was enough for the real estate men. On the strength of those names they went to work. Buildings sprang up everywhere.

A market with a 100-foot front on the boulevard, which rented for $150 a month, was split up into four stores, and is now giving the owner a $300 per month profit. Shacks were remodelled, rented as atmosphere shops. Garages were turned into adobe huts. New one-story buildings were built, ith a phoney Colonial architecture becoming popular for the neighborhood. Some 21 talent agencies moved into the strip within a year because they figured they would gain class by being in their own buildings.

Zeppo Marx had a house remodelled to resemble a New England farm house. He could have rented the ground for $30 a month on a term lease, but he didn't want to tie himself up. He has got to get out now, because Paley, who owns the property, wants to build a flock of stores on it.

Jaffe is just breaking ground for his building but he's doing things up great. He has an orchid fence built around the property and a 10-foot glass case in the center.

College Rhythm

The second of a series of articles on collegiate likes and dislikes as regards modern dance music and dance bands.

The writers, staff members of publications at their respective schools, have been asked by VARIETY to give the opinion of the student body as a whole rather than pass personal judgment. Neither has VARIETY given further instruction as to what was to be said or how. These articles appear as the undergraduates have written them, with the expressed opinions being their own.

VARIETY publishes the series to give music men and band leaders a cross-section of current undergraduate opinion on dance music and bands with the hope that it will be both informative and instructive. For what the college group has to say about dance music is deemed important in the trade.

YALE

By H. W. Wind, '37
(Yale 'Record')

For a long while a fairly fictionized conception has presented the jazz loving college man as an equatorially minded son-of-swing, a bubbling indulger in the reckless rhythm of vo-do-de-oh-do. Today such a picture is a rather ludicrous one. Though a few adherents of the untempered heat still ferment, the modern undergraduate first demands an orchestra of smoothness and fullness which flows to a dimpled dance-ability.

Thus we find that the cool offerings of the Noble, Hylton and Ambrose contingents, and of other bands built on such English tracings, can be termed 'most popular' among the general student body at New Haven. The undergraduate finds in these euphonious units not only the instrumentation and deepness of background that he so admires, but also that romantic aura of 'soft lights and sweet music.' It is this type of music, the swaying sweetness of a British-tinged orchestra as it meanders through a velvet rendition of such a tune as 'Love Is the Sweetest Thing,' that is undeniably top-rung among discerning collegemen.

The undergraduate demands a definite stylistic appeal in an orchestra, and consequently those bands floundering in the uncertain borderlands of flatness and drabness find icebergish reception. Into this category roll such straight-laced units as the Richard Himber, Leo Reisman and Freddy Martin outfits which lack the sparkle that attracts. Probably to scribble a line or two about the different standouts in American jazz, as seen through Yale-blue glasses, a clearer view would be gained.

Positive and Negative

The Yale man revels in the every effort of Master Benny Goodman and his glowing confederates in swish and sway as they ramble through such swingy hits as 'Dixieland Band' and 'Jingle Bells' with that distinctive ripple and rock. Hal Kemp, of the studied staccatoes, is of the four star variety with campus connoisseurs who demand a no greater Utopia than an hour with the frolicking Kemplan brasses. Though comparatively newborn, Tommy Dorsey's band has already gleaned a large following who realize that Tommy's aggregation possesses much more than his laureled trombone.

On the negative side of the line fall the Lombardo, King and Duchin teams. The Lombardo renditions are far too sugary and overdosed with whipped cream; in a rather humorous light. Wayne King's wanderings are too airy, feminine, and lack a masculine firmness. As for Eddy Duchin, the gentleman of the campus acknowledges the mastery of his cascading keyboard but believes that the public overrates the Duchin combine. The long and lingering pianoings of Maestro Eddy seem but to veil a band of indecision.

In the field of modern composition the contributions of Paul Whiteman and Reggie Foresythe are, of course, the most reverently respected. Foresythe's 'Serenade for a Wealthy Widow', and his later conceptions, hit the spot with an ever increasing group. The Casa Loma band has truly lost its once great appeal and is now just one of the many.

Colored Contingents

And among the colored regents of rhythm it's that peerless pater of the smoky fantasy, Duke Ellington, who can be checked as first ranking. The Duke's men, with all their delicate instrumentation and intricate arrangement, still possess a beautiful danccability which serves but to enhance their contrasting sallies of torridity. It is this same versatility that creates the surprising popularity of Jimmy Lunceford whose lazy 'Charmaine,' or heatwavish 'Rhythm Is Our Business,' are equally enticing. And Lunceford possesses an unique understanding of recording possibilities which makes his output attractive indeed to knowing disc doters. Louis Armstrong, that imp of improvisation, is rapidly recovering all the ground that his continental vacation let dwindle. The undergraduate is well aware that there is but one Armstrong who can bellow forth his 'Stardust' mid mopping the brow and scaling trumpet heights. The intelligence, originality, and enchanting effervescence of Fats Waller appeals decidedly. Such splendid Wallerings as 'Little Bit Independent' and 'Truckin' occupy many a corner around old Harkness. As for Cab Calloway, his scatting is no longer campus chatter. Lesser colored enterprises as those of Hines, Henderson and Hopkins find their supporters here and there but lack that danceable sway, or showmanship, that makes for regally stratospheric ramblings.

Swing

There is a definite trend among the college men toward appreciation of the swing composition. Quite a few fellows spend hour after hour replaying those gems captured by the Original Memphis Five or the Original Dixieland Band, revelling in each tasty break and figure. Lamenting the static state of modern music they point out the every excellence of the pre-war platters. Then there is the less intense son of swing who paradises to the rhythms of the Goodman trio, who is well aware of old Jackson Teagarden's latest trombone snatch on 'Darktown Strutters', who understands the jammy finesse of Wingy Mannone, and who can talk the language of Gene Krupa's frisky drumsticks.

These lovers of swing music are growing terrifically so that the exciting ascendency of such a swingy tidbit as 'The Music Goes Round' can be traced directly to a campus innovation. And it is undoubted'y along these lines of swing that the next definitely collegiate trend in music will take place.

CLYDE BEATTY
Animals
15 Mins.; Full (Special)
Fox, Detroit.

Largest wild animal act ever to enter vaude, Clyde Beatty and his 24 tigers and lions made a rip-roaring debut on the Fox theatre stage here this week. While the 15-minute turn is virtually the same as the circus act, there is more sheer excitement and perfection than picture house patrons have seen for many moons.
